SUBSIDIES UNNECESSARY.

"It is well known that the Burlington Route is selected by the government, and has been for many years, as the route for its through mail service between Chicago and Council Bluffs. The overland mail, sent by the government over the Burlington. This service is performed in special trains, but there is no written contract for the service with the government. It simply has selected and retains what it considers the best, quickest and safest route for its transcontinental mails; nor is any subsidy paid. The Burlington receives only the same rates in force by general law for the carriage of all mails in the country. In a recent debate in the House of Representatives at Washington, upon the question of paying a subsidy to a line of railroad between New York and New Orleans, for keeping up a fast mail service in the South, Mr. Loud of California, Chairman of the committee on postoffices and postroads, in giving his reasons for voting against this subsidy to the southern railroad, paid the following high tribute to the Burlington. He said: "If subsidies are proper, you should not restrict them. If there is any railroad in the country that earns extra compensation from the government, that railroad is the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, from Chicago to Omaha, which runs phenomenally fast trains, carrying nothing but mail; but that company does not ask for a subsidy."—Railway Age, March 29, 1901.

CREATION VOCAL WITH PRAISE.

[FROM SANDERS READER]

The sun now mounts the heavens,
And wakes the cheerful spring:
Pours beauty o'er the mountains,
And makes the valleys ring
Perfumes the joyous morning,
And gilds each parting cloud,—
The whole creation vocal
Proclaims its bliss aloud.

And shall the lower creatures,
With gratitude abound,
And man, the son of heaven,
Not lead the joyful sound?
Shall earth, and seas, and rivers,
With incense greet the sky,
And man with powers celestial,
Not pour HIS song on high?

No; with a soul immortal,
Descended from above,
I'll pour with grateful fervor,
My ceaseless song of love;
I'll raise my soul to Heaven,
And join the sons of light,
To worship God the Fountain
Of every pure delight.

HARRY HAWLINS, who was a candidate for the legislature last fall has just secured a virdict of $1.00 against the Pine Knot, a Cloquet paper, for some campaign articles. It is a tough knot that Harry can't undo. It is claimed that the Pine Knot is not satisfied with the verdict and threatens to appeal.

Wants an Explanation.

Jay LaEue quots an item from the St. Paul Globe on the Philippine question, and says: "It attracted my attention because in appeared in a paper that is supposed to be Democratic." After arguing his case, his finishing thrust is:

"In closing you state it is however, safe to say that the American people will eventually insist upon giving the Philippines the same rights and liberties which they themselves enjoy.' Please explain to your democratic friends, if you can, how we can give the Filipinos the same rights and liberties which we enjoy, and hold them as colonies, which this administration intends to do. JAY LA DUE.
LUVERNE, Minn, April 19, 1901."

Dosing Dupes.

The people of the United States have been duped into spending millions of money and making walking apothecary shops of themselves for years. There seems no let up to the determination to dose. From the aged grandma or grandpa who must have some "bitters" to "strengthen" them or to "give them appetite" clear through the family, to the smallest infant, who, if properly fed, nine times out of ten, would laugh instead of cry, all must be dosed.

All kinds of nostrums, placeboes and curealls, are for sale, and advertisements of the same can be found in newspapers, and in educational, religious and eyen in medical journals. One can buy at the druggists, or at the family grocery store, or from the traveling agent something to cure consumption or cancer; to stop a cough in a minuite, or to relieve headache at once. They try the remedies, occasionally some one takes a few doses and gets better. Often the patient, if there is much the matter, grows worse, and calls a doctor, when the disease has developed something that must run its course. Then the doctor's drugs are placed in the same category as the advertised remedies, because they do not, at once, restore the patient to health.

It is wonderful how much patent medicines, and old women's remedies, some families can stand and live. The cupboards, mantles and stands, in some houses are covered with bottles and packages of remedies for anything and everything that man woman or child is subject to. There are soothing drops for baby, consumption cures for rosy cheeked children, powders for parents, and "bitters" for all.

The first thing a doctor does on visiting a patient is to inquire "What have you been taking?" or in the case of a child "What have you been giving it?" Often he can see at once the patient is under the influence of some "remedy." Many times his answer is "Nothing". In such cases he must use his judgment; sometimes wait, or administer harmless doses until time has passed sufficient for the patient to recover from what had been administered before the doctor was called.

When we look at the family apothecary shops; remedies of all kinds, deadly poisons among them; administered by people who know nothing of the medicines and do not know what is the matter with the patient, can we wonder when we read of "A man dropped dead at work" "A woman found dead in bead". "A chield died in spasms" and such other calls for coroner's inquests? Wouldn't the American people be healthier if it didn't dose so much? And wealthier if it wasn't duped so much.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 19, 1901

Denials having been rendered ridiculous by press dispatches from Manila giving names and details, War Department officials now confess that there have been extensive frauds in the commissary branch of the army in the Philippines, and announce with a flourish of honesty and virtue that an official investigation is now being made with a view to the exposure and punishment of all these who have been guilty of wrong doing. This announcement would have carried more weight with the disinterested public had it not been accompanied by another saying that the conduct of the investigation had been placed in the hands of Adjutant General Corbin. Gen. Miles is commander of the army, and as such should have directed that investigation, and if the truth and the whole truth, regardless of whose toes might be trod on, had been sought, it would have been allowed to remain in his hands where it properly belonged—he had proven his fearlessness in uncovering fraud in the embalmed beef cases. But if the object of the investigation be to whitewash the guilty officers who have republican political pull, and to make scapegoats of those who have not, the choice of Gen. Corbin to direct it was wise. He had a record of political partisanship never equaled by any holder of a major general's commission in the U. S. Army, and there have been some radical partisans in the army, too, while General Miles has never been a partisan and is suspected of believing in democratic principles. Major George B. Davis, one of the officers said to be implicated in the frauds, is now in Washington on sick leave. He has been connected with the commisary branch of the army for several years, and was regarded as General's right hand man when he was Commissary General. Major Davis was at the War Department this week and was questioned by General Weston. He denied the charge cabled from Manila that the books of Evans & Co. government contractors showed that sums of money had been paid to him and other officers; also that he had any knowledge of wrong doing on the part of either officers or contractors and announced his willingness to return to Manila at once and assist in the investigation. He might be able to render valuable assistance in the whitewashing.

Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago, whose third election to that office has caused his name to be more or less talked of in connection with national politics, spent the most of this week in Washington quietly resting. Asked the blunt question, whether he had any intention of entering the national political arena, Mr. Harrison, replied: "I am not fooling with national politics. It is enough for me now to attend to my duties in Chicago." When asked what the Illinois legislature was likely to do, Mr. Harrison said: "The republicans in that body have done almost nothing outside of a discussion of apportionment bills. They have a quarrel among themselves over the subject, and I should not be surprised if the legislature adjourned without passing any measure for apportionment."

That the Philippines must be a large and continuous source of expense to the U. S. has been evident from the day Spain goldbricked us into becoming their owners. A board of naval officers, under orders from Secretary Long, are now engaged in preparing plans for a $5,000,000 naval station, which is to have a $1,000,000 dry dock, at Olongapo, Subig Bay, Luzon. Those plans will have to receive the approval of Congress before they can be carried out.

Senator Cockrell, who was met coming out of the White House, where he had just had a talk with Mr. McKinley on the subject, said of the coming visit to Washington of a committee of the Cuban Constitutional Convention: "The Cubans do not apparently fully grasp their status. They are not now a government. They have no power to treat diplomatically with the U. S. The present constitutional convention was called into being through our agency. It only has power to submit to the U. S. for approval a plan or constitution for a representative government. If we reject it outright the existing status continues. They can do nothing. But if the modifications and conditions which we propose are accepted then they can proceed to organize a representative government. And until such a government is organized the troops of the U. S, in my opinion, cannot be completely withdrawn. I am firmly convinced that the convention, after it hears the report of the commission which has been sent here, will accept the Platt amendment. I believe that the members of the commission will learn much of the value to Cuba on their visit here, and that soon after their return the constitutional Convention will take favorable action."

Every republican President from Grant to McKinley has had dreams of establishing a respectable white republican party in the South, but every effort to make the dream a reality has miserably failed. For that reason Mr. McKinley's effort in that line, in South Carolina, is more amusing than alarming to Southern democrats. Senator McLaurin, who has been for all practical purposes an administration Senator for several years, although he only actually withdrew from the democratic caucus just before the adjournment of the last session of Congress, is expected to act as Mr. McKinley's assistant in the present attempt to turn the dream into a reality. The first open move was the appointment of John G. Capers, a gold democrat, to succeed a republican as U. S. District attorney for S. C. The next is awaited with more or less curiosity.

Why not Hang Him for Treason

St. Paul Dispatch:

ExSpeaker Thomas B. Reed, who is in the city on business, speaking freely on political questions, reaffirmed most emphatically his opposition to the imperialistic policy of the administration. In his opinion Dewey should have sailed away from Manila after sinking Montejos fleet, leaving the government of the Islands to the Filipinos. Cuba and Porto Pico, too, should be left to their own devices. The present policy towards Cuba he regards as a piece of hypocrisy. Mr. Reed is an ardent friend of the Boers. "I sympathize with any people on earth," he said "who are struggling for freedom."

Asked whether he thought the Filipinos capable of self government, he said:

"I think every people capable of self government. It may not be the kind we would have or want, but it is the kind that is satistactory and sufficient for them."—Waseca Herald.

Waseca Herald: We are told in a very common place way that a Filipino lawyer has been appointed by the administration to draw up an address to the Filipino people for Aguinaldo to sign. But before it is to be signed (or at least issued) it is to be telegraphed to McKinley, and the McKinleyites will make such changes as may be deemed advisable. Then this address (by Aguinaldo (?)) is to be printed, with his name attached to it, and sent out among the "ignorant masses" as Aguinaldo's (?) address. And if that does not convince the "fellows sitting in darkness" of our honesty (?), our truthfulness (?), our sincerity (?), our Christianity (?), why counfound the heathen ignoramuses we'll dose them on beer and rot gut until they show some signs of appreciating our "benevolent assimilation". There is nothing like the honesty and sincerity (?) of our treatment of the colord brothers! We ought to be prowd of it.

St. Cloud Times: The surrender of Aguinalo; the issuing of his address to his countrymen advising them to do likewise, nor the fact that he is now said to be "sincerely loyal to Uncle Sam," does not change one iota of the question involved in Philippine retention: Is it not contrary to the theory of our government to establish and maintain American supremacy over colonies.

TWO CHARIOTS.

This is the chariot known as Fate and these are the horses three,
They are known as Greed, Ambition and Strife, and the wind is not more free.
They are coursing the vast arena of life and their goal is Destiny.

And who is it rides so swift away, O! who may the driver be?
Stern shows his face through the clouds of dust—look and your eyes will see
The form of a daring rider there, and his name is Enmity.

Now, these are the horses black as night, and the driver fierce is he;
They feel the pitiless lash of pride as onward they swiftly flee—
For he seeks the glittering goal beyond, the goal that is Destiny.

But look, where another chariot goes and drawn by horses three;
Their driver he drives with a gentle hand
and Love his name shall be,
For the horses he drives are Faith and
Hope, and the third is Charity.

White as the foam that wets their lips are Love's swift horses three;
They, too, are rounding the course of life toward the goal that is Destiny;
But they trample no roses under their feet and none from their pathway flee.

Where Enmity's chariot wheels have been a burning track shall be,
While Love looks back with a lingering smile that all who will may see;
For Enmity rides with a fierce desire, but Love shall the victor be.
—Arthur Lewis Tubbs, in Town and Country, New York.

Equal to the Emergency

"I NEVER took any socialistic fads to my bosom," said the Mount Pleasant man with the sun-peeled nose, "until last Sunday, in Atlantic City. Then it struck me that it would be a mighty fine thing if the United States government owned and operated the telegraph lines, so that congress could pass a law making provision for the transmission of money by wire on Sundays as well as on week days. Just why the telegraph companies decline to use the wires on Sunday for the relief of broke persons at distant points from their headquarters is something that I can't understand. A man is as liable to stack up against financial insolvency on Sunday as on any other day of the week, isn't he? And yet, for some inexplicable reason, the telegraph companies won't wire money on Sundays, and if Baron Rothschild were to wake up in Des Moines on a Sunday morning and find himself without enough funds in his clothes to get him through the day, he'd have to try his luck at 'touching' the Des Moines citizens for enough coin to last him until the following morning, for he couldn't get a sou markee by telegraph, no matter how hot he makes the wires.

"This rule of the telegraph companies gave me a pretty warm day of it last Sunday at Atlantic City. I went down there alone on the previous Friday. My wife was not able to accompany me, because she was entertaining a lot of her relatives from the west, and she had already put in three weeks at the seashore, anyhow, earlier in the summer.

"I was floating around on the board walk on Saturday night with a lot of Washington chaps I met down at Atlantic, when in the neighborhood of ten o'clock I put my hand in my breast pocket to get my wallet in order to pay for a round of—er—sarsaparilla. The wallet wasn't there. I did the liveliest hunt through all the rest of my clothes that you ever saw, but the wallet was gone. I had either dropped it, or it had been deftly removed from my inside pocket as I threaded through the crowd on one of the piers. There was about $80 in the wallet, and the Washington chaps with whom I'd been drifting around had seen me skin a bill out of it only about 15 minutes before. But it was absent, all right. My Washington friends wanted to lend me money, but I'm not much on the borrow, except in the most extreme cases, and so I left the crowd, went to my hotel and wired my wife in Washington to telegraph me $50 the first thing on Sunday morning. I didn't know then that telegraph companies refuse to transmit money on Sundays. I went to bed in the serene belief that I'd find in my letter box downstairs on the following morning a notification from one of the telegraph companies that 50 large, iron dollars were awaiting my demand for same with proper identification.

"Instead of that I found a telegram from my wife to this effect:

"'Can't wire money on Sunday. Will try other means.'

"'She can't wire money on Sunday, hey?' I growled to myself. 'Well, she's become pretty religious all of a sudden,' and it was some time before the fact began to dawn upon me that it wasn't any newly-formed religious scruples on my wife's part, but a rule of the telegraph companies that made it impossible for her to wire me money on Sunday. I was informed that this was the case when I made inquiry upon the matter at the hotel telegraph office. I was red-hot and fuming. I was flat broke in Atlantic City on Sunday. Moreover, I had to be back in Washington on the following morning, and I hadn't bought a round-trip ticket, and there was my hotel bill to be settled. I'm afraid that I ate my mustache and breathed many sulphurous things with reference to telegraph companies when all of this flashed over me.

"'My wife says in her dispatch that she'll try other means,' I reflected, as I sulked around the hotel veranda after breakfast. 'I wonder what those means are going to be? Maybe she'll take the first train down herself. Maybe she'll send the housemaid down with the money. Maybe she'll tie a purse around the neck of the fox terrier pup and ship him along in the baggage car of the first train. Maybe she'll send it by carrier pigeon. Maybe she'll charter Prof. Langley's airship or aeroplane and fetch it down that way. Maybe she—' but at that point I had to give it up. I was determined not to tackle any of my Washington friends for enough money to see me through until the morning, for that's a kind of business I don't like.

"Well, there I was all that Sunday morning without the price of a dip in the surf in my clothes—without the price of a cigar, for the matter of that. It was the first time I had been able to break away from Washington for a little two or three-day vacation, too, and you can take any odds offered that I was whooping mad.

"A little before one o'clock I was called to the long-distance telephone at the hotel desk. The young woman in the Philadelphia telephone office began to tell me things. She said my wife desired me to go to an Atlantic City physician, whose name she gave me, and whose office, she said, was at such-and-such a number on Atlantic avenue, at two o'clock, where I'd get money. I'd never heard of that particular medical man in my life, and it looked pretty queer. I asked the telephone girl in the Philadelphia office why my wife couldn't talk direct to me, and the girl replied that there was some temporary difficulty with the wires, but that she had repeated my wife's message word for word.

"I couldn't see through it, of course, but at a few minutes before two I left the hotel and started for the office of that medical man on Atlantic avenue, whose name I had never heard. He answered my ring himself and I told him of the business.

"He eyed me pretty suspiciously, I thought, when I had told my little tale. It was plain that he thought that I was either a confidence man or that I was probably peering around his office with a bit of burgling in view.

"'This is all very strange, my dear sir,' said the medical man, still eyeing me sharply. 'I don't know you. I've received no message from anybody in Washington. You can readily see that it would be quite out of the question for me to—er—it is all exceedingly unusual, you know. One has to be very careful at these summer resorts. Perhaps I shall receive a message a little later on,' looking at his watch, which showed the hour to be about half-past two, 'but until then, why—um—it is so unusual that—'

"Oh, there isn't a doubt in life that that man of medicine had it all figured out that I was a porch-climber or something, all right. Fact is, I felt like one. I'll bet I looked as hangdog as I stood there before him, with that flimsy excuse for presenting myself at his office, as if I'd just been arrested for breaking some little girl's arm out of pure devilment.

"I backed out of his office with tottering knees and more internal rage over my idiotic position than I had experienced in a long time, and he closed the door on me with plenty of haughtiness. I was about half a block from his office and saying things under my breath not at all fit for the Sabbath, when a colored man came running after me to tell me that the doctor wanted me to return to his office. I returned all right and found the medical man at the telephone, with all kinds of grins on his face. Well, to cut it short, I'd no sooner left his office than his telephone bell rang and he was called up by my family physician in Washington. The two doctors were old pals and they exchanged funny things over the wire. My wife had gone to our Washington doctor, who lives near us, and asked him what to do, and he had told her that he'd 'phone an old friend in Atlantic City to hand me the money. Then my wife had telephoned me to that effect, as the girl at the Philadelphia telephone office had said. The doctor at Washington had been a little late in telephoning, which caused me the embarrassing five minutes with the doctor in Atlantic City. The latter counted me out the 50 with great cordiality when he got through talking with his old friend, our Washington physician, and he even pressed me to stay to dinner with his family. But I wasn't in a condition of mind to stay to dinner with anybody, and so I just thanked him, went back to the hotel and packed my traps, paid my bill and hiked back to Washington on the first train.

"From now on I'm going to whoop 'er up for government ownership of telegraph lines and Sunday money."—Washington Star.

Rhode Island will have no spring election this year. This leaves Louisiana as the only state in the union which clings to the old idea of spring elections.

Rural free delivery continues to grow in popularity. The government has issued instructions relating to the conditions for establishing such delivery. One of the requirements is that the roads shall be in proper order. Thus rural free delivery goes hand in hand with the good roads movement.

The news comes from Yellowstone national park that the great geyser Excelsior, which has been inactive for a number of years, has again begun operations and is periodically hurling rivers of water to a height of 300 feet. The indications are that the geysers, instead of dying out, are increasing in power.

It was a strange coincidence that Sir John Strainer, the great English composer and organist, died at the beginning of holy week. During that week his most famous composition, "Crucifixion," was sung throughout all the churches of the civilized world. What a magnificent monument for a man to leave!

Senor Varona, the secretary of education in Cuba, recommends the expenditure of $1,100,000 for the construction of schoolhouses in the island, $500,000 to be expended during the present year. That is a wise recommendation. The more Cuba spends for education the less is it likely to get into serious trouble hereafter. Free schools are the very best investment for a free people.

Liquor dealers in Abingdon, Mass., by way of a joke nominated Rev. W. H. Wyman for constable, but they have about come to the conclusion that the joke is on them instead of on the reverend gentleman. By an act passed at the last session of congress the Virginia-Tennessee boundary line has been fixed in the middle of the main street of Bristol, Tenn. There is a car line in the street and passengers on opposite sides of a car now ride in different states. The marriage of minors, forbidden in Virginia, may be performed on the south side of a car. A Virginia criminal on the south side of the street is safe from arrest, should he so insist, until requisition papers can be obtained from Tennessee.

The name Constitution, which has been selected for the new defender of the America's cup, built at Bristol, is a pretty big mouthful, but there can be no question of its appropriateness. The original Constitution, "Old Ironsides," not only demonstrated her superior fighting power in battle, but upon one memorable occasion she showed a clean pair of heels to an entire British squadron. If her namesake does as well the America's cup races this year will be the same old story.

The fire losses for the first three months of this year reach the appalling total of $49,969,200, or at the rate of almost $200,000,000 for the year—enough to construct an isthmian canal. In round numbers, this is an excess of $8,000,000 over the first quarter of last year, $9,000,000 over that of the year before, while it distances the record of the same period of 1898 by over $20,500,000. A glance at the list of places that have contributed to this record discloses the fact that the distribution of loss has been pretty general, and indicates carelessness.

Dr. J. Howard Taylor, a medical inspector of the board of health in Philadelphia, gave a talk before the Woman's Sanitary league on the subject of kissing and took occasion to assure the ladies that it is a very dangerous habit. He told them that there is just as much danger in touching the lips of the consumptive as in inhaling the atmosphere breathed by the invalid, and there are many diseases that can be conveyed from one person to another by way of the lips. He cannot stay the tide against a pair of rosy, pouting lips.

The Association of Altruists, which established a colony at Morristown, N. J., a year ago, has just been disbanded. Any man or woman of good character and habits was eligible to membership in the association which guaranteed to its members steady and congenial employment, and in the days of sickness and old age sufficient ease and comfort, the initiation fee being five dollars and the weekly dues one dollar. The golden rule was painted on every fence in the community, but the members would not live up to it and the colony collapsed.

FLOODS CAUSE RUIN.

Rain and Snowstorms in the East Create Great Havoc.

Streams Overflow Their Banks and Many Cities Inundated—Three Persons Drowned at Marietta, O.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 22.—The most widespread and destructive storm, from a material point of view, has passed. It has left a zone of ruin 200 miles in diameter. It was unusual in that it possessed so many different features. Cities 70 miles from Pittsburgh were tied up by one of the worst snowstorms ever known. While the snowfall was from 18 inches to three feet deep, which is not extraordinary, the snow was so wet that it clung in weighty masses to shade and fruit trees and electric wires and poles, bearing them to the earth. It settled on steam and street railroads like wet sand, stopping all traffic and making pedestrianism a feat for only the most hardy. The fall was so heavy and spontaneous in some places that the residents declare it seemed like the bursting of a snow cloud. A few miles away from these unfortunate towns were municipalities in just as dire straits from rain, but with speedier prospect for relief, as the rain will run off faster than the snow can melt, yet here traffic was practically suspended. Water overflowed and washed out railroad tracks and hillsides came down and buried the rails.

Losses Will Reach $2,000,000.

A look over the ground after the flood shows that the losses will be fully as great as was estimated Sunday. In and about Pittsburgh it will probably take $1,000,000 to pay the total cost of the injury to property by the water and by landslips. Add to this the great loss to the railroads and manufacturing plants up and down the rivers in this immediate vicinity, with the loss in wages to the workingmen, and the total will not fall far short of the $2,000,000 mark. The work of cleaning up is going on everywhere in the flooded district.

Three Lives Lost.

Marietta, O., April 23.—Three persons were drowned here Monday afternoon. A boat containing nine men was carried under the wharfboat by the swift current in the river, and Joseph Everett, a glass worker, was drowned. The others were rescued. Later two boys named Hanley, aged 14 and seven, were drowned in the same place.

At Steubenville, O., over 250 families were rendered homeless by the high waters. Manufacturing plants have suspended and will not be able to start for several days. Much damage is also reported at Mingo Junction, Alikanna, Brilliant, Warrenton and Portland.

BRITISH FINANCES.

New Budget Is Presented to House of Commons Showing a Heavy Deficit.

London, April 19.—The new budget was presented to the house of commons Thursday afternoon by Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer. It is the most notable presentation of British finances in the history of the empire and is the one topic of newspaper discussion in this morning's papers. Briefly summarized, the budget speech shows that in the last fiscal year Great Britain's expenditures on account of the Boer war were $325,000,000, that that conflict has added $275,000,000 to the national bonded indebtedness, and that a net deficit of $255,935,000 still remains to be satisfied.

In order to make up this deficit and to meet the constantly increasing expenses of the empire Sir Michael Hicks-Beach asks authority to borrow $300,000,000, and proposes the following items of increased taxation:

On incomes an addition of two pence, making the total 29 cents upon every five dollars.

On refined sugar a tax of four shillings two pence ($1.08) on each hundredweight.

On molasses a tax of two shillings (50 cents) per hundredweight.

On glucose a tax of one shilling eight pence (41 cents) per hundredweight.

On coal an export tax of one shilling (25 cents) per ton.

From these additions to British taxes Sir Michael Hicks-Beach estimates the annual revenue will be:

From incomes	$19,000,000
From sugar, molasses and glucose	25,500,000
From coal	11,500,000
Total	$56,000,000

London, April 20.—The house adopted the war loan resolution by a vote of 186 to 117.

New York, April 23.—The new British war loan of $300,000,000 is said to have been subscribed five times over. An American syndicate, headed by J. Pierpont Morgan, is said to have applied for $50,000,000.

Peace Negotiations Renewed.

London, April 20.—The Sun Friday confirming the report that the peace negotiations between Lord Kitchener and the Boer generals have been renewed suggests that something is likely to be effected during Sir Alfred Milner's absence. The paper also says the government is divided as to who will fill Sir Alfred Milner's place. Mrs. Botha is again acting as a go-between.

Pretoria, April 23.—The force under Commandant Bokburg, composed of 106 men, with wagons and rifles, has surrendered near Middleburg, Transvaal colony.

A Great Combine.

Milwaukee, April 19.—The Sentinel says: The five largest stationery engine manufacturing companies in the United States are to be consolidated into one gigantic combine, with a capital of $25,000,000. The companies which are expected to be included in the new corporation are: The E. P. Allis Co., of Milwaukee; the Pennsylvania Iron Works Co., of Philadelphia; the Gates Iron Works Co., of Chicago; the Fraser & Chalmers Co., of Chicago, and the Dixon Manufacturing company, of Scranton, Pa.

Missionaries Killed.

Washington, April 23.—Figures received at the state department, compiled by J. W. Stevenson, director of the Chinese inland mission, show that the total number of foreign missionaries killed in China during the recent disturbances, including the children, was 186. Of these, 28 adults and eight children were Americans.

WU URGES REFORMS.

Chinese Minister Prepares a Memorial to His Government Pointing Out Her Opportunities.

Washington, April 22.—The Chinese minister, Mr. Wu Ting Fang, is about to make a move of far-reaching importance to the affairs of China and one which cannot, it is believed, but engage the favorable attention of all the foreign powers interested in the affairs of the empire. He is preparing a memorial to the Chinese government, based upon his intimate acquaintance with the affairs of the western world, and pointing out wherein there is the opportunity for China to adopt an enlightened and progressive policy, which will bring it into harmony with the sisterhood of nations, and at the same time will relieve it from the present perplexities which are crowding upon it at all hands.

The memorial is a comprehensive document, covering 20 heads, dealing with administrative, economic and financial questions, and taking in practically the entire range of government affairs so far as there seems to be a present opportunity of rehabilitating them on modern and progressive lines. The document is, however, most conservative in character, and purposely avoids radicalism and extreme reforms which have interfered with previous efforts to bring about a change in the existing order of affairs. Mr. Wu is a loyal and devoted admirer of his country and its institutions, and he has not been in sympathy with past efforts for excessive change, as in his judgment they went so far as to invite prejudice and opposition, not only in imperial and other ruling quarters, but also with the mass of the people who are slow to realize the advantage of sweeping changes. In the present instance Mr. Wu has sought to find a middle ground of conservative improvement which would commend itself both to the Chinese government and to the world at large as calculated to remove the most serious obstacles in the way of progress.

Berlin, April 23.—It is believed in German official circles that Russia will take up negotiations with China again regarding the Manchurian convention after the general China question is settled.

It is also believed officially that the Chinese regular army is already retreating before the expedition which is under way, and that the allied commanders are now discussing what troops they can send home.

ISSUES A MANIFESTO.

Aguinaldo Calls on His Countrymen in Rebellion to Lay Down Their Arms.

Manila, April 20.—The following is Aguinaldo's address to the Filipino people made public Friday evening:

"I believe I am not in error in presuming that the unhappy fate to which my adverse fortune has led me is not a surprise to those who have been familiar with the progress of the war. The lessons taught with a full meaning, and which have recently come to my knowledge, suggest with irresistible force that a complete termination of hostilities and lasting peace are not only desirable, but absolutely essential to the welfare of the Philippine islands.

"The Filipinos have never been dismayed at their weakness nor have they faltered in following the path pointed out by their fortitude and courage. The time has come, however, in which they find their advance along this path to be impeded by an irresistible force which, while it restrains them, yet enlightens their minds and opens to them another course, presenting them the cause of peace. This cause has been joyfully embraced by the majority of my fellow countrymen who have already united around the glorious sovereign banner of the United States. In this banner they repose their trust and belief that under its protection the Filipino people will attain all those promised liberties which they are beginning to enjoy. The country has declared unmistakably in favor of peace. So be it. There has been enough blood, enough tears and enough desolation. This wish cannot be ignored by the men still in arms if they are animated by a desire to serve our noble people, which has thus clearly manifested its will. So do I respect this will, now that it is known to me.

"After mature deliberation I resolutely proclaim to the world that I cannot refuse to heed the voice of a people longing for peace, nor the lamentations of thousands of families yearning to see their dear ones enjoying the liberty and the promised generosity of the great American nation.

"By acknowledging and accepting the sovereignty of the United States throughout the Philippine archipelago, as I now do and without any reservation whatsoever, I believe that I am serving thee, my beloved country. May happiness be thine."

To signalize this important step in the pacification of the country, Gen. MacArthur orders the release, on swearing allegiance to the United States of 1,000 insurgent prisoners.

Manila, April 22.—Aguinaldo has been removed from the Malacanang palace to a private residence, 56 Solano street. The guard placed over him has been modified. Gen. MacArthur says the effect of Aguinaldo's address to the Filipinos will undoubtedly be beneficial.

SIX KILLED.

Gas Explosion in Hotel at St. Mary's, West Virginia, Results Disastrously.

St. Mary's, W. Va., April 23.—Six deaths were caused late at night by an explosion of gas in the Commercial hotel. The dead: Bert Smiley, an oil well shooter; his unknown partner; Samuel Cunningham, oil driller, of Rexford, Pa.; Harry Robinson, tool dresser, of Corning, O.; John George, oil operator, of Butler, Pa.; John Slater, one year old, son of the proprietor of the hotel.

The building caught fire and is a total loss. The loss to the property cannot be estimated at this time.

Ruin and Death.

Vancouver, Wash., April 22.—Charles Brown and E. L. Canby, president and cashier, respectively, of the First national bank of Vancouver, which has been closed by the comptroller of the currency, committed suicide during the night two miles from this city, by shooting themselves with a revolver. They were Saturday confronted with a shortage of $81,000 which had been discovered by a bank examiner, and both admitted their guilt.

Capt. Ripley Acquitted.

Frankfort, Ky., April 22.—The jury in the case of Capt. Garnett Ripley, charged with being in a conspiracy which resulted in the assassination of William Goebel, Saturday rendered a verdict of not guilty, after being out only a short time.

Demand for More Battleships.

When the Secretary of the Navy recently demanded more battleships, Congress considered his recommendations favorably, and authorized the construction of several powerful warships. Protection is what our seaports require, and fortifications will not adequately supply this. Defense against all disorders of the digestive organs, such as dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, rheumatism and nervousness, is adequately afforded by that efficient remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it.

There Is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

New England Women

Have an Abiding Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

After years of struggle to attain and merit public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others would recognize in us the truth, good faith, and honesty of purpose which we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to succeed, and to realize the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of a vast army of our fellow beings.

Thus stands the Pinkham name in New England, and all over America, and nowhere is the faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound greater than in New England, its home. Merit, and merit alone, can gain this.

ORGANIC INFLAMMATION.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was troubled very badly with inflammation of the bladder, was sick in bed with it. I had two doctors, but they did me no good. A friend gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me. I have now taken three bottles of it, and I am entirely cured. It is a God-send to any woman, and I would recommend it to any one suffering as I was. I think, if most of the women would take more of your medicine instead of going to the doctors, they would be better off. The Compound has also cured my husband of kidney trouble."

MRS. MABEL GOOKIN,
Box 160. Mechanic Falls, Maine.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

"For two years I suffered from nervous prostration, the result of female weakness. I had leucorrhoea very badly, and at time of menstruation would be obliged to go to bed. Also suffered with headaches, pain across back, and in lower part of abdomen. I was so discouraged. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, and concluded to give it a trial. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, and received a very nice letter in return. I began at once the use of her Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now feeling splendid. I have no more pain at monthly periods, can do my own work, and have gained ten pounds. I would not be without your Vegetable Compound. It is a splendid medicine. I am very thankful for what it has done for me."—MRS. J. W. J., 76 Carolina Ave., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

PAINFUL PERIODS.

"I cannot help but feel that it is my duty to do something in regard to recommending your wonderful medicine. I must say it is the grandest medicine on earth, and have advised a great many suffering with female troubles to take it. I tell people I wish I could go on the platform and lecture on it.

"My trouble was painful menstruation. The suffering I endured pen cannot describe. I was treated by one of our most prominent physicians here for five months, and found myself getting worse instead of better. At the end of the fifth month he told me he had done all he could for me, and that I had better go to the hospital.

"My sister advised me to try your Vegetable Compound, as it cured her of backache. I did so, and took it faithfully, and am now cured of my trouble, and in perfect health, many thanks to your medicine. I cannot praise it enough, and would recommend it to all who suffer from any female weakness."—MRS. H. S. BALL, 461 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any per son who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission.
LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure these women—why not you—you cannot tell until you try it. If you are ill, and really want to get well, commence its use at once, and do not let any drug clerk persuade you that he has something of his own which is better, for that is absurd. Ask him to produce the evidence we do.

A New Wrinkle.

"The idea! What's this?" exclaimed the man who was idly skimming the fashion page.

"What's what?" inquired the other.

"It says here 'Leghorns will be much used this summer.' I've heard of a shoe horn, but a leg horn's new to me. I suppose tight trousers are responsible for it."—Philadelphia Press.

A DOUBTING THOMAS.

Had His Falling Hair Stopped, and Dandruff Cured, Without Faith.

H. B. Fletcher, Butte, Mont., Oct. 20, 1899, says: "Like many other people, I have been troubled for years with dandruff, and within the last few months, my hair came out so badly that I was compelled to have what I had left clipped very close. A friend recommended Newbro's Herpicide. I confess that I doubted his story; but I gave Herpicide a trial; now my hair is as thick as ever, and entirely free from dandruff." "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." At druggists, $1.00. Herpicide is a delightful hair dressing for regular use.

Mr. Newlywed—"Come, won't you break bread with us to-day?" Jack Jester—"No, thanks, old man; you see I can't stand manual labor; by the way, is it her first attempt?"—Ohio State Journal.

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it, like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15c. and 25cts. per package. Sold by all grocers.

Everything that nobody else has any use for comes to him that waits.—Judge.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

A Veteran of the Civil War, Tells an Interesting Story.

Effingham, Ill., April 22 (Special).—Uriah S. Andrick is now 67 years of age. Mr. Andrick served through the whole of the Civil War. He was wounded, three times by ball, and twice by bayonet.

When he entered the service of his country in 1861, he was hale and hearty, and weighed 198 pounds. Since the close of the war, however, Mr. Andrick has had very bad health.

For fifteen years, he never lay down in bed for over an hour at a time. He had acute Kidney Trouble, which grew into Bright's Disease. His heart also, troubled him very much.

On Oct. 18th, 1900, he was weighed, and weighed only 102 pounds, being but a shadow of his former self. He commenced using Dodd's Kidney Pills on the 26th of last December, and on Feb. 20th was again weighed, and weighed 146 pounds. He says:

"I have spent hundreds of dollars and received no benefit, until on the 26th of December last, I purchased one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I am cured, and I am free from any pain. I have not the slightest trace of the Bright's Disease, and I can sleep well all night. I was considered a hopeless case by everybody, but to-day I am a well man, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For the last sixteen years my wife has been in misery with bearing down pains, pains in the lower part of the abdomen and other serious ailments. When she saw what Dodd's Kidney Pills were doing for me she commenced to use them. She now feels like another woman, her pains have all disappeared and her general health is better than it has been for years.

"She is so taken up with Dodd's Kidney Pills and what they have done for us that she has gone to Mr. Cornwell's Drug Store and bought them for some of her friends for fear that if they went themselves they might make a mistake and get something else."

There is something very convincing in the honest simple story of this old veteran and his wife.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only Remedy that ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy. They never fail.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Potatoes.

Minneapolis consumes between six and seven carloads of potatoes a day. The old crop will be about gone in sixty days, when new potatoes from the south will begin to arrive.

In a good crop year Minnesota raises about 14,000,000 bushels of potatoes and ships about 5,000,000 bushels. Last year the total for the state was about 8,700,000 bushels and her exports have been over 2,000,000.

More than one-half the potato crop of Minnesota is consumed at home. The middle and some of the southern states are our best customers. Every year Indiana and Illinois buy extensively of Minnesota. Southeastern Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory are also extensive purchasers. On an average of one year in five the New England states buy of Minnesota. On an average of two years in five Pennsylvania and Virginia come into this market. About one year in ten the Pacific coast is forced to come to us.

At the Pan American.

The contract for Minnesota's building at the Pan American exposition has been let. Two shifts of men will be set at work, and the building will be completed in twenty-five days. It will be a two story building in the colonial style, with a wide pillared veranda, and the second floor will be used for sleeping rooms for the employes. It will have ample space on the first floor for a Minnesota headquarters, and there will be plenty of wall space for photographs of the educational institutions and others illustrating its industries.

Minnesota will have a booth in the agricultural building having a frontage of fifty feet, and will make one of the most effective exhibits in the building, in addition to the exhibits of flour, lumber, stock, poultry and dairy interests.

Code Revision.

The justices of the supreme court appointed the following commission to codify and revise the statutes of the state:

Hiram F. Stevens, St. Paul, chairman.

Daniel Fish, of Minneapolis.

J. T. Knox, of Jackson.

All three are able attorneys and well fitted for the work. Mr. Stevens is a state senator and in politics a republican.

Judge Fish was for five years probate judge in Wright county. He has, since 1880, practiced law in Minneapolis. In politics he is a republican.

Mr. Knox is a democrat and until Jan. 1 was a member of the railroad commission.

State Lands.

One hundred and forty thousand acres of state land will be put up for sale at public auction this spring and State Auditor Dunn has arranged a series of sales at the county seats of counties where land is to be sold, beginning May 16, at Cambridge, Isanti county, and closing June 4, at Walker, Cass county.

Much of the land will raise good crops, but a large share of the cut-over timber land is better adapted for grazing.

None of the land may be sold for less than the appraised value, which ranges from $5 to $20. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price has to be paid at the time of the sale, with interest for one year on the unpaid balance.

STRIKE IS OFF.

Labor Troubles at McKeesport, Pa., Satisfactorily Settled—The Agreement Reached.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 19.—There will be no strike in the plants of the American Sheet Steel company. The trouble that broke out in the Dewees Wood plant in McKeesport last week and which for a time threatened to cause a general strike of all union iron and steel workers in the country has been settled in an amicable manner. The members of the general executive board of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers held a long session Thursday. It started out with a general feeling that a strike would come, as the workers would not concede the only point in dispute (reinstatement of the men discharged claimed for joining the union).

During the morning session of the executive board John Jarrett, acting for the American Sheet Steel company, appeared with a proposition for the members to consider regarding a settlement of the difficulty. In general, this proposition was that all men discharged from the Wood plant should be reinstated, including Holloway, and that all but Holloway should return to work at once, Holloway to be returned within ten days.

The board insisted that Holloway should be treated in the same manner as the others, and finally Mr. Jarrett changed his proposition to include Holloway after three days' suspension, and the following agreement was drawn up and signed at seven o'clock Thursday evening:

"We have discovered, after a careful examination of the points at issue, that as usual mistakes and misunderstandings underlie the trouble at McKeesport, and we reach the conclusion that it will be to the advantage of all parties concerned to start the Woods mill with the old employes on next Monday, April 22, 1901.

"And it is further agreed that the contract with reference to working conditions in the mill and scale matters shall be observed until July 1, 1901, and in the meantime Mr. Smith and Mr. Holloway shall have a meeting to adjust any difficulty which may exist between them.

(Signed) "T. J. SHAFFER,
"President A. A. I. S. and T. W.
"JOHN WILLIAMS,
"Sec'y-Treasurer A. A. I. S. and T. W.
"JOHN JARRETT,
"American Sheet Steel Company."

In explanation of this agreement, it was stated that the matter will remain in exactly the same position as before the trouble broke out. The organization of the local of the Amalgamated association among the employes of the mill will be continued, though the company will not recognize it in any way in dealing with the men.

Cleveland, O., April 19.—A general strike of all the firemen and linesmen employed on harbor tugs at Cleveland, Conneaut, Erie, Ashtabula, Fairport, Sandusky, Lorain, Huron and Toledo has been ordered to begin at once. The strikers demand an advance of five dollars per month. They now receive $50 per month. The Great Lakes Towing company, which practically operates all the tugs at the points named, refused to consider the demands, and the strike order followed. It is said that altogether nearly 1,000 men will be directly affected.

TRAIN HELD UP.

Masked Bandits Rob an Express Car and Wound Two Men—Amount Taken Unknown.

Memphis, Tenn., April 23.—The fast express on the Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf railroad was held up and robbed by masked bandits just across the river in Arkansas Monday night, and in the battle that took place the express messenger and the porter of the train were wounded. The robbers escaped with their booty, the amount of which is not known. The Wells-Fargo Express company usually sends its largest shipments by this train, so it is probable that the plunder was valuable. The local officers cannot say positively how much money was aboard, but the sums sent out over the Choctaw road frequently reach big amounts. The scene of the holdup was Bridge Junction, Ark., a lonely and isolated railroad crossing, about four miles from the river.

AWFUL CRIME.

Marauding Tramps Kill Five Children and Father at Chartres, France, in Order to Rob.

Chartres, France, April 23.—This town has been horrified by the brutal murder of five children and the attempted murder of their father, a farmer named Briere, residing in the neighborhood of Chartres. Two tramps entered the farmhouse in the absence of Briere Sunday evening, killed four girls, aged respectively 14, 11, 5 and 4, and a boy 7 years old, with knives and cudgels while they were in bed and apparently asleep. Briere returned while the murderers were robbing the house. They heard him enter the courtyard, attacked him and, after a desperate struggle, left him for dead with four stab wounds in the head. The murderers then escaped with 1,600 francs and a number of objects of value.

THE RUSSIAN SUGAR CASE.

Decision Rendered Sustaining Government's Right to Impose Countervailing Duty.

New York, April 20.—The board of classification of the United States general appraisers Friday announced a decision in the Russian sugar case. The board, by a majority vote, holds that the United States government was justified in imposing a countervailing duty on Russian sugar. The opinion was written by Judge Somerville, and General Appraiser Fischer concurs with him. Col. Tichenor writes a dissenting opinion.

Kasson Steps Out.

Washington, April 20.—Mr. John A. Kasson has severed his official connection with the state department, where he has been since the beginning of Mr. McKinley's administration, engaged as special plenipotentiary to conduct the negotiations which resulted in the drafting of a number of reciprocity treaties and arrangements under the terms of the Dingley act. Although thus severing his official connection, Mr. Kasson holds himself ready to respond to any call of the department for the special information of which he is possessed.

BISHOP HANDY SAYS

"I Cheerfully Recommend Peruna to All Who Want a Good Tonic and a Safe Cure For Catarrh."

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the following one from Bishop James A. Handy, D. D., of Baltimore:

"I take great pleasure in acknowledging the curative effects of Peruna. At the solicitation of a friend I used your remedy and cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a good tonic and a safe cure for catarrh."— James A. Handy.

OTHER NOTABLE CURES.

A Husband Escaped the Pangs of Catarrh of the Lungs.

Most Cases of Incipient Consumption are Catarrh.

Edward Stevens.

Mrs. Edward Stevens, of Carthage, N. Y., writes as follows:

"I now take pleasure in notifying you that my husband has entirely recovered from catarrh. He is a well man to-day, thanks to you and Peruna. He took six bottles of your medicine as directed, and it proved to be just the thing for him. His appetite is good and every thing he eats seems to agree with him. His cough has left him and he is gaining in flesh, and seems to be well every way. I hope others will try your medicine and receive the benefits that we have."—Mrs. Edward Stevens.

When the catarrh reaches the throat it is called tonsilitis, or laryngitis. Catarrh of the bronchial tubes is called bronchitis; catarrh of the lungs, consumption. Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other location. This is why Peruna has become so justly famous in the cure of catarrhal diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Peruna does not palliate; it cures.

Mrs. Frederick Williams, President of the South Side Ladies' Aid Society of Chicago, Ill., writes the following words of praise for Peruna from 973 Cuyler avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

Mrs. Fred. Williams.

"My home is never without Peruna, for I have found during the past six years that there is no remedy that will at once alleviate suffering and actually cure, as Peruna does. Four bottles completely cured me of catarrh of the head of several years' standing, and if my husband feels badly, or either of us catch cold, we at once take Peruna, and in a day or two it has thrown the sickness out of the system."—Mrs. Frederick Williams.

Mrs. W. A. Allison, of 759 Sheffield avenue, Chicago, Ill., is the Assistant Matron of the People's Hospital. She has the following to say about Peruna:

Mrs. W. A. Allison.

"I have had frequent opportunities to observe the wonderful curative effects of Peruna especially on persons suffering with a congested condition of the head, lungs, and stomach, generally called catarrh. It alleviates pain and soreness, increases the appetite and so tones up the entire system that the patient quickly regains strength and health."—Mrs. W. A. Allison.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, APR. 26, 1901.

DELANO DIARY

--ExMayor Lohmiller has had his garden plowed and is industriously trying to keep the wolf from his door.

—Several citizens read the GAZETTE and profited by shutting up their chickens. A few gardeners still complain that their garden seeds run away.

—Read of the preparations for observing Memorial Day. The soldiers in this vicinity have taken hold of the matter this year, and are bound to make it a success.

—We have on hand a few law supplement copies of the laws of 1901, which we will sell for five cents apiece or give to new subscribers paying in advance. Read one.

—The drinking fountain on R. R. Ave, has been useable since Tuesday. The inside of the fountain was cleaned and repainted and it is now in the best condition it has ever been.

—J. D. Young and family are again permitted to mingle with their neighbors; the quarantine, on account of his son Harry coming home with the smallpox, having been raised.

—Warren Merriman has applied for an increase of pension. He is old enough, has suffered enough and should, as he is now unable to work, have all the law allows such cases.

—Tuesday was the first day of this year when Hiram Dver who guesses by Hicks, the ground hog and several other mysterious interpreters of weather, would admit that spring had come.

—Mrs. Martha, wife of the late Dr. A. E. Ames, of Minneapolis, died Saturday at her home. She was known here, having visited her son Curtis B. Ames, several times, when he lived here.

--The St. Cecelia Club's entertainment Tuesday evening was up to the high reputation it has obtained by numerous musicales. Miss Kerr deserves credit for arousing enthusiasm along musical lines.

—Bicycles appear to grow more numerous each year since they became manageable. This spring finds hundreds of them on the road. Some of the riders are small, some are old, in fact most all kinds of people are found on wheels.

--Today is Arbor Day set apart by Gov. Van Sant, as such. If you have trees to plant they should be planted today. An observance of the day by people, especially where there are few trees would soon change the aspect of the country materially.

—Rev. John Doran writes us to change the address of his GAZETTE again so soon. Now from Colfax Washington to Wasco, Oregon. He has charge of an M. E. Church at the latter place and thinks it will be a work he will enjoy. He sends love to all.

--Nearly every spring at cleaning up time we read of several cases of children being burned by brush rubbish or other bonfires. Yet people don't seem to learn the danger. Children should be kept away from such fires. If the rubbish was spaded under it would help level up the lots.

—Tramps continue to come along. Marshal Merriman entertains many of them over night. There should be provisions made in each village throughout the country to give every applicant a bed and something to eat, for work. Too many of them seem to want to eat bread earned by the sweat ofthe other fellows brow.

--It is practially certain that Mrs. August Drechsler of 2206 Third Street S. who disappeared Friday night, has committed suicide by jumping into the river. The woman had for some time been mentally afflicted. It was learned yesterday that neighbors had seen Mrs. Drechsler Friday evening walking back and forth along the river shore.—Minneapolis Times.

--The village council held a meeting on Monday evening. Mayor Horsch being absent Councilman Lindsley was elected chairman. The report of the the auditing committee was spread upon the minutes and a resolution passed demanding that Mr. Maxfield, late Recorder, make up the shortage shown or explain. Joseph Merriman was appointed Pound Master. Several small pox bills were laid over. Bill for printing was cut from $18.46 to $10.36. Several other bills were allowed.

--Attorney E. H. Farnham, called on us early Monday morning, and said that he read an article in last week's GAZETTE written by Frank E. Farnham Esq, of Peabody, Mass., and which we copied from "Our Dumb Animals", Ed says the author is his brother Frank, two years older than himself, a rich and learned man; but that he don't agree with his ideas as expressed in the article "Our United States Army and Militia"; not in the least. Read the article and see which side you take.

--Almost a fire occurred on S. River Street Tuesday afternoon the old Brothers house near the ford having escaped destruction by timely help arriving. Two little daughters of Nick Tauches of Hennepin county are occupying the premises and attending the Parochical school. They took a notion to clean up the yard and lighted a big pile of old grass and rubbish. The flames quickly spread and the dry manure that was piled around the house was on fire in many places when assistance came.

—Street Commissioner Lieudascher has cleaned the streets nicely.

--Children have been busy this week gathering dandelions for greens.

--Speckel and Schaust have bought a new team, and now have four horses.

—Wayzata's ball team came to Delano and got beat the first of the week.

—John Schlirf has moved to rooms over Stein's butcher shop, on River Street.

—The street sprinkler did a nice job last evening by laying the dust for the first time this season.

—Albert Sashnik is painting, papering and fixing up his Fourth street residence, for renters.

--R. M. Bohn has had his garden plowed, and is putting out a small nursery business now.

--Dr. J. P. O'Connor is haying the house he bought of H. Galley, raised and a stone foundation built.

--Albert Eppel is looking about for bowlders from which to build a foundation for his new Third Street residence.

—The Board of Health have ordered the general spring clean up by May 15. Attention should be promptly given to the fact.

--The University of Minnesota base ball team played Noter Dame, Ind., at their home Wednesday, and were defeated 7 to 6.

—Fred Belden loaded a number of teams this week with lumber for a fine new residence on Mrs. Eckelberry's farm near Montrose.

—Our lumber men are receiving lumber and lime just as if they thought people would have a good harvest and build new houses, barns, graineries, etc., etc. Nothing like living in hopes.

—Our citizens are at work fixing up for spring. Mrs. Sandberg has new shingles on her house. Ed Ziebarth is enlarging his store room. The mill is being painted. Swan Erickson has enlarged his dwelling.

- Through the courtesy of our friend George P. Schaffer, now visiting with his wife and two children in the South, we received Vol. I. No. 1. of the Vicksburg American, a paper just started in George's old home before the "wah".

--Things seem to be moving along just the same at Schaffer's North Palace Store, if the "boss" is away down South in Dixie land. If any Delanoites are entitled to a good month's rest it is George and his wife. But then they cannot be having any finer weather now than they would have had at home.

—Delano Board of Education has voted to employ as teachers for the following year:

W. E. Judson, Dundas, per mo	$90
Gertrude Gould, Hamline,	55
Rose M. Teeters, Hastings,	45
Magdaline Klopsteg, New Ulm,	40
Nellie Barrett, Waverly,	40
Alice C. Colville, Howard Lake,	40

Harris Wilder was engaged as janitor for $35 per month.

—The Delano Territorial Association held a regular meeting last night at John Cunningham's residence. The committee on celebration of the anniversary of the admission of Minnesota as a state, May 11, reported that the City Hall has been secured for the occasion. All territorial citizens are invited to attend, and bring along their dinners and experiencies.

--Fire is a dangerous thing when turned loose in the brush or grass. Somebody allowed fire to get away from them Wednesday, near the Delano Cemetery, and it burned over quite a lot of ground: also in the Swede Cemetery adjoining. Some fence was consumed. It may not have done much dammage but there is a chance to destroy stakes, loosing the marks for lots and of injuring tomb stones. It is better to have someone to look after fire when it is in the cemetery.

—School Districts, Villages and counties have been allowing people having claims against them to wait; to hold their orders: or their claims to lay over from meeting to meeting for some time. It now is reported that there are claims against the state that have gone unpaid for months past. And it seems strange. But then, we are told, the U. S. Treasury never had so much gold before. Wouldn't it be a good plan to get the per capita among the people? It might do to let up on taxes and revenues and tariffs until things equalize a little. It don't seem just the thing for people to be carrying promises to pay, or being put off without their wages just to pile up money in the U. S. Treasury. Its wrong if it is a fact.

Memorial Day.

The citizens of Delano who are willing to aid in an effort to properly observe Memorial Day, May 30, are invited to meet in the City Hall, Wednesday evening, May 5 at 730 to arrange proceedings for that purpose.

COMMITTEE.

The meeting held last Friday evening at E. H. Farnham's office in reference to Memorial Day elected the following committees:

Executive Committee: Chas. Conzet, chm., O. L. Billings, Thos. Rader, J. D. Young, Thos. Shaw.

Music and Speaking: Chas. Bronkow, chm., Chas. Conzet, F. H. Lindsley.

Procession and Decoration: John Cunningham, chm., E. H. Farnham, Wm. Lewis.

Floral Committees: Mrs. Chas. Green, chm. Miss Annie Martin, Mrs. Minerva Mulford. Mrs. M. A. O'Hair, Miss Julia Cunningham, Philip Martin.

Marshal of the Day, M. A. O'Hair.

"Then plow deep, while sluggards sleep;
And you'l have corn to sell, and keep."
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

Many women have been reproached for living for the sole object of entertaining. No one doubts that such an aim is petty and narrowing, but it is equally certain that it is a woman's duty to understand The Art of Entertaining, and this forms the subject of an attractive and useful article by LADY JEUNE in THE COSMOPTLITAN for MAY.

Things Delano Needs.

The Cargill Elevator moved from corner of Third Street crossing.

Good well water in the water system.

Back doors to the school house.
More play ground for children.
A gynasium.
A reading room.
A village park.

Personal.

C. M. Coffin has moved to Jinkens, Minn.

Editor Schmidt, of Waverly, visited Delano Monday.

Miss Annie Miller visited home, at Loretto, this week.

Miss Meta Jones went east Thursday evening, for a visit.

Rev. M. Savs drove to Watertown, on business, Wednesday.

Mrs. C. Dickey, of Minneapolis, visited in Delano this week.

Miss Aurelia Hoisington visited Minneapolis friends this week.

Mrs. Frank Roban and son visited relatives at Waverly, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Caesar, of Howard Lake, visited Delano friends, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Asplund, of Independence were in Delano, on business, this week.

Ennis Brandon, of Annandale, came over Sunday. He footed from Rockford station.

Mrs. Phrona Frazee drove up from Maple Plain and visited Delano friends, Thursday.

Mrs. Peter Samuelson and sister, of Montrose, transacted business in Delano yesterday.

Elmer S. Babb, who is carpentering with L. M Maxfield, in Minneapolis, spent Sunday at home.

Sheriff Nugent and Judge Cochrane came over from the County Seat, Wednesday, on business.

Mrs. E. E Shrader, came up from Minneapolis saturday morning, on her way home to Watertown.

Mrs. Mowatt and son William accompanied her nephew William Costello, home to Minneapolis Saturday.

Rev. Berendt, the big Polish priest, was in town Saturday, on his way to Waverly to aid in mission work.

Mr. and Mrs. Lutz of Beebe Lake, visited with Henry Parslow and family Sunday, on their way to Minneapolis.

Dr. William Grant has beenn taking the state examination, and expects soon to locate at Hill Lake, Aitkin county.

L. G. Nelson, who was injured at Willmar some time ago, has been called to St. Paul to make a settlement with the Great Northern, St. Cloud Times.

William Hawker was, on Wednesday, again committed to the Hospital for insane at Fergus Falls. His son Charles and Sheriff Nugent accompanied him there.

County Commissioner Bugbee, of Rockford, drove over on Saturday. He expressed some surprise that Franklin farmers didn't vote for an iron pridge near the Ruckoldt bridge.

County Cullings.

The Waverly Star comes out shimer than ever this week. The new press makes it more independent.

John Coolens hardware store at Smith Lake Burned Sunday evening. He lost nearly everything. Little insurance. He has the sympathy of many Delano friends in his loss.

Sheriff Nugent informs us that the Sheriff's office has not paid over one third expences since January 1. It must be that people are growing better or that the Shiriff is getting awfully extravagant as he grows older.

Teeth Dr. Niven will be in Waverly April 30 & May 1. All kinds of Dentistry.

Duluth Herald: "Do not hide your light under a bushel. Keep your business well before the public,' says Sir Thomas Lipton, who made a big fortune by advertising.

Oregon Agriculturist: A lady breeder tells us that she has kept track of the financial question of feed on her hares, and found that it costs just 96 cents to feed 20 grown hares one month. Figuring an average thus of five cents per month she says it will cost her about 40 cents per animal to raise say nine or ten months as they do not eat much the first two months. If sold at $1.00 for meat the profit is half, allowing ten cents per animal for maintainance. If sold for say $5.00 to breed the amount is nineteenths profit.

Three Ways to Get Rich.

Benjamin Franklin once said there were "three ways for a nation to get rich; by conquest, which was robbery; by commerce, which was generally cheating; and by agriculture, the only honest way." Our nation ought to get rich, for it is pursuing all three methods at the present time. —The Vicksburg American.

Unexpected Return.

Some men are very unreasonable and exacting. A Wisconsin soldier, just returned from the Philippines, raised a row with an editor in his home town because the latter had given credence to a rumor of his death and had a few mistakes in writting his obituary. He insisted that he ought to have been given a chance to read the proofs on his own death notice.—Minneapolis Tribune.

WE LEARN BY DOING.

We learn by doing, little folks,
No matter what the work may be.
Just try, with all your might, and find
How one by one your giants flee.

Don't say, "I can't," before you try,
But try and see what you can do.
For if you are helped by others, why
'Tis others do the work, not you.

See happy bird in yonder tree,
How soft and warm he builds his nest;
He asks no help from you or me,
But tries to do his very best.

And if like birdie, little ones,
Your very best you try to do,
You will find how easy will become
The tasks that seem so hard to you.
—Kindergarten News.

Maple Plain.

We have had fine weather this week so far for farming, and all the seeding will be about finished up by the last of the week

Maple sap and fish are done running.

Baker Brothers have bought sixty acres of land on the Pioneer Creek, of Ben Drake.

Dr. Connelley, of Rockford, was in our town last Saturday, on professional business.

Harrold Kennedy and Miss Minnie Personett were married, last Sunday.

H. L. Bowen and Daye Richards shiped a car load of household goods from Maple Plain to Jenkens, Minn., last Saturday. They intend going there to live.

All the assessors of Hennepin County meet at the Court House, Minneapolis next Saturday to get their necessary books and papers, and receive instructions from the county auditor if he has any to give, in regard to assessing property.

Some of Enos Alger's family is on the sick list.

The Post Office at Maple Plain has received a new coat of paint.

Mrs. J. H. Richards and two children of Buffalo, were visiting in our town from Sunday until Tuesday.

John Nelson our country blacksmith went to Minneapolis today, on business.

There will be quite a good deal of building done in the country during the spring and summer, people have been waiting for lumber to come down but the trusts and combines say it will not come down. So the people must build anyway.

Rag peddlers, book and machine agents have started out on their annual hunt.

Many of the farmers are setting out fruit this spring.

This is the time of year for cleaning up the door yard and making soft soap.

Some of our townspeople have colds, rheumatism, and the Cuban itch.

Mr. Editor if the Philippine Islands is admitted as a Territory into the U. S. can a fellow take a homestead; or can he have only a squatters right, and will the government pay a fellows transportation and mileage if he will go out there and make a setlement? In the days of slavery we had what was called the Missouri Compromise; very soon it will be another kind of compromise.

Filipinos a Bad Lot.

John E. Bell, son of J. E. Bell, president of the Hennepin County Savings bank, returned to Minneapolis yesterday morning from two years' service with the Thirty fourth United States volunteers in the Philippines. He was mustered out in San Francisco, March 29, after having just returned from the Philippines.

Young Bell does not think that the United States has obtained possession of anything worth fighting for in the Philippines. The climate he declares to be unhealthy. He does not think that the island will ever be worth much as a source of revenue and he believes the Filipinos to be a pretty tough lot of people and a people who will have to be exterminated to secure peace.

He gives General Funston, for whom he has great admiration, a great deal of credit for capturing Aguinaldo, but he cannot believe that the capture is of any importance as far as ending the rebellion is concerned. Aguinaldo, he declares, has long since lost his influence over the people of the island. There are a large number of guerilla bands with from 50 to 800 members and they are quite active and will remain so until they are wiped out.—Minneapolis Times.

Colonial Dependencies.

KANSAS CITY, April 20.—The Kansas City Journal says: ExSenator Charles M. Towne was shown a copy of Aguinaldo's proclamation. He said: "It is clearly the utterance of a man who yields only to force, and, considering the occurances of the past two years, it constitutes one of the most pathetic incidents in history. I see nothing in the proclamation on which to base any imputation on the good faith of Aguinaldo. There is however, an expression that somewhat alters my opinion of his astuteness based on his previous conduct. He says that the Filipino people will under the sway that the United States, obtain all 'promised liberties'.

"He cannot have forgotten the assurance of Gen. Anderson in 1899 as to the justice with which our allies against Spain would be treated, or the solemn promises of the president at the beginning of the era of benevolent assimilation.

"One thing should be born in mind; the surrender of every hostil force in the Philippines, and the absolute acceptance of our domain throughout the archipelago does not dispose of the question involved in the acquisition and government by the republic of distant colonial dependencies. Wrong as the policy is, and cruel as it is against the Filipinos, it is infamously more wrong and cruel from the standpoint of the welfare of the United States.—Duluth Herald.

SUBSIDIES UNNECESSARY.

"It is well known that the Burlington Route is selected by the government, and has been for many years, as the route for its through mail service between Chicago and Council Bluffs. The overland mail, sent by the government over the Burlington. This service is performed in special trains, but there is no written contract for the service with the government. It simply has selected and retains what it considers the best, quickest and safest route for its transcontinental mails; nor is any subsidy paid. The Burlington receives only the same rates in force by general law for the carriage of all mails in the country. In a recent debate in the House of Representatives at Washington, upon the question of paying a subsidy to a line of railroad between New York and New Orleans, for keeping up a fast mail service in the South, Mr. Loud of California, Chairman of the committee on postoffices and postroads, in giving his reasons for voting against this subsidy to the southern railroad, paid the following high tribute to the Burlington. He said: "if subsidies are proper, you should not restrict them. If there is any railroad in the country that earns extra compensation from the government, that railroad is the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, from Chicago to Omaha, which runs phenomenally fast trains, carrying nothing but mail; but that company does not ask for a subsidy."—Railway Age, March 29, 1901.

THE SAFEST SAFETY WHEEL.

Life, my boy is a bicycle path,
And work is the wheel you should ride
If you would mount to the crest of the hill
And coast down the other side.

Just oil the machine with cheerfulness
And see that the parts are in trim,
Then straddle the saddle and pedal on
With a ready, steady vim,

Don't start with a rush up the hill of life—
Just pedal a medium gate:
Remember that those who "scorch" at first
Are likely to finish late.

Grasp the handle bars of the wheel of work
With a firm hold—not too tight!
Then sit up straight; like a man and push—
Push for the road that's right!

You may wabble a bit, and punctures, too,
May cause you to dismount,
But plug up the holes with smiles and pluck,
They are the plugs which count.

There are other makes of machines than "Work"—
There's the "Idle," "Lazy," the "Rest"
And hosts of others of tempting style,
But the one called "Work" is best.

It's low gear wheel of homely frame,
But its safe and sure and strong,
And the man who rides it persistently
Can never in life go wrong.

So straddle the saddle of "Work," my boy,
And push it along with pride,
Till you get to the top of the hill of life,
Then you'll coast down the other side.
—Joe Kerr in New York Herald.

THE bigest Steam ship company in the world has been formed, J. P. Morgan has consolidated, it is said, the Leland Line with the Atlantic Transport company, giving the greatest tonage of any line in the world.

IT is hard work to raise regular soldiers in this country. The law allows an army of 100,000 but it has been announced that only 76,000 would be organized at once. Raising regulars is different from raising volunteers when they are needed by the United States. When a man in the prime of life joins the regular army, as a rule, he is not so much account to fight our country's battles as a volunteer who enlists from patriotic motive to fight for his country's defense and honor.

GREAT headlines are used in some of the dailies as to how the French like McKinley. Because a report was circulated that an attempt had been made to assassinate McKinley. Would it not be better to say how they like a Republic, and how they dislike to have a President killed. Americans sympathize with Kruger, Styne and Aguinaldo, not because they admire them personally, but because they represent liberties cause. It is not McKinley so much but the President of the United States the French like.

THE Judge and the jury didn't agree very well in the case of Callahan on trial for assisting in kidnapping young Cudahy, in Omaha. It does seem that of twelve average citizens of that, or any other city, at least one man would have been found among twelve, who would have been as intelligent, and honest, as the judge, so far as trying that case was concerned. Had one, two, or three men differed from the others, and hung the jury; had a disagreement; it might have looked different. But when it comes to twelve sworn jurors, listening to a suit of such importance and agreeing that the accused was innocent, while the judge holds such opposite opinions, it certainly looks as if something was awfully wrong It seems as if the jury and the Judge after hearing the same evidence ought to come nearer than that to agreeing, unless somebody was unusually biased.

A Good Name.

A good name has, in days gone by, been prized above any thing else. Time was when a man would fight for his name. The least breath of suspicion would bring forth a storm. If he was called a liar, or a thief, he would at once challenge the accuser to a duel to the death. If a word was said derogatory to the family, death on sight was the doom of the instigator of reports. But these times seem to be slipping away, and whether people simply care less for what people say about their names; have less pride in family names, or whether they have really degenerated so badly that they dare not face the truth, and resent insinuations and innuendoes slung about concerning them, it seems to be a fact just the same.

Today, scarcely a family is free from the calumnators ever wagging tongue; or an individual but has some broad hints thrown out about his being not just what he should be. The laborer is said to shirk his work and to be lazy, or to take home with him things that don't belong to him, or is saucy and impertinent, anything to reduce his worth in the eyes of his employers. The merchant is said to cheat on weight, and measure, to water his oil, sand his sugar, and other tricks of the trade. The professional man is talked of as a highway robber, the lawyer has both sides of the case; the physician keeps his patient sick as long as possible; the minister preaches for money.

Why all this? Are not people as good today as they ever were? Is not much of it due to the lack of family pride? And is there not a good reason for this lack? Children are turned over to anybody to raise, they are placed in the hands of improper persons from their birth, often though their mothers have charge of them they are no better off, for she must attend the dance and the card party and leave them at home, or take them along to a place her mother would have been ashamed to have been seen. At these places of amusement wine flows, and gambling is a part of the games, the childrens' ever watchful eyes learn that people do not practice what they preach. People they have a right to think better of, are among the worst. School teachers supposed to instruct them in better ways mingle with the crowd, occasionally a preacher is there. The children get an idea that there is no harm in those things, they carry the notions with them into life, and become caloused to the talk about the moral wrong of cheoting, deceiving, drinking, gambling, of calling each other anything but good. Hence it is not so much to be wondered at that a good name is sought after by fewer people now than formerly.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY and party left Washington Monday morning for a 10,000 mile trip, to the Pacific coast and return.

They went through the south as far as New Orleans, thence west to San Francisco. He will have an opportunity to see the country but little opportunity to learn the thoughts of the people as things will be arranged to greet him, everywhere. Large crowds, through curiosity to see the President of the United States, will appear at the depots along the roads over which the train passes.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27, 1901

Senator Cockrell stated the case in a nutshell when he said, the other day, this has become plain since the committee from the Cuban Constitutional Convention reached Washington. Although they represent no government and are paid salaries by the U. S., they came to Washington with the idea that their status was the same as ministers plenipotentiary, sent by one government to negotiate with another, and they have been greatly surprised to discover that they were in Washington to be jollied and entertained at White House State dinners and such functions, but not to negotiate. A negotiator must necessarily have credentials, and where, pray, would these Cubans get credentials? The convention which elected them has no government behind it, except the military government of the U. S., and a government cannot negotiate with itself. The subject upon which these self-deluded Cubans were most anxious to negotiate was the tariff they wish this government to lower or entirely remove the duty on Cuban sugar and tobacco, and having ascertained that Congress alone could act, they have been trying to see what chance there was of securing Mr. McKinley's promise to recommend such legislation to Congress. They have not received any encouragement in that line, nor in the hope that Congress would modify the conditions laid down by the Platt amendment.

The members of the Cuban committee have been very careful about publicly expressing their opinion of Gen. Wood, who is also in Washington, and of his administration of the military government of Cuba but one of the Cubans who accompanied them, M. M. Coronado, who was editor and proprietor of a Havana paper recently suppressed by Gen. Wood, has been knocking Gen. Wood to everybody he could get to listen to him. He says the Cubans don't want Wood for governor and that his actions have been responsible for all the trouble over the Platt amendment. Gen Portuondo and Senor Llorente, members of the committee, are said to agree fully with the ex editor in his denunciation of Gen. Wood but to consider it impolitic to say so publicly.

Whatever he may do later, it is now certain that Mr. McKinley will make no change in the Pension Commissionership until after he returnes from his trip to the Pacific Coast. The Kansas Congressional delegation was so anxious to capture this plum that they presented two candidates—ex Representatives Blue and Peters—with the request that either be appointed. Mr. McKinley told Representative Curtis, who acted for the delegation, that he was not yet ready to consider the matter.

The charge of the Light Brigade was not in it with the onslaught made upon Mr. McKinley this week by republican Senators and Representatives to secure some of the army commission pie before it was all gone, the names of nearly 500 appointments to be lieutenants were made public this week. They made things so warm for Mr. McKinley that he had to do something to stave them off, and as about all the places had been promised, some of them to the constituents of the very men who were clamoring for more, he told them that many of those appointed would probably fail to pass the examination necessary to get a commission and that then they would have another chance. Most of them had to be content with that, but it is understood that Senators Quay and Penrose, who held up Mr McKinley together, succeeded in landing another bunch of commissions, in addition to those they had previously secured.

The British Ambassador called on Secretary Hay this week in order to find out whether this government had any suggestions to make, previous to its taking the road for six weeks, about renewing negotiations for a treaty dealing with the Isthmian Canal question. Mr. Hay had no suggestion to make, because he has not been able to get sufficient Senatorial support to justify his trying to negotiate another treaty.

The administration decided to stand by U. S Minister Loomis, whose actions and non action in the asphalt scandal in Venezuela has been so harshly criticized, both in the U. S. and in that country, to the extent of officially announcing that he was not recalled and that after a visit to Europe, for his health, he will return to Venezuela, if he wishes to do so. This was after Mr. Loomis, who arrived in Washington this week, had a talk with Secretary Hay. It would be easy to get big odds that Mr. Loomis will not "wish to" return to Venezuela.

When it comes to working out a problem so that the public is bamboozled and no patronage lost, the average republican politician can easily beat the world. An example has just been made public. It is officially announced that Mr. McKinley and Secretary Root have decided that the number of enlisted men in the regular army shall be limited to 76,000, unless there is a fresh outbreak in the Philippines. That was to bamboozle the public, and will make small difference for a long time as the slowness in recruiting made it certain that it would take many months to enlist all the men authorized by the new army law. Accompanying the announcement was the statement that all the officers provided for by law would be appointed. That was to save the patronage over which there has been so much scrambling. If there are more officers than there is work for there are always nice little details, in Washington and elsewhere, to which those with full enough can be assigned, the principle duties of which are social.

Tragedy of Yet Wing

By Julia Truitt Bishop.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

IT WAS a gray day, with rain about to fall. Miss Harvey fluttered in at the door of the Chinese Mission, clad in gray and pink, and with a bewitching childishness in her eyes, which she hoped might not lead to the undoing of Fung Yet Wing, who was waiting for her at his own especial deal table. Yet Wing had a smile of his own, and greeted her with it. What Yet Wing's smile meant Miss Harvey did not know, for she had been teaching him only two years; and to learn anything about the pupils of the Chinese Mission one must take time.

Yet Wing's books were in a neat little pile before him; his white cuffs were linked with gold buttons, his immaculate collar was brought together with a satin tie, which was adorned with the pretty wishbone pin she had given him for a Christmas present. Miss Harvey always looked him over complacently, until she came to the braid of long black hair which was coiled in a neat little coil at the top of his head, with a shaved area all around it. Miss Harvey always felt that her hold on Yet Wing lacked something of completeness while that coil of hair topped him off so conspicuously.

"Oh, you are always early, Yet Wing!" she cried, looking at him just a little. These Chinese were so peculiar, and she was in a flutter when she thought of the danger. It would never do to encourage anything like that—but now, were they to be blamed so dreadfully, if once in awhile—they—well, if they really learned to love some pretty girl who chanced to be their teacher? Neither was the girl to blame for being pretty.

Not that Miss Harvey would have this happen to her—oh, not for a thousand worlds. She would die of mortification, she said to herself as she puffed out the pink silk vest a little more and glanced at Yet Wing.

"Yeh—me come ea'l-ly," he said with the same smile. "Me lakkee lea'n."

In another minute Yet Wing was laboriously getting through the Bible lesson for the day, each word going off with a sharp explosion, not unlike a train of fireworks:

"An'—Jesiss—entled — an'—pass'—flou'—Jelicho.

"An'—bee-hol'—dewass—a — man—name'—Zacchou-us — whiss — wass—de chief—amoung—de — pullicanss—an'—he—wass—lich."

The fireworks exploded all along, down to the end of the lesson.

"Now do you know what that means?" asked Miss Harvey.

"No—me not unnestan' Engliss," said Yet Wing with calm readiness.

Miss Harvey did not understand what it meant, either, so she put her head to one side and cried archly:

"Oh, Yet Wing, what shall I do with you if you don't try to understand? Well, here is your reader—come now, read this."

Yet Wing bent his celestial countenance over the book and set another train of explosions going:

"Once—dewass — a — man—who—had—a—"

"Now spell that next word," commanded Miss Harvey, in the cooing, kindergarten voice she had found so effective with him.

"P-l-e-t-t-y," spelled the pupil. "Plitty."

"And do you know what that means?" chirped the teacher.

"Yeh—like you," said Yet Wing, his smile widening into a grin.

"Like me! The idea!" cried Miss Harvey. It had come at last—just as she feared. This was the Chinese method of informing a girl that she was beloved. She had unwittingly ruined Yet Wing's peace of mind. How anxious she had been to avoid this, all the Sundays she had come here against her brother's wishes, to sit beside the little deal table and teach Yet Wing to read Bible lessons he did not understand.

But while Yet Wing's poor little foolish dream was destined to be crushed, why should she wound him unnecessarily? Why should she not be as kind to him as she could be under the circumstances?

She looked at him gently, yet with melancholy. Perhaps she would ask him next Sunday for her sake to cut off that braid of hair. It would make her glad, and yet sorrowful, too, to know that he would do it without a moment's hesitation. There was something so pathetic about this hopeless love—a Chinaman—for a lady of her station—and she must be so careful not to encourage him. Her brother would be so angry—and he had such a high temper, and was so disgustingly brutal when he began to talk about—about the things she did. But she would always say that it was not her fault, and it was not Yet Wing's. It was simply one of those things that could not be helped.

"It lainin'," said Yet Wing, whose oriental eyes were turned toward the window.

"It rains every Sunday," said Miss Harvey, gently. "I shall have to wait until my maid brings my umbrella and cloak."

"What he' name?" asked Yet Wing, with the guileless directness of his race. She smiled sadly. He was interested in everything that pertained to her.

"Her name is Annie," said Miss Harvey, softly. "Here is the hymn, now, Yet Wing—'At The Cross.' Now sing your best—for my sake."

In response to which timid plea Yet Wing was presently throwing great unction into:

"Ala-a-at an' did, my tlavilled,
An' did my slovel die?
Would he lelote lat sacled head
Fo' sluch a wollas I?
Atte closs, atte closs, wha'ee fluss saw lelite—"

Yet Wing frowned mightily while he sang, for this English was truly a devilish language, and was not to be sung without great enlargement of the mouth.

It was all gone through with, even to the jerky concert of "Ou' Fader—who aht—in—heben—" and Miss Harvey and her maid were hurrying homeward through the rain. Miss Harvey justly felt that she must confide in some one or die.

"It has come about just as I feared, Annie," she said, tragically. "My pupil has—has lost his mind, I suppose—and is half crazy about—about Me! Did you ever hear of anything so absolutely preposterous? Think of it! A—a Chinese laundryman! Wouldn't my brother be furious?"

"Well, faith, an' it 'ud be a great savin' of laundry bills," said Annie, who was from up Belfast way, and could see a bright side to everything.

Miss Harvey's just indignation kept her scornfully silent until they had reached home and gone into the side door. While Annie shook out the wet umbrella and stood it in the rack, Miss Harvey glanced out of the window and suddenly screamed and sat down, clasping her hands.

"Look, Annie!" she cried; "look out of the window! Can that be—is that—Yet Wing?"

"It looks like the bilious heathen," said Annie, indignantly, after a hasty inspection of the figure that stood pensively under an awning on the opposite side of the street. "A pretty subject he is, to stand himself up in front of people's houses! Shall I go out an' shoo 'im away, Miss?"

"Oh, that would be too cruel!" moaned Miss Harvey, walking up and down and wringing her hands desperately. "Oh, what shall I do? Was there ever anything so unfortunate? He may begin to follow me about town—and perhaps sing under the windows—he has a very good voice—but think how it would look. Oh, how unfortunate I am, to have—perhaps if I had worn plainer clothes to the Mission—but now the harm is done, and I will never forgive myself, never!"

"Well," suggested Annie, with an eye at the crack of the curtain, "your brother'll be home pretty soon, an' it's my belief that he'll throw the brassy heathen over the courthouse. An' anyway, the neighbors are raisin' the windows, now."

Miss Harvey screamed.

"Oh, Annie," she cried, "go and call him over and tell him that he must not stand there, looking at the house that way. Tell him that it troubles me—Me—and then I know he'll go."

Annie's trim figure disappeared; and Yet Wing's teacher heard a sound of voices, which presently grew louder. She listened. Annie was saying with spirit:

"You just wait till I get Mike Finney a-holt o' you, you slantin'-eyed—"

And at this point Annie came back, her face crimson.

"Them that wants the Chinaman can have him," she cried, indignantly. "He's settin' there on the steps like he meant to wait for the crack o' doom, an' if your brother comes he'll think doom's cracked."

This horrible possibility decided Miss Harvey. She puffed out the pink vest, dabbed both eyes with a little lace handkerchief, and went droopingly to the door. Yet Wing still sat enthroned on the steps, placidly looking at the rain.

"Yet Wing," she murmured, weakly. Yet Wing arose and smiled.

"Sle comee back?" was his enigmatic question.

"Yet Wing, you must go away," whispered Miss Harvey. "You must not come to my house any more. I am very sorry for you—I hope we will be friends—I shall still teach you. Yet Wing—"

"You go alay!" retorted Yet Wing, whom the gods had made mad. "Me come mally pletty gu'l—An-nee—she tleach me. Me no likee you fo' tleachee—you too old. Me lait fo' Annee."

When Miss Harvey went back into the house where Annie was holding the fort behind the sofa armed with a broom, she walked very straight and her look was severe.

"Has he gone?" questioned Annie, tremblingly.

"He has gone," replied Miss Harvey, drily. "Annie, you need never come to the Mission after me again—never again. I find that you have a most unfortunate influence over those men. That poor, ignorant Yet Wing—there is no telling what harm has been done to him. He seems quite demented. Tell my brother he needn't wait dinner for me—I have a headache."

And Miss Harvey went to her own room, and locked the door, and sat down in the corner furthest from the mirror.

Wounded Vanity.

A woman cries ten times out of wounded vanity where she cries once out of really wounded feelings. And each one of the ten times does her good. Let your wounded vanity smart all that it will, for vanity is a kind of "proud flesh" of the human soul that has to be treated with sharp caustic every little while to keep it from becoming an excrescence that will disfigure the whole character.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Feminine Sincerity.

Ted—He stutters so badly it took him over half an hour to propose to her.

Ned—What did she say to him?

Ted—Oh, this is so sudden.—Judge.

It is said that for the first time in many years the postal system of the United States is now making money, and if the receipts continue at the present rate there will be a balance of at least $2,000,000 to the credit side at the end of the fiscal year

The "drink statistician" shows that if the booze was evenly distributed every man, woman and child in the United States would have had 18 1-5 gallons of poison inside his skin in 12 months. We know personally several "steadies" who appeared to have this amount inside all at once.

Let us be glad that we live in a free country. The English courts have unseated a conservative member of parliament for publishing false statements about his opponent. We might be able to get along without the bill of rights or any of our constitutional guarantees, but the right to lie about the other fellow in a political campaign is sacred.

The proposition to provide for a floating exposition to go from port to port in countries in which we desire to sell our goods is attracting much attention because it appears to be a practical method of exhibiting our wares. The people of other countries cannot come to our expositions in any considerable numbers, but we can send a fleet laden with our products to points where many thousands can see them.

Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur, of Calvary Baptist church in New York city, preached a sermon in which he took the society people to task for their gambling. He said: "When a lady will use the attractions of her home to induce young men to gamble therein and thus rob them of their money, she is meaner than is the proprietor of a professional gambling hell." No one will accuse Dr. MacArthur of not being plain.

Statistics collected by the American Grocer show that the American people spend 4½ cents per capita per day for alcoholic drinks, coffee, tea and cocoa Out of $1,228,674,925 expended for beverages, 84 per cent. was spent for alcoholic beverages, of which 50 per cent. is for beer, 30 per cent. for whisky and four per cent. for wines. More gallons of coffee are consumed than of any other beverage—1,257,985,296 to 1,221,500,160 of beer.

Postal authorities in Washington are worrying over the case of a man who advertises to cure deafness without fail for a certain sum. To those who send the required amount the advertiser sends 2,000 pills, with directions to take not more than one a day, guaranteeing a cure when all the pills have been used. As the truth or otherwise of this claim cannot be determined for about 5½ years, the authorities do not know what course to take.

One-sixth of the entire area of Colorado is excluded from the application of the homestead law. Colorado is recognized by many as one of the most desirable states in which to locate, but investigation shows that government land in a part of the state can be taken up only through the desert land act, as mineral, or under the timber and stone act. In any event, the settler is obliged to pay $1.25 an acre. Under the regular homestead entry, he gets a government warrant free after residence for a number of years.

The United States is now patronizing the banana plantations of the West Indies and of Central America to the amount of about $8,000,000 a year. This is the exporting, not the retail value. The island of Jamaica alone is sending to this country over 4,000,000 bunches a year, which means $1,500,000 to the producers and shippers of the colony. The contributions of the tens of millions of bunches which this country consumes annually come from Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico, Jamaica and San Domingo.

Kansas witnesses in liquor cases have a habit of pretending not to know what they bought at the joint. At Burlington the other day a witness swore that he had purchased a number of "long necks," and that was all the prosecuting attorney could get out of him. Judge Madden sent the witness to jail for contempt. In half a day the man pleaded for his release. Going back to the courtroom, he explained that a "long neck" was a "high ball." That was sufficient. The witness was excused and the jointkeeper convicted.

TO RULE CHINA.

Empress Dowager Appoints Board of National Administration to Conduct Its Affairs.

Washington, April 27.—The following cablegram has been received at the state department from Mr. Squier, the United States charge at Peking, dated Friday:

"The empress dowager has appointed a board of national administration to relieve her of her public functions. They embrace three members of the cabinet now with the empress at Sian-fu, and Prince Ching, Viceroy Li and Prince Kung who are now in Peking."

This news is regarded as of importance, indicating, as it does, the relinquishment by the empress dowager of the arbitrary powers she heretofore has exercised. It also is apparent that she has placed herself in a position to avoid direct responsibility to the foreigners, for whatever may happen in the future the board will have to bear the brunt of any complaint. It is felt that the appointment of this board will make it much easier for the foreign ministers to transact business with the Chinese government.

The three members of the cabinet now at Sian-Fu include the notorious Jung-Lu, who was one of the most active in the outbreak against the foreigners last summer. One of the other members of this council is 70 years old and said to be greatly debilitated. The third member has been at least lukewarm toward foreign interests. The choice of these three is looked upon as likely to complicate the good which Li Hung Chang and the others may accomplish.

New York, April 27.—The Christian Herald has received a cablegram from Li Hung Chang, dated Peking, April 25, saying: "Very serious famine spreads over the whole province of Shan Si. Over 11,000,000 population are affected. Urgent relief is necessary. Conditions warrant immediate appeal." The Christian Herald has announced its purpose of raising a fund to relieve the sufferers in the famine-stricken district.

Berlin, April 29.—The German war office has received the following advices from Count von Waldersee:

"Peking, April 29.—Three engagements occurred April 23 and a fourth April 24 at the great wall, between four columns under Gen. Kettler and the Chinese troops under Gen. Liu. The Chinese were everywhere defeated, and after a stubborn resistance were forced back over the wall, being pursued as far as Ku-Kuan. Our casualties were four officers wounded and three men killed and 32 wounded. The French troops were not engaged."

Berlin, April 30.—The latest China specials to arrive here show that the German troops behaved with the greatest gallantry during the engagements with the forces under Gen. Liu, storming the stronghold of the enemy even after darkness, and in spite of the huge rocks rolled down upon them. The Chinese artillery, although firing splendid guns, made in 1898 at the arsenal in Han-Yang, aimed badly. The Germans demolished the fortifications near the gates of the Great Wall. They suffered intensely from the heat. The French received instructions from Paris while marching towards the province of Shan-Si, but they held Ku-Kwan, which they have since left, destroying the field telegraph and thus cutting off German communication.

FAVOR A CHANGE.

Presbyterians Vote for Revision of Their Confession of Faith.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 27.—The vote of the presbyteries of the United States has been taken on the question of revising the creed, and a majority favors revision. Friday a committee appointed by the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, after a lengthy session in this city, agreed upon two important features of the plan for revision, which will be presented to the general assembly. These features, it is declared, are the most urgently demanded by the presbyteries, and they are as follows:

"1. A new statement of doctrine to be issued as a supplement to the Confession of Faith.

"2. A revision of the confession itself, either by the addition of a declaratory paragraph or a change in the text."

The committee recommends an amendment of the chapter relating to the doctrine of foreordination and predestination, and suggests that the general assembly which meets in Philadelphia on May 16, appoint a special committee to prepare the amendment. This doctrine is embraced in chapter 3 of the creed.

CONGER RETURNS.

Minister to China Reaches San Francisco—He Praises Action of Missionaries.

San Francisco, April 26.—United States Minister Conger arrived here Thursday afternoon from China on the steamer Nippon Maru.

The minister, in an interview, defended the missionaries from the charges of looting. He also said the stories of brutality on the part of the soldiers of the powers were greatly exaggerated. There had been individual cases of excesses, but they were to be expected in times of war, he explained. The returned minister also expressed the opinion that China was able to pay an indemnity of $300,000,000, though it would have to practice economy.

Dr. Ament, the missionary who achieved considerable notoriety on account of the charges of looting, and who was sharply criticised by Mark Twain, also was a passenger on the Nippon Maru.

Will Be Extended.

Washington, April 30.—It is said at the war department that the amnesty granted by Gen. MacArthur in a proclamation issued to the Filipinos which expired last autumn and was extended by the Philippine commission to May 1 will be extended again by the Taft commission to about July 1, when it is expected that the civil government in the Philippines will be instituted.

Forest Fires in Michigan.

Houghton, Mich., April 29.—Forest fires are raging at a number of upper peninsula points and unless there is a drenching rain soon great damage will be done and many hamlets and villages endangered. The whole north country is very dry, less than a quarter of an inch of rain having fallen during the month.

SPRING CATARRH MAKES PEOPLE WEAK AND NERVOUS.

MISS ANNA BRYAN, OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Miss Anna Bryan, a favorite cousin of William Jennings Bryan, is well known socially in Washington, D. C., where she has a host of friends. Miss Bryan recently studied music at Fairmount Seminary, of Washington, D. C. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

1459 Florida Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"At the solicitation of a friend I began some weeks ago to take your Peruna and I now feel like a new person. I take pleasure in recommending it to all who want a good tonic and a permanent cure for catarrh."—Anna Bryan.

MRS. BERTHA KOCKLER, 177 Guinett street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna and Manalin have done me very great service, and I recommend them with pleasure to all who suffer with nervous catarrh of the stomach as I did. Should such a disease ever attack me again I shall immediately take Peruna. I now feel very well and have a good appetite all the time. I have gained in weight. I recommended Peruna to an acquaintance of ours and he is making remarkable progress. I looked so badly for a time before I began your medicine, that now when I meet some of my friends they say: 'I was very much worried about you, but now you are looking so well.' I shall always keep Peruna and Manalin in the house as family medicines."—Mrs. Bertha Kockler.

Thousands of Fair Women Are Never Without Pe-ru-na The National Catarrh Remedy.

Miss Marie Coats, President of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, writes the following concerning Peruna:

Appleton, Wis.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—

"I find Peruna an excellent spring and summer medicine and am glad to call the attention of my friends to it. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week. I have now used it for three seasons and find it very reliable and efficacious."—Marie Coats.

Miss Marie Coats.

Mrs. Al. Wetzel, 21 South 17th street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes:

"Peruna is the greatest medicine on earth. I feel well and that tired feeling is all gone. When I began to take your medicine I could not smell nor hear a church bell ring. Now I can smell and hear. When I began your treatment my head was terrible, all sorts of buzzing, chirping and loud noises. Three months ago I dragged around like a snail; now I can walk as briskly as ever. I am going to go and see the doctor that said I was not long for this world, and tell him that Peruna cured me."—Mrs. Al. Wetzel.

If all the tired women and all the nervous women, and all the women that needed a tonic would read and heed the words of these three fair ladies who have spoken right to the point, how many invalids would be prevented and how many wretched lives be made happy.

Peruna restores health in a normal way.

Peruna puts right all the mucous membranes of the body, and in this way restores the functions of every organ.

If it is the stomach that is out of order, and the digestion impaired, Peruna quickly makes things right by restoring the mucous membrane of the stomach.

If the nerves tingle, if the brain is tired, if the strength is flagging and the circulation of blood weakened by flabby mucous membranes of the digestive organs, Peruna reaches the spot at once by giving to these membranes the vitality and activity which belongs to them.

The pelvic organs are also lined with mucous membrane which in the female sex is especially liable to derangements. Peruna is an absolute specific in these cases. The women everywhere are praising it. No other remedy has ever received such unqualified praise from such a multitude of women.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

MAM-M-MA!!
DON'T YOU HEAR BABY CRY?

Do you forget that summer's coming with all its dangers to the little ones—all troubles bred in the bowels.

The summer's heat kills babies and little children because their little insides are not in good, clean, strong condition.

Winter has filled the system with bile. Belching, vomiting up of sour food, rash, flushed skin, colic, restlessness, diarrhoea or constipation, all testify that the bowels are out of order.

If you want the little ones to face the coming dangers without anxious fear for their lives, see that the baby's bowels are gently, soothingly, but positively cleaned out in the spring time, and made strong and healthy before hot weather sets in.

The only safe laxative for children, pleasant to take (they ask for more) is CASCARETS. Nursing mothers make their milk mildly purgative for the baby by eating a CASCARET now and then. Mama eats a CASCARET, baby gets the benefit. Try it! Send for a 10c box of CASCARETS to-day and you will find that, as we guarantee, all irregularities of the little and big childrens insides are

CURED BY

CURE all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, bloated bowels, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow complexion and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are getting sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. It is a starter for the chronic ailments and long years of suffering that come afterwards. No matter what ails you, start taking CASCARETS to-day, for you will never get well and be well all the time until you put your bowels right. Take our advice; start with CASCARETS to-day, under an absolute guarantee to cure or money refunded. 454

GUARANTEED TO CURE: Five years ago the first box of CASCARETS was sold. Now it is over six million boxes a year, greater than any similar medicine in the world. This is absolute proof of great merit, and our best testimonial. We have faith and will sell CASCARETS absolutely guaranteed to cure or money refunded. Go buy to-day, two 50c boxes, give them a fair, honest trial, as per simple directions, and if you are not satisfied, after using one 50c box, return the unused 50c box and the empty box to us by mail, or the druggist from whom you purchased it, and get your money back for both boxes. Take our advice—no matter what ails you—start to-day. Health will quickly follow and you will bless the day you first started the use of CASCARETS. Book free by mail. MINNESOTA NEWS.

Board Will Control.

The defect in the title of the bill creating the state board of control technically places the state normal board beyond its supervision, but the members of the latter decided to ignore the mistake. The conferenee resulted in the adoption of a resolution agreeing to cooperate with the new board, and naming a committee to take such steps as may be necessary to perfect a thorough understanding in all matters pertaining to the financial affairs of the state normal schools. The committee consists of A. T. Ankeny, W. B. Mitchell and J. W. Olson. They will visit the several schools in the state and ascertain their financial needs.

Committees were named for the five state schools, they being authorized to prepare plans and specifications and receive bids for any repairs or improvements required.

The summer schools this year will in all probability be held only at Mankato and St. Cloud. Directors Mitchell, Clark and Nye were selected as a committee to confer with Superintendent Olson regarding them and arrange for their reception.

Debating Leage.

A State High School Debating League is to be organized under the auspices of the University Debating Board, for the purpose of improving rhetorical work in the high schools. The state is to be divided into nine districts, which will correspond with the congressional districts, and the various high schools in each of the districts will debate among themselves until one is finally chosen as the leader. This high school will enter in the general contests, by means of which the contest will be simmered down until but two schools are left in the competition for the championship honors. This final debate will be held at the state university and the winning school will receive a silver cup, of which it will become the permanent possessor on winning it three successive years. The members of the winning team will each receive a handsome gold badge.

Gypsies.

Ten thousand gypsies are coming to the Twin Cities this summer. In the Midway district they will hold a midsummer matrimonial convention. Hundreds of bands of these nomadic people are expected, and the king of the gypsies, Isaac R. Wells, who is now in Iowa, says there will be the largest gathering of the people of that strange race that has ever taken place in the United States. The principal reason for the gathering, King Isaac says, is that the young people may get acquainted with others belonging to the race, so that the young women and young men may marry without going outside the clans.

Flour is Too Good.

Through the efforts of competing millers, and because they are making too good flour, the Minneapolis flour milling companies will hereafter be deprived of the privilege of warehousing flour at Bugalo, N. Y.

The local milling companies have been informed that these privileges have been withdrawn on the ground that unfair advantage has been taken by them in using that point as a favorable market. When the new ruling goes into effect all flour shipped from Minnepolis will be transferred directly from the boats at the Buffalo docks to rail, thence to Atlantic coast points.

Lost.

Seven year old Anton Asp, after his first day at school in Carman, which is a suburb of Crookston, got lost and started along the wrong railroad track for home. He turned up at Eldred, eight miles down the Halstad line, and a kindly blacksmith carried him most of the way home on a bike. Meantime the entire population of Carman had been hunting for him.

Work is Stopped.

The effect of the consolidation of the Duluth, Messabe & Northern railroad and the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, and their passage into one ownership, that of the United States Steel company, is being made manifest already in striking form.

The Duluth, Messaba & Northern railroad has suddenly stopped all work on the extension to its Stevens mine, the contractors relinquished their contracts for satisfactory considerations, and the extension is not to be completed, in spite of the fact that $150,000 has already been spent upon it.

Burned to Death.

Mabel Christensen, 2 years old, while playing near a bondfire had her clothing caught catch on fire and was burned to death. Her father, Christ Christensen, trying to save the live of the child had both hands badly burned. The unfortunate affair occurred in Burnside, three miles from Red Wing.

News in Brief.

State Superintendent Olson has decided that the summer school for teachers at the university will last six weeks this year instead of four, as formerly. The term will begin June 24, so as to end before the state examinations begin the first Monday in August.

While attempting to extinguish a fire in her room in the Richmond hotel, Minneapolis, Miss Maggie Desmond, a professional nurse, was slightly burned.

The Le Sueur hotel, one of the oldest hostelries in Faribault, had a narrow escape from destruction by fire. The fire started in the attic and burned throngh the roof before it was brought under control.

St. Paul will spend more than $200,000 this year in new pavement and sewers Of this amount $122,000 of street improvement has already been ordered and the contracts let.

The business men of Kenyon have started a movement to try to get the state training school for girls.

All the gambling rooms in Minneapolis have been closed by the orders of the mayor.

The success of the state fair this year is assured beyond possibility of a doubt, for Vice President Roosevelt has promised to attend, and if the plans of the board of managers are carried out the fair will be opened by the vice president on Sept. 2.

Rural free delivery will be established at Mountain Lake, Cottonwood county.

Beauchamp, who shot his wife in Crookston, maintains that the shooting was accidental.

John Strom, superintendent of the Minneapolis quarantine hospital, died from injuries received in a runaway.

Gov. Van Sant has conferred a high honor upon Dr. Charles M. Jordan, superintendent of the public schools of Minneapolis, by naming him as the third member of the state high school board.

The state board of pardons held a special meeting and commuted the sentence of Anthony Wasiliewshi to three months in the penitentiary.

A stranger, supposed to be John Hemphill, of Gainesville, Texas, was killed by an interurban car near Stillwater.

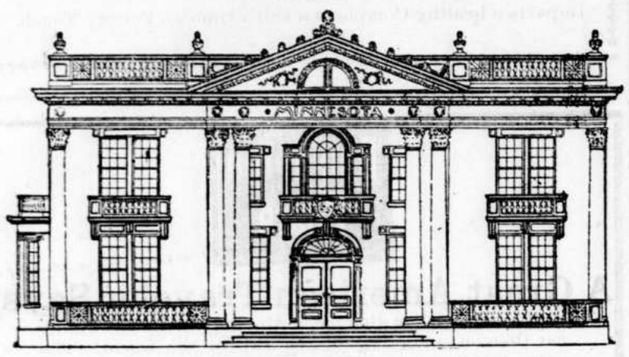
The St. Paul Union Depot company has decided to increase its capital stock from $350,000 to $750,000. The additional sum is for the purpose of making improvements in connection with the union depot.

The steam laundry of Brancht Bros., at Brainerd, was damaged by fire.

L. B. Laffner was arrested at Minnesota City, charged with the theft of a horse belonging to H. S. Bolcom, of Winona. It is said he had sold the horse to George Hahn for $20, and had spent all of the money but $2 when arrested.

E. H. Farr, of Sioux Clty, Iowa, is to start a large stock farm in the eastern part of Morrison county. He owns 2,000 acres in Bell Prairie township. The land is well adapted is stock raising.

MINNESOTA BUILDING AT BUFFALO EXPOSITION.



The Minnesota building at the Buffalo exposition will be rather an attractive affair, considering the limited time for its erection, and the small appropriation at hand. It will be located in the southeastern portion of the exposition reservation, facing the south. The building will be rectangular in shape. The framework will be of wood, and the exterior and interior will be covered with staff, with proper ornaments and embelishments. The entire south front will be occupied by a wide veranda, upon which visitors may sit. Opening into the intorior will be a short hall, and from that one steps into the large reception hall, or visiting room. There will be rooms opening off on either side. These rooms will be occupied as ladies' parlors, gentlemen's smoking rooms, Writing rooms, toilet rooms, etc. The offices of the commissioners will be upon the same floor. Directly opposite the main entrance, and in the rear of the reception hall, there will be a large, old-fashioned fireplace. The main stairway to the second will be upon the left. The center of the reception hall will be open, as a light-well to the second floor. On this floor will be accommodated the various exhibits, and the sleeping rooms of the attendants. The attic will be roughly finished for the accommodation of employes.

Just to Remind Her.

It was not one of those lovers' quarrels which are got for the sake of enjoying the sweets of "making it up again," but a real, genuine affair in which both parties felt thoroughly aggrieved. They parted in anger, and next day the lady wrote him the following note: "Herewith I return all your presents, with the exception of the diamond ring, which I shall keep to remind me of your meanness and horrid conduct altogether!"—Tit-Bits.

PURSUE GEN. CAILLES.

American Troops Engaged in Chasing the Insurgent General —His Camp Surprised.

Manila, April 29.—Capt. Wilson Chase, with a detachment of the Twenty-first infantry, on April 26, surprised the camp of the insurgent Gen. Cailles at Dugot-Dugot, situated nine miles northeast of Cavinti, in the province of Laguna. Cailles was at his camp at the time of the American attack, but managed to escape. Capt. Chase's force captured his adjutant general, five other of his staff officers, 14 men, 20 rifles, a large amount of ammunition and stores and all the papers and personal effects of the Filipino general. The insurgent major Velo was killed during the engagement, as were Corp. McGill and Private Tipps, both belonging to company A. of the Twenty-first. Several columns of the American troops continue vigorously to pursue Gen. Cailles. Gen. Cailles recently offered a reward of $10,000 for the head of Capt. Edward N. Jones, Jr., of the Eighth infantry.

[For more than a year past Cailles has commanded the insurgent forces operating to the east of Bay lake, not far from Manila. He is said to be a French half caste. He has a reputation for vindictiveness and cruelty, and is one of the two or three Filipinos who have clearly ignored the observances of honorable warfare. The Society of Mando-Ducats, whose practice it was to assassinate and bury alive those of their countrymen who accepted American sovereignty whenever the latter fell into their hands, operated with the cognizance, if not the support of Gen. Cailles. If Cailles were captured it is doubtful if he could claim immunity for past actions under the terms of the amnesty. In January of this year Cailles offered a reward of ten dollars apiece for the heads of all Americans brought to him.]

CUBANS BID FAREWELL.

Commissioners Say Good-By to President—Are Favorably Impressed with Their Visit.

Washington, April 29.—The Cuban commissioners made their farewell call upon the President Saturday, and expressed the hope that there should be reciprocal trade relations established between Cuba and the United States. President McKinley told the Cubans that the formation of a government and the provision for political relation with the United States was the first question to be settled. After that is done and Cuba has a government capable of making treaties he will appoint commissioners to meet representatives of the Cuban government to negotiate a commercial treaty.

This was not entirely satisfactory to the Cubans, because it does not enable them to carry back a promise that Cuba shall have in the future either free trade or special benefits under our tariff laws. The Cubans, however, have been favorably impressed with their visit to Washington, and they express their highest appreciation of the courtesies and consideration shown them by the president, Secretary Root and the members of congress they have met.

The delegates started for New York Saturday night, homeward bound. They sailed for Havana Wednesday. Gen. Wood also left Saturday night for Florida, whence he will sail on a government vessel for Cuba.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

Bursting of Boilers in Powder Factory in Germany Kills and Injures Scores.

Frankfort, Germany, April 26.—One of the most disastrous explosions on record occurred Thursday afternoon at the electro-chemical works near Griesheim, where smokeless powder is manufactured. Most of the boilers exploded. Between 20 and 80 persons are reported killed and 150 injured many of whom will die. The noise was so tremendous that it was heard at great distances, including Frankfort and Mayence. The factory immediately became a mass of flames and a northeast wind immediately carried the sparks to neighboring villages, where several houses were set on fire. Eighteen cylinders, each containing about one hundredweight of smokeless powder, were in the room where the explosion occurred. Troops were immediately ordered to Griesheim to prevent the fire spreading to the large benzine reservoirs near by. Fire brigades from every place in the neighborhood hurried to the scene, but owing to the dangerous nature of the disaster and the fear of a renewal of the explosions, the greatest difficulty was experienced in stopping the progress of the flames. Only after five hours of strenuous effort was the conflagration to some extent controlled and the danger passed, so as to make it possible to begin the work of extricating the bodies.

To Protect the Palisades.

New York, April 26.—To-day the sum of $132,500 will be paid for a stone quarry at the foot of the Palisades, a short distance north of Fort Lee, on the New Jersey side of the Hudson river, this purchase being one of the steps agreed upon in order to save the Palisades. One hundred and twenty-two thousand five hundred dollars for this purpose has been subscribed by a number of public-spirited men in this city, and the remaining $10,000 will be paid out of New York state's Palisades appropriation of 1900.

President Begins Journey.

Washington, April 30.—The train which is to carry President and Mrs. McKinley and their party on their long excursion across the continent and back made its start Monday precisely on schedule time, at 10:30, over the Southern road. Before ten o'clock many people had congregated about the station, and when the president and Mrs. McKinley arrived, as they did about 10:20, the building was thronged and many persons were congregated on the outside.

Decapitated Instead of Hanged.

Clayton, N. Mex., April 27.—Thomas E. Ketchum, alias "Black Jack," the notorious outlaw who had terrorized the people of the southwest for the past 15 years, was hanged here Friday afternoon for train robbery, and his head was severed from the body by the rope as if by a guillotine. The headless trunk pitched forward toward the spectators, and blood spattered upon those nearest the scaffold. The execution took place inside a stockade built for the occasion.

CALLAHAN ACQUITTED.

Jury in Cudahy Kidnaping Case Returns Verdict of Not Guilty—Judge Expresses Displeasure.

Omaha, Neb., April 29.—James Callahan was declared not guilty Sunday of any complicity in the kidnaping of Edward Cudahy, Jr., shortly after nine o'clock Sunday morning. The jury signified to Judge Baker through a bailiff that it was ready to report, having been out since 8:30 o'clock Saturday night. A small audience of 50 attorneys and interested parties had heard the news and were waiting when the 12 men filed in. The foreman announced that the verdict was "not guilty."

The judge had evidently expected a different verdict, and was openly disappointed. He wheeled in his chair and, addressing the jury, rebuked them in the most vigorous terms:

"If Callahan had made his own choice of a jury he could not have selected 12 men who would have served him more faithfully. If the state for its part had made the selection, I know of no men it could have named who could have been less careful of its interests. The jury is discharged without the compliments of the court, and the prisoner is likewise turned loose as to this trial, I presume to continue the criminal practices in which you have failed to check him. I do not know what motive actuated you in reaching this decision, but I hope none of you will ever appear again in this jurybox."

Two other counts still exist against Callahan and he was at once rearrested under these. There is doubt, however, whether the state will bring the cases to trial. Chief of Police Donohue announces that the $5,000 offered for the apprehension of Patrick Crowe will be withdrawn. He says it is one thing to arrest the culprit and another to convict him. The reward of $50,000 offered jointly by the city and Edward Cudahy, however, will still remain in force.

BUYS BIG SHIP LINE.

J. Pierpont Morgan Gets Control of the Leyland System—Millions of Dollars Involved.

London, April 30.—It has been reported that the Leyland line of 65 steamers, engaged in the Atlantic, Mediterranean and West Indian trade, has been purchased by J. Pierpont Morgan and that a deposit of $1,250,000 of the purchase money has been paid.

The Leyland line of steamers is one of the greatest in the world. It is said that its purchase by Mr. Morgan is tantamount to a consolidation with the Atlantic Transport company, which owns a fleet worth $20,000,000. If this consolidation becomes an actual fact it will mean the greatest transportation service in the world.

The Leyland line is one of the largest in number of ships in the world, about 65 vessels being in its fleet. Most of them are in use on the north Atlantic. There is also a line to Mediterranean ports and one to Lisbon. Recently the company acquired by purchase the 20 ships of the West Indian & Pacific Steamship company.

The Leyland property was recently appraised at £15,000,000.

It is stated in some quarters that the Atlantic transport line will be consolidated with the Leyland line.

The Daily Express asserts that the financiers for whom J. Pierpont Morgan is acting are ordering ten big liners, and that the Americans will spend £10,000,000 upon new vessels during the coming five years.

FARMERS SUFFER.

High Water Causes Great Ruin in Southern Indiana and Kentucky.

Evansville, Ind., April 29.—The river registers 42.4 feet. The greatest damage in this region is to farmers. It is estimated that 400,000 acres of wheat between this city and Paducah, Ky., are destroyed. The losses to houses is $100,000. Over half a million bushels of corn are destroyed in the crib. The lumbermen along Green river estimate their loss at $100,000. Merchants in this city lose considerably by the water creeping through cellars. The loss to farmers along the Wabash river is heavy, 200,000 bushels of corn being swept away. Three farmhouses were destroyed.

A SCORE KILLED.

Big Snowslide in Alaska Said to Have Cost Lives of Twenty Persons.

Port Townsend, Wash., April 29.—Jacob Rush, who returned from Valdez, Alaska, on the steamship Senator, brings news of a disaster costing many lives. Just before sailing from Valdez for Juneau, Mr. Rush says, a courier arrived at Valdez from Sunrise City stating that a snowslide had occurred at that place on April 12 and 20 or more lives were lost and a number of houses were buried beneath snow and ice. The courier left Sunrise shortly after the slide occurred and could not give full particulars.

Damage by Dust Storms.

St. Paul, Minn., April 27.—Specials from points in South Dakota report violent dust storms as having raged throughout the day. At Aberdeen the temperature was 90 degrees, and the high wind blew the dust in blinding clouds. The storm has raged for two days in Barnes county, and has leveled many farm buildings. Serious injury is reported in various sections to the crops, the seed grain being blown from the ground.

Robbers Wreck a Bank.

Detroit, Mich., April 27.—A special to the News from Brighton, Mich., says: The bank of G. J. Baetke & Co. was entered by thieves early Friday, who dynamited the safe and secured about $4,000. So much dynamite was used that the explosion demolished the interior of the bank. The loss to the bank is covered by insurance. Officers are searching the surrounding country for the thieves, but no clew has been discovered as yet.

Killed His Son-in-Law.

Lexington, Ky., April 30. — James Price, aged 65, an express wagon driver, shot and killed his son-in-law, Charles Downing, aged 28, who attacked him with a knife. Price refused to give Downing money to buy hay and the quarrel following caused the killing. Downing recently killed a negro in a saloon brawl.

England's Army and Navy.

It was recently stated that England's army and navy is inadequate to properly defend herself from a sudden onslaught. England is, in this instance, like the individual who allows disease to creep into his system through a stomach too weak to properly digest the food taken into it. To strengthen the stomach there is nothing better than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It cures dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, liver and kidney trouble, and as a tonic, is incomparable.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. WHAT CAUSES DANDRUFF.

Greatest European Authority on Skin Diseases, Says It's a Germ.

The old idea was that dandruff is scales of skin thrown off, through a feverish condition of the scalp. Prof. Unna, Hamburg, Germany, European authority on skin diseases, says dandruff is a germ disease. The germ burrows under the scalp, throwing up little scales of cuticle, and sapping the vitality of the hair at the root. The only hair preparation that kills dandruff germs is Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Not only cures dandruff, but stops falling hair and causes a luxuriant growth. Delightful hair dressing.

There Is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

FROM DEATH'S DOOR.

Hillsdale, Ill., April 29th.—Much interest has been aroused here over the case of William Marks, who has been in a dying condition for several months with an apparently incurable Kidney Disease.

The leading physicians of this place had pronounced his case a hopeless one, and others from Port Byron, Geneseo, and Davenport, Ia., had attended him, and in a consultation decided that he could not live.

In desperation, his nephew inquired of Mr. L. F. Giles, a local druggist, as to a last resort. Mr. Giles suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which had just been introduced here.

The results were marvelous. Mr. Marks immediately began to improve, and within a few weeks was able to be up and about, completely cured.

His cure is the talk of the neighhood, and is considered nothing short of a miracle.

There appears to be no doubt that this new remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills, will cure any case of Kidney Disease, for the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and Dropsy, yield readily to its remarkable influence. These forms of Chronic Kidney Disease have hitherto been considered incurable, and have baffled all medical skill, and yet, this new remedy has cured every single case in which it has been used, in this neighborhood. The doctors themselves are amazed at the wonderful work Dodd's Kidney Pills are accomplishing in Rock Island County.

"Now Dont Get the Blues."

When a cheerful, brave and light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the blues, it is a sad picture.

It is usually this way:

She has been feeling out of sorts for some time, experiencing severe headache and backache; sleeps very poorly and is exceedingly nervous.

Sometimes she is nearly overcome by faintness, dizziness, and palpitation of the heart; then that bearing-down feeling is dreadfully wearing.

Her husband says, "Now, don't get the blues! You will be all right after you have taken the doctor's medicine."

But she does not get all right. She grows worse day by day, until all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She loses faith; hope vanishes; then comes the morbid, melancholy, everlasting blues. She should have been told just what the trouble was, but probably she withheld some information from the doctor, who, therefore, is unable to accurately locate her particular illness.

Mrs. Pinkham has relieved thousands of women from just this kind of trouble, and now retains their grateful letters in her library as proof of the great assistance she has rendered them. This same assistance awaits every sick woman in the land.

Mrs. Winifred Allender's Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have received from your wonderful remedies. Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I was a misery to myself and every one around me. I suffered terrible pain in my back, head, and right side, was very nervous, would cry for hours. Menses would appear sometimes in two weeks, then again not for three or four months. I was so tired and weak, could not sleep nights, sharp pains would dart through my heart that would almost cause me to fall.

"My mother coaxed me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had no faith in it, but to please her I did so. The first bottle helped me so much that I continued its use. I am now well and weigh more than I ever did in my life."—MRS. WINIFRED ALLENDER, Farmington, Ill.

Things Delano Needs.

The Cargill Elevator moved from corner of Third Street crossing.

Good well water in the water system.

Back doors to the school house.
More play ground for children.
A gynasium.
A reading room.
A village park.

—The Otto residence on the West Side, has been reshingled.

—Few, if any years in the last forty could animals live on Minnesota pastures on May 1, as well ar at the present time.

—While beating carpets, on Wednesday morning, Mrs. Joe Lindsley, received a severe cut on the scalp. Dr. O'Connor was called to attend her.

—Cyrus Chapman's team became unmanageable while attending the funeral Monday and created quite an excitement. The procession was one of the largest for years.

—We had some fine sauce for dinner, Monday, made from pie plant grown in our garden. The 30th day of April is considerably earlier than we are in the habit of indulging in such luxuries in this latitude.

—Post Master Lindsley has posted notices that in future the post office will be open for business from 7 A. M. till 8 P. M. every day but Sunday, when the usual hour, from 9 till 10 A. M. will find the office open.

—Fair Day comes on the Saturday next after the first Monday in the month. This time May 11, the 43d anniversary of the admission of the Territory of Minnesota as a state in the United States of America.

—We read, recently, of a town where a part of the ladies had agreed to remove their hats during services. Good idea! if they occupy so much of the room between them and heaven, as some of the Delano head gears do.

—Street Commissioner, Liendescher this week did some good work in fixing up things. The R. R. park fence and the neat appearance of the wires around the telephone poles used for hitching posts are evidences of his handiwork.

--Delano keeps near the front in several lines at the State University. John J. Catlin is number four on the slit of fifty strong men: he trains with the pitchers on the base ball team; and is one of the studious and careful medical students. Dr. Chilton's son of Howard Lake, is in the same class, in medicine and base ball.

—The Territorial boys and girls are to have a grand time at the City Hall, Saturday, May 11. All who resided in Minnesota Territory, no matter where they live now, are invited to be present, with there dinner and experiences. This is to be a general celebration of the anniversary of the admission of our state into the Union, 43 years ago.

—The annual meeting of the M. E. S. S. Board was held at the church Monday evening and officers and teachers for the ensuing year elected as follows: Superintendent, Dr. T. J. Catlin; Assistant Superintendent, Mrs. H. V. Wilder; Secretary: William Mowatt; Assistant Secretary, Sadie Orrison; Treasurer, Queeney Buckley; Librarian, Iona Dannehr.

--More fruit trees and berry bushes than common are finding market here this spring. The few mild winters and unusual success of fruit raisers in this vicinity has stimulated others to plant a few trees and make the experiment. If enough attention is paid to caring for the orchards after they are planted some may succeed. Care should be taken to buy a good variety for this climate.

—Rev. Daniel, in a sermon, at the Catholic church during the mission services gave a point on poverty well worth considering. It was that we complain of being poor, that crops are not good, when in the morning instead of prayers curses on the plow that is to turn the furrow are heard, swearing at the horses that pull the plow; cursing the seed, the weather, the work falls from lips that should utter prayers. How can people under such circumstances expect plenty, prosperity.

—The Delano Cemetery Association sometime ago elected as Sexton, C. L. Belt. It is in his business to attend to the grounds and see that nothing is injured, and to dig the graves. Since someone drove a team over graves last summer his orders have been to keep the gates fastened. Persons having business in the Cemetery are to call on him to assist them, and pay him for his trouble, as there is no salary to the position. This is done in order that one man at least may know where people are buried and be in charge of the grounds. T. M. Shaw is Actuary and is to keep a list of burials.

—Rev. John Doran's many old time Delano friends will be pleased to read the following, from the Wasco, Oregon News. If the paper is an indication of what the town is, it is a good place to live in:

"Rev. John Doran, of Eden Valley, Minn., accompanied by his wife, arrived last Friday, and assumed the duties of pastor of the M. E. Church, of this place Rev. Doran has been a member of the Northern Conference of Minnesota, for the past twenty years, and comes to us well recommended. We are glad to welcome him and his good wife and trust that their stay will be pleasant and profitable to all."

He that by the plow would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

—Succors are being captured in the river nearly every evening.

—Gardens are further ahead in this vicinity than they have been for years.

—If all the blossoms make plums there will be many bushels of them.

—The hot summer weather met a little backset. This morning at 5 o'clock the thermometer indicated 56 degrees.

—Roads are again in prime condition, except a roller driven over some places would add to the speed with which they could be traveled.

--Miss Klopsteg chaperoned the pupils belonging in her room to the woods on Arbor Day, to study nature in all its springtime beauty. Of course all enjoyed the change in study.

—May baskets were on many door nobs Wednesday evening. The fairies don't seem to have forgotten the first of May even though the season is so much futher advanced than usual.

—Painting, papering and house cleaning are going on with a vengeance this week. The early warm spring weather seems to infuse new life into the animal as well as the plant creation.

—The manuer piles are rapidly disappearing from alleys and vacant lots. At the present rate of cleaning up the Board of Health will find little to report on the 15th inst. There are a few notable exceptions, however.

—Butchering calves, sheep and chickens ought not to be permitted inside the village limits. All slops should be carted out of town and the air would be much purer and sweeter, and the health of our inhabitants much less endangered.

--Cigarette fiends and a few smokers of cigars and pipes fill halls, court rooms, and othes public places with sickening fumes. God created the air pure for all, and these few unmannerly, ungentlemanly individuals ought not to be permitted to make it unpleasant and unhealthy for others.

--William Ziebarth, one of Franklin's prosperous farmers, found his biggest and best horse dead yesterday morning. The horse weighed about 1700, worked in the middle of a team of three all day Wednesday, ate his feed and hay, at night, and in the morning was found dead.

—A slaughtering business could be carried on here as well as in the cities. Large numbers of hogs, calves, sheep and poultry of all kinds, are raised in this vicinity. Some are killed, others are sent alive to the cities. If they were all slaughtered, and prepared for market as the case might be in Delano, it would be an advantage to the place.

—Thomas P. Schall represents Minnesota University, in Iowa City, May 3, in the Northern Oratorical League contest. There are eight contestants, and the winner will have to work for his laurels. Mr. Schall will be remembered by many of our citizens who heard him deliver a Bryan speech at the City Hall, last fall. He is considered a fine orator and bound to come to the front.

—Of course it is hard to enforce the laws when the people elected to enforce them are constant law breakers themselves. How can the Sunday law be enforced by an officer who has his own shop open Sunday,; or goes gunning Sundays? How can the ordinance against shooting inside the village limits be enforced by an official who helps shoot succors from the Rail Road bridge, when he ought to be at church? How can a man be expected to transact the village business honorably who has troubles he ought not with his own business? These questions do not apply to those not guilty.

--Several towns in the state have built canning houses, for canning all kinds of garden products, berries, etc. ect. When one visits the stores and sees the formibable array of canned goods, green corn, peas, beans, and nearly anything that can be canned, he must think that there is money in the business for somebody. Why not try the plan in Delano, enough garden stuff, fruit, and other things could be raised in this neighborhood to keep a big factory running during the canning season. We might as well have the work done at home. It is likely it would, if properly run, pay as well as the creamery business. Who will investigate the business and start a canning fatcory in Delano?

--William Hawker who was sent to the Hospital for insane last Wednesday, was returned home on Saturday. He has been ailing since sometime last summer. Last October he was committed to the same place and after remaining there about six weeks was sent home to die in three days. He did not die but has been a constant care to his aged wife and friends ever since. Last week a regular organized Board of Lunacy found him a subject for Hospital care and he was returned to Fergus Falls and afterwards sent back to Delano with the claim that on examination it had been found "That he is a senile, harmless cannot benefit by hospital treatment, and is not a proper subject for hospital attention." On his return home he wore an old hat in place of a new $3 one, and an old pair of socks instead of a new pair with which he was sent to Fergus Falls.

If the Hospital for Insane is not for such cases, what is it for? If people pay taxes all their lives to keep up institutions for the care of insane people why can't such a case have the best the state affords? At any rate he ought not to wear out and socks in three days. This case will bear investigating.

—"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

--Sixty cents per month for a light from 8 till 11:30 P. M. is considerably expensive.

—Rev. Mr. Wright's time having expired the Advents have discontinued services in Delano.

—Several Delano I. O. O. F. attended the anniversary at Maple Plain. They say they had an extra good time.

--The piping notes of the spring chicken and the cluck of the mother hen now make part of the barnyard music.

—One of our citizens refuses to love his neighbor as himself because he has a garden and his neighbor has chickens.—Cokato Enterprise.

—Some of the Village council seem to be afflicted with a severe attack of "Magnus Caput." Too bad! But there is a chance for recovery.

--Baseball manager is going to haul his load of "Slivers" to Rockford to play the "Shivers" Saturday afternoon. There is apt to be lots of fun.

--What a hangdog appearance it gives a man to start for the woods with a dog and a gun about church time Sunday morning. And what an example of keeping the commandments he must feel that he is setting for his young boys.

--A few chickens are yet to be seen parading the streets. The next thing somebody knows they will get into some garden and become the property of the owner, same as wild game. Better keep 'em up if you must raise chickens in town.

—Some of the inhabitants of Minnesota will think our legislature passed some class legislation for their benefit when they voted a dollar tax on every dog owner. That is the dog-on-est law yet heard of. But the neglector is liable to severe punishment. Better get rid of the dog or pay the $1.

—The Village authorities seem to have forgotten their oath to enforce the laws. Or, may be they are not familiar with the bicycle ordinance: or hold their heads so high they can't see a bicyclist riding on the sidewalk; contrary to the peace and dignity of the Village of Delano; to say nothing of good manners.

--What's to become of the boys? One crew claims to have been ordered out of the park! Then not to play in the street! Next they tried the chicken yard; but the woman of the house drove then out. Surely the boys should have room to grow. Under the present regime they are liable to be considerably stunted.

—Provision for equalizing the tax for sprinkling streets should be made. At present people living along the streets sprinkled must pay 25 cts a week whether they own half a lot 12½ feet front, or three lots of 75 feet on one street and 100 on around the corner; whether they transact business amounting to $500, or $5, per week. This is not very evenly distributed.

--Frank A. Barth, of Watertown believes in advertising. His business shows it. People who read know where to find Frank and what he is doing. In this weeks News he has a full page. Is it any wonder people in the southern part of Franklin go to see Frank when they want to buy. If our Delano merchants should conclude to advertise perhaps they might keep their share of the business.

The Wright County Times reports Diphtneria in the family of Anton Imholte, at Clear Lake, two children died; three are sick. A public funeral last Sunday for the first to die allowed many to be exposed. It is claimed the descase was called pneumonia in the first case. It is best to be on the look out for such diseases as Diphtheria. Rigid quarantine is the best way to keep the disease from spreading.

A GOOD NAME.

[FROM SANDERS READER]
Children choose it,
Don't refuse it:
'Tis a precious diadem:
Highly prize it,
Ne'er despise it;
You will need it when you're men.

Love and cherish,
Keep and nourish;
'Tis more precious far than gold:
Watch and guard it,
Don't discard it:
You will need it when you're old.

Then endeavor,
Now and ever—
Keep this blessed treasure nigh:
Never leave it,
Always own it
You will need it when you die.

Bryan's Business.

In answering in the Commoner, what Bryan is up to in his political actions. Mr. Bryan asks pardon for being a little personal. Believes in Democratic principales and expects to advocate them during the remainder of his life. Futher he says:

"I am not planing for another presidential nomination-if I were I would not be editing a paper; if I ever become a candidate again it will be because it seems necessary for the advancement of the principles to which I adhere, and that does not seem probable. I shall, however, take an interest in politics for several years yet, if I live, and can be relied upon to support those who as candidates advocate democratic principals, and who can be trusted to enforce them if elected.

I have no enemies to punish. No matter what a man may have said or done against the ticket in 1896 or in 1900, that man becomes my friend the moment he accepts democratic principles Neither have I any disposition to reward political friends at the expense of our cause. No matter what a man may have said or done for the ticket in 1896 or in 1900, that man becomes an opponent the moment he turns against democratic principles. Political battles are fought, not in the past or in future, but in the present. The heretofore cannot be recalled, and the hearafter cannot be anticipated, but the NOW is all important.

I shall say whatever I think ought to be said, and shall write whatever I think ought to be written. This course may not be popular, but I trust that it will aid in the restoration of Jeffersonian principles.

I shall ask no reward, because I am not working for others entirely. As a citizen I am interested in having a good government under which to live; as a father I am interested in leaving a good government to my children. If a good government can be secured it will be reward enough for all that I or any one else can do."

Was Aguinaldo a Rebel.

A reader asks whether Aguinaldo was a rebel. That is a matter of opinion. A rebel is defined by Webster to be "one who revolts from the government to which he owes allegiance." Did Aguinaldo owe allegiance to the United States? Those who believe that this nation could buy sovereignty over the Filipinos believe that, sovereignty having been bought, Aguinoldo owed allegiance to this country, and was, therefore, a rebel in making war against it.

Those who believe, with THE COMMONER, that sovereignty could not be bought, and that Spain could not transfer title to the Filipinos, deny that the Filipinos owed us allegiance, and his followers stood in the attitude of rebels.—The Commoner.

N. J. Gazette: If drunkenness is a disease, why not quarantine the saloon?

SUBSIDIES UNNECESSARY.

"It is well known that the Burlington Route is selected by the government, and has been for many years, as the route for its through mail service between Chicago and Council Bluffs. The overland mail, sent by the government over the Burlington. This service is performed in special trains, but there is no written contract for the service with the government. It simply has selected and retains what it considers the best, quickest and safest route for its transcontinental mails; nor is any subsidy paid. The Burlington receives only the same rates in force by general law for the carriage of all mails in the country. In a recent debate in the House of Representatives at Washington, upon the question of paying a subsidy to a line of railroad between New York and New Orleans, for keeping up a fast mail service in the South, Mr. Loud of California, Chairman of the committee on postoffices and postroads, in giving his reasons for voting against this subsidy to the southern railroad, paid the following high tribute to the Burlington. He said: "If subsidies are proper, you should not restrict them. If there is any railroad in the country that earns extra compensation from the government, that railroad is the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, from Chicago to Omaha, which runs phenomenally fast trains, carrying nothing but mail; but that company does not ask for a subsidy."—Railway Age, March 29, 1901.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

SEVERAL of the Twin City dailies have lenghty write-ups favoring the release of the Younger brothers in the penetentiary for life for their part in the Northfield robbery and murder. They say: "They were sentenced for life on Nov. 20, 1876, by Judge Lord of Wright County for the Northfield bank robbery." If the rest of the plea is as correct as the quotation attributing them to Wright county it is away off.

TEMPERANCE advocates announced long ago that there would be a united effort to make it appear that abolishing the canteen was provokative of more drunkeness among soldiers. And nearly every little counntry sheet that knows nothing about the conditions is copying the stories sent out about drunkenness and rows where there is no canteen. They ought to give the other side an equal chance anyway.

A Republic.

Webster defines the word as follows:

REPUBLIC: A state in which the sovereign power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them; a commonwealth.

In some ancient states called republics the sovereign power was exercised by a hereditary aristocracy or a privileged few, constituting a government now distinctively called an aristocracy. In some there was a division of authority between an aristocracy and the whole body of the people except slaves. No existing republic recognizes an exclusive privilege of any class to govern, or tolerate the institution of slavery.

The United States has, since its establishment among the nations of the earth, been considered the typical Republic. The one great republican form of government; where the people ruled supreme. It was by the united efforts of liberty loving people that our nation was built up, people of other nations, who had tired of Monarchial governments, come to this land and cast in their lots together, to form a government for the people, of the people, by the people, which should not perish from the face of the earth.

The declaration of Independence was written, and when being signed, it is claimed, some one twitted one of the signers, that there were so many men of his name that a mistake might be made when King George sent out to catch the signers, and he would escape punishment; and that immediately Charles Carroll wrote after his signature "of Carrollton," That someone said "Now that we have signed the document we must hang together. That he was answered by another signer, "Unless we do we will surely hang separately." What an important event was this. Men taking their lives in their hands to declare they would have their God given rights. They would have freedom from oppression. They would have liberty. They would have a government in which the people's voice could and would be heard. They would have no monarch. They would have a President from among themselves chosen by themselves. What sacrifices they made, laying their alls, their lives upon the altar of liberty.

Then came the seven years of the Revolution in defense of these principles; the grand effort to establish a republican form of government, to obtain the unalienable rights to which every man is entitled, life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. The efforts were crowned with success. But at what a cost. Lives of patriots were given. Wealth, such as the land afforded was freely contributed. Hardships were endured. The war was won. People in this country had declared their rights, and had succeeded in establishing them in the eyes of the world.

Having established their rights, the rights of men to form a government of their own, among themselves, and to chose their own officers often, they felt like perpetuating and offering to others who desired the same privileges the chance to enjoy them. They called on the downtroden and oppressed of every nation who loved liberty and its cause to come and enjoy it. They wrote the Constitution outlining the powers of different branches of the new govermnent, always being careful to preserve to man his right to vote his sentiments, and to help uphold the Republic.

There has from the early days of our government been men who seemed to lean to the idea that some men were a little better than others and that they alone should have a right to do certain things, to have certain privileges; and that voting should be limited to individuals. But the people have, so far been able to keep up a republic. They have been able to vote as they saw fit; though sometimes many have appeared to vote opposite to their expressed beliefs.

Now when money is getting into the hands of a comparatively few; when big corporations, syndicates and trusts are carrying on such immense businesses, with power to employ only those who vote for the interests of the money power isn't it well to keep a sharp lookout for our beloved Constition Declaration of Independence, and established republic? Wouldn't it be a good idea for every school teacher to select for reading lessons for a time, these honored documents; that the pupils may know for what our Revolutionary fathers and mothers fought? Wouldn't it be well for each family to get a copy of the Constitution of the United States, the Declaration of Independence, and of Washington's Farewell speech, and familiarize themselves with what has been handed down to us? Then, if at the 4th of July celebrations all over the land, the Declaration of Independence was to be ably read, as in days of yore, our people might know more about liberty, and freedom's cause than some of them do. Many seem to have grown tired of such documents; they prefer to listen to some different ideas; or to pass the time in amusements rather than in learning patriotism. Amusements are all very well in their place; we have read of the Emperor Nero fiddling while Rome burned. Let us not neglect to look after our Republic, Let us look well to those who would take from us the principles upon which it is founded, whether they be foes within or without our own country. "Eternal vigilance is the prince of liberty".

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3, 1901

It was idle for republicans to deny that this administration is unfriendly to the rich corporations, in view of the donation it is now openly accepting from them. The McKinley excursion train will cost not a cent less than $50,000, probably considerably more, and it is being accepted as a gift by Mr. McKinley and his fellow travelers. Yet, officers in the Philippins are being tried by court martial for exacting bribes of a few thousand dollars from army contractors. There is not even a pretense that any person in the McKinley train is paying a cent for the trip. The Pullman monopoly furnishes the cars, and each railroad over which it passes furnishes the motive power and the eatables, drinkables, etc., during its transit over its lines, and the bill of fare is as good as that furnished by the most expensive hotels. No man of ordinary intelligence believes that corporations give away money without exacting its return in favors of some sort. Mr. McKinley knew when he accepted this donation that he incurred an obligation to the donors which would sooner or later have to be met, and the intelligent people of this country know it, too, and will doubtless express their opinion of the transaction, at the polls, when their next opportunity comes.

Has the Supreme Court agreed to decide Porto Rico to be a part of the U. S., that the Constitution follows the flag, and that the Porto Rican tariff bill was unconstitutional? Many lawers believe it has, and that the decision will not be handed down until next December, when Congress will be in season, because to hand it down before would be to make an extra session, of Congress necessary. It is thought that this is fully known to the administration, as Solicitor General Richards, who knew the rule of the U. S. Supreme Court that only citizens of the U. S. can become members of its bar, made the motion to admit Frederiso Degetau, resident Porto Rican Commissioner, to practice before that court. The motion was granted. Previously the president of the Civil Service Commission had decided that citizens of Porto Rico were citizens of the U. S.

Mr. Montague White, Boer agent in the U. S., has been in Washington for some days. While he does not publicly admit that his object was to sound the administration to ascertain how it would receive President Kruger, if he paid the U. S. a visit, there are reasons to believe this to have been his object. Mr. White said that Mr. Kruger had a strong desire to visit America and intimated that he might do so next fall. English influence is too great with the administration for Mr. Kruger to hope for any more offical recognition if he comes, than was given to his envoys last year.

The first claim to be filed with the Spanish Claims Commission in which damages are asked for other than property losses is that of Mrs. A. T. de Goven, for the death of her son, Charles Govin, an American citizen, who accompanied one of the fillibuster expeditions on the Steamer Three Friends to Cuba, as correspondent of a Key West paper, was captured and executed by order of a body of Spanish troops, notwithstanding his American citizenship and that as a newspaper correspondent, he was a non-combatant. She asks $60,000 damages.

Admiral Dewey occupied the seat of honor at a dinner given in Washington to celebrate Dewey Day, and among the guests were twenty five officers who participated in the battle of Manila Bay, including Capt. Wildes, who commanded the Boston; Capt. Lamberton, of the flagship Olympia, and Capt. Walker, of the Concord. The dinner was informal, without set speeches, the intention being to make it merely a social jollification.

A Congressional party, largely made up of democrats, have arranged to go to the Philippines on the U. S. Transport Engless, which will start from New York in a few weeks, to be gone four months. The party will consist of Senators Bacon, of Ga.; Harris, of Kansas, and Turner of Washington, and Representatives Smith, of Ill.; Gaines, of Tenn.; Mercer, of Neb.; McCleary, of Minn.; Dinsmore, of Ark.; De Armond, of Mo., and Burleson, of Texas.

The members of the River and Harbor Committee of the last House and their wives are going to imitate the McKinley excursion in a small way by a junket to the Pacific Coast, via the Gulf ports of Texas, and as they announce that their junket is not to cost the government anything, the bills are probabaly to be footed by the same parties—the obliging railroads. The alleged object of this junket is to inspect ports. That is a good scheme, too, as it induces boards of trade and commercial bodies of towns having harbors in need of improvement to stir themselves in properly entertaining the inspectors and their wives, thus making sure that the junkers will not have to spend their own money. It is not within the bounds of probability that any one of these junketers will acquire any information about the harbors that he personally inspects, from the deck of a steamboat or the window of a hotel, that could not have been acquired just as well, and from the same parties, in the committee room at Washington, but "personal inspection" furnishes the excuse for the junket.

Aitkin Republican: Down in Rockford they fine people for riding on a bicycle. One of the councilmen, a prominent business man, recently went out for a spin on his wheel, and was promptly arrested and fined. He had got onto the sidewalk, probably by mistake.

Sherburne County Star News: The connumdrum, How can a man afford to pay $10,000 for a $3,000 office, still remains unanswered.

FOR LAGNIAPPE

By Elizabeth M. Gilmer.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

IT HAD only been three years since Beppo, with a horde of other earringed Italian emigrants, had landed in New Orleans, but already he had prospered beyond his wildest dreams of avarice. His fruit stall, built flat, cupboard fashion against the wall of a big office building, was always luscious with strange Central American fruits with queer exotic flavors, and golden with oranges and purple with grapes, and all day long he and Tessa were busy with the customers who rained a harvest of small coin into their till. Tessa herself was not the least of the attractions. She was in the first flush of her young beauty, and with her dusky hair and eyes and scarlet cheeks looked half sister to the sun-kissed nectarines in the boxes behind her.

So at least thought Arthur Gray, as he leaned against the wall, watching the quick, bird-like motions of her little head, and her deft hands, as he prieed her wares with provoking slowness just for the pleasure of listening to her soft, broken English. A bad spell of pneumonia had sent him south to recuperate under sunny skies. He was very idle and a trifle bored, and—well, since he had discovered Tessa he had developed an enormous appetite for fruit, and every morning for a month the same little comedy had been enacted.

Tessa would see the tall, athletic figure coming down the street, and a moment later it would stop at the stall.

"How much?" he would ask, prieing this and that, and the girl, who was a coquette to her finger tips, would smile and ask:

"You lik'a da orang'a an' da grap'a verr'a mooch'a?"

"I like—something else very much," the man would answer, with a look that sent the quick blood flaming up into the girl's cheeks, and she would say, as she dropped a bit of extra fruit into the bag:

"For lagniappe, signor."

"For lagniappe?" he had asked, the first time, and then she had explained to him the quaint old custom handed down in New Orleans from the old Spanish days, of throwing in something for good measure with every purchase, and without which gratuity no child or servant considers a transaction complete.

With Arthur Gray his admiration for Tessa was the idlest of passing fancies, but there was one to whom the matter was serious enough. That was Giusseppe, who loved the girl with all the ardor of his passionate soul, and to whom Beppo had promised her hand in marriage just as soon as he could save up enough money to buy the horse and cart with which he peddled charcoal about the streets, and which, in his and Beppo's eyes, represented the equivalent of an ample fortune. Giusseppe had been happy enough and his strident voice calling: "Charcoal, char-e-o-o-oal," early and late, had thrilled with love and hope, as if every intonation brought him closer to Tessa and the little home for which he was working.

But since the coming of the stranger who had noticed Tessa so much everything was changed. The girl had grown cold, and the little home seemed a long way off. It takes a long time, when one must save money by the penny, and he grew discouraged. Worst of all, he had seen Tessa flush with pleasure when the American bent over her one day, and the mere remembrance set his jealous soul on fire.

The climax had come one night when, moody and sullen, he had reproached Tessa with being in love with the handsome stranger and had demanded to know where she had gotten a little trinket she wore.

The girl turned on him with sudden fury.

"Mother of God," she cried, in Italian, "but you are not my master yet."

"Bah," he retorted, "you are but a woman to be bought like all other women with gewgaws," and then he had flung himself out of the house. Giusseppe knew nothing of law, and cared less. His one thought was to find the man who had stolen his sweetheart's love and settle the affair, man to man, and, as he made his way along the street, he touched the dirk hidden in the broad belt about his waist. Tessa had said that Gray was staying at the hotel around the corner from the fruit stall and he made his way to it, hot murder in his heart.

How to find Gray he knew not, but instinctively he crouched down in the shadow of the door and waited for him. Soon or late he must pass that way. There would be a sudden spring, a thrust of a knife, a muffled cry, perhaps, and then—for awhile the angry beat of his jealous heart was like an audible voice urging him on to vengeance, and then, as the solemn night wore on, something divine that underlies all true love struggled to the surface, and the soul of Giusseppe, the charcoal peddler, humble, poor, illiterate, was transfigured by a great renunciation. He would sacrifice himself. If Tessa loved Gray, she should have him.

It was very late when Gray entered the hotel, and neither he nor the sleepy porter noticed the stealthy figure that crept in with him, and followed his every movement like a dark shadow. Gray saw him first as he turned to close the door behind him. Giusseppe entered as stealthily as a cat.

"You steal'a da love'a Tessa," he said, simply, "dassa what'a Ah come'a fo' keel'a you. Ah steek'a yo da stilletta."

Gray walked over to the mantel and rolled and lit a cigarette. His face was a trifle paler, but his hands did not tremble at their task.

"Well," he asked, "why did you not do it?"

"God'a know," replied the other. "Ah be da poor. You be da beega 'Mericana. Ah love she. Ah give'a ma life fo' she."

"You love the girl?" Gray asked, curiously, "then why don't you marry her? You know the fate of the rose that hangs too near the garden wall—" and a shrug of the shoulders completed the sentence.

Giusseppe made a hopeless gesture of assent, and then impetuously poured out the whole story—his love for Tessa, the weary wating, the little home he had hoped to make for her when he had saved up enough money to buy the horse and cart. They were to have been so happy, but now—it was all over. It was a pathetic little story of human love and longing, of faithful devotion that rose to the heights of a great sacrifice, and as Arthur Gray listened he smoked many cigarettes, and cursed his own idle folly.

"Giusseppe," he said, at last, very humbly, "if I have wronged you, it has been unintentional, and I beg your forgiveness. I admired your rose, as any man may a beautiful flower, but I have no desire to rob you of it. In my northern home there is a lily which, soon, please God, I shall wear on my own breast. Go back to Tessa. Pluck your own rose, man, and tell old Beppo I shall send down the horse and cart tomorrow as a little wedding present to the bride."

The light was still burning in Tessa's room when Giusseppe made his way back to Beppo's house, and the girl, red eyed with weeping over her quarrel with her lover, sprang to the window at his first call. In a word almost he told her his glad news.

"Ah, beloved," he said, holding out his arms to the girl as she leaned above him in the window, "but the world is Heaven to-night." For answer Tessa swayed to him in the scented dark and laid her lips for the first time on his.

"For lagniappe," she said, shyly.

HE CHASED A GRIZZLY BEAR.

How a Sheep Rancher in Arizona Frightened the Animal Out of Its Wits.

Bears are not the bravest, although they are among the most dangerous of wild beasts. They are sometimes frightened by very trifling occurrences, and run with all possible speed to a place of safety.

A short time ago an Arizona sheep rancher was riding in the foothills when he saw a big, awkward silvertip. He had a rifle, but was not certain he could kill the bear at one shot, and knew that he would get into trouble if he missed. So he gave a regular cowboy yell, and the bear started away in alarm.

The man gave chase, at the same time keeping up the piercing yell, and he soon noticed that the grizzly was getting farther away. He continued the chase for nearly two miles, until the bear disappeared in the mountains and he had not gained a foot.

In going back along the trail he noticed places where the bear had made jumps of 15 or 20 feet, and the ground had been cut up by his claws so that it looked as if a harrow had been run over it. It is evident that a man would have no show running a footrace with a grizzly.

About Washington.

A task which the editor of this paper cheerfully performs, so far as time permits, is that of answering letters of inquiry about agricultural conditions in Oregon written by persons who are thinking of settling in this state. Of late the number of letters of this kind has been so large that it is an impossibility to answer all. In may cases the best we can do is to send a sample copy or two of our paper.—Oregon Agriculturist.

The editor of the Oregon Agriculturist, is an old friend of ours, and belonged to the first graduating class of the Minnesota State University, and what he says may be relied on. His father was a Pioneer Missionary, Dr. Williamson. If you want to know about Washington send for Oregon Agriculturist, Portland, Oregon.

Value of No.

If men knew the value of the little word, NO, the prisons would soon be depopulated.—Prison Mirror.

Punning Catches.

Little punning catches are appreciated by a good many people. Here is an old one that is good:

If a father gave one of his sons 10 cents and the other 6 cents, what time would it be?

Quarter to two.

And here is one of more recent birth:

If a postmaster went to a menagerie and was eaten by one of the wild beasts, what would be the hour?

Perhaps you'll have to think this over a little. Yet the answer is very simple. It is "8 p. m.," of course.

And here is the latest yet:

If a guest at a restaurant ordered a lobster and ate it, and another guest did the same, what would the latter's telephone number be?

It would be "8-1 2."—Cleveland Leader.

Star News: If this thing keeps on, there will soon be a syndicate controlling the air we breathe.

Representative: If you believe the people should have the right to propose laws and to pass upon all laws proposed according to the referendum principle, talk it out loud. Do not hide your light under a bushel. Let your light shine before all men.

Before the end of the present year 42 beet-sugar factories will be in operation in the United States. The industry is now established and its rapid growth is more than probable.

Tobacco raising has been prohibited by law in Egypt since 1890. In fact, there is nothing Egyptian about "Egyptian cigarettes" except that they are made in Egypt. The tobacco all comes from Turkey, the paper from Austria, Germany or Italy and most of the labor employed is Greek.

Hypnotism is now a forbidden art in Hungary. The secretary of the interior, after consultation with the highest medical authorities, has issued an ordinance forbidding its practice unless special permission, specifying the purpose, has been obtained from the sanitary department.

Bunker Hill chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has decided to mark the spot from which Paul Revere started on his historic midnight ride on April 18, 1775, to warn the inhabitants of the towns between Boston and Concord that the British were coming to destroy their stores and munitions of war.

Henry H. Faxon, a temperance worker in Quincy, Mass., believes in spending his money for a good cause as well as talking for it. There are 23 ministers in Quincy, and to each of them he has mailed a check for $100 to be used "in promoting the moral, spiritual, social and political welfare of the people of the city."

In his opening address as presiding officer at the twelfth annual conference of the Physical Culture association the other day in New York Dr. Dudley Sargent, of Harvard, declared his belief that "lawn tennis, golf and cycling have done more to win women away from tight clothing than all the past century's lecturing and writing."

From the latest official reports in the British war office it is ascertained that the total killed, wounded and missing among the army during actions in South Africa up to March 31 was 1,993 officers and 27,952 noncommissioned officers and men. In addition 711 officers and 16,981 noncommissioned officers and men have died of wounds or disease, making the total casualties foot up to the enormous total of 47,637.

Dr. Thomas D. Crothers, of Hartford, Conn., says: "Cocaineism, alcoholism and morphineism are the three scourges of the world." He considers cocaine the most dangerous, and condemns its use even as a local anesthetic for surgical purposes. Large importations have decreased the price of the drug from six dollars per ounce less than five years ago to 75 cents per ounce, and the lower price has largely increased the consumption.

Among the second lieutenants of the marine corps ordered to Manila is young J. P. V. Gridley, the son of the late Capt. Gridley, who commanded the cruiser Olympia in the memorable fight at Manila, and to whom Dewey addressed the famous command: "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley." Young Gridley has been in the service only a year and a half, but he has conducted himself in such a manner as to win the highest praise.

President David Starr Jordan, of Stanford university, who has accepted an offer from the United States fish commission to take charge of an expedition for the investigation of the fish of the Hawaiian islands, will devote two months to the investigation, following which a report will be made out and forwarded to Washington, to be used as a basis for a general plan of extending the work of the federal fish commission to the islands.

The Massachusetts senate by an overwhelming vote has decided not to correct the error of punctuation which accidentally crept into the state's liquor law and changed its entire meaning. The measure is known as "the semi-colon bill," because the wrong and unintended use of a semicolon makes it unlawful for hotels to serve liquors to their guests after 11 o'clock at night. The state has decided that the blunder is a good one, and the law will stand.

People of a superstitious turn of mind who believe that ill luck is associated with the number 13 may perhaps derive confirmation of their opinions from a study of the history of the Irish Hunt corps, which formed part of the Imperial yeomanry. The Hunt corps was mobilized in Dublin on January 13, 1900. On March 13 it sailed for South Africa and on arrival at the Cape was attached to the Thirteenth battalion of Imperial yeomanry. In their first encounter with Boers 13 men of the corps were killed and the rest were forced to surrender.

The preparation of a simple and cheap artificial stone is becoming an important German industry and likely eventually to supplant brickmaking. The ingredients are only lime and sand in the proportion of from four to six parts of the former to between 96 and 94 parts of the latter. The materials are thoroughly mixed and shaped into blocks of the desired size. The latter are then put in a boiler, which is sealed, and submitted to a steam pressure of from 120 to 150 pounds to the square inch. This gives a flinty character to the blocks.

A decision has been made in the case of two Englishmen who arrived in this country in February under a contract to enter the employ of a Philadelphia lace establishment to make bobbinet lace, objection being made to their admission on the ground that their coming was in violation of the alien contract labor law. Assistant Secretary Taylor, of the treasury department, finds that bobbinet lace making is a new industry in this country, and, therefore, the men are entitled to land under the law which admits laborers to be employed in a new industry.

TRADE REVIEW.

Activity in Stocks the Greatest Ever Experienced in History of Wall Street.

New York, May 4.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "The greatest activity ever seen in Wall street diverts attention in a measure from progress in distributing and manufacturing operations. But while on every hand stock market interests are counseling caution and attempting to prove that prices are really more than the condition of some of our railroads warrants, the fact remains that, without a brilliant crop outlook and a great activity of general trade, Wall street could hold no such carnival. Labor difficulties are fewer and less threatening than for several years before in the first week of May, and prices of merchandise hold well.

"Stability of prices and vigorous prosecution of work at mills indicate the wholesome condition of the iron and steel market. Throughout the entire range of products of this industry the current demand for immediate delivery exceeds all previous records, yet makers maintain a conservative position and prices are not pushed up to the danger point. It is from the finishing steel plants that there is the greatest urgency for shipments, and full capacity is assured for the next three months. After July there is a prospect of respite, judging by the light engagements of pig iron and following the unparalleled activity of the past six months, a season of comparative quiet would not be surprising nor unwelcome. There was a rush to get in orders for steel rails before the higher price became effective.

"Further advances were secured in the cereal market, Chicago speculators being forced to cover May corn contracts at 55 cents. Attractive prices brought more liberal receipts at interior cities and also stimulated operations on the farm. Traders have forced the next crop options to what seems an unreasonable level, since there is evidence of a large yield despite delayed planting through excessive moisture. Wheat also attained a high point, advancing in sympathy with corn.

"The marvelously healthy condition of business is best appreciated when it is discovered that the defaults last month were the smallest in 91 months, with the exception of May to August, 1899, inclusive. In manufacturing lines there were but 163 failures, with a total indebtedness of $1,997,694, against 178 last year for $1,514,063. As 1899 reported the smallest liabilities of any full year in two decades, last month's good showing is made manifest by default in manufacturing concerns $777,965 smaller than two years ago. Trading failures were 555 for $3,168,823, and banking defaults were $529,000. The death rate was only three-fiftieths of one per cent. of all firms in business, and losses averaged $4.70; not a serious embarrassment to general trade. The proportion of unpaid bills was less than 46 cents for each $1,000 of solvent payments through clearing houses. No matter in what light the April record may be viewed, it makes an exhibit that cannot fail to give encouragement."

SEVEN LIVES LOST.

Tenement House at South Chicago, Ill., Destroyed by Fire with Fatal Results.

Chicago, May 6.—In a fire that destroyed the three-story tenement house at 9316 Marquette avenue, South Chicago, early Sunday morning, seven persons lost their lives; three were so badly injured that they will die, and a score were injured in their attempt to rescue the unfortunate ones. The dead are: Mrs. Josephine Cooley, aged 31 years; Mabel Cooley, daughter of Mrs. Cooley, aged six years; Annie Cooley, daughter of Mrs. Cooley, aged 15 months; Peter Zook, owner of the house, aged 50 years; Mrs. Peter Zook, aged 40 years; Victoria Zook, daughter of Peter Zook, aged 14 years; Nicholas Zook, son of Peter Zook, aged 15 years. The fire engines, in responding to the alarm, were blocked at the railroad crossing, and did not reach the fire until it was too late to render any assistance.

The Zook family was cooped up on the second floor in the rear, where the smoke is believed to have suffocated them before they had an opportunity to escape. The body of Victoria Zook, 14 years of age, was found near the bed, indicating that she was burned to death while still asleep. The other bodies were found at intervals about the rooms occupied by the Zooks, as if they had attempted to escape, but were too exhausted to open the windows and jump from them.

Congressman Crump Dead.

Bay City, Mich., May 2.—Congressman Rosseau E. Crump, representative from the Tenth congressional district, died at his home in West Bay City early in the day from heart trouble. He returned ten days ago from the Baltimore hospital, where he had been ill for several months, and has gradually failed since his arrival. Congressman Crump was born in Monroe county, N. Y., in 1843. He was elected to congress in 1895, has served three terms, and was re-elected last fall for the fourth time.

Four Children Perish.

Muskegon, Mich., May 4.—Four little children were burned to death Friday in a farmhouse six miles from this city. The victims were: Thomas Wertman, aged three years; John Wertman, aged four and a half; Jennie Kooi, aged four, and Hennecheg Kooi, aged eight months. Mrs. Wertman, who was alone in the house with the children, went out to the well for a pail of water and when she returned found the house in flames. It burned so rapidly that she could not enter it to aid the children and they perished.

May Be Paroled.

St. Paul, Minn., May 7.—The board of state prison managers meets today, and it is believed that Cole and James Younger, serving life sentences in connection with the Northfield bank robbery and murders of 25 years ago, will be granted paroles, under the terms of the law just enacted by the legislature. Before the parole becomes effective it must be approved in writing by all of the members of the board of pardons, Gov. Van Sant, Attorney General Douglas and Chief Justice C. M. Start.

Captured by Boers.

London, May 6.—"News has arrived here," says the Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Press, "that Col Dennison, with a patrol of scouts, has been captured. The location of the mishap is not known in Cape Town."

Brussels, May 7.—It is reported here that the Delagoa Bay railway has again been destroyed by Boer forces under Commandant Boyer.

New German Ministry.

Berlin, May 7.—The new ministry is gazetted as follows: Baron Rheinbaben, minister of finance; Gen. Podbielski, minister of agriculture; Baron von Hammerstein, district president of Metz, takes the portfolio of the interior; Herr Moller, minister of commerce; Herr Kraetke, director of the imperial post office, becomes secretary of state of that department.

A UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Thanks Peruna For His Rapid Recovery From Catarrh.

EX-UNITED STATES MARSHAL MATTHEWS, OF MISSISSIPPI.

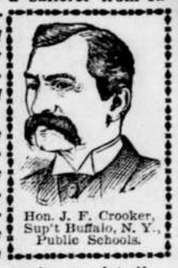
Hon. S. S. Matthews, ex-United States Marshal of Mississippi, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company of Columbus, Ohio, written from Hazelhurst, Miss., says:

"I am happy to say that I am cured of catarrh and need no more attention from you. It is a great satisfaction that I am able to write you that Peruna has in my case done all that you claim, and that I will need no more medicine."

The great multitude take this remedy without any other advice than the directions to be found upon the bottle and in the pamphlets. There are those who prefer, however, to correspond with Dr. Hartman during their sickness. To all such he will make prompt and careful answer without charge.

Hon. J. F. Crooker, of Buffalo, N. Y., who was for years Superintendent of Schools at Buffalo, in a letter dated October 16 writes:

"I have been a sufferer from catarrh six or seven years, and after trying many remedies was induced by a friend to take Peruna. The results have been highly satisfactory. I take pleasure in recommending Peruna to any one suffering with catarrh, as my cure is complete."



Hon. J. F. Crooker, Sup't Buffalo, N. Y., Public Schools.

Hon. B. B. Doviner, Congressman from West Virginia, in a letter from Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., says the following of their catarrh remedy, Peruna:

"I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in recommending your excellent remedy, Peruna, as a good tonic and also an effective cure for catarrh."

Mrs. Mary C. Fentress writes from Paradise, Tex., the following: "I think I can say that your good advice and medicine has cured me of chronic catarrh. I have had no pains in my head since I have taken Peruna. I have been in bad health ever since '59, and have taken a good many medicines which were only of temporary relief. Peruna is the catarrh cure. The Peruna stopped my catarrh of the head so that it did not become chronic, and I am very thankful for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."

Peruna is a specific for all catarrhal diseases. It acts quickly and beneficially upon the inflamed mucous membrane thus removing the cause of catarrh.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Catarrh is essentially the same everywhere. The remedy that will cure catarrh in one situation will cure it in all situations.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The Irish of It.

One of the city physicians tells an amusing story about a charity patient, an old Irishwoman who sent him a hurry-up call. He found her suffering from nothing more serious than a severe cold, and prescribed accordingly. Two days later when he dropped in to see how she was getting along the old lady was sitting up in an easy chair, her head wrapped in a camphor-saturated cloth.

"Well, how are you feeling to-day, mother?" he asked.

"Much better, praise th' saints," was the fervent reply. "Shure you're a foine docthor. If I'd a-sint fer ye befoorhand Oi'd niver been sick at all, at all."—Detroit Free Press.

IS A MASS OF RUINS.

Fire Almost Completely Destroys City of Jacksonville, Fla.

Estimated That 13,000 Buildings Are Burned and Thousands of People Made Homeless—Bodies of Victims Recovered.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 4.—The most disastrous fire in the history of this city began Friday shortly after noon in a small factory from a defective wire, according to the best belief, and burned for nearly ten hours. In that time a property damage estimated at $15,000,000 was caused and from 10,000 to 15,000 people were made homeless. According to the city map 130 blocks were burned, many of them in the heart of the business and residence section. The estimate of houses to the block is ten, hence 1,300 of them went up in smoke. Many of the finest public and private buildings were destroyed, including hotels, theaters, churches, and residences. The casualties cannot be accurately estimated. That there were several seems to be well authenticated. Six lives are reported lost. Among them was that of the fire chief, who sustained a bad fall.

Cause of the Fire.

The fire was the result of a bit of innocent looking wire accidentally getting into the shredding machine of the American Fiber company Friday at the corner of Davis and Union streets. The fire started between the hours of 12 and one o'clock in the afternoon, and owing to this fact the loss of life will be comparatively small. The fiber factory was a wooden shell, full of inflammable material, and in a few moments was a mass of flames. The wind, which was already blowing strong from the southwest, seemed to be possessed with a sudden fury and soon was carrying destructive embers all through the city.

The Burned District.

The burned district is 13 blocks wide and two miles long. It extends from the St. John's river, where it burned ten docks to the water's edge, to Catherine street on the east, Orange on the north and Davis to the west. This immense area was swept clean.

Some of the Losses.

A partial estimate of the losses sustained are as follows:

Cleveland Manufacturing company, $25,000; Commercial bank, $50,000; First national bank, $15,000; Hubbard's block, $50,000; Industrial Savings and Trust company, $5,000; Windsor hotel and annex, $35,000; St. James' hotel, $40,000; Hotel Placide, $15,000; Mohawk block, $50,000; Gardner building, $200,000; Kohn Furchgott building, $25,000; Seminole club, $15,000; Elks' club, $35,000; opera house, $10,000; Herkimer block, $25,000; Palmetto block, $20,000; H. & W. B. Drew, $15,000; Hotel Richelieu, $5,000; Ely block, $18,000; Gilkes' building, $25,000; Nedeman block, $30,000; United States hotel, $25,000; Albemarle house, $5,000; Christie, Groover & Co., drugs, $100,000; McMurray livery stable, $50,000; New York steam laundry, $18,000; R. D. Klight & Co., $20,000; S. H. Kress & Co., $10,000; A. B. Campbell Co., $50,000; Heffley Bros., drugs, $10,000; Cable Piano company, $5,000; Auditorium and skating rink, $30,000; C. C. Betts, drugs, $18,000; Law exchange, $15,000; police station (rented), $8,000; Greenleaf & Crosby, $150,000; Merchants' national bank, $10,000; Florida Hardware company, $5,000; East Florida Printing company, $20,000; Ritzwoller Shoe company, $8,000; Belvedere saloon, $25,000; St. John hotel, $5,000; Smith building, $28,000; Barton block, $8,000; St. Mary's orphanage, $30,000; Church of the Immaculate Conception, parsonage, and St. Joseph's convent, $110,000; Cookman institute (colored school), $10,000; First Baptist church, $10,000; St. John Episcopal church, $50,000; McTyre Memorial church (M. E.), $35,000; W. S. Ware's residence, $100,000; Senator Taliaferro's home, $10,000; J. R. Parrott's residence, $25,000; Mr. Pollock's residence, $15,000; Col. H. Bisbee's residence, $10,000; Judge W. B. Owens' residence, $8,000.

Bodies Are Found.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 7. — The body of Harry Bonnetheau, a real estate dealer, was recovered Monday morning from the St. Johns. Mr. Bonnetheau's wife and son are supposed to be in New York city.

The bodies of two negroes were also recovered. All are victims of Friday's disastrous fire. There are many rumors of loss of life, but owing to the departure of thousands of people from the city it will be impossible for several days to verify the reports unless the bodies are found.

City Under Military Rule.

At seven o'clock Saturday morning Gov. Jennings declared the city under martial law. Col. Lovell, of the First regiment, is in command of the troops.

Late Estimate of Losses.

An estimate on the total loss by the fire as given out by a former tax collector Monday afternoon is as follows:

Public buildings, $1,685,000; stores, north side of Bay street, $495,000; stores, south side of Bay street, $880,000; stores, Forsyth street, $405,000; stores, Main street, $309,000; residences, prominent, $778,000; residences, 1,500 small, $2,000,000; residence personal effects, $2,300,000. Stocks of goods in stores, $1,620,000; stocks in 200 smaller stores, $550,000; street railways, $30,000; pavements, $100,000. Total, $10,565,000.

President Extends Sympathy.

Tallahassee, Fla., May 6.—Gov. Jennings received the following telegram:

"El Paso, Tex., May 5.—The Governor of Florida, Tallahassee, Fla.: I have just learned of the calamitous fire that has swept over the city of Jacksonville, and hasten to express the deep sympathy, in common with our country, I feel for those who have suffered. The government will do all it can in the work of relief.

(Signed) "WILLIAM M'KINLEY."

Gov. Jennings acknowledged the receipt of the president's message of sympathy in the following telegram:

"Tallahassee, Fla., May 5.—To Hon. William McKinley, El Paso, Tex.: We appreciate your sympathy for the sufferings of our people caused by the Jacksonville conflagration, which is appalling, and thank you for the aid of the government, so generously tendered. Estimated that over 10,000 are homeless and that loss will reach $15,000,000. No lives lost so far as known. Sufficient funds have been placed at disposal of relief association to provide for immediate necessities. Perfect order prevails. I beg to extend gratitude of the people of Florida to you.

(Signed) "W. S. JENNINGS, Governor."

Holiday in Mexico.

Mexico City, May 6.—The national holiday commemorating the victory of the Mexican forces over the French and imperialists at Puebla 39 years ago was celebrated all over the republic with the usual enthusiasm. President Diaz and suite, with a large number of distinguished people, went in the morning to San Fernando cemetery, where they placed wreaths on the tombs of Gen. Zaragossa, leader of the victorious Mexican forces.

LEAVE PEKING.

United States Cavalry and Artillery Bid Farewell to Chinese Metropolis.

Peking, May 6.—The United States cavalry and artillery left Peking Sunday morning to march to Ton-Ku. Imposing farewell ceremonies attended their departure. Sir Alfred Gaselee and the other British generals, with their staffs, were present, and the British commander sent a detachment of Baluchis, who escorted the Americans outside the city wall. Gen. Chaffee publicly thanked the cavalry and artillery for their services in the international relief expedition and for their behavior since, which has been, he said, a credit to themselves and their nation.

Washington, May 6.—Chinese advices say a thrilling story of the massacre of 45 foreigners at Tai Yuan Fu is told by Yung Cheng, a Baptist convert. Men, women and children were mercilessly slain, the missionaries bravely preaching until the fall of the executioner's ax. Bodies were stripped of clothing and some of the heads placed in cages on top of the wall.

Washington, May 7.—Inquiry here confirms the report that the United States is working, and finds support in its effort, toward the opening of all China, including the provinces, to the trade of the world. This does not mean the abolition of customs duties, but would make every Chinese city a mart for the world's goods instead of limiting foreign commerce to the few existing treaty ports. The project is one that appeals temptingly to the commercial interests of others of the great powers than the United States, and if it should command the support of the necessary number hope is entertained that it will indirectly aid in the settlement of the troublesome indemnity question.

PLAN A BIG MARCH.

Ten Thousand Pennsylvania Miners to Make Direct Appeal for Legislation.

Pottsville, Pa., May 6.—National Organizer Dougherty, Secretary Hartlein, of the Ninth district, and President Duffy, of the Seventh district, held a conference here Saturday and arranged for a march of mine workers to Harrisburg for the purpose of urging the passage of bills recommended by the United Mine Workers. It is proposed to gather the miners from Hazleton, McAdoo, Panther creek valley and Schuylkill region at Pottsville on Tuesday. They will take six days' rations each and will march to Millersburg, where they will be joined by those from Northumberland and Columbia counties. At least 10,000 men will leave when the orders to march are given. They will camp in Agricultural park.

JOKERS KILLED.

Men Engaged in Teasing a Fellow Workman Meet a Terrible Fate.

Davenport, Ia., May 7.—Emil Mohr and Charles Reis were killed Sunday evening while pretending to hang August Blunck on a pulley rope outside the Independent Malting company's building. Mohr and Reis with Gus Siems were teasing Blunck and wound up by tying the rope about his waist with the avowed intention of hanging him. The strain on the rope caused the fastenings, 60 feet above, to give way. An iron pulley struck Reis on the head, crushing it into a shapeless mass. A falling scantling brained Mohr. Blunck was slightly injured.

A FATAL WRECK.

Collision on the Burlington Road—Engineer Killed—Thirty Others Injured.

Ottumwa, Ia., May 7.—Burlington passenger train No. 3, while passing Thayer, a small town 18 miles east of Creston, struck an engine attached to a freight train endeavoring to get out of the way by backing onto a side track and was derailed, killing Engineer S. D. Brown, of Burlington, and injuring 30 people, although the names of but 22 are obtainable. All but the two rear cars of the passenger train left the rails and rolled down a 20-foot embankment.

Fire in Chicago Stock Yards.

Chicago, March 4.—Armour & Co.'s beef house, one of the largest buildings at the stockyards, was partly destroyed by fire early Friday, entailing a loss of $100,000. In addition to the damage to the building, which was practically new, great quantities of dressed carcasses were consumed by the flames, and it was only through heroic work of scores of employes that 1,600 head of live cattle, herded on the fourth floor of the building awaiting slaughter, were driven out into the runways and saved from cremation. As it was, there was a stampede among the animals, during which some of the men as well as the animals were hurt.

Indemnity Paid.

Washington, May 7.—The state department has paid to the Mexican government, through the Mexican ambassador here, $2,000 as full indemnity to the heirs of Florentino Suaste, a Mexican citizen who was lynched in La Salle county, Tex., in 1895. The payment was provided by congress out of humane consideration and without reference to the question of federal liability.

Elections in Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 7.—Elections were held in the villages and towns of Indiana Monday. The election generally was devoid of exciting interest, and in most of the towns where the elections were hotly contested local issues were at stake. Many citizens' and independent tickets were in the field. A light vote was polled almost generally throughout the state.

Deaths in South Africa.

London, May 7.—The war office officially gives out the total number of deaths in the South African war at 714 officers and 14,264 men. Four officers and 314 men have been invalided home and subsequently died. Two thousand four hundred and ninety-three noncommissioned officers and men have left the service unfit for duty.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Chased by a Wolf.

The young children of Nicholas Thill, who lives at the spring just below Camp Lakeview, at Lake City, were attacked by a large timber wolf while on their way to school. They had left the house but a short time when Mr. Thill was alarmed by the cries of the children and rushed to the spot. He arrived just in time to drive off a large and fierce wolf, which had set upon them, and but for his timely appearance the animal, no doubt, would have appeased his hunger with fearful results. The wolf escaped into the woods and Mr. Thill was unable to get sight of it again, though a diligent search was made.

Later in the day, with the assistance of a large dog, a nest was located, containing five young wolves. Mr. Thill dispatched these and will have a neat sum in the way of bounty coming to him.

Butter Inspection.

The first of the monthly butter inspection contests held by the state food and dairy commission resulted as follows:

Andrew Hanson, Stewart, first prize, $5; points scored, 96½.

H. T. Sondergaard, Litchfield, second prize, $3; points scored, 96.

M. P. Mortison, Stockholm, third prize, $2; points scored, 95¾.

The contest was held in the cold storage of the Minnesota Butter and Cheese company, St. Paul. Although this is a bad time of a year to secure high scores for butter, the 127 samples submitted to the inspectors of the state department showed a good average.

Walked in Her Sleep.

The family of George E. Burke, of Duluth, were startled the other night over the mysterious disappearance of their 9-year-old daughter Stella. For three hours she was missing, and parents, neighbors and policemen made a search for her unavailingly. Early the next morning, however, she was found wandering about a mile from her home, asleep, but safe and unhurt. She had fallen asleep on a lounge, and when the family went to bed she was aroused and told to go to her room. Instead of doing that she arose, still asleep, and marched out doors, spending the next few hours wandering about in a state of somnambulism.

Good Showing.

The state board of corrections and charities, in its annual report, maintains that from a moral standpoint Minnesota is ahead of two years ago. There are now 209 less criminals in the state reformatory and state prison, the population of these institutions being lower than at any time since their opening. The total number confined in the reformatory and prison for last year was 1,099, and for 1899, 1,178. Of last year's number Hennepin county contributed 152 and Ramsey 68.

Must Assume Liabilities.

Under a new law many school districts in well-settled parts of the state will consolidate in order to establish a central high school. This will give children the advantages of graded teachers and high school instruction without their going to distant towns. Superintendent Olsen has decided, in reply to many inquiries, that the new districts will have to assume the liabilities of all the districts which they absorb.

Butter at Buffalo.

Minnesota butter will compete in all of the monthly tests to be held at the Buffalo exposition. The first will take place May 14 and 15. Buttermakers over the state have responded in splendid style, and an adequate showing is assured. Colonel H. P. Rucker, special commissioner of the Pan-American exposition, was in the state distributing advertising matter.

Judge Wofford, of the criminal court of Kansas City, Mo., refuses to send juvenile offenders to either the county jail or the state reform school, except in rare cases. Instead, he sets them at liberty, but directs that they report to him at regular intervals, so that he may know as to their behavior. He finds that the boys generally make good use of their freedom, nearly all either going to work or school. The police bear testimony of the good being done in this way.

King Edward, in respect of the books of which he has formed the subject, has just been shifted to a new place in the British museum reading-room catalogue, following Edward VI. As it is anticipated that much may yet be written concerning his present majesty, eight columns have been left blank for the reception of such works. A few columns contain all that has been written about the previous Edwards. Formerly the king figured in the catalogue as Albert Edward, prince of Wales.

POCKETS FOR THIEVES.

Secret Receptacles in Their Clothes in Which Emergency Funds Are Stored Away.

"You forgot to put a 'plant pocket' in the vest," said a short, thick-set man, as he examined his new waistcoat in a Dearborn street tailor shop. "Did you think because I have quit the road that I didn't need a 'plant pocket' any longer? Put one in, and I'll stop in to-morrow and get the togs."

After he had gone the tailor explained what was meant by a "plant pocket," says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"That fellow," said the tailor, "used to be a safe robber, and I've made his clothes for the last 15 years. Every 'good' thief, no matter what line he follows, has a secret pocket made in the back of his vest on the under side, and in it he always keeps a 'plant.' In the language of a thief, a 'plant' is a hiding place for money. Sometimes he has $100, or perhaps more, in the 'plant,' according to how 'graft' has been with him. The reason for a 'plant pocket' is that a known thief is liable to be arrested any time, and when taken to the police station is searched for valuables. Thieves, as a rule, are superstitious about having their money counted by policemen. They say it brings bad luck. Sometimes when they are released they don't get back as much as they had when arrested. If a thief is found with $100 on him it very often costs him half the amount to secure his freedom. For that reason the 'plant pocket' was invented a good many years ago by the man who was just in here.

"The 'plant pocket,'" continued the tailor, "is not confined to crooks and confidence men. A great many gamblers and sporting men have adopted the secret pocket in the last few years. Like thieves, they are considered legitimate prey by many policemen, and are put through the shaking-down process at regular intervals. A thief or gambler would rather go hungry than break into his 'plant,' because when once he starts he doesn't stop until it is all gone.

"That man who refused to take the vest because it didn't have a 'plant pocket' gave up safe robbing two or three months ago, and is now keeping a saloon on the West side. When he ordered a suit the other day I thought he would have no need of a 'plant pocket,' having quit the road, but you heard what he said. He isn't going to take any chances with the shakedown men in the police department, even if he has reformed."

Ideals.

Still they regarded the Armless Wonder distrustfully.

"The money all passed through your hands!" they insisted.

"Ah, yes," rejoined he. "But don't you see that I should have been false to my professional ideals had I permitted any of it to stick to my fingers?"

Hereupon, with these high assurances, they were content; all except the Circassian Princess, who had been reared upon a New England farm and had accordingly but an inadequate conception of genuine devotedness to art.—Detroit Journal.

"I should say he wasn't," replied the clerk. "Why, when I asked him confidentially if he'd like the bridal-chamber, he said: 'Sure!' and seemed tickled to death."—Puck.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

"Dont Speak to me."

All manner of extravagant expressions are possible when a woman's nerves are overwrought.

The spasm at the top of the wind pipe or bronchial tubes, "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart, laughing and crying by turns, muscular spasms (throwing the arms about), frightened by the most insignificant occurrences—are all symptoms of a hysterical condition and serious derangement of the female organs.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Lewis Says: "I Feel Like a New Person, Physically and Mentally."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For years I had ovarian trouble and suffered everything from nervousness, severe headache, and pain in back and abdomen. I had consulted different physicians, but decided to try your medicine, and I soon found it was giving me much relief. I continued its use and now am feeling like a new person, physically and mentally, and am glad to add one more testimonial to the value of your remedy."—MRS. M. H. LEWIS, 2108 Valentine Ave., Tremont, New York, N. Y.

Writing to Mrs. Pinkham is the quickest and surest way to get the right advice about all female troubles. Her address is Lynn, Mass. She advises women free. Following is an instance:

Mrs. Haven's First Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I would like your advice in regard to my troubles. I suffer every month at time of menstruation, and flow so much and for so long that I become very weak, also get very dizzy. I am troubled with a discharge before and after menses, have pains in ovaries so bad sometimes that I can hardly get around, have sore feeling in lower part of bowels, pain in back, bearing-down feeling, a desire to pass urine frequently, with pains in passing it; have leucorrhœa, headache, fainting spells, and sometimes have hysteria. My blood is not in good condition. Hoping to hear from you, I am," MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (June 3, 1899.)

Mrs. Haven's Second Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for what your medicine has done for me. I suffered for four years with womb trouble. Every month I flowed very badly. I got so bad that I could hardly do my work. Was obliged to sit or lie down the most of the time. I doctored for a long time, but obtained no relief. I began using your remedies—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier, Sanative Wash and Liver Pills—and now feel like a new woman."—MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (Feb. 1, 1900.)

DELANO, FRIDAY, MAY 10, 1901.

DELANO DIARY

Things Delano Needs.

The Cargill Elevator moved from corner of Third Street crossing.

Good well water in the water system.

Back doors to the school house.

More play ground for children.

A gynasium.

A reading room.

A village park.

—The Owl sociable, by the Ladies Aid society at the City Hall Friday night netted a few dollars towards church work.

—Fire Warden Burnes was promptly on hand at the Eagle office after the explosion. He said as there was no fire he had no report to make.

—Tuesday's rain was gladly welcomed by Delanoites. It has been raining most all around us and leaving us dry until Tuesday morning. But things are growing all the same.

—The Delano Cemetery Association held a regular meeting Monday evening at the office of the President. It was voted to have Sexton Belt clean up the grounds before May 30. Also to clean up the river bank adjoining.

—Thomas D. Schall, of the Minnesota University in the Northern Oratorical Contest at Iowa City, last Friday, tied for fifth place. His oration was a defense of Benedict Arnold.

—Some of the High school pupils are satisfied for the village fathers to have "Magnus Caput", others insist that their heads are neuter gender, and that the disease must be "Magnum Caput."

—Arrangements are being made for the usual graduating exercises. Misse M. M. Jones and Nellie Sutton are to graduate and Miss Sanford of the State University is to deliver the addres. Miss Sandford was here before and is sure to have a large audience.

—With the May 2, number of the Willmar Argus, our former fellow townsman, James A. Wharton, retires from the editorial business. He has sold his outfit to the Republican Gazette. He claims that the field is full enough of papers and gracefully steps aside.

—The new arrangements at the Post Office are highly satisfactory to some. Especially so are the provisions for distributing the mail from the east at 10:37 a. m. It is tiresome for dozens of people to wait while one distributor works alone on a big pile of mail and two can get through quicker.

—The Board of Health is to make the annual spring inspection May 15. Look out for your alleys, back yards, cellars and other places that may be called nuisances. Our town is nicely situated and could very easily be kept clean. Let everybody do his share towards having a clean, healthy village.

—The alleys are for travel, and public use. They should be kept free from rubbish, manure, wood, and other obstructions as the streets are. A few careless people leave their wagons and buggies in the alleys as if they thought that was what alleys were made for. The committee on streets and alleys should see to it that the public can travel on the allies if they see fit to.

—The Delano Cemetery Association at the last meeting re-elected C. L. Belt as Sexton to care for the Cemetery. He is to dig the graves, and see that the grounds are in order. No digging is to be allowed without a permit from the board and no teams are to drive onto the grounds. These rules have become necessary owing to the carelessness of some as to the rights of others.

—The Temperance lecturer Rev. Frank A. Scarvie, was at the M. E. church Saturday evening, but owing to the lack of an audience did not lecture. His coming should have been announced in the papers on Thursday and Friday, and then people might have known he was coming. A temperance orator ought not to lack for an audience in Delano. There is plenty of need of his work. If the audence wont come to church he must go where the audience is and open up on them with "shot and shell" and perhaps he can succeed in getting them within "musket range" later on.

—An explosion occurred Wednesday morning at the Eagle office. In the Electrotyping room was a steam radiator used for drying purposes, enclosed in a box. On top of this the workmen often sat to rest. Stanley Day had been sitting there and had just got down and gone across the room when the explosion took place. The box went to pieces, one section of the radiator went up to the ceiling. A good sized marble slab which was on top of the box was broken, and the force of steam thoroughly demonstrated in many ways. A very lucky accident as no one was hurt.

—Farmers are beginning to learn that it pays to raise feed and feed it on the farm. The man whose cow's milk is a little better quality and a little more in quantity than his neighbors is the man who is receiving most per head for his cows from the creamery; and he is generally the man who feeds well, and raises his own feed: so he is saying at both ends of his business, and is better satisfied than those who have to buy feed, sometimes poor feed, and feed short, and get poor milk and not much of it. According to farm papers silos are the the thing, for feeding, if you know how to fix them. If you don't they are a good thing to waste feed. Better learn the business before putting all the feed into a silo.

He that by the plow would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive.

—A little son of Peter Kuka's died last Saturday, of Diphtheria.

—Chas. Weise, Jr. engineer on the G. N. was in a wreck this week, and is laid up with a broken leg at Great Falls.

—The German Church had big a day Sunday. The new bell was dedicated. And in the evening a Boer Missionary preached to a crowded house.

—The Meister Hotel is being reshingled this week.

—The quarantine for smallpox was raised from the premises of Peter Schaust, last Wednesday. The family all but one had the disease.

—Fred Belden has the plan for Al Eppel's new Third Street residence partly completed. It is to be one of the biggest and best houses in the village.

—Miss Colville of Howard Lake did not accept the position of primary teacher and that room has been given to Miss Nellie Bennet and the second primary room to Miss Sophia Schulte, of Henderson, now teaching at Loretto.

—It would be well to use extreme caution about dogs. In St. Paul there has been several cases of hydrophobia among people who had been bitten. On Tusday, Frankie Husted, of Minneapolis seven years old who was bit tenby a strange dog two weeks ago, died.

—Tony Nietzel has something of a reputation as a fisherman, but yesterday morning he broke all his former records by hooking and 80 pound land lubber in the ear: While showing the boys at school how to throw out a trolling line he caught one of his schoolmates, running the hook through the lobe of the ear. The "catch" was lead by the ear to Dr. O'Connor who, unhooked him.

—The largest and most important industry in the state of Maryland is canning. It employs more hands and represents a greater invested capital than any other industrial enterprise. The state bureau of statistics reports that during the year 1900 there were packed in the state 33,600,000 cans of tomatoes, 11,400,000 cans of corn, 11,200,000 cans of peas and 19,000,000 cans of peaches.—Pioneer Press.

If the business is so profitable why not somebody go into it in Delano. We ought to be able to raise and can enough for home consumption. Why ship it from Maryland.

—One of our readers called our attention to an article in the Minneapolis Times which says: "Both foreign and domestic joint stock fire insurance companies lost money on their business in this state last year, according to Commissioner Dearth." Nearly a million more loss this year than last. And as a result perhaps of last year's transactions three or four of the American stock companies have not made application for a renewal of their license for 1901. Our reader significantly radds: This then seems to prove that our so called McKinley prosperity is brought about by fire and sword."

—Lyndale now has a postal route and the Post Office is out of date. It is getting so a farmer can sit at home and read the daily paper; order up his goods by mail, and he don't have to go to town. It will be hard on the country towns. If people order goods by mail they are apt to do so from the merchants whose advertisements they read in the papers. As the city merchants advertise they are apt to get the bulk of the best trade. If country merchants will let people know what they have to sell and prices as the city men do, they may succeed in retaining their share of the trade.

County Cullings.

The sand prairie between here and Buffalo is all right this season and C. D. Fredericks, Walter Burrows and others have crops that are fine.

Rain seems to have fallen pretty generally over the county this week. Though it has been in local showers here and there, it has reached most places. Crops are looking there best.

The Delano Territorial Association celebration is free for all who resided in the territory of Minnesota. Come and bring your dinner and experience. At 12 o'clock M. Saturday May 11, at the City Hall. Hot coffee furnished.

Some plan should be devised whereby a man can pay his tax with county orders when he has them. It looks awfully bad for the County management when a man has to have written across his county orders "Not paid for want of funds." while he has to put up the cash for taxes. It is not right and should be corrected.

The editors have come to the conclusion that they have done the advertising of candidates for office free, about long enough, and under the new election law, it will be necessary for candidates to be known over the county before the primaries are held and it is thought that about 10 cents a line for signed notices of candidacy is the thing. This will give the printers a little chance for cash, and the more candidates and the longer their stories the more ready cash for the printer.

Ida County, (Iowa) Pioneer: Prof. Samuel Calvin, state geologist of Iowa, after a visit to the gold and mineral states of the west, says that Iowa's agricultural fields are far better fortune producers than are the gold and mineral producing states that he visited. He also said that the butter and eggs of Iowa alone exceeded in value three times the gold found annually in Colorado.

Personal.

Joseph H. Wendell, of Buffalo, was in town Monday.

Dr. King, of Minneapolis, visited Delano friends Sunday.

Miss Emma Lord, of Buffalo, visited Delano friends this week.

John Coolen, Jr. of Minot visited Delano friends this week.

Miss Mabel Young returned home from Minneapolis last week.

John Cunningham and family drove to Lake Pulaski Saturday.

Mrs J. W. McDonald and son, of Bemidji visited Delano friends this week.

Miss Webber's mother and brother of Minneapolis came up Saturday for a visit.

Miss Klopsteg's father and brother, of Henderson, came over Saturday for a visit with her.

Miss Gray, primary teacher at Annandale visited her sister Mrs. C. S. Hawker at Delano Monday.

Miss Pardee, of Minneapolis and Miss Frankhouser, of Milwaukee were guests at J. D. Young's Saturday.

James Yancey was in town Wednesday. He tired of city life and returned from Minneto his farm near Armstrong.

John Czock has been made Road Master on the G. N. from Willmar to Wayazata. His family will remain in Delano.

Editors Bauckley, Catlin and Gutzwiller, and J. E. Borsch and Fred Breushaber were County seat visitors Monday.

Mrs. M. A. Chance has returned home from Minneapolis where she has been nursing her grand son Harry Hopper sick with Typhoid Fever. Harry is convalescing.

At the County Seat.

On visiting Buffalo Monday we found the village growing. People seem to be becoming aware that they are destined to live in a good sized village instead of a little country town and have begun to build a little larger. The streets seem to follow the traditional cow path, or Indian trail, and some of them need straightening up and labeling so they can be found when wanted.

The hotels seem to be flourishing, the county seat and summer resort are drawing cards for the hotel business.

At the Court House the officers were in their usual places and smilingly waited upon all comers, except the Treasurer who occasionlly don't smile so blandly when he is obliged to label orders presented. 'Not paid for want of funds." Of course he has to stand the expressions given vent to by those who can't pay their taxes with county orders, His assistant S. W. Junken claims that the county is being "ditched to death." All kinds of claims come in for digging ditches.

The auditor was busy auctioning off a lot of land for delinquent taxes. Among those attending were McCord, of Annandale; Cochrane, Oakley and Pidgeon, of Buffalo; Borsch, Brusehaber and Gutzwiller, of Delano; Brausie and Tarbox of Monticello.

The Wright County Newspaper Association met in the Petit jury room, and held a forenoon and afternoon session. All members were present except Charles, of Howard. Considerable discussion was held over various important subjects. There seemed to nearly an unanious opinion that it be would be best not to raise the price of the papers. So $1. per year will continue to be the price. Five dollars for publishing a Probate notice is to be charged for the three insertions required by law.

Many boats were to be seen out near the middle of the lake, where fishing is good.

John Cady was quite busy attending telephone calls.

Veterinary Surgeon Sutton, of Howard Lake was examined in Judge Cochrane's court and found weak minded. But afer recent experiences in sending patients to Fergus Falls he was sent back to Howard Lake. There should be a place for such cases.

Editorial Thanks.

At the Monday meeting of the Wright County Newspaper Association a committee was appointed to draw a vote of thanks. They did as follows:

"RESOLVED, That this Association tenders to the people of Annandale their thanks for the many courtesies extended to it's members on the occasion of the March meeting at that place. That we highly appreciate the efforts of the business men and their assistants, the Improvement Club to make Annandale affairs completely successful. Cemetery Notice.

Notice is hereby given all persons wishing to bury in the Delano Cemetery that a permit must first be obtained from the Board. Also, that no digging is to be done, in the grounds without a permit. And that no teams are allowed on the grounds. All imfrations of this order will be promptly prosecuted.

By order of the Board.

Broad Axe: The Arkansas state senate has been roundly roasted by the newspapers of the country because it passed an act which requires that every man who wants to consume intoxicating liquor shall pay $5 a year for a license for that privilege. We feel, however, like commending those Arkansas solons. So much time has been spent and so much effort exerted to overcome the evils of intemperance by legislation directed at the man who sells the liquor, that it is now worth while to try the other track and see what can be accomplished by going after the fellow who buys it.

FISHING TIME.

I only wish and wish and wish
That I could fish and fish and fish
I'd like to sit the live long day,
Upon a bale of prairie hay
Down where the river sadly wails,
And fish for suckers and for whales.
'Tis shameful that on this free soil,
A man must toil and toil and toil;
And grunt and swear and strive and groan
And burst his martingale and moan;
Grow old and bald, before his time,
In following the festive dime,
Ah, life would be a pleasant dream,
If one could sit beside a stream,
With rod in hand, at early dawn.
No comrade but his demijohn,
(The latter filled with lemonade)—
To sit there in the drowsy shade—
What higher bliss could mortals wish!
Ah, let us go and fish and fish,

A Warning Voice.

MAPLE PLAIN, May 7.—Spring has come and every thing in nature shows signs of life and animation. And man who was made to have dominion over the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air has to put forth all energy and skill in early spring to sow the grain and plant the crops that he may have a full haryest to reap. I might say this only includes the farmer and producer, and not the combination men, the bankers and men of trusts. They live off of what others produce. They make money off of their money and the producer gets for his fruits of the ground the price established by the corporations and the profits go into the coffers of the few, partly a reserved fund to run political campaigns and to control law making bodies.

A Republic is a form of government controlled by the people with the power to vote and legislate. A monarchy is a government vested in one man, a kingdom

It is becoming the opinion of many in this country that the ideas of the people will revert back to the traditions of their fathers and will advocate the plausibility of a limitable monarchy. This form of government will give the classes a better chance to control the masses. Past history has shown to us that in order to control a large and prosporous nation the people must be first subjugated, brought down to serfdom. This we believe can be done much easier in a tropical climate than in a northern region, but by continued and suppressed conditions which come through the stomach it may be accomplished in any part of world. The old proverb says: "Time works wonders," and in time it is hard to tell what may come to pass even in a free republic like our's. People are becoming thoughtless and careless about their own condition and also the condition of their country, we are trusting too much to ourselves; that is men who are in authority. By extravagance, prodigal waste, in time, the head officials and government syndicates can bankrupt any nation. It is not wise, neither is it good policy to give to your official servants to much elastic string. They are apt to tax its strength until it will finally snap.

For more than a century we have boasted of our strength as a nation. In arms we have bade defiance to the world. Our resources at home are immense. Our railroad and shiping industry leads the world. We have tunneled the earth and built several trans continental lines of railroads. Our educational and church privileges are in the front rank of the leading nations of the the world. And yet with all this we may sometime lose our grip and like Babylon of old be reduced to beggary and our kingdom divided, but we hope that tine may never come.

For all my life I have belonged to the producing class (farmer on a small scale) and with my small might have helped feed the hungry. But we farmers, producers, and men of all work do not have much to say any more what we shall get for our products our labor etc. The small increase the farmer gets in way of prices at the present time for corn, pork, hay, beef, etc, is no comparision to what we farmers have to pay for lumber, nails, fence wire, groceries and all kinds of building material, say nothing about internal revenue and a high tax. The more the producer, the laboring man, and man of all work, is oppressed, the richer the moneyed man gets, fictious speculation in politics and gambling on the nation's credit is worse to the life of a nation than an eating cancer. Nowdays the starched up monkey polition who is looking for an office with a fat salary as an appendage seems to have more control over the minds of the people than a whole regiment of honest, hard working men.

Mr. Editor, many of us fellows are getting tired of being hired men for such fellows as Carnegie, J. P. Morgan Rockefeller and many thousand of their stamp. Oil, steel, iron and lumber go up. Then look out for the endowment of some college institution of learning, or theological seminary where the young student may be trained and educated for the ministry, and as he goes to preach the gospel and tell of the richness of His grace he is expected to keep his mouth shut on the national issues of the day and all vital importance concerning the welfare of the common people.

All of this may be good breakfast food for trusts, combinations and corporations but has no life in it for the men who produce the wealth of the country, fight the battles and pioneer their way to unexplored regions. If we would forever exterminate the fraud, and gambling in politics, convert the people to their honest duty in regard to state and national affairs we would add much that would streghten our form of government but we are fast becoming a people of too many new ideas and sooner or later I fear they will bring a clash that will cause a resort to arms. Tariff Tinkering.

Under the head "A foreigner who understands," the American Economist, of May 10, quotes from Mr. Jules Siegfried, former French Minister of Commerce. Industries and Colonies, now on a visit to this country in the interests of larger trade between United States and France. He is quoted as being on the right track on reciprocity, when he favors the exchange being encouraged more particularly "on line of goods which one country produces and which the other does not produce." He adds: "There are great opportunities for an increased use in France of the American products of iron."

He argues that France will reciprocate if America takes the initiative. Does then Mr. Siegfried think if America will take the tariff off of beet sugar that the Great Consolidated American Iron Industry will find ready sale for its products in France? If he does he is probably not aware that the sugar fellows are ahead on that. They get a bounty from the state for making sugar. And can compete fairly well with cheap foreign labor even though the tariff is off. Wouldn't that be Reciprocity though? Get the French to let our Great Consolidated products into that country free, and reciprocate on beet sugar, while we chip in and help our own sugar factories out of our State treasuries and compel our iron workers to eat our own sugar. Is it any wonder that we can loan gold to England or any other country? And how long will it last? How long will our people be content to work in this way as slaves for the corporations who manipulate the tariff's; who scheme to have paper promises to pay, instead of money, among our own people, while they loan gold to foreign nations? Won't the people get to see this after a while? And won't they be mad about it? And won't they vote to put a stop to such transactions? That is when they find it out. For our Congressman Page Morris don't seem to think the people can see through such things; or rather when he was running for Congress last fall he didn't give them credit for vision in that direction. When he talked about the Porto Rico tariff, he said it was a tariff tax, and the people didn't know when they pald it, if they did pay it, consequently it was all right.

People have been shown these tariff taxes, if they do pay, in so many different lights, that some of then are beginning to see through them and to think perhaps there can be a change for the better. In the language of Lincoln, "You can fool a part of the people all the time; all the people a part of the time; but you can't fool all the people all the time."

If a Few Thousand Boers.

If a few thousand Boers with no bayonets, swords military, music or drill, can defy the whole British Empire at a cost to said Empire already about six hundred millions of dollars, it looks as though the day of brilliant military uniforms, shining swords and military music is about over, and that our young men will begin to realize as they have never before that war (except in defence of one's country) is a very inglorious buisness, mostly murder and always hell.

THE LAY OF A BROKEN LEG.

A SAD STORY OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

JUST a minute or two of your leisure I beg,
To sing you a song of a man's broken leg,
And one of those ultra remarkable cures
That may serve you a turn should you ever break yours.

John Pringle, the grocer, one day put his heel
On the business part of a banana peel;
In declaring what followed I can't be exact,
Suffice it to say Pringle's femur was fract.

When his friends and neighbors had put him to bec
And declared it was lucky it wasn't his head,
They called in a doctor—a lady was she—
Who happened by chance a faith curist to be.

She invoked and demanded Divine intervetion
And turned up her nose at both splint and extension;
Now faith cure, or nature, or some occult spell
Cured Pringle completely, the femur got well—

Grew firm and as strong as a femur could be,
But his leg it was shortened by inches just three;
Good only at fads and at "science" to kick,
While he hobbled about with a crutch a and stick

While Pringle was kicking, one day to him came Another faith curist, who was also a dame:
"The leg is well healed," she was heard to declare,
"To lenghten is simply a matter of prayer.

She left him with promises, went on her way,
And lo! Pringle's leg grew a little each day;
Delighted he watched it as time quickly flew,
And little by little, it lengthened, it grew.

It reached to the other and still it grew stronger,
It passed by its mate, and grew longer and longer.
Poor Pringle was now in the greatest distress,
For the good, praying dame hadn't left her address!

He spent all his money in vain advertising,
Yet still on the leg toward heaven he's rising;
While the lady continues—nobody knows where—
To apply T. I. D. to the leg a good prayer.

Hace fabula docet, that folks should beware
Of applying a remedy powerful as prayer,
For repairing of facture the good Lord intended
That splints should be used and the member extended.

Toad In Too Big a Puddle,

Mr. James J. Hill, discussing the extraordinary events of the past week in the Stock exchange, opened a published interview with the following language:

"This has been terrible work. I can not find words to express my opinion. There are some men in this country tonight who must settle with their consciences and they are welcome to what they will get. I want no money taken as money was taken Thursday. There will be no pocket in my shroud. There are men who have come to believe that money can do anything in this country. If we have reached that point, then money must be shorn by law of its power to do harm. I am willing to see it shorn of such power. I have no wish to have that kind of power."

To this Mr. Hill added immediately his opinion that legislation would be soon adopted which would put an end to such occurrences.—Globe.

Under a head "The Wealthy Dangerous Class," the St. Paul Globe, supposed to be James J. Hill's paper, since he would not sell it to the Chiarman of the Democratic State Central Committee, has the above, and then in nearly a column whacks away at editors and others who sustained the men Mr. Hillcompians of.

The whole mess, Mr. Hill's interview as given by the Globe, and the Globe editorials are real amusing reading to most people in this section of country.

They simply show that the toad got into too big a puddle. That every man has his match somewhere, and Mr. Hill's very thorough conversion to the belief that "There are men who have come to believe that money can do anything in this country," is more due to his experience than to any particular pricks of conscience he may have had. His determination that "There will be no pocket in my shroud," must have been formed fully as recently as his conversion to the belief about men and money, and at the same time when he concluded that "I am willing to see money shorn of such power."

Heretofore people have, along the line of the G. N., looked upon Mr. Hill as perfectly willing to shear men of money, and to be about as arbitrary, and as monarchial in his dealings as a man could, and shear men of money.

If Mr. Hill's conversion is thorough as it seems; and he don't backslide, it may, if he still keeps in control of the G. N., be a blessing to the people, employees and all, along the line. May he continue in the faith and adhere to the determination that "There will be no pocket in my shroud." "I have no wish to have that kind of power." and all the people will say, Amen!

The Day's Demand.

God give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and willing hands,
Men whom the lust for office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of the office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking;
Tall men, sun crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking
For while the rabble, with their thumb worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife. Lo! freedom weeps;
Wrong rules the land, and waiting justice sleeps.

Lester Prairie News: Some of Bob Dunn's henchmen are agian talking of him in connection with the governorship two years hence. If Bob Dunn is nominated there will be a whole lot of Republican votes missing from this locality.

Sherburne County News: If there is any truth in newspaper reports, President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern, is eligible to membership in the Minnesota editorial association. That he is owner of the St. Paul Globe is not denied, and it is said that he controls the Pioneer Prees, St. Paul Dispatch and Minneapolis Tribune. If this be true, the next thing we may look forward to is the consolidation of all these newspapers under one management.

Backbone: There is nothing inherently wrong or unholy about politics. If politics is dirty it is because we have befouled it. There is no person and no place too sacred for the obligations of clean citizenship. Show me a man who objects that politics should not be mixed with religion and I will show you a man who is conscious that either his politics is wrong or his religion is bad Religion and politics, I repeat, in the highest sense are one and the same thing, and the greatest single cause of all our troubles and civil ills is that we have imagined they are different. If our religion is not able to bring our politics up to its own plane, our politics will be sure to drag our religion down to its plane. That is what is the matter with the church. It is also what is the matter with the state. Double dealing with God dosn't work. No man can be all right in his private duty to God and all wrong in his public duties to his fellow man —Lee L. Grumbine in The People.

A RACE WITH TIME

BEING A TALE OF A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

"RUNNING battle in the streets of Summitville between citizens and bandits last night. Several people killed. Plan to loot town."

The message came in from an Indiana town late one afternoon. The office expert on time tables went to work at once and figured out that there was just time to catch the famous world's fair flyer which ran between Chicago and New York. The staff correspondent, with telegraph operator and an assistant, was sent post-haste to catch that train, with instructions to get off at Valparaiso and take an accommodation train which left Summitville half an hour later. He was to get an account of what had happened there, and get it into the office by telegraph before midnight without fail.

At the station in Chicago it developed that the flyer was not scheduled to stop until it reached Cleveland. An interview with the engineer developed that the train slowed up at Valparaiso for some purpose or other, and that a quick man, who was willing to run some chances, might get off there.

"I guess there won't nobody stop you, boys," said the engineer as he swung up into the cab. "We're slowed down at Valparaiso so a man can jump off if he has a mind to."

On the way down through the Indiana sand dunes, with the big mogul engine doing its 50 miles an hour, a local time table was found which showed that the time of the accommodation train had been changed. Instead of leaving half an hour after the flyer was due, it was scheduled to pull out for Summitville in less than ten minutes.

"Yes," said a railroad man who happened to be on board, "and the depots are nearly a mile apart, at that."

As the flyer began to slow up at Valparaiso the three men who were bound for Summitville jumped off the rear coach and ran to the station. Not a hack or other public vehicle was in sight.

Backed up to the depot platform was a light delivery wagon with a lanky white mare hitched to it. The three men clambered into the back of this wagon and started at a gallop for the other station, in front of which the accommodation train was already standing. As the old mare started on a jump the terrified boy ran out of the station depot and just managed to catch the tailboard of the wagon. In a minute he was in the drivers' seat. Fortunately he was a youth who could rise to an emergency.

"Five dollars if you get us to that station in time," he was told, and a peeled hickory switch put added vigor into the mare's leaps. Right through the center of the town went the wild race, and people hung out of the windows and ran into the streets to watch the chase. Every time a crossing was passed the whole outfit bounced high into the air and "A dollar more if you drive a little faster" some one gasped as it struck the ground again. For the accommodation train had already got steam up and was beginning to show plain signs of impatience.

Boy and mare both did their best and the three men were just able to climb on the rear platform of the accommodation train as it pulled out for Summitville.

"I GUESS THERE WON'T NOBODY STOP YOU, BOYS."

What happened to the grocer's boy when he got back with his jaded mare is still an unsettled question. Nor did the boy or the people who watched with startled eyes the flight of the gaunt white mare even now know what was the emergency which made the mad chase necessary. There were three cars on the accommodation train to Summitville. In them there were perhaps 30 people all told. A quick canvass of the train proved that not a person on board had even heard of any disturbance at Summitville, which village the train was not due to reach until 10:30 o'clock. By that time of the night it was likely that everybody in town would be sound asleep. To wake them up and wait to get their stories would mean a long delay and probably make it impossible to get a long telegram into the office by midnight. A council of war was held and the three men determined that something must be done to hurry things along.

Finally a telegram was prepared and sent to the mayor of Summitville, asking him if he would be kind enough to meet the train when reached the depot on a matter of great importance connected with the battle of the previous night.

At a station a few miles above Summitville a man got on the train who, on being questioned, proved to know, in a general way, the story of the fight. He told in a graphic way how the bandits had come into the village, only to fall into the ambush which had been carefully prepared for them.

As soon as the staff correspondent had got the leading facts clear in his mind he started to write his story.

"Now," he said, "if the mayor doesn't go back on us, and we get a telegraph wire, we'll pull through all right."

"I'll get a wire of I have to climb a pole and cut one down," said the operator of the party.

At last the poky train came puffing up to the little red station at Summitville. It was several minutes late, but the first glance showed that great excitement prevailed about the station. Right nobly had the mayor of the village responded to the telegraphic appeal which had been sent him.

He stood at one end of the station platform. Next him was the town marshal, wearing a huge star and conscious that he was the hero of the exciting battle of the night before. In the same row were the town aldermen and most of the other dignitaries of the village—men who had been "laying out nights," armed to the teeth, for nearly a week, waiting for the raid which had finally come.

The three men leaped from the train and each rushed to his work.

"HERE, GIMME HOLD OF THAT KEY."

One of the correspondents began with the mayor and went down the line as rapidly as possible, getting his story from each. The other ran into the station and sat down at once to complete the story he had begun on the train. The telegraph operator jumped into the little room where the astonished railroad operator and agent were sitting and took his place at the telegraph instrument. There was no time to be lost.

"Here, gimme hold of that key," said the man from Chicago, and the Hoosier instantly obeyed.

With the speed of an expert he commenced to call Chicago. He wanted to get a wire leading directly into the office of his newspaper. But some one was persistently interrupting. He listened long enough to catch what was wanted.

It was the operator in the office of a rival newspaper which had got wind of the battle at Summitville too late to send down a correspondent.

"Rumor pitched battle in the streets of Summitville," ran the query. "Send good story, 2,500 words, if correct."

The man at the Summitville key smiled viciously, looked around for an instant without saying anything, and then rattled his key fiercely for a moment.

"Say," he said, finally, "the other papers just asked about a pitched battle of some kind down here. I told them they must be mistaken. That everything was quiet and peaceful here to-night. Nothing doing except an ice-cream party up to the parsonage. I asked 'em if they didn't want a good story on that."

"All right," said the staff correspondent, handing over a dozen pages of "copy." "Start that as soon as you can get a loop into the office." A moment later and the story was running into the office as fast as an expert could send it over the wires. The second correspondent had interviewed practically every prominent citizen of the village, and what he had written followed fast on the first. By a few minutes after midnight more than 4,000 words were in the office, and a few minutes later the story had been put into type and was on the presses.

When the operator at Summitville had sent "30" over the wire, which is the telegraphic way of saying "good night," the mayor of Summitville gave further evidence of his desire to be accommodating. He found good sleeping quarters for the Chicago men and invited them to stay over Sunday and take dinner with him.—Chicago Tribune.

Denounce President for Drinking.

Worcester, Mass., May 13.—At the monthly meeting of Methodist ministers in Trinity church to-day, a clergyman said that an eye witness had told him that President McKinley drank a glass of champagne on board a battleship. Strike Won.

The first of the labor trouble to effect St. Peter this year occurred at the Omaha station last week, when the section crew went out on a strike. They had been receiving $1.25 per day for their services and deeming this inadequate they demanded $1.50 per day, and they struck. For several days Nick Luscomb, the foreman, was the entire crew and unable to adjust matters on any other basis the road accepted the ultimation and yielded. The crew has since returned to work at $1.50 per day.—St. Peter Herald.

COMPENSATION.

Who fails to sow for fear that he Shall not be here to reap
Must lie in bleak obscurity
Through all his final sleep.
The bard who sang, long, long, ago,
When no one lent an ear,
Sang on for love of singing, though
They scoffed who chanced to hear.
Today men seek his grave and bow
Beside his monument—
We laud the noble poet now
Who couldn't pay his rent.

Who idly stands and shakes his head
And sighs and murmurs: "No!
Ere reaping time I shall be dead.
Why bother, then, to sow?"
For him no shaft shall ever rise
To claim the pilgrim's gaze,
No love shall center where lies,
No honor crown his days!
Who plants, has hope, and though he may
Not see the fruitful fall,
He has foreseen a glorious day,
And triumphs, after all.

Broad Axe: Chicago with its ouru deal and even New York with its stock craze are not so wild as Texas with its oil boom. The speculative madness which is raging in that and adjacent states, with Beaumont for its center, is something well nigh unprecedented in the records of speculation. New oil companies are forming daily. Every man or two or three men who have money enough to buy a few acres of ground adjacent to the oil wells organize a company and sell stock for what they can get. One thing they will surely get is their eye teeth cut.

Over 8,000 miles of new steam railway will be constructed in the United States this year. Oklahoma and Indian Territory are on the list for 612 miles.

On the battleship Maine, sunk in Havana harbor, are 162 complete engines, and the contractor who is raising the wreck is confident that all are uninjured. The ship is worth $2,000,000 if she can be patched up.

Dr. Gatling, the inventor of the gun of that name, has literally fulfilled the prophecy relative to turning the engines of destruction into agricultural implements by inventing a horseless plow. It is an automatic plow—fire it up and start it and the plow does the rest.

A street railway in a suburb of San Francisco is operated by electricity generated in a swift river 140 miles distant and with a loss of only five per cent. in power. At this rate every mountain cascade can be harnessed to turn the wheels of industry scores of miles away.

Now we are to have pneumatic eggs. A man in Tiffin, O., is feeding his hens on powdered india rubber and the misguided fowls are producing rubber-covered eggs. The ingenuous account of this phenomenon says that the sulphur in the eggs vulcanizes the rubber to a hardness which preserves the egg. It is a significant fact that this man was formerly an actor.

In a burst of generosity, Gov. Stanley, of Kansas, last month offered silver mugs to all triplets born in his administration. He has just been compelled to order his sixth consignment of mugs and is now in an embarrassing predicament, as he has discovered that the competition is likely to cost more than he can afford to pay out of his salary of $3,000 a year.

It appears from some statistics published recently regarding the consumption of alcoholic drinks in the United States that the greatest consumption was in the year 1893, when the hard times struck the country, the consumption per capita being 18.20 gallons, of which 16.20 gallons was beer. In 1899 the consumption per capita was 16.80 gallons, of which 15.28 gallons was beer.

The fire which swept Jacksonville, Fla., wiping out the best portion of the city, destroying many public buildings and leaving 10,000 of the inhabitants without homes, will be remembered as among the most disastrous known since the great fire in Chicago in 1871 and the Boston catastrophe of 1872. The sympathy for the thousands who are thus bereft of homes will be widespread.

A table published in the annual report of the department of agriculture is enlightening as to the amount of money the people of the United States spent in purchasing favorite flowers at retail in 1899—roses, $6,000,000; carnations, $4,000,000; violets, $750,000; chrysanthemums, $500,000; miscellaneous, including lilies, $1,250,000. These vast sums found their way into the pockets of nearly 100,000 producers and dealers.

A curious marriage was recently celebrated at Grocholetz, in Poland, where a peasant at the age of 84 led to the altar a maiden of 18 summers. Among the 200 guests invited to the wedding were 11 sons of the bridegroom by former marriages, the eldest being 60 years old and the youngest 41. There were also 63 grandchildren, 39 great-grandchildren, 21 children of the fourth generation and four of the fifth.

Scientists say that recent floods in the Ohio river valley have been caused by forest denudation. During the past half century the forests of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia have been cut down and the hillsides are now bare. In the days of the forests and underbrush there was something to hold back and gradually release the water from rains and melting snows, but now there is nothing but barren hills, and the water goes off with such a rush that the rivers are overtaxed and floods result.

An ear specialist recently visited Mr. Edison, the famous inventor, and offered to cure him of deafness. "What!" exclaimed Mr. Edison, "and give up the great advantage I have! Why, I need it in my business—for, you see, my business is thinking, and, no matter what the rest of you are doing or how much noise you are making, it doesn't bother me, and I am able to concentrate my mind fully upon the subject in hand without interruption." Other inventors will now seek the specialist to have dampers put in their ears.

Mr. Willfred Sharp, of Minnesota, asks: "If an old soldier goes to Canada, takes the oath of allegiance and becomes an English subject, can he still continue to draw his pension?" Yes. The United States pays the pension for what the veteran has done in years gone by, not for what he is going to do. Over 2,000 comrades are now living in Canada and drawing pensions from the United States, and about 5,000 are drawing pensions in all the foreign countries—including about 400 in England, about 500 in Ireland and about 600 in Germany.

MRS. M'KINLEY ILL.

President Has to Disappoint Several Towns Which Had Arranged to Receive Him.

San Francisco, May 13.—The sudden illness of Mrs. McKinley has caused an unexpected change in the itinerary of President McKinley. He arrived in this city quietly Sunday afternoon, several hours ahead of the time scheduled. The state of Mrs. McKinley's health was such Sunday morning that the president decided to leave Del Monte and bring his wife to this city immediately, to the home of Henry T. Scott, where she could have complete rest for a few days and where a specialist could be consulted if necessary. A special of two cars and a locomotive was made up from the president's special and at 12:30 o'clock the president, Mrs. McKinley, Miss Barber, the president's niece, Secretary Cortelyou and wife, Dr. Rixey and Mr. H. T. Scott and wife left Del Monte for San Francisco, leaving the remainder of the presidential party at Del Monte.

San Francisco, May 14.—President McKinley returned late Monday afternoon from San Jose to the bedside of his wife at the Scott residence. Secretary Cortelyou said Monday night: "Mrs. McKinley rested well and comfortable to-day."

San Jose, Cal., May 14.—Thousands of people between Delmonte and San Jose, who have been anticipating a sight of the president for months, were disappointed Monday. The president's presence in San Jose for an hour in the afternoon took the edge off of the disappointment here, where the rose carnival was being held in his honor and where the floral display surpassed anything ever before seen in this part of the country. After leaving Delmonte in the morning the cabinet carried out the itinerary as originally planned, stopping at Pajaro and Santa Cruz and visiting the big trees in the San Lorenzo valley, but they had no heart to put into the festivities in the absence of their chief and the keen regret of the people was written on their countenances. Many expressions of kindly sympathy for Mrs. McKinley were heard at each stopping place.

SNAG SINKS A BOAT.

Steamer City of Paducah Goes to the Bottom—Disaster on the Mississippi River.

St. Louis, May 14.—A special to the Post-Dispatch from Grand Tower, Ill., says: The steamer City of Paducah sank in 25 feet of water five minutes before ten o'clock Sunday night, in less than five minutes after striking a snag, while backing out from Brunkhorst Landing.

Fifteen lives were lost. Six of these were white persons and nine were negroes. All were members of the crew except two, who were passengers, and whose bodies have been recovered. Seven members of the crew are missing. All of the boat's officers were saved.

First Mate Tobias Royal, of St. Louis, says only about 12 passengers were on board, and all were saved except two.

Sent to Prison.

New York, May 14.—Charles R. Westervelt, the defaulting cashier of the Dime savings bank of Newark, N. J., was arraigned Monday before Justice Skinner in that city. He retracted a plea of not guilty to the charge of embezzlement and entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment by the court. He had several days ago pleaded guilty to two indictments for forgery and uttering. On these indictments he was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. The two terms of imprisonment are not concurrent and he will have to serve both terms.

Omaha Wide Open.

Omaha, Neb., May 13.—Omaha resumed its normal wide open condition Sunday, Mayor Moore's blue law enforcement having been declared off. The saloons and gambling houses did their customary business. The weather was perfect and the beer gardens were crowded. Mayor Moore expressed his satisfaction with the resumption of a liberal policy.

Population of England and Wales.

London, May 10.—According to the returns of this year's census the total population of England and Wales is 32,525,716. This is an increase over the population of 1891 of 3,523,191, or, in other words, an increase of 12.15 per cent. in the last ten years. The increase for the decade between 1881 and 1891 was 11.65 per cent.

Saved by Morgan.

London, May 14.—J. P. Morgan averted disaster threatened at London because of a corner in Northern Pacific. With the backing of Rothschilds and other financiers he brought about delay in deliveries and suspension of buying of the stock. He loaned his shares to shorts for nothing.

Woman Suffragists to Meet.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 11.—The general officers of the National American Woman Suffrage association have issued a call for the thirty-third annual convention, which will be held in the First Baptist church in this city from May 30 to June 5 inclusive.

SHAMROCK II. IS BEATEN.

Result of Trial Race Between Old and New Challenger Is Disappointing.

Weymouth, May 14.—The Shamrock I. beat the Shamrock II. by five minutes over a 20-mile course.

The weather conditions were all favorable for a fair trial, with the wind fresh and steady, the course clear of all obstructions and no tides of any consequence. The Shamrock I. Monday beat Sir Thomas Lipton's new boat by five minutes and five seconds over a triangular course of about 20 miles. The only possible disadvantage to the challenger was in the fact that she used her old mainsail, which sits worse since its salt water bath of Thursday. There was no discoverable holding back of the challenger, although once or twice she pointed such a course as left the suspicion that the steersman was not taking advantage of every chance. There is no doubt the result of Monday's trial was distinctly disappointing to those who had pinned their faith to the new challenger.

RIDE PROVES FATAL.

Trolley Car Strikes Wagon Filled with Merrymakers—Sad Disaster on Long Island.

New York, May 13.—Of the 26 young people who started from College Point, L. I., Saturday night on what is locally known as a "star light" ride, two were carried home Sunday morning dead, five are in the hospital, four were allowed to leave the hospital after having their wounds dressed, and everyone of the remainder were more or less bruised. A collision with a trolley car caused the accident. The dead are Michael Schneir and Joseph Pickel. The merrymakers were on their way to a hotel ten miles away, where they were to have a dance. They were all in one wagon, the bottom of which had been filled with straw. It was almost midnight when they reached Distler's hotel, on the edge of Jamaica. When in front of the house the driver of the wagon tried to cross the tracks of a trolley line in front of an approaching car, but the car struck the rear end of the wagon.

SAD FATE OF A HERO.

Colored Man Loses His Life to Save a Fellow Workman in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—William Phelps, of Richmond, Ky., and James Stansbury, of this city, were cleaning the inside of an eight-foot upright boiler at the Cerealine mills Sunday afternoon when an employe turned on the steam, thinking the cock was tight. It leaked and the scalding steam poured in on the two men. The only exit was up a ladder to a manhole in the top. Buth jumped for the ladder. Phelps reached it first, took one step and stopped. He jumped aside and shouted: "You go first, Jim, you are married." Stansbury sprang up the ladder and escaped with slight burns about the face and legs. Though Phelps followed at his heels, his act of heroism cost him his life.

ULTIMATUM FOR SULTAN.

Powers Will Not Take His Trifling Over His Interference with Foreign Mails.

Paris, May 14.—The correspondent here of the press learns on trustworthy authority that unless the sultan of Turkey yields on the question of interference with the foreign post offices the powers probably will present an ultimatum in a few days, backed by a naval demonstration. The powers, including Germany, are acting in perfect unison in this matter.

Revolution Spreading.

Berlin, May 14.—The St. Petersburg corrsepondent of the Lokal Anzeiger says: "The revolutionary movement among the laboring classes of Russia is spreading. There have been 400 arrests of operatives during the last few days and a number of editors, as well as women, have been arrested. Two professors, who were placed under arrest, have been transferred to positions in the interior."

Japanese Premier Resigns.

Washington, May 14.—The resignation of Marquis Ito, premier in the cabinet of Japan, has been announced to the Japanese legation here. Marquis Ito submitted his resignation last Friday, and was the only one of the cabinet officers to retire. He is succeeded by Marquis Saionji, one of the counselors of the emperor and a former minister of foreign affairs.

Admitted by Esterhazy.

Brussels, May 13.—The Independence Belge publishes affidavits signed by Count Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy before the French consul in London admitting the authorship of the Dreyfus bordereau and declaring that the bordereau was written with the connivance of Col. Sandher, ex-chief of the secret intelligence bureau.

Revolutionary Macedonians Shot.

Vienna, May 13.—A dispatch to the Abendblatt from Constantinople announces the wholesale shooting of revolutionary Macedonians, including women. Twenty-four persons were executed at Monastir, 14 at Beria, 18 at Iating, 18 at Seres and 29 at Uskub.

DANDRUFF WON'T WASH OUT.

The Germ That Causes It Has to Be Destroyed, to Cure Dandruff.

Many a woman spends an hour twice a week scouring her scalp, thinking scrubbing off the scurf will cure the dandruff. Two hours a week, at the age of 40 years, she has spent 260 days of 12 hours each, or two-thirds of a year of her life, in that vain hope; vain, because you can't cure dandruff without killing the dandruff germ, and the only hair preparation on earth that will do that is Newbro's "Herpicide"—also a delightful hair dressing, and thorough antiseptic against all contagion from use of others' hair brushes. It is also a delightful hair dressing.

PERIODS OF PAIN.

How Three Women Found Relief.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to have been the plan of nature that woman should suffer so severely. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It relieves the condition which produces so much discomfort and robs menstruation of its terrors.

The three letters here published should encourage every woman who suffers:

Aug. 6, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered since the age of sixteen with painful menstruation. I have been treated for months, and was told that the womb had fallen a little. The doctor says that is now in place again, but I still have the same pain. Please tell me what to do."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Jan. 19, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—After receiving your reply to my letter of Aug. 6 I followed your kind advice, and am glad to tell you that I have been cured of the severe pain at time of menstruation through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it, felt better after the first bottle, and after a while had no more pain or womb trouble.

"I had doctored from the age of sixteen to twenty-six, and had lost all hope, but your medicine has made me well.

"I would like to have you use my testimonial, so that others may see, and be inspired with hope, and take your medicine."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Feb. 20, 1900.

"I saw your medicine so highly recommended I thought I would write to you for advice.

"My menstruation occurs every two weeks, lasts a week, and is painful. I have been troubled in this way for some time. I suffer from sick headache and backache all the time, appetite poor, sick at stomach every morning, everything I eat hurts me, am very weak, thin, and sallow.

"I have tried a doctor, but he did not seem to do me any good."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

April 23, 1900.

"Since receiving your answer to my letter I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. My menses are all right now, and appear once a month, and I feel so much stronger. I shall always praise your medicine."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD. 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

"I was troubled with female weakness, irregular and painful menstruation, and leucorrhoea. The doctor's medicine did me no good. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and thanks to your medicine, my pains are gone. I advise all women suffering as I have to use your Vegetable Compound."—EMMA J. PRIBBLE, Indianola, Ill.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

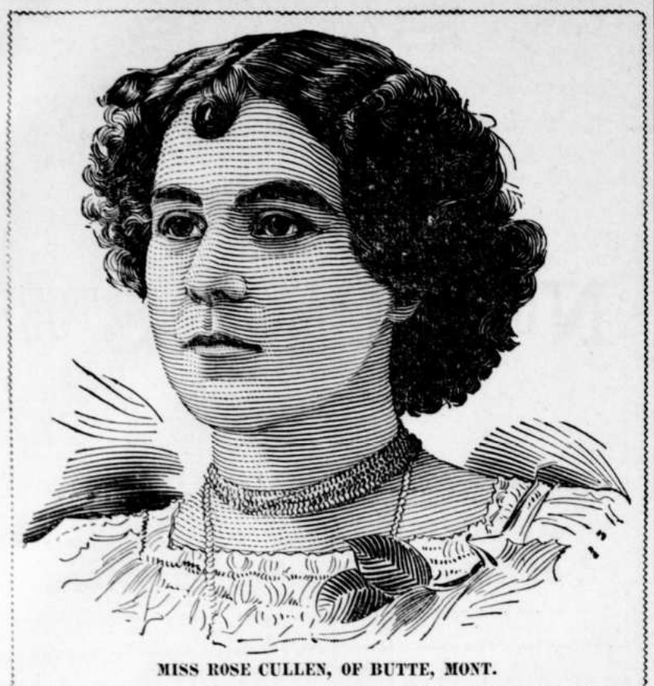
A GIFTED AND BEAUTIFUL GIRL

Threatened With Nervous Prostration,

PROMPTLY SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.



MISS ROSE CULLEN, OF BUTTE, MONT.

Miss Rose Cullen, President Young Woman's Club, of Butte, Mont., writes from 921 Galena street, as follows:

"Peruna has many friends in Butte. I cannot say too much in praise of it. While finishing school I became very nervous and exhausted from over-study. I was weak and sick, and could neither eat, sleep, nor enjoy life. A couple of bottles of Peruna put new life in me. I find that having it in the house and taking a dose off and on keeps me in fine health.

"A large number of my friends place Peruna at the head of all medicines."—Miss Rose Cullen.

How Peruna Quickly Cures Backache, the Bane of Womankind.

MRS. G. W. HEARD, Hempstead, Texas, writes:

"We have moved recently, and I must have lifted something that was too heavy for me in straightening things up, for I had such a backache and could hardly stand on my feet at all. Beside, I was so tired all the time. My face was spotted and I was very thin. I took one bottle of Peruna and was soon real well. When I feel tired and all run down I take Peruna and feel all right before I finish one bottle. I know it is a wonderful medicine, and both myself and husband praise Peruna.

"There has been a great deal of sickness through this part of the country, but, thanks to Peruna, which we use freely, our own family has escaped with almost no sickness at all.

"Could you but see our baby Ruby (to whom we gave Peruna for bowel trouble), you would see from her robust looks that you need no better advertisement in this little town. She is so fat and rosy, is nearly five years old now, and is a great believer in Peruna."—Mrs. G. W. Heard.

Given Up to Die—All Doctors Failed—It Proved to be Catarrh of Stomach and Was Cured by Peruna.

W. A. Mitchell, dealer in general merchandise, of Martin, Ga., writes:

"I wrote you some time ago concerning my wife's case. She had tried all of the best doctors, and we got to where we thought all they did was against her. She weighed about 190 pounds when she was in good health. When she commenced with our family physician in April, 1898, she weighed about 130, but kept going down all the time. She went to Atlanta, Ga., and took treatment, but it did her no good. Then she went to Harmony Grove, Ga., and took treatment from the best physician there for three months. She kept going down under his treatment, although he was considered the best physician in the county. She went down from 130 pounds to 68, and we saw she could not live long. She was a skeleton. We consulted an old physician who told her to use Peruna. She gradually improved and got stronger. She has gained 38 pounds since she has taken Peruna, and is gaining every day, and does her own housework.

"She was well known when she was so low, and now everybody wants to know what cured her. She had indigestion and catarrh of the stomach. It is as good for children as for grown people. We haven't had to have a doctor for one of our children since 1898."—W. A. Mitchell.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Of Mixed Nationality.

The usual humorous incidents were not lacking in the recently taken British census. An emigrant in New Zealand stated to the authorities that his mother was a Kaffir, his father an Irishman who had become a naturalized American, but afterward served in the French army, and that he himself was born on the passage between Yokohama and Colombo in a Spanish vessel. "Put him down a Scotchman!" was the official decision.—Chicago Chronicle.

A Welcome Visitor.

"Sarah, what you wake me up so airly fer?" asked the irate husband, sitting up in bed and rubbing his eyes.

"I wake you up," replied his wife, "kaze dey is a big kingsnake quoiled up at yo' feet!"

"Le'm stay dar!" said the husband, addressing himself to sleep again. "Dey ain't no harm in him; he'll keep all de rattlesnakes f'um me!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Everybody Happy.

A gentleman who had been intrenched behind a newspaper in a crowded car happened to look out of the tail of his eye and to see a lady standing whom he knew.

He rose and was about to offer the lady his seat when a colored man, who thought he was vacating his seat, slipped into it.

"Look here," said the riser, "I was going to give that seat to this lady."

The colored man instantly arose with a profound bow.

"Suttinly, sah," he said, "I'm something of a lady's man myself, sah."

And the lady was bowed into her seat amid smiles all around.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

First Landing.

Warren Upham, secretary of the State Historical society, has been exploring the first ground that feet of white man trod in Minnesota. It is Prairie island in the Mississippi river, between Hastings and Red Wing, 10 miles long and 2½ miles wide. Two Frenchmen visited the island in 1655, with about 150 Indians, and passed an entire summer there. A copy of the manuscript report of the trip to the island, and two other visits which followed it, which was written soon after the occurrences, was hidden in England until 16 years ago, when it was secured and published by the historical society of Massachusetts. A copy was recently secured by the Minnesota society. Mr. Upham's visit to the island was for the purpose of verifying statements made in the manuscript. He proved the existence of the fireplace built on the island by LeSueur in 1695, which was unearthed by farmers while plowing this spring. The clay was found intact, and thoroughly baked.

Parole for Younger Brothers.

At a regular meeting of the board of managers of the state prison unanimous action was taken in favor of paroling the Younger boys, now serving life sentences.

Before the parole can be effective all three members of the state pardon board must approve it, and the action will be submitted to that body as soon as possible. This is in accordance with the provisions of the new parole law, which allows parole to life prisoners after about 24 years' imprisonment, being 33 years, less time gained by good behavior.

Paroles are usually granted by the prison managers alone, but in case of life prisoners unanimous approval of the board of pardons is also necessary, and such paroled life prisoners cannot leave the state.

The pardon board does not meet regularly until in July, but a special meeting may be called if the members of the board consider one necessary.

Will Enforce the Law.

May Porter is the first person to be indicted in Minnesota on the statutory provision which makes it a felony for a person to attempt to commit suicide. The law has been on the books for many years, but has never been resorted to before.

The young woman, aged 19, is said to have become despondent because she was jilted by her lover, who was a train dispatcher. She jumped into Howard lake from an embankment, where the water is deep, but was rescued by fishermen.

The girl was taken to the Hennepin county jail, where she is being held until her trial comes on in Howard Lake.

In Doubt.

Evidently the state administration is more disturbed over the defect in the title of the bill creating the board of control than has been thought. It will likely be necessary for each of the separate boards of the state to follow the example set by the Owatonna training school trustees in pledging themselves to "recognize the intention" of the legislature in framing the law and not acting upon a strict interpretation of it. The administration intends to have the bill take effect just the same, and the Owatonna school adopted the resolution.

News in Brief.

License to practice medicine was restored to Dr. Edward M. Flint by Gov. Van Sant.

The Wabasha County Fair association has incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000.

Burglars took $700 worth of silverware from the residence of E. W. Folsom, in Minneapolis.

The B. C. R. & N. railway will come to Minneapolis by the way of St. Paul, over the Milwaukee tracks.

A factory will be established in Minneapolis to make a substitute for coffee.

A company has been formed in Minneapolis to manufacture stoves to burn lignite coal.

The dead body of Chris Schultz, aged 73 years, was found in the barn of John Crosby's summer residence beyond Wayzata.

The executive committee of the state charities met in St. Paul and formulated a provisional program for the annual meeting early in November at Owatonna.

L. W. Walter committed suicide in St. Paul by shooting himself through the head.

Nearly 100 Minneapolis saloon keepers plead guilty to keeping nickel-in-the-slot machines and were fined $55 each.

Insurance Commissioner Dearth has notified the agent for the United Endowment Society of Newark, which does a marriage endowment insurance business, that his company cannot do business in the state until it has complied with the laws.

One of the largest events for early June will be the reception and ball which is to be given June 6 at the university hall and campus by the physicians of Minneapolis to the National Medical association, which is to hold its annual convention in St. Paul.

The body of a 10-day-old infant was found in the river near St. Paul.

W. J. Footner, manager of the Great Northern Express company, died in St. Paul.

Congressman Eddy says that no portion of the Red Lake reservation will be thrown open for settlement this year, as the power to open the land rests entirely with congress.

Fred Kavnosky, employed as canthook man at the log landing of the Brainerd Lumber company, at Brainerd, was struck by a rolling log and knocked into the river and drowned before help could reach him.

In all probability Gov. Van Sant's party will be escorted by the Minneapolis battalion when the executive and staff depart for Buffalo to attend the dedication of the Minnesota building at the Pan-American exposition.

Three alleged counterfeiters were arrested in Minneapolis close to police headquarters.

WILLING TO PAY.

China, However, Asks for Reasonable Terms in the Indemnity Liquidation.

Peking, May 14.—The Chinese plenipotentiaries sent to the ministers their answer to the demand for 450,000,000 taels ($327,000,000), which was made on May 8. The Chinese reply is long, and it may be said, on first reading, proves more satisfactory to the majority of the ministers than they had expected. The first paragraph states that China has not the slightest intention of trying to escape from the payment of her just obligations; that she is pledged to pay all the legitimate expenses of the allies and all damages actually incurred by foreigners during the recent troubles, and will do so.

The third paragraph sets forth that the resources of China are diminishing. The government in recent years was only able to reach 88,000,000 taels ($66,000,000) a year, of which 24,000,000 taels ($17,000,000) go to pay the war loan and 16,000,000 ($11,000,000) more to other foreign obligations.

After dwelling at length upon the diminishing revenue of the country and the great number of outstanding obligations of the country, the plenipotentiaries propose to set aside 15,000,000 taels ($10,000,000) annually out of 70,000,000 taels ($50,000,000) to be paid to the powers in monthly installments until the sum agreed upon is made up.

Those best acquainted with the conditions of the Chinese treasury are impressed with the fact that the country can do no more. Li Hung Chang is very desirous to have the bills of the powers examined before The Hague tribunal, but has been given to understand that should he make this request the foreign occupation will be continued at a cost of several million taels per day until the examination is concluded.

MRS. BOTHA TO URGE PEACE.

Sails from Durban on Way to See Kruger in Effort to End the War.

Durban, May 14.—Mrs. Louis Botha, who has obtained consent to interview Mr. Kruger and urge him to advocate peace, sailed Monday for Europe on the steamer Dunvegan Castle.

London, May 14.—Lord Kitchener in a dispatch from Pretoria, dated May 12, says:

"Grenfell has occupied Louistrichart, capturing 50 Boers, with rifles. Louistrichart was previously held by six British with 40 surrendered Boers.

"Other columns report eight Boers killed, 20 wounded, 122 prisoners, 24 surrenders, and a machine gun, 6,400 rounds of ammunition, 150 wagons and 570 horses captured."

London, May 13.—Gen. De Wet, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pretoria, has resumed operations, and is reported to have crossed into the Transvaal with 2,000 men.

London, May 14.—According to a dispatch from Pietermaritzburg to the Daily Mail, Lord Kitchener is about to try a new plan of burning the veldt in order to compel the Boers to surrender.

A CLOUDBURST.

Great Damage and Some Loss of Life by Overflowed Creeks in West Virginia.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 11.—A cloudburst east of Wheeling Friday night caused the overflowing of Peter's, Chapel's and Wood's runs, tributaries of Wheeling creek. At Triadelphia, the Baltimore & Ohio tracks were covered with water for several hours and trains were held up, including two passenger trains. At Greggsville a little child, name unknown, is said to have been washed away and drowned. Between Greggsville and Leatherwood, a suburb, the wall of water came down ten feet in height, taking bridges, outhouses and logs. It is feared several lives were lost, but nothing definite can be learned. In Wheeling the rainfall was 1.1 inches in 40 minutes.

NEWSPAPER SEIZED.

Police Raid the Office of the Irish People, William O'Brien's Paper, in Dublin.

Dublin, May 10.—The Irish People, William O'Brien's paper, was seized Thursday night by a party of police, who visited the offices of the paper and the news agents' shops and confiscated all copies of the current issue. The reason for the seizure is supposed to be the publication of an acrid paragraph about King Edward VII., in which he is described as "a bald-headed old roue." The paragraph also recalls several alleged discreditable incidents in the king's career as prince of Wales. The matter will be brought immediately before parliament and an angry debate is anticipated.

Street Cars Collide.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 11.—As a result of a street car collision Friday night at Brushton one man is dead, three others were badly injured and both cars demolished. The accident was caused by the burning out of the motor on the Frankstown avenue car, which resulted in the loss of control and allowed it to dash down a steep hill and crashed into car No. 174 on the Hamilton avenue line, which was standing on the switch. Several persons were slightly injured, none fatally.

Acquitted.

Cambridge, Mass., May 13.—Prof. Charles R. Eastman, of Harvard college, was acquitted Saturday of the murder of Richard Grogan, Jr., his brother-in-law. The jury was out but a few hours. The accused grew faint under denunciation by Attorney General Knowles.

Will Raise Wages.

Topeka, Kan., May 14.—After a conference with a committee representing the International Union of Machinists, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad through General Manager Mudge has agreed to raise the wages of shopmen along the entire system.

Disaster in a Mine.

Carthage, Mo., May 13.—Charles Clabaugh and William Morrison were killed and John Paxton was seriously injured by an explosion at Pleasant Valley mines, near here, Sunday. The men were drilling and struck an unexploded shot

A MIRACLE EXPLAINED.

Bryant, Mo., May 13.—The sensational cure of Mrs. M. A. Goss, of this place, has sent a ripple of excitement all over Douglas County, and Dodd's Kidney Pills, the remedy in question, are receiving thereby, the greatest advertisement any medicine has ever had in this state.

To satisfy the many inquiries which she finds it impossible to answer by letter, Mrs. Goss has sent the following statement of her case to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

"I did not think I could live a day and suffer, as I have lived and suffered for months, with Sciatica and Rheumatism. I used baths and liniments of all kinds. Two physicians treated me, one of them for two months. Nothing helped me in the least. I never slept more than ten or fifteen minutes at a time. I was bedfast, and had to lie on one side all the time. I used to wish for death, to deliver me from such torture.

"A friend suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after I had used them a week, I began to improve, and in about four weeks I could sit up in bed. A few days later, I walked a quarter of a mile and back. I now do all my own cooking and house work. The pain has entirely left me, and I am a well woman. I have taken altogether, sixteen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life." Mrs. M. A. Goss.

People come for miles to see Mrs. Goss, and hear her wonderful story. Dodd's Kidney Pills are working marvelous cures in Missouri.

WHAT WE HEAR FROM ASSINIBOIA, WESTERN CANADA.

"Don't Think of Coming, But Come."

To the Editor:

The above is the emphatic manner in which a friend in Yorkton writes to a friend near St. Paul, Minnesota, and it is pretty nearly right, too, when the advantages that Western Canada offer to those seeking homes. The Assiniboia district is one of the best. The writer from whose letter we quote goes on to say:

"John, if you miss this chance you are foolish, for you can get out cheaper when there are so many coming, and I would not tell you to come if I thought you could not do well, and if you don't come in the spring you will have to go away back, for you do not want to think that there is no one living out here but us. I saw nicer buildings out here than I ever saw before, and if the country was no good what would they want them for? John, if you sold everything you have and come out here you would be worth more than ever you were before, and if you can bring your team, you can get anything you want on tick, and when they do that with strangers they are not afraid they can't make enough to pay for it. I saw as nice wheat as I ever saw in my life and if they could not grow grain what would the flour mill be for, and it cost $20,000."

Now this was what Mr. Thomas Fitzpatrick, of Yorkton, Assiniboia, Western Canada, wrote to a friend.

There will be opened up this summer new districts in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia, at low prices, particulars of which can be had of any agent of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in the columns of your paper.

A FAMOUS OLD HOUSE.

The house of Walter Baker & Co., whose manufactures of cocoa and chocolate have become familiar in the mouth as household words, was established one hundred and twenty-one years ago (1780) on the Neponset River in the old town of Dorchester, a suburb of Boston. From the little wooden mill, "by the rude bridge that arched the flood," where the enterprise was first started, there has grown up the largest industrial establishment of the kind in the world. It might be said that, while other manufacturers come and go, Walter Baker & Co. go on forever.

What is the secret of their great success? It is a very simple one. They have won and held the confidence of the great and constantly increasing body of consumers by always maintaining the highest standard in the quality of their cocoa and chocolate preparations, and selling them at the lowest price for which unadulterated articles of good quality can be put upon the market. They welcome honest competition; but they feel justified in denouncing in the strongest terms the fraudulent methods by which inferior preparations are palmed off on customers who ask for and suppose they are getting the genuine articles. The best grocers refuse to handle such goods, not alone for the reason that, in the long run, it doesn't pay to do it, but because their sense of fair dealing will not permit them to aid in the sale of goods that defraud their customers and injure honest manufacturers.

Every package of the goods made by the Walter Baker Company bears the well-known trade-mark "La Belle Chocolatiere," and their place of manufacture "Dorchester, Mass." Housekeepers are advised to examine their purchases, and make sure that other goods have not been substituted.

An attractive little book of "Choice Recipes" will be mailed free to any housekeeper who sends her name and address to Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., 158 State Street, Boston, Mass.

A Quick Dessert.

Get a package of Burnham's Hasty Jellycon at your grocer's, dissolve it in a pint of boiling water and let it cool. The result is a delicious and healthful dessert. The flavors are: lemon, orange, raspberry, strawberry, peach, wild cherry and the unflavored "calfsfoot" for wine and coffee jelly. All grocers sell it.

—Hear the reading by Miss Lowe, at Odd Fellow's Hall, tonight.

—Tuesday was hog day in Delano. Many fine porkers were congregated together at the cattle yard.

—Have you read "High Joe,' "Daughter of a Republican," "The Martyr," or "Broken Barriers?" C. G. Wright sells them.

—Presiding Elder Hingley is to preach at the M. E. Church, Sunday evening. He is to hold the third quarterly conference on Saturday.

—"Who killed Joe's Baby?" one of Charles M. Sheldon's stories. Reading by Miss Gretel L. Lowe, at the I. O. O. F's hall tonight. Admission 20 cts. Children 10 cts.

—The sociable and entertainment given in the city hall, Monday evening by the young people of the Catholic church was well attended, and enjoyed by all present. The little folks in their exercises showed good and careful training and acted their parts well.

—C. G. Wright is proving himself one of the most earnest and faithful temperence workers that has very been in this section of the country. People have begun to know him as "Prohibition Wright." He surely is the Wright man in the right place, in the Wright County and writes well.

—People who have stock, grain, or other things to sell, read the papers and try to learn where they can do the best. When they wish to buy anything they look at the papers to see who deals in the kind of goods they want. If they read a nicely arranged add they conclude at once that they can trade best at that place, and go there to trade.

—From the way cows sold at auction on the Nels Larson farm recently, it looks as if there is no reduction in the price of good milkers. A herd of about twenty cows sold for an average of fifty dollars each—some went for about seventy dollars each. This sale was one of the largest and well attended of any in this locality. -Litchfield News Ledger.

—If a farmer has a few tons of hay, a few bushels of oats or corn, or a horse, or cow, or some hogs to sell, it would pay him better to spend half a dollar advertising it in the newspaper, than it will to spend two or three days running around hunting a buyer and spending $1. "setting 'em up." and he will have more money and feel better when he has completed his sale.

—Rev. J. W. Powell, of Blue Earth county, now in his seventy ninth year, who came to Minnesota with his family, by "prairie schooner," in 1855, preached the funeral sermon of Mrs. Whitney, late of this city, last Sunday morning. He is a kind-hearted, good old soul who gave nearly all the best years of his life to the Master's work in the early days of Minnesota.—Waseca County Herald.

—Several people about Delano buy hogs, cattle and other produce. Because you read an add in some paper from some other town and see none in our own papers, don't think Delano has no stock buyers. There are other places of business where you can buy to advantage Some how most of our people don't appreciate the use of advertisements. However the merchant, George P. Schaffer whose bank deposits are heaviest, advertises regularly in the GAZETTE.

—There is great need of a member of the Humane Society in Delano on Fair Days. Often calves, cows and other animals are terribly abused, or neglected while their temporary owners are insaloons full of intoxicants, until they are not fit to take care of themselves.

A Humane Society agent should be sent out to attend the monthly fairs in all the villages. They could earn a good living if they recieve half the fees collected.

—The Epworth League occupied the church hour last Sunday evening with Anniversary exercises. Mrs. Wilder President, presided. Rev. Thompson offered the opening prayer and talked on "Conventions"; Mrs W. Brothers sead; Dr. Catlin spoke on "Practical Christianity"; Mrs. Thompson read a paper on "Social work of the League"; C. S. Hawker, spoke on the "Devotional Meetings." The choir consisting of Misses Klopsteg, Fossberg, Jones and Mrs. Hawker and Messrs. Hawker, and Belden with Lottie Sleight, organist, furnished some good music.

—On Saturday, May 11, the Delano Territorial Association with a few friends met at the City Hall and enjoyed a good dinner and a fine old fashioned visit. After dinner music and speeches were in order. President aided at both. Mrs. Hoisington gave some experience with Indians; C. O. Teas, of Watertown made a speech; E. G. Wright of Markville spoke; Mrs. Scheig gave a recitation. Dr. Catlin made a few remarks. The Association voted to hold another celebration one year from today. Everybody present enjoyed the occasion.

—Read law no 238 in your Law Supplement for 1901.

—The Gilmer Hotel has been newly painted which improves it's appearance.

—Yesterday was Ascension Day and was duly observed at the Catholic Church.

—The cold spell seems to have slipped by without a freeze; and crops are looking fine.

—Lectures, and Steriopticon views of all parts of the world, at the City Hall, Monday and Tuesday evening May 20 and 21.

—Depot Agent Bolton has orders to keep track of boys jumping on and off moving trains at this place. The orders should have included girls.

—Yesterday afternoon the news of the death of the President's wife, Mrs. William McKinley, was received in Delano and flags placed at half mast in honor of her.

—Filling up streets with manuer, by village authorites, don't suit the neighbors to the filling. Proper grades usually are not made with a view to using manuer filling.

—Be sure to hear Rev. Sheldon's story of "Who Killed Joe's Baby,, read by Miss Gretel Amelia Lowe, at the Odd Fellow's Hall tonight. Admission 20cts, children 10cts.

—C. H. Decker, one of our subscribers who went from Delano to Nebraska last year writes as follows: Wheat is looking fine, corn not planted; good prospect for fruit. Am in good health and like this country very much, but think of going further south."

—Conzet & Darrow have just received a nice assortment of dusters and lap robes, at all prices and in styles to suit everybody. Also 300 of those fine deer hair sweat pads, of their own invention. The only pad which will keep the horses from scalding their shoulders. They also have the patent Mealy collar which they will give on trial. Call and see them, at Delano, Minn. 1t

--Editor Teas, of the Watertown News, is correct in saying that the rooters should be stopped from making so much noise on Sunday at base ball games, or Sunday games prohited. Not being satisfied with violating the Sunday law some of the 'rooters' seem to try how much noise they can make. And churches "more than three blocks away" are not obliged to be disturbed by such rowdyism on Sunday.

—The Delano Creamery is quite a lively place. Milk comes in from early in the morning until nearly noon. It comes in little express wagons, on wheelbarrows, and in buggies and wagons. Boys and girls, and women and men, are engaged in the business. Some of the customers are so eager to get to the creamery ahead of their neighbors that they have learned the near cuts, while some have been developing the speed of their farm teams until it is necessary for ordinary road teams to look out for them, or be passed when on a fair trot.

Last Monday was the biggest milk day the creamery has had, 33414 pounds were recieved.

William Ziebarth furnished the largest amount of milk of any customer for April, 8177 pounds.

Last week the creamery turned out 5500 pounds of butter, shipping 79 firkins, and suppling home customers with about 700 pounds.

HEARING THE APPLICATION.

[Composed by ELLA STURMAN.]

The school had gathered—
The bell had rung
We all our seats had taken
To listen if our teacher dear
Had signed the application.

We was listening in earnest
And the old clock told the tale
That we all were very quiet
In which often what we fail

At last we all were ready
And gladly heard the tale
That we were to have our teacher,
Which we knew would never fail

Oh how our hearts were beating
How glad we were that day
To know our teacher
Was a going to stay.

Impressions of Delano.

MONTROSE, May 14, 1901.

EDITOR OF GAZETTE: Having recently spent in your town a little time I write you, as to impressions formed while there. Your town is full of good people of course; not without the same faults that exist elsewhere. Live, enterprising people, surrounded by a good, and industrious class. But in your midst you have an enemy to every good impulse of humanity; your seven saloons were turning out their peculiar products. How did it compare with what was so much in evidence on River Street, good sober people, in the morning, good cattle, good implements good useful things in abundance. Toward night men, in what condition? Drunk! A little drunk!! drunk!!! and more drunk!!!! Too drunk to drive home, properly, and if they got home safe it was fortunate. Can it be possible that to produce such a state of things is profitable to a commnnity, even from the dollar standpoint? And what of the moral effect? Are you making better citizens? Is any one safer in person or property for the work of your seven saloons? Let the good people of your town answer. Is it growing better or worse? Can it be possible you are willing to perpetuate such conditions? I cannot believe it. But this is getting already too long, Mr. Editor, and so I close by saying. As Americans let us act along some line for the betterment of the conditions and act at once.

Yours, for better things,
E. G. WRIGHT.

The County Commissioners held a three days session this week. They had considerable discussion over whether or not to bond the county to pay up their debts. Surely something ought to be done to make county orders good enough to pay taxes with.

Strong Men.

NEW YORK, Special, May 12 —R. W Allis of Minnesota is the champion strong man of American colleges and universities, and therefore of the world, because the American college men individually have beaten the European records. Dr. Sargent of Harvard, chairman of the intercollegiate committee, today gave out the standing of the leading fifty strongest collegians. There are five Minnesota names. These are: No. 1, R. W. Allis, 1940.9 points; No. 13, O. L. Novig, 1431.8; No 15, N. P. B. Nelson, 1430.3; No. 24, J. J. Catlin, 1385 46: No. 50, O. F. Woodward, 1285.1. The average for the fifty is 1417,2. Amherst is represented twice in the list. The remainder is divided by Harvard and Columbia, the latter being champion. --Pioneer Press.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10, 1901

Well, the Hanna banner has been raised, and the Hanna boom for the republican nomination for president in 1904, is on the road. It will strike many as haying been very fittingly started in London, from whence Hanna's two administrations as brevet President has been so strongly endorsed. Senator Hanna was in Washington when Perry Heath's London interview launching the boom was published. He denies being a candidate for President, but he does it so jovially that everybody can see that he is tickled almost to death with the idea. No one who knows the relations between Perry Heath and Hanna and those between Hanna and Mr. McKinley will believe that the Heath interview was a surprise to either of the other two men, and there is little doubt that the full power of the administration, through the army of Federal office holders, will be exercised to push the Hanna boom along and make his nomination possible, unless the republican press attacks it so viciously that its impracticability willl be made plain. That is what democrats fear. No democrat has been found since the boom was started who does not sincerely hope that Hanna will get the nomination. Democrats wish him to gets it, not only because they think he would be easy to beat but because they would enjoy beating him more than any other man that could possibly be nominated. The Heath Interview is in reality a feeler of the republican pulse, especially of the editorial pulse. So that it depends on how it is received by the republican editors whether the Hanna boom will be withdrawn or pushed.

Representative Latimer, of S. C., who is a candidate to succeed Senator McLaurin, is in Washington on business. Speaking of S. C., politics, he said: "John McLaurin has been speaking in the state in favor of republican policies,and it has been suggested that I answer him. However, I do not believe in rushing into a campaign that is eighteen months off, and I shall choose my own time to say what I have to say." Of Gen. Wade Hampton's refusal of the offer of the postmastership at Columbia, Mr. Latimer said: "I have no doubt the offer was made in the hope of securing the influence of that grand old warrior in favor of Senator McLaurin's plans, and he has shown that his influence is not to be secured in that fashion. There isn't money enough in the world to buy Gen. Hampton."

Trade has not, to a satisfactory extent, followed our flag into the Philippines, if boots and shoes may be considered fairly representative of other articles of commerce. Although it is a fact generally admitted, both at home and abroad, that American shoes are the best and cheapest in the world, an official statement from the War Department shows that both Spain and Germany sold many more boots and shoes in the Philippines last vear than the United States - the exact figures being Spain, $74,193, Germanv $50,241, the U. S, $7,832. Mr. McKinley's contention is that we took and intend to keep the Philippines solely for commercial reasons. In view of the tremendous amount of cash we have put into the Philippines it would seem that our trade ought to make a better showing than it does in boots and shoes to leave Mr. McKinley's contention any standing at all.

The statement has been very positively made in Washington this week by those who are believed to speak for the administration that Minister Conger will not be allowed to return to China, and that his resignation will be accepted at the expiration of his present leave of absence. It is said that the administration regards his published interviews on the matters pertaining to China and the articles published over his signature as decidely undiplomatic, and he no longer has the support of the administration in his effort to get the republican nomination for governor of Iowa. Men who have been disposed to be friendly to Conger are thoroughly disgusted with his throwing bouquets at the Chinese Minister to the U. S., who did more than other any man to discredit Conger's reports from Pekin in the early days of the Chinese negotiations.

Gen. Chaffee, another administration pet, has shown how unfitted he is for command of the American army in the Philippines, to which he will succeed as soon as he arrives at Manila, by making the worst sort of a break on the eve of his departure from China- a break that adds to the enmity already too plainly shown toward Americans by all the powers in China except the English. It was at an entertainment given by English officers, and doubtless Chaffee had looked upon the wine when it was red, but that was no excuse for him. He was sent to China on a purely military errand, and yet he made a speech in which he used the following language: "Let kings, ministers and politicians say what they may but I can tell you this, that never will you see Americans and Britishers facing each other in the field. Our national policy may be to steer clear of international complications, but should circumstance arise in which we must make a choice our inclinations will be with Britishers" Language like that, used by the commander of the American troops in China, was an uncalled for insult to every power over there except the English, and Chaffee deserves to be court martialed for it. But no official notice has been taken of it by this government, and none is likely, unless it be forced by insulted powers.

BETTER THAN GOLD.

Better than grandeur, better than gold,
Than rank and titles a thousandfold,
Is a healthy body and mind at ease,
And simple pleasures that always please,
A heart that can feel for another's woe,
With sympathies large enough to unfold
All men as brothers, is better than gold.

Better than gold is a conscience clear,
Though toiling for bread in an humble sphere
Doubly blessed with content and health,
Untired by the lusts and cares of wealth;
Lowly living and lofty thought
Adorn and ennoble a poor man's cot;
For mind and morals, in nature's plan,
Are the genuine tests of a gentleman.

Better than gold is sweet repose
Of the sons of toil where the labors close,
Better than gold is the poor man's sleep,
And the balm that drops on his slumbers deep
Bring sleeping draughts on the downy bed,
Where luxury pillows it's aching head,
The toiler simple oplate deems
A shorter route to the land of dreams.

Better than gold is a thinking mind,
That in the realm of books can find
A treasure surpassing Australian ore,
And live with the great and good of yore,
The sage's lore and the poet's lay,
The glories of empires passed away
The world's great dream will thus unfold
And yield a pleasure better than gold.

Better than gold is a peaceful home,
Where all the fireside characters come—
The shrine of love, the heaven of life,
Hallowed by mother, or sister, or wife.
However humble the home may be,
Or tried with sorrow by heaven's decree,
The blessings that never were bought or sold
And center there, are better than gold.

FATHER RYAN.

IT is claimed that the Younger boys will, henceforth, if released, live exemplary lives. Their greatest trouble seems to be to get a Start.

AGUINALDO, has been interviewed. He thinks that the American government of the Philippines, in order to be unquestionably satisfactory, should conform strictly to the constitution. Of course. Why not? That's what he subscribed to when he took the oath of allegiance. He has a right now, surely, to demand for his island friends the rights of freedom and liberty, according to the American constitution. That's just what he has been fighting for, and it looks as if, when he found himself in the hands of the U. S. soldiers, he had, as the best means of furthering the interests of his countrymen, taken the oath of allegiance to the country claiming to guarantee these rights to the citizens. And he has, then, a right to demand those rights.

An Easy Way

It looks as if it might be an easy way to regulate votes to adopt the plan now in vogue by the commission in the Philippines. Here it is:

"The commission has imposed a registration tax of one pesos annually on all males over 18, excepting soldiers. Nonpayment of the tax disqualifies from voting and involves a penalty of 100 per cent, which can be enforced by the sale of the delinquent's goods and chattels."

It seems as if a man had no pesos to pay with, and was liable to the extortionate penalty affixed, he might be induced to cast his vote to please some scheming politician. It is a shame and a disgrace to our Declaration of Independence and its noble defenders to impose such obligations upon a people who have come into our hands while fighting for the very freedom guaranteed by that document and our Constitution.

There is a good deal of "playing to the galleries" going on in the state politics at the present moment. The political machinist has got his working cloths on and things are doing.—Star News.

Memorial Day.

Next Thursday, the 30th day of May will be observed all over our country as the one day of the year when we, as American citizens shall, with appropriate ceremonies strew flowers on the graves of all who have died since having enlisted in the war of the rebellion.

Forty years ago the tocsin of war sounded throughout the United States. Brother was arrayed against brother in one of the deadliest of wars. Men placed their lives in the balance for their views of right. Battles were fought. Men were slain. The war ended, and peace again reigned in our land. The Grand Army of the Republic was organized. The order was given to observe the 30th day of May as Memorial Day and for each post to see that flowers were placed on the grave of each fallen comrade. The day has become a National Holiday, People who are patriotic, who love their homes, and are greatful for sacrifices made by the young men of the sixties; now the old men, leave their business one day in the year to help perpetuate the memory of those who fought in defense of rights now enjoyed by American citizens; and to cheer the living heroes on the march to "The undiscovered country from whose bourn no traveler returns."

Let every patriot of today be found observing this day in a fitting and appropriate manner.

From Manila,

Leon Lambert lately returned from the Philippines is quoted as having said that he was quite sure the Henry Dow killed in the Philippines was not his brother-in-law, of St. Paul, but another man by the same name.

Mr. Lambert is further quoted as saying:

"The business chances of Manila have been grossly overestimated." said Mr. Lambert. "It is practically impossible for an American to make as much money in Manila as he would in this country. Everything is overcrowded. Hundreds that have gone to Manila the last few months, on looking over the field, have either returned to this country or gone to some of the other islands, where the chances are fair.

Globe Advice.

St. Paul Globe advice to Democrats certainly appears presumptuous. It is a paper which is Democratic only in name. It is owned by an interest hostile to Democratic success. This ownership retains the Globe solely to prevent it from becoming Democratic in fact as well as in name; and yet, in the face of these well known facts, that paper presums to advise and teach Democrats their duty and the course to be pursued.

It seems to us that even the most ordinary conception of the true fitness of things should impell the editors of this traitorous journal to eschew editorials of advice to Democrats. Such utterances are nauseating.—St. Cloud Times

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17, 1901

A most extraordinary promise was this week made the Cubans by the administration, through Senator Platt, of Conn. And the method of making it was as extraordinary as the promise. Senator Platt, just after an extended conference with Secretary Root, at which advices from Gen. Wood saying that the Cubans were hanging back about accepting the Platt amendment, waiting for some definite assurance of tariff concessions, were carefully gone over, gave out an authorized interview, in which he promised that Congress would, soon after the Cuban government was organized, arrange for a form of reciprocity with Cuba that would be satisfactory. Of course this was done in diplomatic language, so that in case Congress fails to see reciprocity with Cuba with administration eyes it can be claimed that Senator Platt was only speaking for himself. But there is no doubt that it was intended for the Cubans to regard the promise as coming from the administration and the the republican majority in Congress. It is understood that this promise was made because the Cubans did not consider a promise to negotiate reciprocity treaty under the Dingley law which would require the approval of two thirds of the Senate to become operative, satisfactory. It may be that the administration can make good Senator Platt's promise, but the sugar and tobbacco interests of this country will be sure to make it a sizable job, and it may make trouble for Senator Platt in his own State, the tobacco growers of which would be affected to a considerable extent.

Such of the Washington relics which were taken from Arlington House at the beginning of the civil war, and which have been on exhibition in the National Museum for some years, as she desired were this week turned over to Miss Mary Custis Lee, representing her brother Gen. G. W. C. Lee, their legal owner, by the U. S government. Several of the relics, including one of Washington's tents, a treasure chest, a lantern, and a glass candelabra, were left in the National Museum, subject to the order of the owner. Gen Fitz Lee, her cousin, accompanied Miss Lee in her visit to the museum. The final disposition of the articles removed from the museum has not been determined upon. This act of rightful restitution has not seriously injured the Washington exhibit, in the museum, as many of the articles were large pieces of furniture, which have been stored away and others were duplicates of articles which properly belong to the government.

The alleged investigation of the commissary stealing, at Manila, is resulting in the old, old story. Some insignificant persons are being made scapegoats and the big thieves who have a pull are not touched. Friends of the administration are pointing to the sentence of a sergeant to three years imprisionment and of a civilian employe to five years, as showing that the thieves are being punished, but thoughtful persons regard that news as indicating that the little thieves are only to be punished, while the big thieves are left at liberty to enjoy the fruits of their thefts.

Ex-Governor McCreary, Chairman of the Kentucky State Democratic Committee, is in Washington. Asked what the Democratic outlook in his State was, he replied; "The party is thoroughly organized throughout the State and is in perfect harmony. At no time has there been a better feeling within the party. At the election this fall I think we will carry the state by fifteen or twenty thousand, having a majority in both branches of the legislature, and a large majority on joint ballot. The legislature then elected will choose a U. S. Senator." If his prediction as to the legislature holds good, Gov. McCreary will be a candidate to succeed Senator Deboe. Speaking of republican claims of many converts in the South and the alleged growth of republican sentiment in that section, Gov. McCreary said: "I know that in Kentucky the tendency is not toward the adoption of republican policies. On the contrary, democratic sentiment is growing stronger. I observe that this is true also of Alabama, where I am familiar with conditions, and I believe that democratic sentiment is growing stronger in the South generally. The Southern people do not believe in high protection, in colonization, in a large standing army, nor in trusts. The more closely the republican party become identified with colonization, as exemplified in the Philippines: with the maintenance of a large standing army, and with the trusts, the stronger becomes the spirit of democracy in the South. The Southern people do not believe in these things and can have no sympathy with a party that is identified with them."

The administration deserves all the sympathy it is getting for the streak of hard luck it is up against, on its feminine side. With Mr. McKinley having to break his excursion off in the middle on account of the illness of Mrs. McKinley; the daughter of Secretary Long dangerously ill, in Colorado, and the wife of Gage seriously ill, in Washington, it looks like a veritable wrestle with a health hoodoo.

HIS GARDENS.

I pass where the sun gilds his towers,
When the dew drops still gleam in the grass,
And the odors that float from his gardens
I breathe without price, as I pass;
The air that blows over his gardens
Is scented for me as I pass.

I gaze down the flower-gemmed vistas,
And praise all the splendor I see;
The gardens are his, but their beauty
Is spread in rich colors for me;
I may never set foot in his gardens,
But their charm is left open to me.

I hurry along to the duties,
The tasks, that await me afar,
And I toil where the tapering chimneys
And the noises of steel pinions are,
Where the smoke gives offense to my nostrils
And the noises of industry are.

And often I think of his gardens,
And him, at his ease, far away
From the noise and the smoke and the bother,
While I must toil on through the day—
He breathes the sweet odors and loiters
At leisure through all the long day.

And grateful, at night, by his gardens,
I stay for a moment to see
Their riches, their glory, their splendor,
And wistful, he gazes at me—
From the chair that is pushed by a servant
He wearily gazes at me.

I look down the flower-gemmed vistas
And breathe in the sweet-scented air;
The gardens are his, but their beauty
The Lord gives me senses to share—
I pass, praising God for the glory
He graciously gives me to share.

PHILLIP BENTLY'S LUCK

By William Wendham.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

OPINION regarding Philip Bently was about evenly divided. Half the community said he was the smartest young man in the town, and that he distinctly "took after" the Greens, his maternal progenitors, who had enjoyed a local reputation for cleverness. The other half held that Philip was a "wooden head"—who concealed his identity by taking care never to say anything that involved thought.

"Looks wise and throws that handsome but empty head back and says never a word until it is certain which way the cat has jumped; then smiles one of them I-knew-it-all-the-time smiles, and looks kind of pitying like at the fellows who had guessed wrong—git out with your idee that he takes after the Greens; no, siree; he takes after them shiftless Bentlys."

The particular spokesman responsible for the above philosophy was old Tom Boggs, who had lived in the vicinity since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, which fact, combined with ample leisure and the ability to handle efficiently stupendous mouthfuls of tobacco, had given him the position of "village oracle."

Such talk about Philip Bently had been going on for some years—ever since he got big enough to be noticed at all, and it kept up until an event, or rather a series of events, happened which served to put an end to all controversy and to squelch his detractors. But while Philip triumphed, in one quick, fierce joust with the world, and won a fortune and a wife in one sudden dash into the great city, there are those still in town who refuse to accept the verdict that he is possessed of good sense.

The fact is nobody in town knows exactly how Bently did make his money. All that is known is he went to Chicago, and that about two months later he returned, deposited in Sumner's bank certified checks and drafts for some $80,000, bought a fine house, married Sumner's daughter Grace, and then began the life of a gentleman. He never vouchsafed an iota of information regarding the manner of his sudden enrichment.

What silenced all questions as to his real ability, and which dissipated the suspicion that the strike was wholly a matter of luck, was the fact that Bently went to the city after a frigid interview with Gilbert Sumner regarding the hand of his daughter, whereupon "Old Sumner" animadverted severely upon his general lack of ability, energy and industry and before he departed had announced decisively that he was going to make his fortune and return to marry Grace Sumner. Gossip had all the details even to the amount "Old Sumner required him to possess before he would consent to the marriage. That was $50,000. Gossip knew, also, the exact sum of money he had when he started—$200, given him by his uncle, Phineas Green, who bade him "take it, and for Providence sake, go to work in some honest business, save money and make something of yourself; and don't expect another cent from me, because this is all you get, and I give it to you now instead of in my will, to encourage you to do something."

Now I know the history of Bently's fortune, and I am going to tell it, and settle the controversy, because I am tired of hearing untruths about it.

After Bently had his interview with Mr. Gilbert he secured the $200 from his uncle, resigned his position with the railroad company where he was making $50 a month and went to Chicago. He found, of course, as all aspiring youths who go to the great cities find, that there were no golden nuggets to be picked up in the streets and that he could not secure a position of any kind that would pay him much more than the one did which he had left. He had been drifting about more or less aimlessly for three weeks and was becoming somewhat discouraged when a fire broke out at his boarding place, and he went to a hotel for the night. He selected a moderate-priced one in the center of the business district, patronized largely by country merchants. Before retiring he took a bath, and while in the bathroom was surprised to hear the door of his room open and some one enter. The mirror in the bathroom gave him the reflection of the person who entered. He was somewhat startled when the man threw back the collar of his great-coat to note that it was Amos Judson, one of the best known financiers in the city—a man whose name was in everybody's mouth because of his prominence in the affairs of a certain corporation and well known the country over as a promoter and a plunger on 'change. Bently recognized him because he had been pointed out to him on the street one day by an acquaintance. He was at a loss what to do, and, as was his habit of mind and action, ended by doing nothing. Judson locked the outside door and closed the one to the bathroom. The transom was open and in a moment Bently heard a knock and Judson asked who it was. The answer seemed to reassure him, for he opened the door and locked it again after the newcomer had entered. Bently, who lay in the bath, could not fail to hear the conversation which followed. At first he thought to make his presence known, but the situation seemed to be awkward, and Bently never did look for awkward situations. So he lay still.

"I suppose you think it queer to ask you to meet me here, Smith," said Judson, rapidly. "But in this matter it is so important that no human being know that you and I are allied or have been conferring that I thought this was about the least likely place anybody would look for either of us to be. I leave for New York at midnight.

"The deal we talked of some weeks since has been arranged and the stock exchange end of it is now ripe. On Thursday the C. K. B. company becomes a part of a consolidation which includes every competing company in the United States. The basis on which we go in is three shares in the new company for one in ours—or the stockholders can have money for their stock in the same proportion—$300 for each $100 share."

"Whew!" whistled the other. "And C. K. B. selling for 90 to-day."

"That's it," replied Judson. "Now listen, I am in a great hurry. Go on 'change to-morrow and buy until you are black in the face. Arrangements have been for a spasm of heavy selling and some adverse rumors in the morning, and C. K. B. will be even weaker than it has been. I think it will go down to 85. It can't get below. We would have to protect it through our regular brokers, as there is so much of it up as collateral that it would make a disturbance. But it will be low, and your game is to buy. Keep on buying without doing it in a way to cause suspicion until Thursday, when the rumors of the consolidation will be out. Then buy like old Harry along with the other brokers we have in line. There will be all kinds of news about the combine, and the price ought to be forced up to 150. Throw over the entire line Monday while the boom is at its height. Tuesday there will be denials of a combine from all over the country and a decline will set in. You will be all sold out then. Turn in and sell short for all you can get. The price will get back below one dollar. When it does, take in your short account and buy quietly until the 15th. On that day the details of the combine will be perfected and will be given out authoritatively. Then the stock will jump like a kangaroo, and there will be additional details every day that will keep it going. At any rate it will be some days before the people will realize the full value of the stock, and every share you can buy for less than three dollars is at a profit, because the actual cash value will be that or over."

"NOW LISTEN, I AM IN A GREAT HURRY."

There was some further talk regarding details, and then the men left one at a time, Smith going last and locking the door on the outside as he departed. Evidently the hotel clerk had made a mistake.

The next day Phil Bently counted his money and found that he had about $150. He put aside $50 to live on and hunted up a stock broker, to whom he gave the other hundred.

"Buy C. K. B. at 85," he said.

"Everybody is selling C. K. B. today," remarked the broker.

"Buy," responded Bently, sententiously.

On the following Tuesday he stood at his broker's elbow and bought as fast as his profits permitted him to add to his line.

C. K. B. soared to 165, then dropped to 92, then soared again until it got far past the 300 mark. Bently went with it both ways, but always carefully enough to take no chances. He lost the last advances and the extreme decline, but when it was all over he found a balance with his broker of over $80,000, which he drew in the form of drafts and certified checks.

Then he went home.

Money Shorn.

James J. Hill is reported to have said lately apropos of the recent speculations in Wall Street, "I want no money taken as money was taken Thursday. There will be no pocket in my shroud. There are men who have come to believe that money can do anything in this country. If we have reached that point, then money must be shorn by law of its power to do harm I am willing to see money shorn of such power. I have no wish to have that sort of power." If Jim is dead earnest in this sentiment, which by the way is a very pretty one, he must have been hard hit by those that had money as well as he. Any one who is at all familiar with the way he has accomplished his ends, legislative and otherwise, will have hard work to bring themselves to believe that James is honest in this expression. For a man, who, by the aid of money, has been accustomed to ride rough shod over any one that appeared in his way, to reach the goal of his ambition, James makes an admirable moral philosopher. His whole talk, however, is that of a man that has been hard hit. Perhaps this will prove to have been the case, and perhaps not. One thing, however, the world will be inclined to do that is to agree that money must be shorn of its power to work injustice to the helpless, and that such men as Jim Hill be curbed in ambition to rule the earth for their own advantage.—LeSueur Sentinel.

Maidens who have been wooed in the language of flowers will be interested to know that lima beans and sweet corn are fashionable mediums for love messages in the vicinity of Troy, N. Y. A breach of promise suit developed the fact that the man in the case won $50,000 worth of affection (value estimated by plaintiff) by sending presents of corn and lima beans for the family dinner.

Estimates based on the census returns place the number of farms in the United States at 5,700,000, or one to about every 13 inhabitants. In the ten years from 1890 to 1900 the number of farms increased 1,150,000 and farm wealth $6,500,000,000. These are the days of big things, big figures and big combinations. But the combined American farmer continues to be the biggest of them all.

A Minnesota paper tells of a teacher in Lyon county who, to prevent tardiness, offered to kiss the first arrival at school each morning. The next morning at five o'clock a number of the young men were seen roosting on the fence, and by 8.30 all the small boys and two directors were in evidence. The teacher is 18 and as beautiful as an angel, as they all are. Who wouldn't roost on that schoolhouse fence all night.

After nearly 30 years of constant effort and the expenditure of nearly $500,000, scientists have succeeded in accurately measuring the earth. They have learned that its diameter through the equator is 7,926 miles; its height from pole to pole 7,899 miles. The earth, therefore, is flattened at the poles; and while this fact has long been asserted, the actual measurement has removed the question from the domain of doubt.

C. A. Williams, formely consular agent of the United States at Johannesburg, South Africa, and thoroughly conversant with the resources of the country, estimates the gold output of the Transvaal on the restoration of peace at over $100,000,000 a year for 30 years to come. Most of the machinery for this great output, he says, will come from this country, and "the greater the development of South Africa the greater will be its trade with the United States."

Science is demonstrating by leaps and bounds that man is embarrassed with numerous physical redundancies. Surgery is now able to remove without loss and to replace with success almost any exterior portion of the body. It has been shown that stomachs are not necessary to life and a later theory is that other digestive organs can also be spared with advantage. Broken hearts have been bound again and brain is easily repaired. To live with a single lung is not novel. There has been wonderful progress in the practice of surgery.

The public has been warned of the dangers that lurk in the kiss and even in the handshake as agencies by which microbes may be distributed, but the remarks of a speaker at a medical association meeting in Chicago hint at even the person who renounces these practices is not safe. All agencies by means of which men come in contact with other men should be subject to sterilization and even "the long hair and the full beard ought to be discouraged." It is not depreciating the wisdom of the advice to point out that it is dangerous to be alive.

As a grass producing country it is unsurpassed, and instances are cited where 130 tons of green fodder have been taken off of one acre sown to "grama grass," a grass that is something like the Buffalo grass of the United States.

MACHINISTS GO OUT.

Estimated That 50,000 Strike for a Nine-Hour Day—Statement of President O'Connell.

Washington, May 21.—Approximately 50,000 machinists throughout the country struck Monday for a nine-hour day; a scale of wages equal to the present ten-hour per day scale, and other demands. This is the rough estimate of President O'Connell, of the National Association of Machinists, based on the telegraphic advices that have reached him from the machinists' headquarters in the various cities. The strike thus far has not extended to the allied trades, save in one or two instances, as at Scranton, Pa., where men in a part of the allied trades are out. No machinists engaged in government work are affected. This is due to the fact that on such work an eight-hour day scale already prevails. Railroad machinists, as a rule, are not involved in the strike, though the men on several roads are out. The Central Vermont shop machinists at St. Albans, numbering probably 200, have struck. The Lehigh Valley railroad machinists at Buffalo, Sayre, Wilkesbarre and Elmira are out, aggregating about 500 all told. The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western men at Buffalo, Scranton, Wilkesbarre and intermediate points, are out. The Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe men also are out. The strike order, however, does not apply to the railroads generally. It is explained at headquarters that there is no competition between the railroads and the private work, and that work among the private establishments is to be adjusted first.

The situation was summarized by President O'Connell in the following statement:

"We are demanding a nine-hour day universally throughout the trade, with an increase of wages sufficient to overcome the loss of the hour in time; regulation of the apprenticeship system and the number that shall be employed, in accordance with the number of joudneymen machinists employed; agreements as to arbitration of all disputes that may rise in the future. The right of the machinists to be represented by a committee; and agreements that there shall be absolutely no discrimination against machinists because of their membership in the union. From the present indications and the statements issued from headquarters at the various points the orders are being generally obeyed and in larger numbers than was anticipated. In certain cases where only a few hundred were expected to be involved the indications are that the number will be increased 50 per cent. The number of firms signing indicates that in localities where the agreements are being made the strike will not last over a few days. In other localities, where a larger number of men are being involved, I look forward to an adjustment being reached within the present week."

Telegraphic reports to Mr. O'Connell show the following as the number of firms which signed the agreement Monday:

Kenosha, Wis., all; Milwaukee, Wis., five; Wilmington, Del., two; Toledo, O., one; Auburn, N. Y., all firms; Anaconda, Mont., all; Denver, Col., all; St. Louis, all; New Orleans, all; Danbury, Conn., all; Pittsburgh, Pa., 90 per cent.; Franklin, Pa., all; Youngstown, O., all; Cleveland, O., 15; Rochester, N. Y., 20 per cent.; Buffalo, 50 per cent.; Niagara Falls, all; Tonawanda, all; Trenton, N. J., 75 per cent.; Baltimore, 11; Philadelphia, 25; New Haven, eight.

ALBANY STRIKE SETTLED.

Traction Company and Its Men Come to a Satisfactory Agreement.

Albany, N. Y., May 20.—The street railway employes' strike, which was inaugurated 11 days ago on the lines of the Union Traction company in Albany, Troy, Cohoes, Rensselaer and Watervliet is at an end, and operations on the entire system were resumed Saturday. There have been concessions on both sides, and an agreement was reached early Saturday at a conference at which both the corporation and the operatives were represented, under which it should be possible to avoid strikes in future.

The company, on its part, agrees to receive representations regarding grievances from any committee of its employes, representing organized or unorganized labor; that men suspended or discharged by the superintendents shall be entitled to appeal to the executive committee of the company; that in case employes disprove charges under which they were suspended or discharged they shall be entitled to pay for the time they were idle during such suspension or discharge, and that there shall be no discrimination against any of the men who engaged in the strike, except those guilty of unlawful or riotous acts. The company reserves the right to employ union or non-union men and to discharge employes for cause.

The wages of all motormen, conductors, linemen and pitmen is to be 20 cents per hour, and of pitmen helpers 17½ cents per hour.

The men agree that no proposition for a strike shall be acted upon by any division at the same meeting at which it is introduced, but that at least 48 hours shall elapse before such proposition shall be voted upon, and that if a strike shall be ordered it shall not take effect until at least six days have elapsed after notice to the company, during which time the employes shall continue their work. The non-union men brought here to fill the places of the strikers will unquestionably withdraw, although the formal agreement does not mention them.

PRIEST IS FOUND DEAD.

Rev. Phillips, of Hazleton, Pa., Missing for Two Weeks, Meets Foul Play at New York.

New York, May 18.—The body of a man found late at night in a house in Ninth avenue has been identified as that of Rev. Edward S. Phillips, of St. Gabriel's church, Hazleton, Pa., who recently had a conference with J. Pierpont Morgan in reference to the threatened strike in the iron and coal regions of Pennsylvania.

The coroner says that the identification can hardly be questioned, as papers found on the body seem to prove it. The police are working on what may prove to be a murder.

Kirk Stanley, a massage operator, in whose rooms the body was found, is under arrest as a suspicious person.

The police are searching for a woman who was known as Stanley's wife. They say this woman left the house in Ninth avenue on May 9 and has not returned. Father Phillips disappeared on May 8.

DEATH COMES AT LAST.

Hon. Edwin F. Uhl Passes Away at Grand Rapids After Long Critical Illness.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 18.—Hon. Edwin F. Uhl, former assistant secretary of state and ambassador to Germany under the Cleveland administration, died shortly after noon Friday. He had been ill nearly a year suffering from a complication of diseases, among them Bright's disease.

Edwin F. Uhl was born in 1841 near Avon Springs, N. Y. Coming to Michigan when he was a boy, he finished the course in the public schools and graduated from the University of Michigan at the age of 20. Mr. Uhl then located in Ypsilanti, and entered a law firm. In 1871, he moved to Grand Rapids, where he built up a splendid law practice and became prominent in the democratic party. He was elected mayor of Grand Rapids on the democratic ticket in 1890 and served two years. At the beginning of President Cleveland's second term Mr. Uhl was appointed assistant secretary of state, and during part of his incumbency he was in charge of the department. President Cleveland later offered Mr. Uhl the post of ambassador to Germany, and it was accepted, Mr. Uhl serving until President McKinley appointed his successor. While in Germany Mr. Uhl took a decided stand against "free silver" and withdrew his support from the democratic party in the campaign of '96. This greatly affected his party standing in Grand Rapids, and when he returned home from Germany he retired from politics.

Mr. Uhl was married in 1865 and is survived by a widow and three daughters.

IS CALLED BY DEATH.

Mrs. Lyman J. Gage, Wife of Secretary of the Treasury, Passes Away After a Long Illness.

Washington, May 18.—Mrs. Lyman Gage, wife of the secretary of the treasury, died at her residence, No. 1715 Massachusetts avenue, Northwest, at 9:30 o'clock Friday night, after an illness of nine weeks' duration. With her when the end came were her husband, her married daughter, Mrs. E. F. Pierce, of Evanston, Ill., and Dr. W. W. Johnston, the attending physician. For a time before her death Mrs. Gage suffered considerable pain, but she maintained her bright and cheerful demeanor and was conscious to the last. Heart trouble, the result of grip complications, was the immediate cause of death. Mrs. Gage was exposed to the inclement weather for about an hour on inauguration day, but at the time her health did not seem to have been affected. On the 11th of March she left here for Evanston to visit her married daughter. While there she experienced a chill and took to her bed, but soon recovered sufficiently to return to Washington, where she had been confined to her room ever since.

During their residence in Washington Secretary and Mrs. Gage have taken quite an active part in social life at the capital. Mrs. Gage was a woman of charming personality, and with her husband delighted in extending the hospitality of their elegant home on Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Gage was probably closer to Mrs. McKinley than any other of the ladies of the cabinet.

San Francisco, May 18.—The news of the death of Mrs. Gage was received by the members of the president's official family in this city with expressions of regret. The dispatch which was transmitted to Secretary Cortelyou at the Scott residence conveyed the news to President McKinley. Extra precautions were taken to keep the news of Mrs. Gage's death from Mrs. McKinley.

AIDS SCOTCH SCHOOLS.

Carnegie Gives $10,000,000 to Four Universities for Free Scholarships.

London, May 21.—Andrew Carnegie has given $10,000,000 to four Scotch universities—Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Glasgow and St. Andrews—thereby providing a fund to assist struggling students to obtain an education. The donor stipulates that the beneficiaries shall be his "Scottish fellow countrymen," no Irish, English, colonials or foreigners to profit by the gift. The fund will apply to medical as well as to commercial education. It will be placed in the hands of trustees, who will pay the expenses of Scottish students benefited under the scheme.

Exposition Dedicated.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 21.—In the presence of a vast concourse of people, with ceremonial both conventional and novel, the Pan-American exposition was dedicated formally Monday. The day was fair, and the industrious, energetic men who planned this great enterprise rejoice in flattering success. The day began with a parade in which there were men from nearly every country in the world, and ended with an aerial bombardment from flying bombs and a brilliant electrical illumination. Between the two were the formal exercises of the dedication, with oratory that took its theme from the lesson of the time, prayer for right, music, song and poetry.

Kill American Soldiers.

Will Leave Peking.

Peking, May 20.—Gen Chaffee at midnight Saturday night issued his farewell order ending the American relief expedition in China. The American troops will board the transports next Wednesday at Taku and Thursday will leave direct for Manila.

"It Seems as Though my Back Would Break."

Is it not true? Women suffer, feel the very life crushed out of them, grow old before their time. Each morning wake up determined to do so much before the day ends, and yet—

Before the morning is very old the dreadful BACKACHE attacks them, the brave spirit sinks back in affright; no matter how hard they struggle, the "clutch" is upon them and they fall upon the couch crying:

"Why should I suffer so? What can I do?"

The answer is ready, your cry has been heard, and a woman is able to restore you to health and happiness.

Backache is only a symptom of more fatal trouble—heed its warning in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will stop your torture and restore your courage. Your pains come from unnatural menstruation or some derangement of the womb. Let those who are suffering read Mrs. Morton's letter and be guided by her experience.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been so delighted with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would write and thank you. My system was entirely run down. I suffered with terrible backache in the small of my back and could hardly stand upright; was more tired in the morning than on retiring at night. I had no appetite. Since taking your Compound I have gained fifteen pounds, and am gaining every week. My appetite has improved, have no backache, and I look better than I ever looked before.

"I shall recommend it to all my friends, as it certainly is a wonderful medicine."—MRS. E. F. MORTON, 826 York St., Cincinnati, O.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free.

$5000 REWARD Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000, which will be paid to any person who can show that the above testimonial is not genuine, or was pulished before obtaining the writer's special permission.—LYDIA E. WESTERN CANADA'S DECEMBER WEATHER EQUAL TO THAT OF MAY IN MINNESOTA.

To the Editor:

Thomas Regan and C. Collins, of Eden Valley, Minnesota, went out to Western Canada last December as delegates, to look over the grazing and grain lands that are being offered at such low prices and reasonable terms. This is what they say:

"We arrived in Calgary about the 20th December and although we had left winter in Minnesota and Manitoba, we were surprised to find beautiful warm weather at this point, quite equal to what we have in May in Minnesota. There was no snow nor trace of winter to be seen, and the climate was really splendid. Horses, cattle and sheep were running out, in prime condition, with plenty of feed on the prairie, and really better than that of ours stabled in the south. We are impressed with this country as one of the finest mixed farming countries we have ever seen. The immense tracts of fertile lands, well sheltered and abundantly watered, leave nothing to be desired.

Leaving Alberta we returned east and visited the Yorkton district in Assiniboia. We drove out about ten miles at this point and were highly pleased with the splendid samples of grain we were able to see, wheat yielding 25 bushels, oats 60 bushels. Roots were also good specimens. From what we have seen, we have decided to throw in our lot with the Yorktoners—satisfied that this part of the country will furnish good opportunities for anyone anxious to make the best of a really good country. Any agent of the Canadian Government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in the columns of your paper will give you full particulars of the new districts being opened out this year in Assiniboia and Saskatchewan.

Yours truly,
OLD READER.

AN "M. D.'S" OPEN LETTER.

Benton, Ill., May 20th.—R. H. Dunaway, M. D. of this place, in an open letter, makes the following startling statement:

"I had Diabetes with all its worst symptoms. I applied every remedy known to the profession, as well as every prescription suggested in our books. In spite of all, I was dying, and I knew it.

"As a last resort, and with scarcely any faith whatever, I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. In one week I saw a great improvement. After I had taken five boxes, I was sound and well. This is ten months ago, and I have not taken any medicine of any kind since, and am convinced that my cure is a permanent one.

"As a practicing physician with years of experience, I most positively assert that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine in the world today, for Diabetes or any other Kidney Disease. Since using them myself, I have used them in many cases in my practice, and they have never failed.

"I am making this statement as a professional man, after having made a most thorough test of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and because I feel it my duty to the public and to my professional brethren. The truth can never hurt anyone, and what I have said is the absolute truth."

R. H. DUNAWAY, M. D.

It is no wonder that the public are enthusiastic over this new medicine, when our leading physicians themselves, are being won over to its use.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Woman Suffrage.

The most important woman's convention in the history of Minneapolis will be held from May 30 to June 5, being the annual meeting of the National Woman's Suffrage. The convention will be attended by about 400 women, every state in the union being represented, most of the number being delegates. The list of officers, delegates and speakers includes the names of a large number of the most distinguished women of the country. Miss Susan B. Anthony, who retired last year from active services as president, will be present, and, although 81 years of age, will take an active part in the proceedings, giving her address of greeting and making two imporant reports.

Each afternoon there will be work conferences, in which the problem of doing effectual work will be discussed in a very practical way, under the guidance of experienced leaders. Groups of fine addresses will be given in the evening by speakers like the president, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt; the vice president, Rev. Anna Howard Shaw; Laura A. Gregg, Nebraska; Laura Clay, Kentucky; Frances Griffin, Alabama; Gail Loughlin, New York; Louis F. Post, editor of The Public; Rev. Celia Parker Wooley and Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, Chicago; Elizabeth U. Yates, Maine; Mrs. Lydia Phillips Williams and Rev. W. B. Riley, Minneapolis. The sessions will be held in the First Baptist church.

The Pioneers.

The territorial pioneers of Minnesota must have been strong-souled, cheerful, lusty men and women if the humor and good cheer which 500 of the members of the association showed at the Log Cabin at the state fair grounds can be taken as a measure of their spirit. The weather was quite against them, but the meeting has never been so large and the day has never passed off with so much satisfaction to every one concerned as did the annual meeting of 1901.

The afternoon was given over to jollity and merry-making. Dancing was a feature of the afternoon, not by the young people assembled, but by the real pioneers.

The officers elected for the coming year are: President, John S. Pillsbury, Minneapolis; first vice president, E. W. Durant, Stillwater; second vice president, William Pitt Murray, St. Paul, secretary, M. G. O'Connor, St. Paul.

An old-fashioned stage coach took a party of the members early in the day to the grounds, and plied to and from the Log Cabin during the day.

Postponed.

A very important meeting of the executive committee of the State Editorial association was held at the Windsor hotel, at St. Paul, for the purpose of making changes and fixing dates in connection with the dedication of the Minnesota building at the Pan-American exposition and the trip of the association to Buffalo. The day upon which the editors are to leave Minneapolis was changed from June 1 to June 15.

Appointed.

The state grain and warehouse commission has announced the following appointments: Chief grain inspector, L. D. Marshall, of Minneapolis; chief deputy at Minneapolis, J. N. Barnard, of Duluth; chief deputy at Duluth, F. W. Eve.

News in Brief.

The state game and fish commission secured 25,000 brook trout fry at Osceola, Wis., which will be raised at Willow Brook hatchery for breeding purposes.

Postoffices have been established at Dock, Roseau county, and at Graceland, Chippewa county.

June 18 will be Minnesota day at the Buffalo exposition. It has been formally designated by Gov. Van Sant. According to the present plans, there will be such a demonstration that day at the state building that the exposition will be forcibly notified of the existence of Minnesota.

Gov. Van Sant has appointed the following board of optometry: Alexander Sweningsen, Moorhead; J. W. Grainger, Rochester; F. A. Upham, St. Paul; H. M. Hitchcock, Redwood Falls; C. A. Snell, Minneapolis.

The state board of arbitration and conciliation met in the office of Norman Fetter, St. Paul. J. W. Dreger, Minneapolis, was elected president, and Henry W. Goetzinger, of St. Paul, secretary.

The question of establishing a milk condensing factory at Rochester is being considered.

In a quarrel between two 11-year-old pupils of the Crookston central school, Eddie Millette was stabbed in the shoulder by Joseph Prudhomme.

Acting in accordance with a law passed by the last legislature, State Auditor Dunn is taking the preliminary steps to selling the 6,400 acres of public building lands in Kandiyohi, deeded the state by an act of congress Feb. 26, 1857. The lands are better known as the "state capitol lands," there being a belief at one time that the lands were given the state for the purpose of erecting a capitol thereon.

The passenger elevators in 20 buildings in Minneapolis carry about 70,000 persons in a single day.

WOULD AMEND AMENDMENT.

Cuban Constitutional Commissioners Submit Majority and Minority Reports to the Convention.

Havana, May 21.—The committee on relations of the Cuban constitutional convention submitted majority and minority reports to the convention Monday. The majority report in an introduction quotes article one of the treaty of Paris, the joint resolution of the United States congress and the Platt amendment, and then proceeds as follows:

"Inasmuch as Secretary Root, being authorized by President McKinley, says that the Platt law has for its object the guaranteeing of the independence of Cuba and does not mean interference with its government, or the exercise of a protectorate or of sovereignty, and also that intervention will only take place when independence is endangered by outside powers or grave interior disturbances, creating anarchy; and, inasmuch as Secretary Root has said that the naval stations will not be used for vantage points of intervention, but only to protect Cuba against foreign powers, we report as follows:

"That, in virtue of the fact that the Platt law, in its preamble, says it is a fulfillment of the joint resolution and has been adopted by congress with the principal object of establishing independence, we do propose to the convention to accept the following as an appendix to the constitution.'"

The first, second, fourth and fifth clauses are quoted in their entirety. The third clause has the following addition: "It being understood that the United States have the right to intervene to prevent the action of a foreign power or disturbances causing a state of anarchy and that the intervention shall always be the act of the United States and not of isolated agents. The intervention shall suppose neither sovereignty nor a protectorate and shall only last sufficiently long to establish normal conditions. Said intervention, it is also understood, shall not have the right to interfere in the government, but only the right to preserve independence."

An addition to the sixth clause says that the ownership of the Isle of Pines shall be settled by a future treaty.

An addition to the seventh clause says: "It shall be understood that the naval stations do not give the United States the right to interfere with the interior government, but are established for the sole purpose of protecting American waters from foreign invasion directed against Cuba or the United States. Cuba will sell or lease the necessary lands at points to be agreed upon later."

An addition to the eighth clause says that the government of Cuba suggests at the same time a treaty of commerce based upon reciprocity.

The minority report says:

"The explanations given to the commission in Washington show that the Platt law does not express the wishes of the United States. It was intended to protect the independence of Cuba, but the wording gives other interpretations. The United States are inconsistent in asking naval stations, when the amendment provides that no concessions shall be given to foreign powers. Such a demand raises the question whether the United States do not consider Cuba a part of their possessions."

The report of the minority virtually accepts the first and second clauses. For the third clause the following is substituted: "That the government of Cuba subscribes to the Monroe doctrine and will help the United States to enforce it against other nations trying to violate it."

For the fourth clause the following is substituted: "Cuba does not recognize acts of intervention which are not in conformity with the Foraker resolution and the laws of the United States."

The seventh clause reads: "Cuba will maintain naval stations, handing them over to the United States in time of war."

The report of the minority recommends a commercial treaty based upon reciprocity.

The report of the majority has caused considerable surprise. It was generally believed that the committee on relations would recommend acceptance of the Platt amendment on the basis of the interpretation given by Secretary Root, but it was not expected that such additions would be made to various clauses as the majority recommends.

OHIO LAUNCHED.

Presence of President McKinley Draws Thousands to Witness the Ceremonies.

San Francisco, May 20.—When it became generally known Saturday morning that the president was to attend the launching of the battleship Ohio most of the population of San Francisco and vicinity seemed to be moving towards the Union iron works. Although the time for the launching was set for 12:26 p. m., the people commenced to gather about the iron works many hours before. Only a few were allowed to enter the inclosure surrounding the ways, but thousands of spectators clustered the bluffs overlooking the works. On the bay shore, on the further side from the ship, of the cove into which the Ohio glided, stands had been erected and they were black with people at an early hour. On the bay the scene was most animated. Every pleasure craft and steamer, sailboat and rowboat that could be pressed into service hovered around the ship, and these were kept back with difficulty by the patrol of tugs. It was estimated that fully 50,000 people saw the big battleship plunge into the water.

As had been planned the army transport tug Slocum conveyed the presidential party to the Union iron works, leaving the transport wharf at ten a. m. The president met the employes of the iron works upon his arrival and was presented with a beautiful souvenir of the occasion which the men had prepared for him as a gift. The president made a few remarks, but there was no other speech-making. At the launching Miss Barker, a niece of Mrs. McKinley, pressed the button which released the Ohio from its berth on shore and started the vessel for the bar. As the ship glided down the ways Miss Helen Deshler smashed the bottle of champagne which hung from its bow and conferred upon the great fighting machine the name which it is hereafter to bear in the American navy.

OVER THE FALLS.

An Aged Man Jumps Into Niagara River and Is Swept to His Death.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 20.—Between four and five o'clock Sunday afternoon a man supposed to be William Gardhouse, of Brampton, Ontario, committed suicide by leaping into the river a short distance back of Prospect point. He was swept over the American falls in full view of hundreds of people who were in the park and about the point. He left his hat, $4.65 in money, his card and spectacles on the river bank. He arrived at the falls Saturday afternoon, stopping over night at a hotel, which he left Sunday afternoon. He was nearly 70 years old and his mind was thought to have been enfeebled.

"I don't want the whole earth," he said, looking her squarely in the eye, "but I wouldn't mind having a fair portion of it." She blushed at the compliment, for she knew he meant her the very first time.—Philadelphia Times.

"Well, good night," said Mr. Borem, finally breaking away; "I've had a most enjoyable evening. Er—by the way, I expect to pass your house tomorrow evening, and I thought I might—" "I'll be delighted," said she, quickly; "good night."—Philadelphia Press.

Hitting His Pa.—Wicked Willie—"Paw, I wuz good yesterday and went to Sunday school, when Tommy wanted me to go to Sohmer park and see the monkey in a cage. Ain't you goin' to give me somethin' fer it?" Paw—"No, my son; you should be good because it is right to be good." Wicked Willie—"Ah, gwon; didn't you tell me the last time you licked me that you didn't want your little boy to grow up good fer nothin'?"—Montreal Star.

PROFOUND CRAFT OF SPIDERS.

They Imitate Stamens of Flowers to Catch Butterflies—The Vanishing Spider.

Then there are the spiders that do sidesteps. They must reason, or some ancestor must have reasoned for them thus: "All of our enemies figure that we will run forward. Well, I'll just fool 'em. I'll take a hop to one side." Also when the nephila plumipes, a big black and yellow person that hangs in the web in plain sight, sees an evil-disposed bird making for her, what does she do? She vanishes. Run? Never. She vanishes, I tell you, says Harvey Sutherland, in Ainslee's. Stays where she is, but goes out of sight. She shakes her web so violently that instead of appearing to be a big, fat, juicy spider there is only a haze where she was. Pholcus, the long-legged cellar-spider that spins an irregular web, in similar circumstances swings its body in a circle so fast that it cannot be seen. Ore-weavers scatter rubber in their webs till they look like old things that have been up two or three months, and then they get in line with the chips and bits of bark that they themselves have put there. The trick of imitating spots on grass stems, scales on trees, lichens and the like, is wonderful. Some spiders have found it a paying proposition to look like the stamens and pistils of bright-colored flowers. There they stand by the hour with their yellow forelegs stuck up stiff into the air. A butterfly comes along and alights to suck honey. He never gets away alive. The resemblance is so close that botanists are deceived. One kind of a spider spins a little round patch of white silk on a leaf. It sits in the center. The outer edge of its body is a light, grayish green merging into white. In the center of its body is a dark spot. An entomologist was once quite curious to know what could attract butterflies to birds' droppings. He tried to pull one away from it. He found that he had made the same mistake that the butterfly had. The reason why it didn't fly away was that the spider had hold of it and was sucking its blood. Some spiders not only look like withered flowers lying on the ground, but have developed a perfume like jasmines. Some look like snail-shells, and one smart salticus disports himself on sunny walls and fences after this fashion: She walks hurriedly, stops abruptly, rapidly moves her jaws as if she were cleaning her front legs after she had rubbed the dust off with her wings, only she hasn't any wings. Some one of the horseflies behaving the same way opens conversation: "How do you do, sir? Nice weather we're hav—" "Help! murder! watch!" but salticus has him all right.

Mammoth's Molar Found in London.

An interesting discovery was lately made at Chelsea, which is exciting a good deal of curiosity. The Old Six Bells, in the King's road, one of the most ancient licensed houses in the west of London, has been in process of demolition, and the workmen, in digging the foundations of the new building, came upon an immense piece of ivory that was at first a puzzle to all who saw it. Communication with South Kensington established the fact that it was a mammoth's tooth. It is about 15 inches broad, nearly a foot deep, and weighs nearly 16 pounds. The tooth is in a perfect state of preservation. All the characteristics of this huge molar are strongly marked—the indented surface of the masticating upper part, the line below which the major portion of the tooth was sunk in the gum, and the sharp points of the prongs. It was found about six feet below the surface of the ground.—London Mail.

Draining Greece's Greatest Lake.

Lake Copais, the largest sheet of water in Greece, and one of the natural features of that country, has recently been nearly all drained off by an English company, and its former bed is now being cultivated with gratifying results, the soil being very fertile and well suited for cotton, melons, colza, beets and other vegetables. The lake formerly covered about 60 square miles, at low water, in the center of Boeotia, and near it was one of the ancient oracles of Apollo. It had only subterranean outlets, although all the principal streams of Boeotia fell into it.—N. Y. Sun.

Exhibits at Buffalo.

There will be exhibits from all over the world, at the Buffalo Exposition, which will prove very interesting to all who may attend, but no more so than the news that the famous remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will cure dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness and nervousness. To all sufferers from the above complaints a trial is recommended, with the assurance that when honestly used a cure will be affected. It also tones up the entire system.

STERILIZED BARBER SHOP.

A Famous Shop in the Carrollton Hotel, Baltimore, Maryland.

The barber shop in the Carrollton hotel, Baltimore, sterilizes everything it uses in the shop. The sterilizing is done by heat. The towels, the razors, the strops, the soap, the combs and brushes are all sterilized before being used on a customer. Where there is no sterilization, have the barber use Newbro's Herpicide. It kills the dandruff germ, and it is an antiseptic for the scalp, and for the face after shaving. All leading barbers everywhere appreciate these potent facts about Herpicide, and they use it. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

—Read the Mayor's Proclamation in another column.

—Charles Plath is building an addition to his residence on River street.

—The Slivers are to play a game of ball with a picked nine, Saturday afternoon.

—J. D. Young and family have a bran, span, new "One Hoss Shay." Which may be seen, well loaded, most any fair day.

—C. R. Carleton must be trying to raise oysters in his garden, judging from the number of old cans he has planted out.

—Several games of base ball were played last Sunday. Some people who would look better at church attend Sunday games.

—Last Friday, May 17, was observed in Minneapolis and many other places by the Norwegians as Norwegian Independence day.

—Eagle Base Ball Notes: "There were a large number present from Rockford, Watertown, and Waverly. Come next Sunday." ! !! !!!

—The dramatic reading, by Miss Lowe, at the Odd Fellow's Hall, Saturday evening was fine. It deserved a much larger audience than was present.

—One more week of school and the school closes. Children should not drop out but continue on to the close, pass their examinations and keep up with their classes.

—Rev. Savs' healthy complexion is largely due to his running his own lawn mower. He keeps things trimed about his residence. People may well pattern after his example.

—Health Officer Bronkow has Walter Brother's home quarantined for "Measles." The patient being one of Spence Brother's little girls from Williston, N. D., here on a visit.

—The Delano Territorial Association met with President Hoisington last evening. The next meeting is to be Thursday afternoon, June 20, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Carleton.

—Assessor Valentine Eppel was around this week helping people to count up their horses, cattle, dogs and other valuables for taxation. It is strange how many there are who go back on the poor doggies.

—Mr. William Dunn says he has killed a few thousand potato bugs on his patch this spring. He says they were busy depositing their eggs, in large numbers. Don't neglect your potatoes, attend to them in time.

—State examinations will be held in the Delano High School next week beginning Monday, omitting Decoration Day, and running through Saturday. It is to be hoped our pupils will do their best and average up with the best in the state.

—All patriotic citizens should close their places of business and fall into line on Decoration Day. The remaining old soldiers should be made to understand that the sacrifices of their dead comrades and of themselves have not been forgotten.

—Several neat invitations to be present at the commencement exercises of Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter this week were received in Delano. The G. A. College is becoming well known as one of the best institutions of learing in the state.

—Tuesday people were growing fearful lest the dry spell would ruin the crops. But on Wednesday morning their countenances looked almost as much refreshed as did the grass, and gardens, after the splendid rain. The timely rain was worth thousands of dollars to the country.

—An enthusiastic meeting was held at the office of Dr. Catlin Tuesday evening and further arrangements made to observe Memorial Day in a fitting and proper manner. The programme arranged includes an early start, exercises at both cemeteries and in the City Hall. Read the programme and be on hand and do your part.

—William McRobert's team created some excitment by taking to the woods above the cattle yard. The funny part of it was they took the village sprinkler to which they were hitched, at a two forty gait, clear up into the pasture. No serious harm done. But an object lesson give those who leave teams standing on the streets without being tied.

—There seems to be a strip of country about us that is getting pretty dry. We have had but one good rain this season. At Buffalo and other surrounding places several rains have fallen. Farmers in the immediate vicinity of Delano are complaining that the meadows are beginning to show the effects of a long dry spell.

LATER: On Tuesday and Wednesday nights good rains fell.

—All societies and individuals are cordially invited and expected to be at the City Hall Decoration Day at 9 o'clock to take part in the exercises.

—Prof. Hawker haying to speak at Watertown on Decoration Day, prevents his being at Delano. F. H. Lindsley has been secured for the Delano oration.

—People who have, for a few years past, been in the habit of burning their straw have learned a lesson; that even straw would be better than nothing, and will, this fall, no doubt take pains to stack and preserve their straw.

—Mrs. Alice Davis informs us that her daughter Stella, teaching at Herman, was by the school board, offered her old position for next year and has accepted. And that Flossie, at Princeton, had been offered her position, and would probably accept.

—Justice Billings heard the State of Minnesota vs. Thomas Janikula, on Tuesday. Mrs. Casper Janikula was complaining witness. After her evidence was given the lawyer for the prosecution moved to dismiss. The case was dismissed and John Renswick substituted for Thomas Janikula on a new complaint. Renswick was released on bail.

—Arthur Weise had a narrow escape from being drowned on Saturday. He was in Crow River, with a lot of boys bathing. While in the water standing on a rock his feet slipped from under him throwing him down on his back. Being surprised he could not help himself much. When going down the third time he was rescued by his brother Emil who had been bathing but was on shore dressing. Arthur says he will be more careful in future.

—On visiting the higher departments of the Delano High School Wednesday, we were pleased to note that good order was preserved and that the pupils were inclined to be studious. It is of little use to sit all day in a school room and idle away the time and annoy those who wish to learn. Principal Carleton was busy with a class in Algebra. Miss Gould and a number of pupils were arguing over the changes in a dead language. Miss Teeters had a number of boys and girls trying to find the distance across a street where a ladder placed in the street leaned to a building on one side would reach a window 20 feet from the ground; while if leaned the other way would reach one only 15 feet high. We only saw one Miss receive and read a letter from another pupil, and she blushed awfully when she learned she had been seen.

—It is well to know sometimes, what others think of us. A few weeks ago William G. Smith, Editor of Minnesota School Journal, visited Delano, and here is what the Journal of this week has to say.

Delano.—We found the teachers here all industriously at work. Principal and Supt. Herbert Carleton, who has rendered faithful and efficient service for two years, goes to St. Louis Park next year. The opportunity will be afforded him there to give more time to supervision. Gertrude H. Gould, as High School assistant, will continue the very satisfactory work she is doing. Rose Teeter remains in charge of sixth and seventh grades. Magdalene Klopsteg returns at an advanced salary. Rose Murphy and Marie Weber were not applicants for re-election as both of them have better positions in view elsewhere.

Delano has material with which to make a good school, equal to; if not better, than the average. The fact of a strong parochial school, is necessarily a weakness to the public school, although the most pleasant relations have lately existed between the conductors of each school.

If the district could be a centralizing point under the new law it could possibly build up a strong high school. It is no reflection upon Delano's teachers, the school board, or the patrons to say that the schools would now be more helpful to the masses if in the graded school system only. The principal needs to supervise more than he can when compelled to spend so much time teaching classes with very few pupils. The new principal is to be Mr. W. E. Judson, of Dundas. The genial priest of Delano's parochial school should join his school with Mr. Judson's and thereby secure rapid improvement in educational facilities in the Delano district

Proclamation.

Let us observe as a legal holiday, Thursday, the 30th day of May. I would recommend that business of all kinds be suspended. Let us, individually, make this day sacred to the memory of those who imperiled their lives for the cause of humanity, and to the welfare of our country.

ADAM HORSCH,
Delano, May 22, 1901. Mayor.

County Cullings.

The scholars of the higher grades of of the schools along the Soo line visited Minneapolis Saturday and looked over the city. They hailed from Buffalo, Annandale, South Haven, Kimball Prairie, Eden Valley and Paynesville. A photograph of the merry group appeared in the Minneapolis Times Monday. People have been in the habit of going from the city to the country to view the beauties of nature, it is but fair that those from the country visit the great busy city and get acquainted with some of the inventions and constructions of men.

Annandale Advocate Post: Albany, New York is the scene of another strike riot. It is about time to wipe out such evidences of barbarianism.

Annandale Advocate Post: Several of our valued exchanges are trying to tell us what a good thing the dog law is and how it will destroy a large number of canines for the public good. Certainly, certainly, brothers, so will a sausage factory. But the accumulation of a fund for the benefit of sheep owners, wrested by this law from dog owners whose dogs never saw a sheep, and could not kill a sheep to save its own life, is a fraud, and the condolence of it is equally unfair. The prize dog of hundreds of dollars in value rates the same as the little, worthless mongrel, whos only virtue is to please "baby." It is such unjust and obnoxious laws as this, that lead to law-breaking, perjury and socialism. Laugh and smooth it over, but every infringement of justice brings its punishment to men or governments.

Maple Plain.

The wave of prosperity has not struck the common people yet. But it is expected in a few days and everybody is happy on the way.

Farmers are still planting corn and will be during this week. There is being quite a large acerage of corn put in this spring.

Most everybody is wishing for rain. The top of the ground is getting very dry.

The last day of grace for paying taxes will soon be here. And some are asking themselves; where is the money coming from? We would suggest buy some more islands; increase the revenue, and hoist up the protective tariff another notch. This makes money for the millionaire, fries the fat out of the farmer, producer and man of all work.

Last Saturday two of Hennepin County's Commissioners were up in our town to look over roads etc.

P. M., R. M. Mills, has a lame foot, and has to employ a crutch to help him along. Yet he distributes the mail just the same.

Maple Plain will observe Decoration (or Memorial) Day in the usual way decorating soldiers graves at Lewis Cemetery. The rest of the exercises being in Coxes Grove, south of town, and will consist of speaking, singing recitations and instrumental music and a picnic dinner. Everybody is invited to come and see how we observe Memorial Day at Maple Plain.

The assessor is now going around with a grip and long face. Surely the way of the transgessor is hard.

Some of the farmers are beginning to fear that we will have another dry season like last season and the crops will be cut short. If we do, we will have to hitch on a few more islands of the archepelago to the stem of our public domain.

Rye is all headed out and the crop is looking fine, the dry weather is not hurting it any.

What the farmers need mostly now is a little more rain, a little more grain and hay and a few dollars to pay incidential expenses, such as paying taxes, going to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., etc.

S. R. Spates, of Markville, was calling around last Suday. Mr. Spates is the same piece of coin he was 25 years ago, 16 to 1; is one of the well informmen of these times.

The Maple Plain creamery is having their buttermilk ditch enclosed. This will be good news for the pedesterian and for the fellow who rides a wheel.

Hennepin Commissioners.

At the meeting of the county commissioners yesterday afternoon the contract for the plumbing at the poor farm was awarded to Charles Wilkins & Co, whose bid was $3,575. H C Akeley was awarded the contract for furnishing the county with "edgings" —slab cuttings—for fuel. It is estimated that edgings will heat the courthouse quite as well as coal and that thr cost will be 15 per cent less.

J. M. Sheridan was granted a licence to sell liquor in the town of Hamel. P. J. Thielen of Markville notified to appear before the board, June 3, and show cause why his licence should not be revoked. It appears that Markville, in the town of Orono, in which Thielen is in business, recently installed a cold water administration and complaints have been made Theilen because he continued to sell strong drink.

A resolution was adopted to the effect that when the title to the old Great Northern right of way, recently bought by the commissioners, is perfected, $500 shall be used in putting in shape for bicyclists. The contract for graveling the Bass Lake and north shore roads were awarded to Joseph Gleason and Joseph Anderson respectively.

A resolution was introduced proviging that the $15,000 paid for the old court house property be placed in the sinking fund. The proposition provoked considerable discussion. It appears that the last legislature passed a bill forbidding such a proceeding. The commissioners want to use the money to pay the county's debts, thus reducing the rate of taxation. -Minneapolis Times.

THE RULING PASSION.

On every vacant lot in town
Baseball the kids are playing.
And though in science they may lack.
Right with the rules they're staying.
They pick their teams with due regard
For vigor in disputing
And those who can't get in the game
With vehemence are rooting

The pitcher does contortion acts,
In faithful imitation
Of others who have greater fame
And hold much higher station
The catcher stands behind the bat,
Where signals he is making,
Then roasts the pitcher when on balls
The "man" at base is taking,

Foul tips go speeding to the street,
And now and then are shocking
The timid persons who are grazed
When quietly there walking,
At times a four base hit is made,
And there is praise unstinted
When o'er the "plate," though out of breath.
The kid was safely sprinted,

And now and then the players hear
A sudden fearful crashing,
Because the ball has crossed the fence
And done some window smashing.
A cry is raised—"Here comes the cop!"—
And then the kids are showing
How easy 'tis to make home runs,
In all directions going.

There's trouble all around the town
When kids the game are playing.
For balls they're knocking everywhere,
And ne'er for damage paying,
But some of them, in years to come,
May win wide reputation,
And be regarded by the "fans"
With foundest admiration.

THE CONTEMPTIBLE NEUTRAL.

The world was full of battle—
The whole world far and wide;
Men and woman and children
Were fighting on either side.

I was sent from the hottest combat
With a message of life and death,
Black with smoke and red with blood,
Weary and out of breath.

Forced to linger a moment
And bind a stubborn wound,
Cursing the hurt that kept me back
From the fiery battle ground,

When I found a cheerful stranger,
Calm, critical, serene,
Well sheltered from all danger
Painting a battle scene.

He was cordially glad to see me—
The coolly smiling wretch—
And inquired with admiration,
"Do you mind if I make a sketch?"

So he had me down in a minute,
With murmurs of real delight;
My "color" was "delicious,"
My "action was "just right!"

And he prattled on with ardor
Of the moving scene below,
Of the "values" of the some-wreaths,
And the "splendid and go."

Of the headlong desperate charges
Where a thousand lives were spent;
Of the "massing" in the foreground
With the "middle-distance" blent.

Said I: "You speak serenely
Of the living death in view;
These are human creatures dying—
Are you not human, too?

"This is a present battle
Where all men strive today;
How does it chance you sit apart?
Which is your banner—say?"

His fresh cheek blanched a little,
And he answered with a smile
That he fought on either side;
He was watching a little while.

"Watching said I, and neutral!
Neutral in times like these!
And I plucked him off his sketching stool
And brought him to his knees.

I stripped him of his traveling cloak
And showed to the sky—
By his uniform—a traitor!
By his handiwork—a spy!

I dragged him to the field he left—
To the fate he was fitted for,
We have no place for lookers-on,
While all the world's at war,
—Charlotte Perkins Stetson.

PEOPLE in the Philippine islands who have, for four hundred years, fought for freedom from Spanish tyranny, and for three years have been reported "well in hand" by the officers of Uncle Sam's army are still fighting for independence.

THE "handful" of Boers in South Africa that the English announced to the world would soon be dispersed, and that Oom Paul said would "stagger the world," some years ago, are still at war Latest reports say that they have applied to the Hague conference to settle their dispute with the British and that England is willing.

SOUTH Dakota Democrats and Populists are reported as favoring some other candidate for President than David B. Hill. Of course, why not? They are not made of the kind of stuff that flies like chaff before every wind. If they must have a New Yorker on the ticket they would gladly favor Senator C. A. Towne as a fit and proper man to place next to William Jennings Bryan, Bryan of Nebraska, and Town, of New York, what a tower of strength that would be; and how it would harmonize the East and the West. Hurrah for Bryan and Towne.

PRESIDENT MC KINLEY'S western trip is prononnced a grand success. The papers are praising his speeches and his great wisdom in keeping his mouth shut before election, and of opening it now, before the next election. Some of them seem actually to think that he is the proper person for the Republicans to nominate for a third term. To fill the position which President Washington refused. To occupy the chair for a third term after Thomas Jefferson had refused to do so. To try for a nomination as successor to himself for a third term, after U. S. Grant, the war general, had been induced to do so and gone down in defeat in convention. Let them nominate him. The United States is not yet ready for a king, nor for a third termer for president.

SOUTH CAROLINA is bound to keep before the public in some way. Now Senator Tillman who is just taking his seat for a six year's term in Congress and Senator McLaurin whose term would expire sooner have resigned from their offices, and propose to both come before the people for the long term allowing someone else to have the short term. This brings on an election this fall instead of waiting longer. Senator Tillman represents Democracy as the nation has known it for the past two Presidential campaigns. Senator Mc Laurin's candidacy hinges on what is generally accepted as Republican doctrine mostly. The contest is to be one of the hottest the country has eyer had and is to decide whether or not South Carolinians are for Democratic principles as declared at Chicago in 1896, and again in Kansas City in 1900. Senator Tillman is an able advocate of his faith and Senator McLaurin is said to be a staunch defender of his views. The contestwill be watched with unusual interest by the entire country.

THE Supreme Court of the United States has rendered a decision on the insular cases. That is, four of them look at the question kind of one way; four more sorter think it should be another way, while the ninth was neutral and went somewhat both ways. The outcome of the whole business being a sort of compromise arrangement satisfying nobody. The conclusion verifies the claim that the written constitution should be abided by until changed according to the plans made for changing it. So long as one branch of our government can depart from the privileges granted it by that time honored instrument, another will incline to do so too. Two wrongs can't make a right. The written constitution should be adhered to wherever our flag is raised and the territory claimed by the United States.

The idea of claiming land as ours for one purpose and foreign for another is absurd on its face. Land must be ours or it must not. We have no provisions for a middle course. People are citizens of the United States for all purposes or they are not citizens at all.

If United States citizens are in islands that belong to this free and independent Republic they have as perfect a right to trade, to sell and buy, unrestricted, in all the states and territories of the Union as if they lived in New York, Chicago, St. Paul or Delano.

If it is right to charge an import and export duty on goods carried between Porto Rico and the rest of the country, and Porto Rico is a part of the Union, what is to hinder the same authorities from charging the same duties between the rest of the United States and the District of Columbia? Or from imposing a poll tax of a dollar on all inhabitants of the country living outside of the District of Columbia who visit Washington to listen to the debates in Congress, or shake hands with the President?

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17, 1901

The pood bah of the army and the idol of pink teas, officially known as Adjutant General Corbin, has scored again. He will go a-junketing to the Philippines, and he will go clothed with authority to make any changes in quartering or providing for the soldiers that he may see fit without referring to Washington for appoval—authority which properly belongs only to the commander of the army, and which, as a matter of fact, Gen Miles has never been allowed to exercise. It is announced that Gen. Corbin is to go to the Philippines as a personal representative of Mr. McKinley and Secretary Root; that he is charged by the latter with the duty of arranging a scheme for the maintenance of the army in the Philippines, which can be in the annual report of the Secretary of War in the shape of a recommendation for Congressional action, and by the former with the task of finding out anything that can be made use of in his annual message to Congress Wonderful man, that fellow Corbin! If he had not got into the army, society, and politics, he might have made a first class confidence man. When it comes to persuading somebody over him to give him what he wants he never fails.

It begins to look as though there was truth in the story of the administration having succeeded in having the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the insular cases held back until next fall, because of its being adverse to the McKinley policy. The court adjourns Monday until October. It may hand down the insular decision that day, but if it does it will surprise men who are usualy well posted about such things, and odds have been freely offered, without takers, that it will not.

Representative Davis, of the Jacksonville, Florida, district, is in Washington. He says the people of Jacksonville are meeting the great disaster visited upon the city in the same spirit that the orange growers of Florida met the destruction of all their orange trees by frost in 1895—a disaster three times as costly as the Jacksonville fire, —and that the city will be rapidly reconstructed.

Col. John G. Madison, of Ky., expresses himself very vigorously about Ex-Gov. Taylor. For instance, he said: "Kentucky stands in a false position before the nation today. Within the state itself there has been almost a complete revulsion of such public sentiment as was opposed to the efforts to apprehend Taylor and bring him to trial, but outside people know nothing of this, or so little about it that it has not altered the impression that Taylor is the victim of prosecution. Many men who even hold Taylor blameless for the death of Goebel, now believe that for the good of the State he should surrender himself for trial. The testimony of former Gov. Bradley, and others, has tended to dispel the belief that a Goebel suspect cannot get a fair trial in Ky., and they concede that if Taylor is innocent he has everything to gain and nothing to lose by being brought to trial.

At the time of Goebel's death there was no doubt more or less thirst for revenge and a determination that someone should be made to suffer for his murder, but all that is now passed. Kentuckians are proud of their state and its good name, and to a man they realize that any injustice in the case of Taylor would be quickly taken up and made the pretext of attacks on the commonwealth. If Taylor will surrender himself, he can have as fair a trial in Kentucky as he could in the District of Columbia, and should he be acquitted, he can live in the State in perfect safety and at peace with his neighbors."

The first annual report of Gov. Allen, of Porto Rico, has been made public. Naturally, he says the government of which he is the head is the best that could have been given the island, and ingidentally he tosses a few bouquets at Congress for its part of the work. He explains the lack of progress on the island by stating the ease with which its natural products support the natives without work. This may be true, but it doesn't exactly square with the cabled departure of 400 Porto Rican laborers for Hawaii, where they hope to make a better living than they have been able to do at home, which appeared in the papers at the same time that Gov. Allen's report did.

There are some queer stories being told around Washington about attempts to manipulate the report of the Isthmian Canal Commission, which is expected to be completed in five or six weeks. The preliminary report which was sent to Congress last winter, it will be remembered, was strongly in favor of the Nicaragua route for the Canal. According to these stories, attempts are being made to have the full report modify the declarations in favor of the Nicaragua route so as to make it appear that the commission regards the Nicaragua and Panama routes as equally feasible, from an engineering point of view, and to get something into the report about the alleged political advantages of the former. All the members of the commission are gentlemen of honorable standing as well as of eminence in their profession and it is not believed for a moment that they will knowingly allow themselves to be used by the Panama lobby in any such manner. The Commission is already committed to the engineering advantages of the Nicaragua route, and with the political aspect they have nothing whatever to do and for them to even touch upon it in their report would be not only bad taste but going outside of their duties.

STATUE OF JULIUS CAESAR.

Great Caesar! It was ne'er
Thy dismal lot to holler
For being forced to wear
A saw-edged collar;
O mighty man, thou couldst pursue thy way,
Care free,
Since 'twas not given men to say
Of thee
That thou didst wear a made-up tie,
Or that thou didst display
A vest
Of ancient style! Oh, why
Should sorrow e'er have found a way into the breast
Of one so drest?

O mighty Caesar! Thou
Didst never bow
Obedient to the hatter's will, as I am forced to now!
Thou didst take from its peg thy wreath, and on that high
Imperious brow
Permit it lightly to repose;
And no old Roman fop turned up his nose
Because the brim
Or crown was out of style!
Ah, what a smile
Had spread across thy features hadst thou known
How men would bend to fashion's every whim,
And groan
Beneath the burdens they must ever bear
Who dare
Not don the things it suits them best to wear.

O happy Caesar! Thou wast ne'er
Compelled to keep a frail
Suspender fastened with a nail,
And thereby hold a pair
Of trousers where
They might serve best the purpose of their kind!
Care
Never sat upon thy dauntless mind
Nor added to thy miseries
Because that fashion bound
Thee in despite of all thy power to wear
Things that were wont to bag around the knees.

Imperious Caesar! No man bade thee don
A coat seamed up the back!
Thou didst put on
Thy light and airy toga, caring not
Or if 'twere frock or sack!
Ah, what
A joy was thine
That thou couldst go from day to day
Sans polish and sans shine!
And when 'twas time to put thy summer suit away—
When chilling blasts blew in the fall—
The good Calpurnia could spread
It on the board whereat thou brokest bread,
To deck the same withal.

DOLLY'S DIARY

By Ida Shepler.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

AUGUST 1—I am eighteen to-day. No one seems to remember the fact but myself. I feel that I have lived all of life worth living. I have made two lasting resolves to-day. One is that I will keep a diary of all my doings worth recording each day; the other is I shall never marry. Never. For a long time now I have felt that I must do something noteworthy in life; make some great sacrifice. Suddenly this morning it was borne upon me what it should be. I will be an old maid and devote my life to mamma. Poor mamma. Of course I must look after the comfort and well being of others also, but she first. I have heard that old maids are such a blessing to their family. We have never had one in ours. My aunts and sisters married young. This morning papa set his cup down very hard in the saucer—he must not have been quite well, for usually he is very kind—and said crossly to mamma: "Why in the nation did you change cooks again? That last one made coffee just like my Aunt Mary used to, and she was the boss coffee maker of the family. You are always changing cooks."

Mamma said the last cook was wasteful and not overly clean. And papa said she never did know when she had a good girl. Then he went out without finishing his breakfast, and mamma cried herself into a headache, and I had to sit up with her and bathe her head and soothe her. She said that she did not know what she would do without me. Well, she shall not do without me. I will stay with her forever.

August 2—And when papa came home last night he brought me the loveliest turquoise necklace—just the color of my eyes, he said—and he was sorry that he forgot until almost evening it was his little girl's birthday. Mamma did not act as though a thing had happened, met him with the same smile she always had. But I shall not change my mind. Let me see—the first step toward being an old maid is to look sour at marriageable men. I cannot do that. It isn't my nature to look sour at anyone, but I can avoid them.

August 3.—I'm more than ever now determined to be an old maid. This afternoon I went to see my sister Kate. She has not been housekeeping very long. And, actually, we thought Kate's husband was all that was desirable, but now I am not so certain. She was dusting out his desk when I went in. Presently she untied a packet of business letters to arrange them better and in their midst was a small envelope, directed in a fine handwriting. She opened it and read it, of course. Just then her husband came home.

"Charley," she said, "are you keeping this letter of Nellie Gwynn's because you had not the heart to destroy it? I thought you told me you cared nothing for her."

"Well, I didn't. And that must have slipped in there by mistake," he coolly answered.

"I cannot think Nellie Gwynn would have written such a letter as this to any man unless he had given her reason to think he loved her," Kate persisted.

"Now, look here, Kate, don't make a gilly out of yourself over that letter," Charley said. And then he went out, making no other explanation, and Kate almost cried her eyes out after he was gone. Poor Kate.

August 4—I joined two societies today, the Young Women Helpers and a missionary sewing society. Mamma scolded. Said she did not mind the former so much, but she thought that I had been to school so long that it was time I was taking a rest and having a good time. The idea!

August 5—Sister Kate said for me to say nothing about the words she and Charley had the other day. That she was all to blame, and she never intended to talk that way again to him. Well, I didn't intend to mention it. I called on my best friend this evening, Jennie Jones. We have been bosom friends since we were little tots. She told me that her best beloved cousin, Harry Jones, had come to make them a long visit; that he was out upon the lawn somewhere smoking, and for us to go out and meet him. I said: "No, indeed!" Then I told her of the vow I had taken. My, I would not have believed it of Jennie. How she did talk. We have always thought just exactly alike on everything before this. She said she had always told Harry so much about me, and had hoped that some day I would be her cousin. She said that when he heard this, which she was very sure he would never hear from her, he would set me down as crazy. I gave her to understand that I didn't care what he or any other man thought of me. I knew my own mind and expected to stay with it. Just then her Cousin Harry came in. He is nice looking, just the right height, and the color of hair and eyes I admire in a man. But I must quit writing such stuff.

August 8—Forgot my diary for three days. I was so busy trying to learn to make coffee as papa likes it. Jennie and her cousin called on me. Of course I was courteous.

August 12—Jennie's cousin wanted me to go riding with him last evening. I refused. How mamma scolded afterward. Said it would be an honor to be loved by such a man. That in case he cared for me, I would make a better match than all my sisters before me. I told her I thought she understood my life was to be devoted to her, and that I never intended to marry. She looked blankly at me a moment, and then said I was too pretty for such a fate as that. And I had thought she would be so rejoiced to know that one girl of all her girls would stay always with her.

August 13—Mamma must have told papa of my resolve. That wasn't one bit nice of her; for this morning he kissed me and said he was so glad that I was going to be his sensible little girl and always stay at home with him. He said that old maids were the most sensible of women. Now, then, that isn't fair. I never made up my mind to be an old maid for his sake. Last night as I came out of the hall where the Young Women Helpers meet, there was Jennie's cousin waiting to escort me home. This must not happen again.

August 25—Well, dear old diary, how I have neglected you. I feel guilty. I must do better in the future. It seems to me that Jennie and Kate and mamma and everybody have entered into a conspiracy to keep me going to picnics and all sorts of rural amusements and games, and Jennie's cousin is always around, and he don't try to hide his partiality for my company in the least. If I had not made up my mind as to what is the right thing to do in this world, I would be pleased with his interest, for he is so handsome and jolly—and intelligent, which is better than all else—so mamma says.

August 26—I shall stay right with my diary, my missionary work and my resolve. Harry brought Sadie Binkley to the play last night, and walked home with Nell Gwynn from the tennis grounds to-day, and Jennie whispered to me that she fully believed Harry admired Nell Gwynn. Mercy me. How can he? With her bold ways, her stubby nose, and the record she has as a notorious flirt. Besides, she is older than he is. What does a man want with a woman older than himself?

September 5—Old diary, I had almost forgotten you again. I suppose we must part company, for I would not want you lying around accusing me of inconsistency. Harry and I are to be married Christmas. When he came last night to tell me he was going home, I felt almost like crying. But when he told me that he loved me, I acted like a silly, I know, and I actually did cry and tell him I loved him, too. Mamma will have to do without me. I am not caring so much now about her missing me as papa. But then he left his parents when he married.

Fees of New York County Officers.

The register's fees in New York county last year were $103,000, the county clerk's, $43,800; the sheriff's, $38,400; the city clerk's, $12,100; the public administrator's, $10,478, and the surrogate's $6,400.

Silver Importation.

The United States imported $7,500,000 more silver from Mexico in 1900 than in 1899.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Denmark started last century as the poorest country, per head of population, in Europe; it ended as one of the richest. And it has to thank its land system and dairy system for the fact.

A scientific writer asserts that corn was once but a coarse grass, hiding each small seed under a husk. Cultivation has done the rest, which shows the possibilities of intelligent agriculture.

An American torpedo boat just completed at Bath, Me., has a speed of 34 miles an hour. The contract was for a mile less, but marine builders in this country are accustomed to give good measure.

The Deutschland has made the fastest single day's run—587 miles—and maintained an average speed of 23 knots an hour in crossing the Atlantic. The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse holds the second best record.

The Italian brig Anita S., which recently arrived at Nantes, France, was ten months in making the voyage from Martinique, in the West Indies, and was given up for lost months ago. The vessel is noted for being the slowest afloat, and during the past five years has several times been given up as lost. There was no mishap on the recent voyage, the crew were simply in no hurry.

The human body, it has been found, is shorter at night than in the morning, due to the weight of the body compressing the intervertebral cartilages. During sleep, or while in a recumbent position, the pressure being removed, their natural elasticity enables them to remove their normal size, consequently the height of an individual will vary from three-eighths to half an inch between morning and night.

In the new Philadelphia mint the vaults are so constructed that it would be impossible for a burglar to enter them. In addition to seven inches of steel armor the vaults are protected by a casing of stone which is so filled with veins of water under pressure that the smallest hole would release a flood of telltale water. The burglar of the future will probably have to confine himself to refrigerators and hen coops.

Another distinguished American soldier, with a record reaching back to the Mexican war, is dropped from the muster roll by the death of Gen. Fitz-John Porter in Morristown, N. J., at the age of 78. He was the son of an American naval officer, graduated from West Point in 1845, and was one of the wounded in the assault on the gates of the City of Mexico. Early in the civil war he reached the rank of major general of volunteers.

Mrs. Pitman, who lives at Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, was born on the same day as the late Queen Victoria. Both women were married on the same day, each to a man whose first name was Albert, and the two men died almost at the same hour. Mrs. Pitman has a son Albert of the same age as King Edward, and the old lady treasures an autograph letter she received from Queen Victoria in reply to one relating these curious coincidences.

Even the perennial Patti seems to be on the down grade of popularity. For more than a generation her voice has been pronounced perfect in tone and quality. She sang at a recent charity concert given in Paris, but the critics, while admitting that she yet sings well for one of her age, note that the beautiful, birdlike notes that characterized her work have gone, and that it is an effort for her to render the compositions that once she seemed to toy with.

The officials of the post office department at Washington say that the success of the many free rural mail delivery routes already established and the numerous petitions for extensions of the service, demonstrate that the experimental period has passed, and that the system has become a permanent feature. The routes have had a wonderful effect on the mail order trade of business houses, and a revolution in commercial methods will result.

The ceremony of the formal opening of the Pan-American exposition was one of great significance to the country, for the great fair in Buffalo means much to the American people. Vice President Roosevelt, in his speech to the thousands assembled, characterized the exposition as the place at which "all the peoples of the western hemisphere have joined to show what they have done in art, science and industrial invention—what they have been able to accomplish with their manifold resources and their infinitely varied qualities."

Down in Maine the agile "blind pig" keepers have devised a scheme for beating the liquor law by carrying around small flasks containing a single drink of whisky, which have come to be known as "sand peeps," named after a familiar little bird of that section which is all stomach and head. If the prohibition laws have done nothing else they have added to the picturesque nomenclature of the country, the list now including "speak easys," "blind pigs," "holes in the wall," "sand peeps," "bootleggers," "joints" and "blind tigers."

OUR INSULAR POLICY

Administration's Views Are Upheld by the Supreme Court.

Outline of Decisions in Number of Important Cases — Constitution Does Not Cover Island Until Congress Extends Power.

Washington, May 28.—The United States supreme court Monday handed down opinions covering all of the issues on the new insular possessions which have been in controversy. Although several of the decisions upheld the contestants on certain issues raised, yet in the most important decision, that of Downs against Bidwell, Justice Brown announced the sweeping decision of the court upholding the general attitude and policy of the government up to the present time.

The effect of this decision is to confirm the constitutionality of the Foraker act and to give congress power to deal with the newly-acquired territory in such manner as the legislative branch may consider suitable for the new territory. The decision also had the effect of declaring that the new insular possessions do not by virtue of the treaty of cession acquire all the privileges and rights of the constitution.

Summary of Decisions.

Briefly summarized the decision settles the following points:

1. That the island of Porto Rico is a territory appurtenant and belonging to the United States, but not a part of the United States within the revenue clause of the constitution.

2. That the Foraker act is constitutional so far as it imposes duties upon imports from Porto Rico.

3. That the constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest only and so far as congress shall so direct.

4. That power to acquire territory by treaty implies not only the power to govern such territory, but to prescribe upon what terms the United States shall receive its inhabitants and what their status shall be.

5. That it is doubtful if congress would ever assent to the annexation of territory upon the conditions that its inhabitants, however foreign they may be to our habits, traditions and modes of life, shall become citizens of the United States.

6. That the inhabitants of the new possessions, even if regarded as aliens, are entitled under the principles of the constitution to be protected in life, liberty and property.

7. That large powers are necessarily intrusted to congress in dealing with these problems and that abuse of these powers would receive quick rebuke at the hands of the people.

8. That duties collected under the Dingley tariff act on Porto Rican products were collected wrongfully and must be refunded, as that law applies only to foreign countries.

9. The right of the government to collect duties on Philippine products is extinguished.

MINERS MEET DEATH.

Dust Explosion in a Tennessee Colliery in Which Twenty-One Lose Their Lives.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 28.—A special from Dayton, Tenn., to the Times says: At the Richland mine of the Dayton Coal & Iron company, two miles from Dayton, at 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon a terrific explosion of coal dust resulted in the death of 21 men, all white, and most of them married and with families. The explosion was caused by what is known among miners as a "blown blast."

There were 34 men in the mine at the time. Four of these escaped with slight injury. Twenty-one were killed and nine were terribly burned, most of them fatally. The force of the explosion caused great masses of coal and slate to cave in from the roof of the mine and many of the fated miners were completely buried.

December 23, 1895, a similar explosion occurred in the Nelson mine, situated a few hundred feet from where Monday's explosion occurred, in which 28 miners were killed.

DISASTER AT SEA.

Steamer Sinks a Bark Off Halifax—Fourteen Lives Are Reported Lost.

Boston, May 27.—The steamer Ohio, of the Wilson line, arrived here Saturday and reported a disaster at sea by which 14 lives were lost. Capt. Hadaway said that on Thursday night his vessel collided with the Norwegian bark Eliza, hailing from Christiania. The ships were off Halifax. Fourteen sailors, names unknown, were lost. The Ohio's men and boats attempted to rescue the survivors, but the only one of the bark's crew saved was Powel Christian Paulsen, a youngster of 16. He was picked up after the Norwegian vessel had sunk. The Ohio's boats patrolled the waters in the vicinity for some hours without success.

Two Senators Resign.

Gaffney, S. C., May 27.—The acrimony which has manifested itself between the junior and senior senators of South Carolina culminated Saturday in a battle of fierce invective, and resulted in both senators forwarding resignations to the governor, to take effect in September. The action was the outcome of a hot debate and both senators will go before the people for their approval.

Trolley Cars Collide.

Albany, N. Y., May 27.—Electric cars racing for a switch while running in opposite directions at the rate of 40 miles an hour, cost five lives Sunday afternoon by a terrific collision in which over 40 prominent people were injured, some fatally and others seriously. The collision was caused by each motorman trying to reach a switch before the other.

News from South Africa.

London, May 28.—The Times publishes the following from Cradock, dated May 27: "Kritzinger's invaders of Cape Colony captured a British post of 41 men near Maraisburg after a stout resistance." Advices received from Lord Kitchener announce that since May 20 the British columns report 63 Boers killed, 36 wounded, 267 prisoners and 83 surrendered.

New York, May 28.—William P. Hazen, chief agent of the United States secret service bureau, with headquarters in this city, has tendered his resignation to the government authorities, to take effect on June 12 next.

ARE FOR REVISION.

The Presbyterian General Assembly Unanimously Votes to Modify Confession of Faith.

Philadelphia, May 28.—By a unanimous vote the Presbyterian general assembly on Monday adopted the report of the special committee on the revision of the confession of faith. The debate on this important question had extended into the fourth day, and to Rev. Dr. James D. Moffat is due the credit of having brought the commissioners to such a harmonious conclusion. When recommendation B was on Saturday adopted by a comparatively small majority, Dr. Moffat announced that in view of the divergency of opinion he would offer an amendment which he hoped would meet the approval of the entire assembly. When he presented this amendment Monday it was instantly accepted by the commissioners and the adoption of the report as a whole followed with but little delay. A viva voce vote was taken, and when 640 ayes responded to the question the commissioners arose and sang: "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow," which was followed by a prayer of thanksgiving by Moderator Minton.

Dr. Moffatt's amendment is as follows:

"We recommend that this committee be instructed to prepare and submit to the next general assembly for such disposition as may be judged to be wise, a brief statement of the reformed faith, expressed, as far as possible, in untechnical terms. The said statement is to be prepared with a view to its being employed to give information and a better understanding of our doctrinal beliefs, and not with a view to its becoming a substitute for or an alternative of our confession of faith."

The amendment was adopted by a viva voce vote, not one voice being raised in opposition to it.

The momentous question of creed revision having been disposed of the assembly proceeded to the consideration of unfinished business. New York was selected as the meeting place for the next general assembly.

SINKS IN LAKE HURON.

Steamer Baltimore Goes Down in a Disastrous Storm with Twelve Lives—Two Rescued.

Chicago, May 25.—In a storm that lashed the waters of the upper lakes the steamer Baltimore was sent to the bottom of Lake Huron, near Au Sable, Mich., Friday morning, and of her crew of 14 men only two escaped. Lashed to a heavy raft, the two men were adrift on the lake under heavy seas all day Friday, and one of them was crazy when rescued.

The following lost their lives with the wreck of the Baltimore:

Capt. M. H. Place, master of the steamer, Cleveland; Mrs. M. H. Place, wife of captain; stewardess; Michael Breatden, first mate; John Delders, second steward; Edward Owen, wheelsman; C. W. Sears, wheelsman; George W. Scott, watchman; Herbert Winning, watchman; P. Marcoux, chief engineer, Chicago; William Barker, fireman; P. Krueger, fireman; August Anderson, deck hand.

The Baltimore was a wooden steamer loaded with coal, from Lorain to Washburn, Wis. McGinnis and Murphy, the two men who were rescued, were picked up by the tug Columbia after being tossed and buffeted by the waves for 12 hours.

The full extent of death and disaster by the storm is not known yet. From Chicago to Ogdensburg, N. Y., the storm held sway and a score of vessels were sunk, wrecked, or suffered serious damage. The reports received from ports on the lakes told only of disasters in their immediate vicinity, and it is feared that other wrecks with fatalities occurred at isolated places along the shores. Anxiety is felt for vessels in midlake, which could find no shelter from the gale's fury.

At all ports on the lakes many vessels put in for shelter. Many that had started out met the gale and turned back. The storm was declared by marine men one of the worst in 15 years.

TROUBLE WITH GERMANS.

The Outcome of Unfriendly Feeling Against American Legation Guards in Peking.

Peking, May 27.—The United States legation guard has had its first trouble. Legation street is being repaired near the legation, and an American sentry was placed at the point with orders to direct people around by a side street. Everybody obeyed the request with the exception of the Germans, both officers and soldiers, who have caused the American sentries much trouble. One of the German officers drew his sword and charged an American soldier, who brought his bayonet to "charge," whereupon the officer desisted. Subsequently a German soldier charged past the sentry, who fired, hitting another German soldier near the German legation, a quarter of a mile off. This fortunately was only a light flesh wound. The sentry has been placed under arrest, and Maj. Robertson has instituted an investigation.

Date for Yacht Race Fixed.

New York, May 28.—The Royal Ulster Yacht club has cabled the New York Yacht club an approval of September 21 as the day for the opening contest in the cup races and that date is finally and definitely fixed. The cablegram received by Secretary Oddie reads as follows:

"Belfast, May 26.—Secretary N. Y. Y. C., New York: Date now definitely fixed first race 21st September.

"SCHARMAN-CRAWFORD, Vice Comomdor."

Crops Destroyed.

Charlotte, N. C., May 27.—A special from Raleigh to the Observer says: Gov. Aycock says all the low land crops on the state penitentiary farm known as Caledonia were destroyed in the recent floods. He says the flood damage in the state amounts to several million dollars.

Steamer Sinks.

Burlington, Ia., May 28.—The Diamond Joe packet Dubuque, southbound, struck a rock 18 miles north of here and sank in five feet of water in half a minute. Fifty passengers were on board. There were no fatalities.

Gov. Nash Ill.

Columbus, O., May 27.—Gov. Nash has been advised by his physicians that three weeks of absolute rest will be necessary to restore him to health. He is still in a weakened condition as a result of his trip to the Pacific coast.

THE SASKATOON DISTRICT.

One of the New Western Canada Districts—The Great Advantages of Settlement Where the Soil Is of Unexampled Fertility.

During the past year or two a large number of American settlers (those going from the United States to Canada), have made homes in the Saskatoon district in western Canada. They have found the climate all that could be desired, and their prospects are of the brightest. In writing of it a correspondent says:

The lands for sale are choice selections from a large area, and every farm is within easy distance of a railway station. Experience has shown that this district enjoys immunity from summer frost, from cyclones and blizzards. The South Saskatchewan, flowing through the tract, is one of the finest rivers in the country, being navigable and having an average width of stream of 1,000 feet.

The agents of the government of Canada, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in your paper, and who will be glad to give full information, tell me that within the limits of the tract there are two distinct varieties of soil. One is a rich black loam; and the other is a somewhat lighter loam, containing a small admixture of sand. There appears to be no appreciable difference between the fertility of these two kinds of soil. Both are alluvial in their characteristics; both are marvelously productive, and both rest upon a sub-soil of clay. The advantage of this formation is that it retains the heat of the day during the night, and is favorable to the early maturity of crops. Every kind of crop will here attain the highest perfection of quality. The land is admirably adapted for stock raising and dairy farming, as well as growing grain. Some idea of the richness of the natural grasses of the prairie may be formed from the fact that more than 200 tons of hay were gathered within a short distance of Saskatoon and stored up for use during the winter. A growth so luxuriant demonstrates beyond all possible question the suitability of the land for pasturing cattle, and no doubt this important industry will be largely carried on.

Nature has been lavish in her gifts to this territory. Not only is the soil of unexampled fertility, but the climate is delightful and healthy. Such is the testimony of every settler, and this testimony is confirmed by enthusiastic opinions from every traveler, explorer, missionary or newspaper correspondent who has ever visited this far-famed Saskatchewan Valley. In former years vast herds of buffalo came here to winter from the elevated storm-swept regions south of the United States boundary line, proving thereby the adaptation of these rolling prairies to the purpose of raising stock. The land is dry, with sufficient, but not excessive, rainfall, capable of early cultivation in the spring, and free from summer frosts. The configuration of the country renders artificial drainage unnecessary, and prevents the accumulation of stagnant pools; mists and fogs are seldom seen. The days of summer are full of sunshine, under the genial influence of which crops rapidly ripen. Autumn is characterized by an almost unbroken succession of fine weather, during which the crops are safely garnered. In winter it is cold, but extremely exhilarating and pleasant, owing to the wonderful dryness and bracing qualities of the air. The winter is a source of profit as well as enjoyment to the people, being far healthier than a humid climate.

Water and fuel, these two prime necessaries of life, are plentiful throughout the district.

Lights That Shine.

"Do you think the present generation will produce men as great as those who have gone before?" asked the worried man.

"I don't know," answered Farmer Corntossel. "It 'pears to me you don't hear as much about young men studyin' by pine knots an' taller dips as you did them days. Cigarettes an' fireworks seem to be more in demand now."—Washington Star.

Cheap Round Trip Rate Between St. Paul, Minn., and the Pacific Coast.

On July 5th the Northern Pacific Railway will place in effect a low first-class round trip rate of $45.00 from eastern terminals to Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. Dates of sale at eastern terminals will be from July 6th to July 13th inclusive, and the final limit for return will be Aug. 31st,1901. Destination must be reached not later than July 18th, stopovers being allowed IN EITHER DIRECTION within the transit limits.

This offers an unsurpassed opportunity for those desiring to hunt new homes and farms, to go into the northwest and look over the country, or for those wishing to visit relatives or friends or to make pleasure trips, to do so.

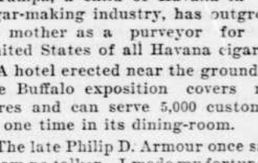
WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician. She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.



MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

VERDICT MEANT DEATH.

Aldrich, Mo., May 27.—Four of the best doctors in the vicinity have been in attendance on Mrs. Mollie Moore, of this place, who has been suffering with a very severe case of Nervousness and Kidney Disease. Each of them told her that she would die.

Hearing of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she began to use them, and instantly noticed a change for the better. Her improvement has been continuous since then. She says that the disease first manifested itself by the appearance of dark spots floating before her eyes. Her nerves were so bad that many times they would collapse completely, and she would fall down as if shot.

The fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills saved her after four doctors had given her up, has caused no end of talk in this neighborhood, and all are loud in their praises of this new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—which is curing so many hitherto incurable cases, in this state and elsewhere.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The State Fair.

Premium lists for Minnesota's great fair are being distributed. A copy can be secured by a postal card request to Secretary E. W. Randall, Hamline, Minn. The fair will be held during the week of Sept. 2 to 7, and it is evident that the splendid growth of this institution is to be continued. Expansion is the order of the day. The prize list has been revised by generous hands and the exhibits will be varied and comprehensive, special attention being given to live stock, and to field, garden and orchard products. The American Shorthorn Breeders' association and the American Hereford Breeders' association will each conduct their next national exhibit and sale at this fair, each association paying $4,000 in premiums. This will add two most important and useful features.

Prof. Lugger Dead.

Prof. Otto Lugger, the state entomologist and zoologist, died May 21 at his home in St. Anthony Park.

Prof. Lugger was born 56 years ago last October, in Hagen, Westphalia, Germany. He received a part of his education in Germany, but in 1866 came to America. He graduated later from the Johns Hopkins university, taking a special course in entomology and zoology. For fourteen years he has been professor of entomology at the Minnesota School of Agriculture, and before that he was entomologist in the department of agriculture in Washington. He is the author of several valuable scientific works, and has been a frequent contributor to scientific literature.

Crop Bulletin.

There were local showers early in the week in Hubbard, Becker, Clay, Norman and Polk counties, and in the extreme southeast. These showers extended over small areas, and they were generally light. In the Red River valley, oats, barley, flax and millet are being sown as the land is prepared for them. South of the Red River valley the planting of corn and potatoes has been going on during the week, and in many places it is finished; early planted corn and potatoes are up. Flax seeding is going on, the new breaking being used largely for this crop. Winter rye is heading, but it is said to be thin. Wheat, oats and barley are growing splendidly, with good stands, the recent cool weather having been very favorable for stooling.

Found Old Skeletons.

Ten skeletons were found in an old Indian mound on the farm of E. F. Koehler, a mile and a half west of Mound City, Lake Minnetonka. Koehler is a foreman of a street crew, and was engaged in clearing away a mound when the find was made. The skeletons were in pairs, about five feet from each other, and several are in excellent state of preservation. The skeletons have been examined by Dr. Newhall of Markville and Dr. Halgren of Watertown, and they express the belief that they are the remains of mound builders. An old-fashioned stone pipe of curious pattern was found in the mound, also some shells. There are other mounds in the vicinity.

Salaries Fixed.

The supreme court justices have fixed the compensation of the three commissioners who are charged with the task of revising the statutes. Hiram F. Stevens, the chairman, will receive $6,000 for the entire term of service. Daniel Fish and Thomas J. Knox will be paid $5,000 each. This will take $16,000 of the $35,000 appropriated, leaving $19,000 for clerical expenses. The compensation is considered low, as eight months' work will be required. It is likely that a considerable part of the appropriation will be unused. The report has to be filed by Nov. 1, 1902.

Horrible Death.

Mrs. Henrietta Kicker, aged 75 years, of the town of Candor, Becker county, was burned to death. In company with her son she was engaged in burning brush, when in some manner her clothing caught fire, and before the flames could be extinguished she was so badly burned that death resulted. She died in terrible agony. The son was also badly burned while trying to rescue his mother, but he will recover.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY.

Unexpected Death of John R. Tanner, Ex-Governor of Illinois, at Springfield.

Springfield, Ill., May 24.—Former Gov. John R. Tanner died here suddenly in his room at the Leland hotel, at 2:45 o'clock Thursday afternoon, of rheumatism of the heart. He had been confined to his room since his return from Chicago, last Saturday, with rheumatism on the left side, but the case was not considered in the least serious. Ex-Gov. Tanner had held various positions besides that of governor, the principal ones being member of the Illinois house, United States marshal of the Southern district of Illinois, state treasurer and assistant at the United States subtreasury.

He was for many years a member of the republican state central committee and chairman of the same, and was a candidate for United States senator this year against Senator Cullom. He leaves a widow and one son, Col. J. Mack Tanner, of Springfield, and one daughter, Mrs. John A. Barnes, of Chicago. He was 57 years old and a private in the Fifty-eighth and Sixty-first Illinois infantry regiments, and also a former member of the railroad and warehouse commission.

Springfield, Ill., May 27.—In the beauty of a perfect May day, and with all the pomp and circumstance of a military funeral and rites of the church, all that was mortal of former Gov. Tanner was consigned to mother earth in beautiful Oak Ridge cemetery, in a spot well shaded with trees and almost within the shadow of the national Lincoln monument.

STILL FAVORABLE.

Conditions in Trade Circles Continue to Be Encouraging—Fine Outlook for Crops.

New York, May 27.—Bradstreet's says: "The general situation is still largely a favorable one, the primary encouraging feature being the fine outlook for the country's crops. General distribution, retarded hitherto by the backward spring, has been stimulated by warm, sunny weather. Industrial conditions head the list of disturbing features, but confidence in conservatism and good counsel is widespread, and the effect upon general business, exerted by the largest number of men idle for several years past, has been apparently minimized. Reports as to quiet trade in iron and steel come from the east, where demand for pig iron is of a hand-to-mouth character. No special activity is looked for, however, in this branch, because large consumers are well supplied. Such unanimity as to good crop reports has rarely been seen at this period of the year. Much was made in speculative grain circles of dry weather at the northwest, but recent rains have placed that section in a very favorable condition as regards spring wheat. From the winter wheat belt reports continue very optimistic, especially favorable advices being received from Kansas, which promises a yield of 100,000,000 bushels, and the only anxiety expressed is for a sufficient supply of labor to harvest the enormous crop."

R. G. Dun & Co., in their Weekly Review of Trade, say: "The labor situation is the cloud hovering over the business world, but the difficulties are not sufficiently widespread at present to seriously interfere with the progress of manufacture and distribution. Some settlements of strikes have been effected during the week and others seem probable at an early date Meanwhile, prices held firm, the capacity of producing plants in the leading industries is well employed and crop advices are satisfactory.

"Failures for the week numbered 180 in the United States, against 185 last year, and 22 in Canada, against 20 last year."

THE FLOOD IN TENNESSEE.

Fourteen Lives Known to Have Been Lost and Immense Damage to Property Done.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 24. — The Knoxville sequel to the terrific flood in upper East Tennessee and southwest Virginia is just being realized. Conservative estimates from upper East Tennessee place the dead actually found at 14. Speculation, however, exists as to the number that may be found dead after the water recedes.

The loss at Elizabethton due to the flood is conservatively estimated at about $250,000. The damage to the town of Watauga is estimated at about $150,000.

Later details from the flood-stricken section show great damage done in western North Carolina mountains. Huntsdale, a new town at the southern terminus of the Tennessee division of the Ohio River & Charleston railway, is practically wiped out. At Unaka, the large railway iron bridge which spanned Chucky river has been destroyed. The lumber and pulp mills of Gen. John T. Wilder and also 25,000 logs and a large quantity of lumber property of the Unaka Lumber company, have gone down with the tide.

Dowie Must Answer to Law.

Chicago, May 25.—Dowieism must answer to the law for the death of Mrs. Emma Lucy Judd. By the verdict of the coroner's jury John Alexander Dowie, H. Worthington Judd, husband of the victim, and two deaconesses of Zion are held to the Cook county grand jury on the charge they are criminally responsible for the death of this woman, whose life, with that of her infant, went out after 16 hours of suffering without medical relief. Dowie was released under a $10,000 bond. The woman's husband, likewise blamed for her death, was released at the same time and with the same amount of surety.

New York, May 25.—A special to the Herald from Washington says: Instead of being assigned to duty in the United States upon the expiration of their present leaves of absence, Brig. Gen. Fred D. Grant and Maj. Gen. J. C. Bates will return to their stations in the Philippines.

SOME SPIDER STORIES.

Proctor Knott Vouches for the Story of the Spider That Caught a Mouse.

It is a curious fact that these floating threads from the webs of spiders will take the bluing off a gun barrel. I have been unable to find out why, says Harvey Sutherland, in Ainslee's. The threads of the big tropical spiders are distinctly bitter to the taste, but though the first thought a man has when he tastes anything bitter is that it must be good for medicine, the only use the healing art makes of spiders' webs is to use them to stanch the flow of blood. The kind of web used for that grows under the counters of groceries, and it was one of these spiders that caught a mouse. I will admit, right in the beginning, that this looks like a pretty large story, but it is substantiated by no less a personage than the late Proctor Knott, who was then governor of Kentucky, though his greater claim to fame was his speech in congress about Duluth, "the zenith city of the unsalted seas," as he humorously called it, which is very far indeed from being anything nowadays but a plain statement of fact, as he lived to see. Gov. Knott made a signed statement of the event and sent it to Prof. McCook, whose authority on the spider question nobody will dispute. He saw the spider shortly after she snared the mouse by the end of its tail, and while it was still alive and struggling half-way off the ground, and he saw it after it had been hoisted nine inches from the floor and all wrapped up in silk. He calls particular attention to the way the spider kept stirring up the mouse by biting it so as to get another line on it. I can just imagine that spider after she had worked all day hauling on lines and halloaing: "Yo-hee!" to her children that were helping her—if, indeed, they didn't stand around and let her do all the work. "Law!" she gasped, when the prize was finally landed in the nest, "I'm just done out! But my! 'Twas worth it! Phew! Why, come in, Mrs. Linyphia. Hain't seen you I don't know when. Children, get up and let Mrs. Linyphia set down. Ain't you got no manners at all? Run along now and don't be gawking at the company like you never seen nobody before. Yes, I done it all myself, and it just tuckered me, Mrs. Linyphia. I don't know's I'll ever get over it. I strained my back terribly lifting so hard, but I thinks to myself: 'I'll mebby never git another chance to git so much meat in to once, and my family is such terrible eaters.'"

And this adventure with a mouse is not the only case on record where spiders have done deeds of high enterprise. Hon. David E. Evans, of Batavia, N. Y., saw a striped snake nine inches long caught and killed by a spider, its mouth shut up with threads of silk and its tail tied to a knot so as to form a loop through which was reeved a cord as strong as sewing silk made of multiplied threads and run up over a sort of pulley of which a dead fly was the core. Maybe you think that is a pretty able-bodied yarn, but what do you call the statement that a Dolomedes spider has been seen to catch and land a fish? No, I'm sure I've got it right. It wasn't the fish that caught the spider. There wouldn't be any story in that at all It was the spider that caught the fish. It leaped on the fish's shoulders and bit and bit and swung ashore and fastened lines till it warped the fish out of the water. It wasn't a very big fish, I grant you, if one may go by the picture book, but it was a fish, and that is wonderful enough in itself.

THE SUSPICIOUS PORCUPINE.

Oddities of the Ill-Looking Creature as Viewed by an Intruder on His Privacy.

What is that far below me, facing up the road? A four-footed animal of some kind. A bear? No; I raise my glass, and see a porcupine, says Bradford Torrey, in Atlantic. He has his mobile, sensitive nose to the ground and continues to smell, and perhaps to feed, as I draw nearer and nearer By and by, being very near, and still unworthy of the creature's notice, I roll a stone toward him. At this he shows a gleam of interest. He sits up folds his hands—or puts his forepaws together over his breast—looks at me and then waddles a few steps toward the upper side of the road. "I must be getting out of this," he seems to think But he reconsiders his purpose, comes back, sits on end again and folds his hands, and then, the reconnoissance being satisfactory, falls to smelling the ground as before. I can see the tips of his nostrils twitching. There must be something good under them Meantime, with my glass up, I come closer and closer, till I am right upon him. If porcupines can shoot, I must be in danger of a quill. Another step or two, and he waddles to the lower side of the road. He is a vacillating body, however, and once more he turns to sit up and fold his hands. This time I hear him rattling his teeth, but not very fiercely—nothing to compare with the sound of an angry woodchuck—and at last, when I cluck to him, he hastens his steps a little, as much perhaps, as a porcupine can, and disappears in the brush, dragging his ridiculous, sloping, straw-thatched hinder parts—a combination of lean-to and L—after him. He has never cultivated speed or decision of character having a better defense. So far as appearances go, he is certainly an odd one.

Wrote Sermons in His Sleep.

Narrating "Some Remarkable Cases of Double Personality," Dr. R. Osgood Mason cites the case of a "young ecclesiastic in the seminary with the Archbishop ——, of Bordeaux, France, who was in the habit of getting up at night in a condition of somnambulism, going to his study and composing and writing his sermons in the dark. When he had finished one page he read it over and carefully and properly corrected it. A broad piece of cardboard interposed between his eyes and his writing made no difference to him. He wrote, read and corrected just the same as if there had been no obstruction. Having completed his work to his satisfaction he returned to bed and in the morning he had not the slightest idea of what he had done in the night, and no knowledge of it until he saw the manuscript in his own handwriting."—Ladies' Home Journal

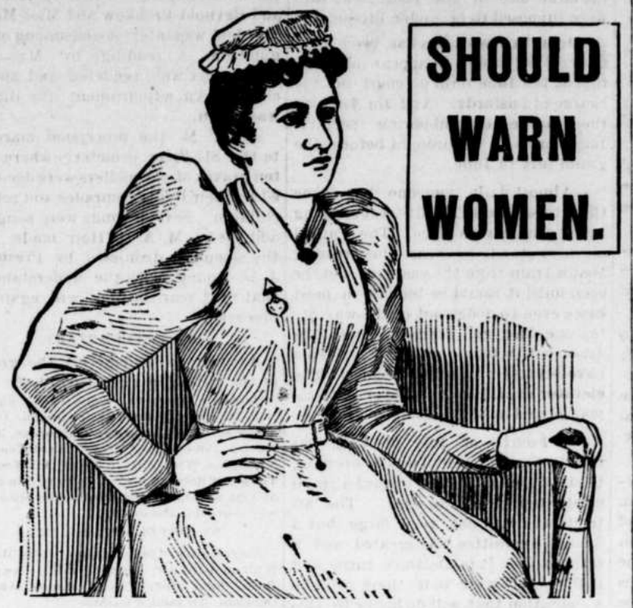
BACKACHE



MISS LUCY ANNIE HEISER, OF MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Miss Lucy Annie Heiser, a graduated nurse of nine years' experience, trained and graduated from the Homeopathic Hospital of Minneapolis, Minn., writes as follows:

Albert Lea, Minn., Nov. 8, 1899.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"Although my school does not believe in patent medicines, I have found it to be a fact that Peruna is a grand and valuable medicine. I have known it to cure Mrs. Sampson, suffering with an inflamed womb, aggravated by malaria, after the doctors had failed to help her. Another of my former patients suffered with a complication of female diseases; she was so thin, nothing but skin and bones, but Peruna cured her and she is to-day in good health and good flesh. Facts prove that Peruna revives lost strength and restores to the sick that most wonderful blessing of life—health."

Lucy Annie Heiser.

If all the tired women and all the nervous women, and all the women that needed a tonic would read and heed the words of these fair ladies who have spoken right to the point, how many invalids would be prevented and how many wretched lives be made happy.

Peruna restores health in a normal way.

Peruna puts right all the mucous membranes of the body, and in this way restores the functions of every organ.

From Mrs. Amanda Shumaker, who has charge of the Grammar Department of the Public Schools, of Columbia City, Wash., also Past Grand of Independent Order of Good Templars, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

COLUMBIA CITY, WASH.

"I can speak only good words of the repeated benefits I have had from the use of Peruna.

"Too constant application to work last winter caused me to have severe head and backache and dragging pains. I could not stop my work, neither was I fit to go on. Reading of the beneficial results from the use of Peruna I purchased a bottle and within a few days after using it, began to feel better.

"I constantly improved and before the seventh bottle was completely used, all pains were gone, my strength was restored, and I now seem ten years' younger.

"If I get tired or feel bad, Peruna at once helps me, and I feel you deserve praise for placing such a conscientious medicine before a suffering public."

Mrs. Amanda Shumaker.

Mattie B. Curtis, Secretary Legion of Loyal Women, Hotel Salem, Boston, Mass., writes:

Mattie B. Curtis.

"I suffered for over a year with general weakness and debility, manifested especially in severe backache and headache.

"My physician prescribed different medicines, none of which seemed to help me any until a club associate advised me to try Peruna as it cured her of constitutional headache and stomach troubles. I at once ordered a bottle and before it was used, felt greatly improved.

"I have taken four bottles and for two months have been entirely free from these maladies. Several of my friends are using Peruna with beneficial results, especially in cases of troubles with the kidneys and other pelvic organs, together with weaknesses peculiar to women."

Peruna is a specific for the catarrhal derangements of women.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Bowels Don't Move?

Caused by over-work! Over-eating! Over-drinking! No part of the human body receives more ill treatment than the bowels. Load after load is imposed until the intestines become clogged, refuse to act, worn out. Then you must assist nature. Do it, and see how easily you will be cured by CASCARETS Candy Cathartic. Not a mass of violent mercurial and mineral poison, but a pure vegetable compound that acts directly upon the diseased and worn out intestinal canal, making it strong, and gently stimulating the liver and kidneys; a candy tablet, pleasant to eat, easy and delightful in action. Don't accept a substitute for CASCARETS.

I'll bring a surgeon.—Jeweler's Weekly.

"I have gone 14 days at a time without movement of the bowels. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; I did everything I heard of but never found any relief until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement; it is such a relief." AYLMER L. HURST, 1629 Russell St., Detroit, Mich.

DELANO, FRIDAY, MAY 31, 1901.

DELANO DIARY

—Several of our citizens have radishes and lettuce from their gardens. They taste better when raised at home and picked and eaten fresh.

—Measles are reported in several parts of the county. At Annandale they are said to be quite fashionable among the young people.

—The Millers lost to the Metropolitans, of Minneapolis, yesterday, 9 to 18 The Delano boys were off color and wild pitching clinched the game.

—Parents should pay attention to their children immediately on their complaining when diphtheria is prevalent as now. The sick should be separated from the well and medical aid summoned at the earliest appearance of symptoms.

William Purcell, of Waverly, undertook to board a moving freight train yesterday and fell under the cars, and had one foot crushed. Dr. Chilton accompanied him to the city where he is to be placed in a hospital, and it is expected his foot will have to be amputated.

—Chairman of the Supervisors of Franklin, Turngren, had a narrow escape last week from a violent death. His three horse team took a notion to go ahead when he desired them very much to remain quiet, dragging the sulky plow over his prostrate form. He has not yet explained how his No. 11's escaped. He is still on top of the ground and has no desire to repeat the experiment or to be plowed under.

—A Deputy United States Marshal caused the arrest and fining of three saloon keepers in Delano last week. Messrs Schmit, Stein and Eppel were complained of as wholesaling without a license. It cost the two former over $68 apiece, and the latter over $70, he having to pay a penalty for a longer time. Ex Mayor Lohmiller says the man went to Watertown and told a lie about him, in order to get a saloon keeper to convict himself, and threatens vengeance if he ever gets an opportunity.

—Delano seems to have been greatly favored with base ball the first day of the week. Three games were played in the course of the day in the presence of several hundred spectators. In the forenoon the second team defeated Lyndale by a score of 17 to 11. In the afternoon the first team went down before the Minneapolis Flour City nine after a hotly contested game, score 7 to 9. Later in the afternoon the Delano Forresters succeeded in getting 11 scores while the Watertown Forresters were scoring 6.

—Our new village council, was thought to be so economical that no street and sidewalk grading would be done this year. It seems that work of this kind was refused in some places in the village. But now considerable is being expended on Elm Street. Luckily for those interested in having that thoroughfare put in shape, the "pull" of the aldermen needs that sidewalk in his business. It does look a little hoggish for councilmen to do most of the work about their own doors. But then, it has, usualy, been customary in Delano with those having the "pull."

—Councilman Conzet has, in a signed article in the Eagle of May 16, pleaded guilty to shooting suckors from the R. R. bridge on Sunday. So far good. An open confession is good for the soul." It now devolves upon the Recorder to see that the minutes show what became of the fine which should accompany the conviction of a person guilty of fracturing the village ordinance by shooting within the village limits. The President is Chief of Police, and it shall be his duty to cause all the ordinances and regulations of the village to be obeyed. People who plead guilty must pay the fines. And the "officers are sworn to discharge their duties." The Recorder so stated in a meeting at the City Hall. The duties here are about $5 a shot.

—Health Officer Turngren, of the Town of Franklin, informed us Tuesday that there was and had recently been 17 cases of diphtheria in the town. At that time John Matzko was quarantined with 8 cases; M. Schrepfer, 3 cases; F. F. Chancellor, 2 cases; Mary Rusick, 1 case. Two deaths had occurred; one girl aged 11 years at Mike Schrepfer's, and a child of two and one half years at Peter Kuka's. Guards have been employed to keep strict quarantine. Diphtheria is much more fatal than the prevailing small pox and needs fully as careful quarantine. Time and again has the necessity of quarantining diphtheria been demonstrated. People who seek to escape being quarantined are the ones to be dreaded, not those that are strictly quarantined.

—The veil of the Mayor's monument on R. R. Ave. has been the subject of much comment and severe criticism of the Village Fathers this week. After having been removed from its winter quarters, this spring, instead of being carefully housed it was left on the ground near by. The rains beat upon it; now the small boys beat upon it. The valuable structure is now fast going to rack. Next fall when chill November's surly blasts come, of course it will be necessary to have a new one, and our economical council will expend probably $2.50 or $3. for lumber, nails and labor, to construct a new one. Village property should be cared for, and not be allowed to go to pieces on the street. The people's servants should house the Mayor's monument well.

—The Skylarks went to Rockford Thursday and lost to the Toothpicks of that village by a score of 11 to 17. The boys say the feature of the game was the large size of the Toothpicks who were supposed to be under fifteen.

—John Renswick has has been held under $500, bonds to appear at Buffalo at the June term of court on the charge of bastardy. And for $1000 on the charge of subborno perjury. Both cases to be brought before the grand jury in June.

—Almost daily someone has some thing to say about Third Street crossing being a dangerous place. The Cargill elevator stands so near the crossing that a train from the east can not be seen until it would be too late in most cases even to dodge out of the way after one had got started across the track with a team. Several accidents have been very narrowly escaped. The elevator should be removed or a watchman placed at the crossing.

—A Fourth of July meeting was held in the City Hall Tuesday evening, to start the ball rolling toward a grand celebration here this year. The attendance was not very large but a finance committee was created and a start made. It is Delano's turn, and if the people go in to it there will be a clebration that will do honor to this section of the country for miles around. Patriotism is not dead, and our countay's birthday must be remembered.

—Decoration Day is set apart expressly for the purpose of honoring the heroes of the army and navy of the United States, especially of the sixties. Many people don't seem to have learned this fact, or neglect to observe it. Some pay no attention to the old soldiers but drive to cemeteries where their citizen friends, or their own relatives lie buried and decorate their graves. This is good enough at any time. They can be remembered any day of the year, but on Decoration Day attention should be given to the graves of those for whom the day has been set apart. People should unite in making the day what it was intended to be, and in listening to the patriotic songs, speeches, and other exercises intended to teach patriotism and perpetuate tee memory of patriots.

—The following is Lincoln's Gettysburg speech delivered at the great national cemetery, occupying part of the famous battle field. The patriotic utterance of the martyred patriot are very appropriate for the Memorial Day exercises, and the reading of it, constitutes a part of the ceremony at the National Cemeteries: —

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war, We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that the nation might live It is altogther fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot consecrate, we cannot hollow this ground. The brave men living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

—The High School held State Examinations this week in all the branches and next week the summer vacation will begin. Reports have it that as a general rule the scholars are doing very well, and a large number of certificates will probably be received. Those, who, after a year spent on a subject, fail to pass it, on account of a little lax work or simply because they did not look at the question asked and thoroughly understand it, will surely feel aggrieved; while their more diligent and careful class mates will feel correspondingly elated, and be the better prepared in spirit and determination to forge ahead and gain the coveted goal,—an education.

It is said that after a year's study of German, four members of the class were able to pass the examination in second year work. That certainly speaks well for the students, and the instructress.

A good school is made up of willing scholars and faithful teachers, and we believe Delano High School is taking a brace along both lines of late years. Two graduates will be given their diplomas this year and we understand that the lower classes are exceptionally large, and filled with good material. Delano should have a good High School, on a substantial basis, and we believe that Delano will have such a school, considering the interest being taken.

—Decoration Day was duly observed in Delano. The procession was formed at the City Hall, and soon after 9 o'clock, A. M., marched to the Delano Cemetery. Marshal O'Hair headed the procession, followed by school children, old soldiers and citizens, on foot, awheel, and in teams. At the cemetery the old soldiers and school children strewed flowers over the graves of the boys of the sixties who now are dead. School children sang, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground". Rev. A. F. Thompson made an address. "The Red White and Blue" was then sung, when the procession reformed and returned to the City Hall.

At the hall "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung by the audience. Prayer was offered by Rev. Thompson. Mayor Horsch made an address, surprising our citizens with his eloquence. F. H. Lindsley made the oration of the day. Music by Herbert and Reynold Bronkow and Miss Mollie Maxfield was interspersed among other numbers. A reading by Mrs. Dr. Scheig was well rendered and appreciated. An adjournment for dinner was taken.

At 2 P. M. the procession marched to the St. Peter cemetery where the ten graves of old soldiers were decorated by their living comrades and school children. Several songs were sung, an address by M. A. O'Hair made, and the assembly dismissed by President J. D. Young, with the understanding that next year the day will again be observed.

DELANO CEMETERY.

At the Delano Cemetery the graves of the following were decorated:

Malcomb Anderson, John Bain. Charles Ball, Dr Perry Chance, James Dugan, Daniel Freeman, Jonas Johnson, olof Johnson, Jacob Kurtz, James Lyle, Oliver Steward. Lee VanEman, Len White, Bruce White, Alf Woolsey. The lot of Robertson's was decorated in honor of John and James Robertson who died and were buried in the south.

Among Our Exchanges.

Litchfield News Ledger: Mr. Rosing does not own the Globe. No, Jim Hill owns the Globe and the Pops ought to know it by this time.

Sherburne County News: St Cloud will not have a street fair the coming fall; some of the business men of that city were not in favor of the entergrize.

Le Sueur Sentinel: Pro-English papers in this country have headlines every once in awhile that read like this, "Keeping the Boers on the move." Well. The Boers may be kept on the move, but it it a clear case of unrest for the British, meanwhile.

News Ledger: It would make a mummy smile to read Jim Hill's comments on the moral stand he took in the late stock gambling circus; and it seems that he got a little to many bristles on to suit even his friend, J.P. Morgan, if that man means what he says.

Globe: Manila is rapidly becoming Americanized. Two army officers have scarcely been convicted, sentenced and sent over the road, when four more arrests are made which promise another crop of commissioned criminals. If this keeps on there will be no need to reduce the fighting force of the army.

Broad Axe: We are pleased to observe that the editor of the Midway News who in past years has been wandering along paths which traverse the forests jungles of republican obscurity, has finally reached a trail leading out into the broad day light. In the leading article of his last issue he asserts with great positiveness that "Socialism is the coming issue in American politics," and discusses the question at great length. Shake hands.

Lester Prairie News: One of the first skunk farms in this state is to be located at Carver, Johnny Funk having embarked in this enterprise. He is enclosing a large tract of land just west of the village along the H. & D. Rv. where the little animals will be kept. This industry has been carried on in Wisconsin and Michigan with varying success for several years until it has become quite firmly established in those states, and Johnny is of the opinion that with proper management it can be successfully carried on here and he surely choses a most suitable place for the experiment. We hope that no reverses may come to shatter his youthful anticipations in this his first business venture.—Carver Journal.

LeSueur Sentinel: Uncle Sam has two strings to his canal bow, and has worked them alternatley with good effect. Since we have been turning our eyes toward the Nicaragua route, the difficulties that surround the purchase of the Panama route have sensibly vanished. Latterly since we have again cast our eyes for a moment in the direction of the great French concession, the people and government of Nicaragua have removed some of the restrictions with which they had their line loaded down when they thought we were bound to come their way. Let us hope that the rivalary between these two competing routes may continue until we are enabled to secure one of them at the best possible bargain and shorn of all entangling requirements. We want a canal that we can control and defend if we build one at all.

Bass and trout can be caught without fear of prosecution now, as a defect in the law as amended last winter has been discovered.—Maple Lake Messenger.

THE MAN BEHIND THE PEN.

Morning, evening, early and late,
Rain, or sunshine, or snow,
Behold our friend of the fourth estate
In the hives of Newspaper Row!
Who so tireless day by day?
Who so modest of men?
Who so young, tho' his head be gray?
The man behind the pen.

Headache, heartache, merry or sad,
True to his chosen trust,
Recording the deeds of the good and the bad,
Gentle, generous, just,
Happy-go-lucky, fond of good cheer,
Little to show for it when
He balances books at the end of a year—
The man behind the pen,

Popular idols! Children of fame!
Which of you pauses to think,
That most of the glory encircling your name
Was born of printer's ink?
Towns turn out—the people shout
With rapture ecstatic—ah, then
Remember the wizard who brought it about—
The man behind the pen.

Morning, evening, early and late,
Rain, or sunshine, or snow,
Behold our friend of the fourth estate
In the hivesof Newspaper Row!
Who so tireless day by day?
Who so modest of men?
Who so young though his head be gray—
The man behind the pen.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

By Mrs. KATE LEWIS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 7.

Dear Sister and Father:

You will no doubt be surprised to learn that I am here; arrived last night, by boat, from Seattle. I am here traveling with Cousin Gertrude Gates, sight seeing. We enjoyed our trip on the broad Pac very much; was sea sick for a night and day; but I think it did me good for am feeling fine now. Were out of sight of land for nearly three days. Were up on the hurricane deck when the boat was at an angle of 70 degrees so you can imagine it was a little rough. But the ocean is beautiful, we were at Victoria for four hours; so we had a chance to look the city over quite a little. I have been there before. Last night we anchored in Golden Gate harbor, and the harbor and location of the city is beautiful. We were anchored right under the fort. They fired the sunrire salute over our heads, the guns from the Presidio answering back. This, after a few days looking over, is a most interesting city. We went out to Berkelay University, Alemeda; visited Golden Gate Park, and Cliff house. And oh the grandeur; I could not possibly describe it. Trees and shrubs in park, from all parts of the world. Visited Mark Hopkin's art gallery on Knop Hill. Then we went to Palo Alto, and visited Stanford U. the grandeur here surpasses anything one could dream of, the museam and art gallery are very fine. Then we go to Santa Cruz, a quaint old Spanish town: walked a mile and half around beach, with birds flying in and out; and the roar of the surf as it would break on the rocks made me understand what I heard Pa say of the "Rock bound coast of Maine." Then to Monterey, to see Del Monte hotel, and surely the grounds are Paradise on earth, trees and flowring shurbs, from all parts of the world, and on such a gigantic scale one could not imagine it or describe it, the different kinds of palm trees are such a delight to me. Then over to Santa Barbara by train passing through magnificent scenery, rugged mountains and rolling hills with vineyard clear to the top, orange and lemon groves, olives and almond, also peach, prunes, apricot and apple. And the flowers, just a garden everywhere, visited the quant old mission with a monk for a guide through the wonderful building and tombs. Then to "Ventura by the sea," the home of Romance, took a little tin train here that took us up into the mountains in to the Ojac valley the most beautiful place one could imagine then we took surrey and drove to the top of Sulphur mountain, from whose dizzy heights we look down on the valley; a perfect panorama of loveliness, beyond description, but that winding road on the cliffs where we looked down hundreds of feet, almost gives me the night mare to think of it. Tomorrow night we will be in Pasadena, I will write more there.

We are delightfully located in a private boarding house can see from the window orange and lemon trees loaded with fruit, oranges rotting on the the ground a giant magnolia in bloom and different varieties of palms and pepper trees. This is the most beautiful country I have seen yet shall remain here some little time to get rested.

With love to all,

County Cullings.

The June meeting of the Meeker County Buttermakers and Creamery Managers Association will be held at the Casey Creamery, on Thursday, June 6. Addresses are to be made by Gov. Van Sant, W. W. P. McConnell, State Dairy Commissioner: Prof. T. L. Haecker, State Agricultural School; B. D. White, State Food and Dairy Department. A general outdoor picnic will be given. Lunch baskets are to be taken along. The Casey creamery is three miles southwest of Darwin, six miles from Dassel and eight miles from Litchfield. Our Wright County creamery men would do well to attend. The meeting will surely be interesting and instructive.

One of the most remarkable but least-noticed facts in connection with the war in the Transvaal is the extreme youth of a large part of General DeWet's army. When hostilities broke out almost every grown man enlisted, even the enfeebled, but the pace has been too rapid for the venerable burghers. As they were killed or incapacitated their places have gradually been taken by mere school-children, many only thirteen or fourteen years of age. Under the title of "The Youngest Soldiers in the World," in the June Cosmopolitan Allen Sangree throws more light on the make up and life of General DeWet's commandoes than anything hitherto published. The native, simple letter from fourteen year old Deneys Reitz to his father, the Secretary of State of the Transvaal Republic, has seldom been equaled for vital interest by any carefully written article on the war.

Tales of Travelers.

William Kennedy, an attorney of Minneapolis, is spending a few days in Mankato, en route to his home from Denver, Col. He went to Colorado last October for his health. He is now robust and strong. On the return journey Mr. Kennedy wheeled it on his "bike" the entire distance, leaving Denver three weeks ago Saturday, arriving here yesterday. He will "wheel it" from here to Minneapolis.—Mankato Review.

THE meeting of the American Medical Association, at St. Paul, this week, was one of the largest yet held. It is claimed to be the largest association of the kind in the world. There were thirteen sections all holding interesting and important meetings at once. Some of the greatest and most advanced men in the sciences of medicine and surgery, in the world, were present, and read papers or participated in the discussion of advancement made. Many new ideas were received by the great majority present. Meetings of this kind inspire all present with a greater faith in the achievements being done and possible to be done, for the relief of suffering humanity.

THE army canteen seems to be worrying a good many people, and it is expected it will be one of the big questions before Congress when it meets. It ought to be easily settled. Railroad companies, large manufacturing establishments and other employers are able to a very great extent to keep their employees sober. They run their business without "canteens". They get along, and manufacture, or carry freight or passengers without the use of drinks. Are we to believe that Uncle Sam's army is any harder to control? Are we to believe that soldiers need stimulants worse than laborers do? An establishment run by men who are full of liquor, would as a rule, not be a success. The best establishments are run by sober men. Even breweries and distilleries must, to get the most out of their capital invested, be run by sober men.

An army drunk, would not be the most desirable protection in case of an attack. An army where the discipline is so lax that 95 per cent of the men use intoxicants, as some claim is the case, in a portion of the U. S. army, is certainly too much addicted to drink to be an efficient guarder of Uncle Sam's honor. We don't believe, where there is no saloon connected with the army that any large number of soldiers would show such a rate if properly officered and instructed. We fear it is the officers rather than the army that desire canteens so much.

Maple Plain.

They say time and tide waits for no man, not even the present administration.

The superstitious notion that the old woman had who was making soft soap, is still entertained by many, that the world is flat or everything would kerflop. Some people believe in a millenium and the world's conversion. It might come to pass possibly but does not seem to be going that way just now. Everything is turmoil and strife. The gold dollar is the fulcrum that moves the world.

I find a good many people dissatisfied. Some are dissatisfied with their taxes (too high), some with their church, some with their political party, and some are dissatisfied with themselves; but the devil seems to be perfectly satisfied. His business is O. K., worth 100 cents to the dollar.

I see by the daily papers many are advocating the reestablishment of the army canteen—another stand in and pull for the loaves and fishes.

If I can get a second I move that Mexico and her bull fights be annexed to the United States. All the people in this country seem to want is war, money, and lots of fun. Crops will not grow under the tramp of the dragoonmen, nor under the wheel of a bicycle, nor on the base ball ground. Somebody must stay by the stuff, raise crops, sell wheat at 60 cents per bu. that the other fellows might live.

We believe the preachers mean all right and they think it strange because they cannot convert the people. Stop encouraging so much tom foolery and you might start a reformation that would startle the world. I know now days every person who does not fall in with the popular ideas and everything that comes along is called a crank, has horns, eats grass like an ox, and his finger nails are like birds claws.

All the papers advertise heavily the base ball games. A little fun and recreation is all right at the proper time and in the proper place, but base ball games are non producers and we think is being carried too far. The poorer class of people, by neglecting business for pleasure, are becoming servants of the rich. In a measure they are dependent upon them for favor etc.

The 4th of July will soon be here. Then there will be patriotism and oratory to burn. With most of the people this is spasmodic or periodical. We want men who are for our country in time of peace as well as war, early in the morning and late at night.

Our crop prospect is not so very flattering, and unless we have rain soon, they will be cut short. The crop season is starting in same as did last year.

Decoration, 30th of May, was well observed at Maple Plain; in the forenoon decorating soldier's graves at Lewis cemetery, after that, picnic dinner, speaking and singing in Coxes' grove. Not as large a crowd as usual but a very pleasant time to all.

School will close in another week at Lyndale.

Sam and George Coffin are home from their schools in the City, and will help on the farm.

School in Dist. 102 will close the last of this week.

Road working is now in order. Yes we need good roads and a bicycle path around the world.

Your correspondent has just finished up assessing the Town. Found some people afflicted with high taxes, others with rhematism and other chronic amusements.

Our village has seemed to have a prosperous spring trade. Farmers have bought quite largely of lumber and farm machinery. We are hoping for a good crop this year, for farmers will need lots of 60 cent wheat to help them out. This spring, farmers put out a large amount of small fruit, thinking that might help them out financially.

Rev. Hodgson preached an after memorial sermon at the M. E. church, Armstrong, last Sunday, which was interesting, instructive and to the point.

FARMER.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31, 1901

The Constitution has stood some hard knocks in the past from partisan decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court, and it will stand the extraordinary and contradictory decisions handed down this week in the insular cases. Although for the time these decisions give the administration a free hand in carrying out its imperialistic colonial policy, they will doubtless make enough democratic votes among the serious minded, who believe Congress to be the creature of the Constitution, instead of the Constitution being the football of Congress, as the principal one of these decisions practically holds it to be, to elect the next president. There is not the slightest doubt that a majority—a vast majority—of the people of this country regard the Constitution as the best protection of their liberties, and to doubt that they will resent its being juggled with in order to make it meet the exigencies of the McKinley administration is to doubt their intelligence. Democrats, of course, regret that this decision was made, but they find consolation in the belief that it will result in hastening the return to power of the democratic party, which has ever been the defender of the Constitution and believer in its strict construction.

Senator Bailey, of Texas, who has an established reputation as an able exponent of the Constitution, said of the insular decision of the U. S. Supreme Court: "The decision is certainly bad enough, but it is not so bad as the administration papers are claiming. The friends of the administration are congratulating themselves much too early if they think the decision relieves them from the embarrassment of constitutional restriction in dealing with our new possessions. They will find the question of taxation one of the least among the perplexities of a colonial policy; and they can only carry out their plans for governing these islands by setting aside other and greater constitutional provisions. The court is apt to find that the next case will not furnish it with a subterfuge like the words 'The United States' to which it can limit constitutional guarantees. It will be compelled sooner or later to meet the proposition as to whether Congress can enact laws for these insular possessions which are contrary to the express inhibitions of the Constitution. The decision, standing by itself, will become the source of endless mischief and confusion. But its harm will not end there. Following so closely upon the decision in the income tax case, it will inevitably convince the people that the Supreme Court of the U. S. holds the laws of Congress constitutional or unconstitutional, according as it deems them wise or unwise. With the wisdom of the law the court properly has no concern, and its only inquiry ought to be whether the law is or is not constitutional. For many years this rule was followed by the court, and then its decisions were respected by all men; but I regret to say that at this time the conviction is almost universal in the public mind that the most important decisions are political rather than judicial."

Presidential booms have been before now constructed of flimsy material, but nothing was ever flimsier than the material out of which a few republicans are trying to build a boom for Senator Foraker—the decision of the Supreme Court that the Foraker Porto Rico tariff act is constitutional There is one unsurmountable obstacle to Foraker's getting the republican nomination for President; Hanna. Hanna wants that nomination himself, but even if he didn't he would not allow Foraker to get it. Although the exigencies of Ohio politics have made it necessary that the two men should be openly on friendly terms, it is an open secret that Hanna hates Foraker, and the republican machine will have to undergo radical changes before any man can get the party nomination for President against Hanna's wishes. He may not be able to get it himself; democrats are afraid to hope that they will qe favored with so much good luck; but he will be able to defeat any other candidate and probably to name the man. So the Foraker boom may be recorded as having died aborning.

Much interest is felt in Washington in the Tillman-McLaurin fight in South Carolina, which will demonstrate how much truth there is in the claim that republicanism under the disguise of McLaurinism is making headway in that state. The point has been raised, and many believe it valid, that the paper signed by Senators Tillman and McLaurin and sent to the Gov. of S. C. is nothing more than a notice of their intention to resign Sept. 15, and that either or both of them can if they see fit, for any reason, or for no reason, withdraw therefrom at any time before that date and remain in the Senate. In other words, that the resignations, so called, have strings attached to them which can be pulled without the hindrance of anybody if either or both Senators desire to do so.

Although the general impression is that free trade with the Philippines until Congress legislates otherwise naturally follows the Porto Rico tariff decision of the Supreme Court, Secretary Gage has ordered that duties under the dingley tariff law shall continue to be collected upon imports from the Philippines.

Gen. Fred Grant seems ambitious to become the Admiral Sampson of the army. Hereached Washington this week and brought a bit of news with him in the shape of a claim for credit for himself for the capture of Aguinaldo. He said: "It was my troops that captured Aguinaldo; they were under command of Gen. Funston." Surely one Sampson should be an ample sufficiency for both army and navy.

THE FASHION PLATE CHILD.

I'm a poor little fashion plate child,
And my manners are gentle and mild,
But the trials I endure and the fun I adjure
Would set any other child wild.

All my frocks are quite fetching and smart,
But great rage fills my poor little heart,
When I foolishly stand with a purse in my hand
In a pose quite approved by Delsarte.

An umbrella I have, though 'tis plain
There is not the least chance of a rain.
For my shoes and my hat are not fitted for that;
My hair would be curled all in vain.

Little girls must all hate me, I fear,
For on Sundays and afternoons clear
They are dressed just like me for the public to see
And their comments are caustic I hear.

How I wish I could wear an old dress
Made of gingham, and then I just guess
I would make some mud pies that would open your eyes,
Though my pose might not be a success.
—Minna Howison Coale, in Little Chronicle.

AFFLICTED WITH THE FARM CRAZE

AMATEUR farming is a disease which is most prevalent among people who have lived for some years in flat buildings. It is especially virulent in the spring and summer, usually wholly disappearing during the winter months. In the first stages of the disease the victim is usually subject to strange, though harmless, illusions and hallucinations. He fancies that he sees in his mind's eyes a little house standing far back from the dirt road in a grove of stately oak trees. The front of the house is half covered with vines and climbing roses and the air is full of the perfume from the hay fields. Back of the house is a big red barn, wherein an imaginary horse eats non-existent oats and a deer-like Jersey cow chews a phantom cud.

Before the house the green turf sweeps down to the road in billows, and a couple of picturesque property lambs gambol gracefully under the oaks. Up the same oaks squirrels are running, waving their bushy tails and chattering defiance to even imaginary invaders.

In the secondary stages of the disease the illusions become more alarming. The patient sees people driving up to the house and offering large sums for the yellow-legged spring chickens which have suddenly appeared in large quantities in the foreground. The Jersey cow comes forward and modestly presents ten pounds of golden yellow butter, tastefully done up in a napkin and stamped with her coat of arms, for the possession of which the assembled multitude quarrel furiously, each of them raising his neighbor's bid. From the barnyard appears a procession of hens, each bearing a fresh-laid egg, with the date of its arrival written on it in indelible pencil. At this point the multitude falls down on its knees and each of the number offers all his earthly possessions for a dozen. Gradually these visions fade into one, and the patient sees himself sitting in an easy chair on a rose-embowered veranda, with a bag of double eagles beside him and a couple of attentive servitors offering him mint juleps and other cooling refreshments. When this stage of the disease is reached the patient needs careful attention and watching. He is likely to become violent and attack the janitor of the flat building or imprudently resign his lucrative position in a La Salle street insurance office.

But the crisis of the disease comes when the patient sits down and begins to put his illusions into writing. After a prolonged and painful struggle he will produce a piece of literature like this:

Wanted.—In the vicinity of Chicago, a place of from three to ten acres, with small house and barn. Must be reasonable. Rent for six months with view to purchase.

The patient will demand that this production of a disordered brain be promptly inserted in the real estate columns of some Sunday newspaper. His nurses and other attendants will, of course, strongly oppose the idea, but experience has demonstrated that in humoring the patient at this critical period lies the chief hope of permanently restoring him to health and urban happiness. In no other way can the antitoxin be secured which will successfully combat the amateur farming bacillus on its native heath.

The next day after the victim's literary effort has appeared in print a man wearing a silk hat, a frock coat, somewhat shiny about the seams, and an enthusiastic manner will call and ask to see him. At whatever risk, permission should be given for him to interview the patient.

"I have just what you want," the caller will begin. "Beautiful scenery, a small house, two springs of water, and as much land as you want. I will rent, sell or trade for downtown vacant."

"Where, may I ask," the patient will say, "is the place you speak of located?"

"About 60 miles southeast of Nashville, Tenn., will be the answer; "right in the great coal and iron district, and," lowering his voice to a whisper, "I may say to you that signs of oil and other minerals are plentiful in the land."

It must not be expected that this first treatment will effect a cure. The patient will simply take it as a criticism on his literary style and will amend his effort so that it will read: "On the north shore, within 30 miles of Chicago."

The visit of the next caller is likely to be followed by a slight relapse, depending upon the vividness of the description of the "simple little place" which he has to offer at one of the better known suburban villages along the north shore. He is vague as to prices and exact locations, but wishes to take the patient out on a personal tour of inspection. It would be dangerous to refuse permission to make this trip, no matter how great may be the apparent risk.

The patient will ride up the north shore on a suburban train and will be met at the proper station by the real estate agent with an impressive landau and pair of high stepping horses. He will be driven through winding roads and carefully laid out country places to a large stone structure, containing 20 rooms, with a caretaker's lodge in front and several cast-iron deer disporting on the lawn.

"Now, here," the real estate man will say, "is a modest, quiet, little place. It has all the charms of a truly rural situation, and at the same time is fitted with a hot air furnace and a driveway boardered with large whitewashed stones. I can let you have this whole place, just as it stands, including the ornamental, artificial ravine at the rear for $350 a month."

This treatment is likely to result in a great improvement in the patient's condition, but, sooner or later, it will be noticed that the phrase "must be reasonable" in the literary production already referred to "is somewhat vague and uncertain. I should have been plain about it and said $40 a month."

There is nothing the friends and attendants of the amateur farming victim can do when this discovery is made except to be patient and wait for the treatment to run its regular course. A few days after the second correction has been made a third real estate agent will appear. He will be so fluent and so enthusiastic that all the worst symptoms of the disease will reappear. He will take the patient out on one of the elevated roads and will show him a little toy house, painted in several bright colors. Then he will point out a plat of ground, measuring about 20x30 feet, in the rear of the house, and will declare that it offers a "fine opportunity for market gardening."

Only one more treatment is usually necessary. It comes in the shape of a man with a place to which none of the objections which have proved fatal in the other cases applies. There is plenty of ground about the house, it is located only a few miles from the city and close to a railroad station, it rents for even less than the amount fixed, and there are other advantages over which the agent grows eloquent. The patient, who is now well on the way to recovery, goes out to look at it. It is a small frame house, without shade of any kind and long innocent of paint. It is badly in need of repair and worse in need of cleansing. In the dirty yard around the house a couple of buggies and other vehicles, each of them minus at least one wheel, are sadly reclining. On the remnants of the fence a gaunt cat is perched, and a yellow hound dog is tied with a rope to a stake in front of a barrel lying on its side. In the background a brown and white billygoat is playfully eating the decayed remains of what was once a lawnmower.

"LIVE STOCK AND IMPLEMENTS ALL GO WITH THE PLACE."

"All the live stock and implements go with the place," says the agent, whose sense of humor has never been developed.

In nine cases out of ten the cure is now complete, and the recovered victim hurries back to close a lease of his flat for two years, with the privilege of renewal.

Once in a great while, however, a man has been so strongly infected with the amateur farming virus that even this treatment is not efficacious. He goes rapidly from one crisis to another, until finally he wakes up some morning and finds that most of his delusions and hallucinations have become realities. The Jersey cow may not voluntarily bring forward the pat of butter, and the hens may leave their eggs where they lay them, but, in general, he realizes all that he has dreamed of. It is almost always the case that he runs across the place which strikes his fancy purely by accident. He falls in love with it at first sight. Sometimes he is found later anxiously consulting a divorce lawyer in the real estate line. But in the first blush of possession he feels that he must be envied of the gods.—Chicago Tribune.

German Naval Programme.

The German naval programme, which, according to the original announcement, was not to be completed until 1916, is now, it seems, to be finished by 1906. In that year Germany will have at least 40 ships, 20 large cruisers and 28 small cruisers.

Miss Letitia Semple, daughter of President Tyler, and so a former mistress of the white house, is living in Washington and was present at the reception given to Mrs. Daniel Manning and the Daughters of the American Revolution. She was spoken of as "the little lady in black, with a Quaker bonnet," for few knew her.

Now comes a scientist with the declaration that the stomach is only a survival of man's herbivorous stage, not particularly necessary to the successful operations of one's internal economy, and a stomachless Chicago man is a living proof of the statement. If this thing goes on there will soon be no excuse for any pain but a toothache.

A committee of 14 British experts and scientists has reported, after 18 months of careful investigation, that there is no such thing as hereditary drunkenness, and that love of intoxicating liquors is in no case transmitted from parent to child. This does not lessen the reasons for temperance, but it does away with a non-scientific argument.

In 20 years Andrew Carnegie's benefactions have reached a total of $35,985,025. Since January 1 last his gifts foot up $22,827,000, an average of $195,000 a day. His gifts in America amount to $24,679,300, and in England and Scotland to $11,305,725. In the United States he has given to 86 libraries and eight colleges and in Great Britain to 23 libraries and six colleges.

The growth of the silk industry in this country during the last decade has been as remarkable as that of cotton and woolen manufactures. From 1890 to 1900 the number of spindles employed in silk factories increased from 718,000 to 1,426,000, and the number of looms from 20,800 to 48,200. It is estimated that the country now supplies nearly two-thirds of its total consumption of silks.

The rector of St. George's, a fashionable church in Brooklyn, N. Y., has deemed it necessary to issue a circular in which he announces that in future "audible courtship" will not be permitted in his church while service is in progress. He does not particularly object to such mild forms of expressing affection as the holding of hands, but the more strenuous manifestations must be reserved for less public places.

It is related by a traveler who was in Peking last winter that during the exciting times there a wealthy American suggested to Gen. Chaffee that citizens of this country might as well get a share of the loot that was being seized. He offered to pay for the transportation to New York of two splendid temple bronzes if the general would overlook their removal. "The American caught looting will be shot at once," was Chaffee's answer, and the rich man retired with what dignity he could command.

Poor old Arabi Pasha, the leader of the Egyptian rebellion of 1882, has been pardoned by the khedive and will be permitted to return from exile. Arabi came pretty close to being a patriot and a hero. Undoubtedly he would have been both had his revolution succeeded. His pardon is said to have been granted upon the advice of Lord Cromer, the British diplomatic agent. There is every reason why the British should feel grateful towards Arabi. Had it not been for his revolt they might not have the strong grip they now have upon Egypt.

It would seem as though the people of New Jersey ought to know about everything worth knowing concerning mosquitoes. A professor is giving them instructions and says—and this is a point well worth remembering—the humpbacked mosquito is perfectly harmless, and it is the mosquito with the grecian bend that raises the mischief as a malaria breeder. This should be a warning to housekeepers. If any mosquitoes come around and demand admission, just look them over to determine the shape of their backs.

Among the presents received by Mrs. McKinley during her trip to the west were an exquisitely embroidered bedspread from the Chinese residents of Los Angeles; a profusion of flowers from the women of the southern cities visited; a crate of strawberries grown near Houston, Tex.; dates grown and cured in Arizona; rare flowers from the women employed in the mint at New Orleans and a loving cup and a basket of trout from the women of Decatur, Ala., presented through two of Mrs. McKinley's former schoolmates.

DEPARTS FROM PEKING.

Von Waldersee Leaves Chinese Capital for Japan—Serious Affray Between International Troops.

Peking, June 4.—The departure of Field Marshal Count von Waldersee from Peking Monday was marked by a great military display by the allied troops, the booming of artillery and the playing of bands. The entire diplomatic body escorted the field marshal to the depot.

Von Rauch, the aide-de-camp, and nephew of Count von Waldersee, will remain here to escort Prince Chun, the emperor's brother, to Berlin, where he will formally apologize in behalf of China for the murder of Baron von Ketteler.

Tientsin, June 4.—There was a serious affray Sunday between international troops. Some British fusileers who were acting as police here sought to prevent French soldiers from house breaking, when they were attacked with bayonets and bricks. The fusileers, in self-defense, fired in the air. This brought a number of Germans to the aid of the Frenchmen. They numberd together 200 men. Five fusileers fired again, killing a Frenchman and wounding three others. In subsequent fighting, four fusileers, five Germans and one Japanese were wounded. The arrival of a German officer and a strong guard ended the fray.

New York, June 4.—A special to the Herald from Washington says: Neither Russia nor the United States will detail troops to garrison the posts to be established by the powers between Taku and Peking. Russia's determination to refrain from maintaining troops upon the territory of a neighboring empire is another indication of her purpose to pursue to the end the policy which she originally adopted.

This policy is absolutely in line with that of the United States, and, in fact, from what can be learned, it is the intention of Russia to act with this government in future questions discussed in Peking. This attitude has given the administration much satisfaction.

MANY PERISHED.

Over 70 Lives Lost in Fires Which Destroyed Plantations on Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

Oaxaca, Mexico, June 3.—Further details of the great fire which raged on the Isthmus of Tehauntepec for several days have been received here. Over 70 people were unable to escape the rapid progress of the flames and were burned to death. The fire started on a coffee plantation, and owing to the dryness of the vegetation it was soon beyond control and wrought great destruction to growing crops. Many thousands of acres of coffee trees, bananas, orange trees, and other tropical products were destroyed. A number of plantation buildings were destroyed. Those who met death in the flames were all families of plantation laborers, who, being unable to escape the fire, perished in their huts. The fire burned for ten days and was finally quenched by a heavy tropical rain.

WITHDRAWS HIS RESIGNATION

Senator McLaurin Notifies Governor That He Will Continue to Serve His State.

Columbia, S. C., June 4.—Gov. McSweeney Monday received a letter from Senator McLaurin in which the senator says:

"For the sake of peace, prosperity and happiness of the people of this state, I am willing to hold on to my commission as United States senator and to continue to serve the state as I have done in the past to the best of my ability."

Columbia, S. C., June 3. — Senator Tillman has written a caustic letter to the governor of South Carolina, reiterating his resignation and refusing to accept any advice from the executive, who may retaliate by appointing a man to fill out his term.

Texas Town Burned.

Beaumont, Tex., June 3.—The little town of Jasper, capital of Jasper county, was entirely wiped out Sunday morning by fire. Seventeen houses, including every business house in the place, and a number of residences were destroyed. The fire broke out at three a. m., and in the absence of a fire department the town was at the mercy of the flames. Previous to the fire the post office safe and the safe of the county treasurer had been blown open and robbed. The conclusion of the people of Jasper is that burglars blew open these safes and then set fire to the town to cover up their crime and create an excitement which would afford them an opportunity to escape. The loss is estimated at $100,000 by the fire.

Denied a Landing.

San Francisco, June 1.—Nineteen of the 78 Filipinos who arrived here Thursday en route to the Buffalo exposition will not be permitted to land. The physicians at the Marine hospital and the immigration officials decided to send them back to Manila for the reason that they are afflicted with loathsome and contagious diseases.

Pauncefote Going to England.

Washington, June 4.—Lord Pauncefote left here Monday night and sails to-day for a stay of some months in England. Although a vacation, it will afford an opportunity for conferences with Lord Salisbury and Lord Lansdowne concerning pending questions, chief of which are those in connection with the isthmian canal.

A Labor Parade.

Cincinnati, O., June 3.—A big parade of the striking machinists and other labor organizations took place here Saturday night, over 15,000 men being in line. The men were orderly throughout the line of march, which took up all the principal thoroughfares of the city. The strike situation here is unchanged.

Drought Broken.

Topeka, Kan., June 4.—A drought of four weeks in Kansas is broken. Rain fell throughout central and eastern Kansas all night. Growing crops will now be put in excellent condition and the farming industry will take on a new lease of life.

ACTION UNSATISFACTORY.

Administration Objects to Modification of Provisions of Platt Amendment by Cuban Convention.

Washington, June 1.—At a very late hour Friday night Secretary Root cabled Governor General Wood at Havana, making these statements:

1. That the president and cabinet had declined to accept the Cuban constitution.
2. That the declination applied specifically to all that part of the instrument that did not refer to the Platt amendments as well as to the latter.
3. That the constitutional convention must reassemble and after reconsidering the vote by which the constitution was passed adopt the Platt amendments in the exact form they were passed by congress.
4. That continued delay in meeting the terms fixed by congress simply means delay in establishing the Cuban republic and evacuation of the island by United States troops.

Washington, June 1.—The administration has decided that the action of the Cuban constitutional convention in accepting the terms of the Platt amendment Tuesday by the close vote of 15 to 14, with modifications and interpretations of their own, was not "substantial" compliance with our terms within the meaning of the amendment and Secretary Root will convey this intelligence to the convention. The decision was reached at the cabinet meeting Friday.

The three main points in which the action of the Cuban constitutional convention is regarded as unsatisfactory relate, it is said, to coaling stations, sanitation and intervention.

The cabinet held that the amendments and interpretations and the wealth of whereases placed by the Cuban convention upon the Cuban amendment amounted to a practical modification of the Platt amendment such as was beyond the power of this government to accept. The message of rejection sent to Gen. Wood advises the Cubans in unqualified language that there is no power resting in the United States government to change the terms of the Platt amendment and that this government insists on the acceptance of the Platt amendment, without amendment or qualification.

PASSPORTS FOR FILIPINOS.

The Request of Two Natives Wishing to Travel in Russia Is Granted.

Washington, June 3.—In answer to his application for instructions, Secretary Hay has directed Ambassador Choate, at London, to issue passports to the two Filipinos who appeared at the embassy Friday "as residents of the Philippine islands, and as such entitled to the protection of the United States."

The decision upon this point is of importance, as having perhaps some bearing upon the status of the people of the Philippines, Porto Rico and Guam. A year ago the decision was reached to regard the Porto Ricans as entitled to the protection conveyed by an American passport, but a formal decision of the test case was prevented through the withdrawal of the application. The Foraker act determined the right of the Porto Ricans as "citizens of Porto Rico" to the protection of the United States government. It is now held that the Spooner law conveys the same privilege to the inhabitants of the Philippines.

THE CURTAIN FALLS.

James A. Herne, a Well-Known Actor and Playwright, Dies in New York City.

New York, June 3.—James A. Herne, the well-known actor and playwright, died at his home in this city Sunday afternoon of acute bronchitis and pneumonia after an illness of eight weeks. Mr. Herne was taken ill in Chicago while playing in "Sag Harbor," a play of his own composition. He came at once to his home, took to his bed and never arose. It had been supposed for some days that he was improving, but Saturday night there was a change for the worse which resulted fatally. At his bedside when he passed away were Mrs. Herne, his three daughters and his five-year-old son. Mr. Herne was born in Troy, N. Y., February 1, 1838. He had a beautiful home in this city and was accounted wealthy. The body will be cremated. It has not yet been decided when the funeral will be held.

Street Railway Tied Up.

Terre Haute, Ind., June 4.—The Terre Haute Street Railway company was tied up with a strike at 6:30 o'clock Monday night by all the men in the employ of the company going out. The strike is the result, as claimed by the men, that the company has failed to give the firemen employed at the Brazil plant an advance from 12 to 16 cents an hour, according to an agreement reached in the strike last October. The company has posted a notice discharging all men who left the company's service.

Bank Quits Business.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 4.—The State bank of Indiana has voluntarily closed business. The gilt-edged assets and deposits have been transferred to the Columbia national bank, which opened its doors Monday. Other paper has been placed in the hands of the Security Trust company, as trustee, for collection. All deposits of the State bank will be paid dollar for dollar on demand over the counter of the Columbia national. Some of the stockholders of the State bank are stockholders of the Columbia national.

The Public Debt.

Washington, June 3.—The monthly statement of the public debt issued by the treasury department shows that at the close of business May 31, 1901, the debt less cash in the treasury department amounted to $1,062,476,494, which is a decrease for the month of $10,268,762. This decrease is largely accounted for by the purchase of bonds for the sinking fund and the increase in the cash on hand.

No Dowie Indictments.

Chicago, June 3.—Dr. Dowie and his followers have escaped indictment. The grand jury, after carefully considering the matter, Saturday decided that the evidence did not warrant the holding of the overseer or any of his followers for the death of Mrs. Emma Judd, wife of Deacon Worthington Judd, who died in dreadful agony recently without medical attendance.

REMEMBER THE HEROES.

Memorial Day Is Appropriately Observed Throughout the United States.

Washington, May 31.—Memorial day was observed in Washington with the usual ceremonies. The weather, which has been stormy for the past week, was delightful, and the exercises at the different cemeteries where soldiers are buried were largely attended. Not only were there many contributions of flowers and greens from individuals for the purpose of decorating the graves of the soldier dead, but the resources of the national government were added to these and all of the rich spring blooms of the botanical gardens, the parks and other government conservatories were freely placed at the disposal of the decorating committees. The public monuments about the city, most of them statues of heroes of the civil war, were handsomely draped with a combination of the national colors and mourning. The colors flew at half-mast from the executive buildings and from many private flagstaffs.

New York, May 31.—In spite of wet streets and every indication of more rain, Memorial day was observed very generally throughout this city. The principal event of the day was a parade of military organizations.

Cincinnati, May 31.—An unusually large parade passing over a short line of march was the principal feature of Memorial day in Cincinnati. The procession included large numbers of children and youth from all the public schools.

Chicago, May 31.—Twenty-eight Chicago grand army posts took part in the Memorial day parade, in which 1,500 veterans and 4,500 state troops and civic bodies marched. Gov. Yates reviewed the line. A monument to the dead of the Board of Trade battery was unveiled at Rosehill cemetery.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 31.—The graves of the 13,500 union soldiers and the 400 Spanish-American war soldiers buried in the national cemetery here were decorated Thursday with fitting ceremonies.

BOERS STRIKE HEAVY BLOW.

Gen. Delarey Attacks Garrison at Vladfontein and Severe Fighting Occurs.

London, June 1.—On the anniversary of Lord Roberts' entry into Johannesburg the country has been startled by the receipt of news of desperate fighting and heavy British losses within 40 miles of the Gold Reef City. The battle at Vladfontein, on the Durban-Johannesburg railroad, reported by Lord Kitchener Friday is the most serious engagement since Gen. Clement's reverse at Magaliesburg. It shows Gen. Delarey is in no way daunted by the capture of 11 of his guns by Gen. Babington six weeks ago. The garrison of Vladfontein, apparently largely composed of yeomanry, had 174 men put out of action. That their assailants came to close quarters and suffered heavily is shown by the number of dead left on the field.

The dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, May 30, is as follows:

"Gen. Dixon's force at Vladfontein was attacked yesterday by Delarey's forces, and there was severe fighting. The enemy was eventually driven off with heavy loss, leaving 35 dead. I regret that our casualties also were severe. The killed and wounded numbered 174. Four officers were killed."

EXTRA SESSION LIKELY.

Gov. Bliss, of Michigan, Thinks Legislature Should Act on Some Measures Shelved.

Lansing, Mich., June 3.—It is stated here that Gov. Bliss is very likely to call a special session of the legislature. It is known that he is dissatisfied with what the legislature has done, or rather with what it has not done. The governor so expressed himself pretty plainly. The following are a few of the bills the governor wants the legislature to pass during his term of office: A bill reducing fares on upper peninsula railroads, taxing sleeping car companies, taxing telegraph companies, an inheritance tax bill, an anti-cigarette bill, Dingley joint resolution providing for a separation of state and county taxes and a bill amending the general tax law on lines laid down by the tax commission. Those who have talked with Mr. Bliss look for a special session.

Hall of Fame Dedicated.

New York, May 31.—The Hall of Fame at University Heights was formally opened Thursday afternoon. Senator Chauncey M. Depew was the orator of the day; Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, officiated as chaplain, and Chancellor Henry M. McCracken, of the University of New York, made the announcements. Senator Depew's oration was delivered in the "statesmen's corner" of the hall, where the tablets were unveiled by representatives of patriotic societies from all over the union.

Machinists Strike at Chicago.

Chicago, June 1.—One of the bitterest labor struggles in the history of Chicago began Friday when the machinists presented their ultimatum to the manufacturers. Within two hours 1,000 men were out, and it was admitted by all persons concerned that the strike order had proved effective. All the largest firms in the city were tied up, either by the strike or by conferences that will result in a walkout in every instance where the employers refuse to sign the agreement with the men.

A Mob's Vengeance.

Bieber, Cal., June 1. — Incomplete details have been received here of the lynching of five men at Lookout, Modoc county, early Friday morning. The lynched were: Calvin Hall, 52 years of age; his three half-breed sons, Frank, James and Martin, aged respectively 26, 19 and 16, and B. D. Yantis, aged 27. As reported here, the men lynched had been suspected of petty stealing for some time.

Trolley Car Accident.

Wilmington, Del., June 1.—Three heavily-loaded trolley cars on the new People's Street railway ran away while going down a steep hill in this city early Friday morning, killing one man, fatally injuring another and hurting 25 others more or less seriously.

A child's savings bank has been dug out of the ruins of Ostia, the seaport of ancient Rome. The bank was an earthen pot containing 145 silver coins issued by Roman emperors between the years 200 and 19 B. C. The little savings bank was almost perfect when it was uncovered. It is 3 inches long, and 2½ inches wide, with a slit in the top through which the money was dropped.

A BLACKSMITH'S STRANGE EXPERIENCE.

Goodland, Kan., June 3.—N. E. Albertson, our leading blacksmith, has been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. He was so bad that he could not sleep for the great pain in his arms and shoulders. He had been afflicted for years, but lately he was so much worse, that he thought he would have to give up his shop altogether.

Then a strange thing happened. A friend of his recommended a new medicine called Dodd's Kidney Pills, said to be a cure for Rheumatism. He commenced to use them and at once began to recover. His pain has all left him, and he is a well man to-day, and entirely free from any symptom of Rheumatism.

To say he is thankful, is putting it very mildly. He is delighted.

Dodd's Kidney Pills deserve great credit for having cured this very severe and almost hopeless case.

From recent reports, there does not seem to be anything that they will not cure, as very bad cases of Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Rheumatism, and Heart Trouble, have been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, even after having been given up by the best doctors.

HEAVEN.

O city builded not by human hands,
And stretching far beyond all reach of thought,
Whose myriad mansions, beautiful and grand,
Are far beyond what human hands have wrought;
That city hath no need of sun or moon,
No dawn there breaks nor evening shadows fall;
'Tis one unbroken and eternal noon,
The glory of the Christ doth light it all.

In that bright home shall come no grief or pain,
Nothing to mar the perfect bliss that reigns
Within the heart of all who enter in.
Up from the throne ascends the glad new song
That only the redeemed from earth can sing—
"All blessing, glory, praise and power belong Unto the Lamb, our Saviour and our King!"

This earth of ours is full of beauty rare—
What else could be when made by God's own hand?
Yet all these beauties but dim shadows are
Of the transcendent glories of that land.
No human eye hath seen, nor ear hath heard,
Nor boldest human heart hath e'er conceived
The wealth of blessedness to be conferred
On those who have the victory achieved.

There bloom in faded beauty fruits and flowers
No human tongue may speak or pen record,
And there the Tree of Life, with mystic powers,
Is no more guarded by the flaming sword.
Joy in its fullness sweeps through every soul,
And love enraptures every quickened power,
A sweet and willing service prompts the whole,
And praise crowns all as fruitage and as flower.

O city of God and Saviour King,
From which we catch at times some straggling gleam
That e'en though faint surpasses everything
Of which our brightest earth-born thought can dream,
When on our sight at last its glories stream,
New clothed upon, in spotless robes arrayed,
How mean then will these earthly baubles seem,
With which among the shadows here we played!

A COINCIDENCE

By Kate Dickinson Sweetser

(From Town and Country, New York. Reprinted by Permission.)

THE child Agatha counted buttons, and by so doing became the unconscious arbiter of a destiny.

The years of Agatha's life were as many as were the fingers on one of her plump hands, and during this short time she had always been a teller of fortunes, doling out husbands to such as were the happy possessors of buttons. For those poor creatures who had yielded to a mandate from far-off Paris, and accepted hooks and eyes as gown-fastenings, Agatha could do nothing—not the ghost of a husband could she conjure up without the help of her little round allies.

Had you not a single one in sight you were doomed to spinsterhood, but if one—just one—could be found among the folds of your draperies, you were saved, and Agatha's fat forefinger would be laid upon it, while her shrill little voice would announce triumphantly: "Rich man!"—looking into your eyes to find a reflection of the joy in her own dancing blue ones at having so satisfactorily—thanks to the button—settled your fortune. The result of a two-button fortune she always announced with a falling inflection, and the corners of her mouth would droop in copy of the expression she had seen on older faces when "poor man" was found to be their portion. At "beggar man" her voice invariably grew sad and low, and if you were foolish enough to display four buttons, the chubby finger would touch the fatal one mournfully, while a pitying voice would murmur, as she shook her golden curls, "thief," begging your pardon for the cruel truth; but again happy smiles would chase away the sadness if doctor, lawyer, merchant or chief fell to your lot. Two, three and four were the only fortunes that troubled the little lady.

Oh, but it was a thrilling game to play! It was a grief to the child Agatha that so seldom could she indulge in it, owing to the disappearance of buttons from the feminine horizon. But now and again it would chance that some one great enough to resist the decree of fashion would drift her way and display the longed-for fastenings. To such a one Agatha would turn with screams of delight, while the chubby hands would touch the buttons lovingly, and the childish voice ring out in words of prophecy.

It was a matinee day at the opera house, and an enthusiastic throng was surging through the entrance gate, attracted by Mme. Calve as "Carmen." The house was crowded to the doors, and when the curtain rose on the Sevilla Square there was not a vacant seat to be had, and scarcely an unfilled box. No. 11 grand tier, however, was empty, and many of those standing turned envious eyes up to its comfortable seats. For a matinee the audience was brilliant, and one could see many well-known faces from the "smart set" as well as the suburban seat holders and real music lovers. Functions of every sort had been sacrificed for the idol of the hour, the cigarette girl, "Carmen," and the house was gay with handsome women and resplendent costumes.

In several boxes of the grand tier there were children, and one framed a pretty, much-noticed picture. In it sat golden-haired Agatha and her blue-eyed brother. Arms around each other they sat, fresh and dainty and sweet, unconscious of everything except the bewilderment of color and sound on the stage. The box adjoining that in which the children sat was No. 11, and was unoccupied until the intermission between the second and third acts, when a young woman entered it. She was alone, and seated herself with such an air of languid indifference to operas in general and to "Carmen" in particular that one wondered for what reason she chose to lend her presence to the scene. She did not even raise her lorgnet and sweep the house with an inventorying glance. Many glasses, however, were leveled at her. Even in the family circle there was a murmur of recognition. Sydenham Willoughby's laughter was familiar to all glasses of society, for reporters heralded her doings and printed her portrait when there was the slightest excuse for it—and often when there was none, because she was a beauty as well as an heiress. Leaning back in her seat she was a ravishing vision. Her black velvet costume was in sharp contrast to the ivory-whiteness of her skin, and there was an unusual charm in her expression and manner, which her air of unconcern heightened.

The curtain rose. There was twilight and fire-glow in the smuggler's stronghold. The audience drew quiet breaths while the strains of the exquisite prelude sounded. Elinore Willoughby looked on as one who, seeing, sees not, and having ears, hears not. She had not drifted to the opera house that day, nor yet had she come to hear "Carmen" for the twentieth time. Each motif and action she could anticipate, but for her there was no motive of any importance except that which was the key to her own personal affair. The singers might have been puppets, might have left the stage, the audience might have dispersed—and she would scarcely have taken note of it. She only saw before her those scenes which for many days had been filling her mental vision.

She had come to the opera for freedom; to think, to decide; to avoid questioning eyes and jesting voices, for her world was waiting breathless to hear the truth. The solitude of her own room was oppressive—she craved the aloneness that only a crowd can give. To come to a decision—why should she? Life was pure pleasure as it had been—why must it change? She was possessed with a feeling of profound irritation that all the potentialities of wealth and beauty which before had shielded her from every annoyance now availed nothing. Decision could not be bought not put aside on any pretext. What should she do? Which should it be? Pros and cons presented themselves in quick succession. Moods as varying as the colors in a bubble claimed her for their own. What should she do?

In the stage twilight Mercedes and Frasquita shuffled cards and read their destinies in clear tones. To Elinore the recitative brought only the familiar voice of one in her mind-picture; 'L'uomo che amared amaro!" ("Him I loved and will love ever"). Before Elinore there stood a form, young and strong and masterful, with a proud joy in smile and gesture. There was moonlight—the dash of waves over the rocks—a woman's promise given.

"Un amor di Carmen non pua durar!" ("Carmen's love does not last").

Quickly Elinore's first mind-picture gave place to a more brilliant one, and in it she was central figure against a background of the luxuries she loved. She saw a retinue of attendants, thoroughbred horses, rare jewels, houses and lands—and beside her small, bent and insignificant—the master of it all. With nervous restlessness she changed her position, feeling that emotion was overmastering the voice of calm reason. The curtain fell on the twilight scene, the lights flashed high again. Elinore drew herself up in dignified erectness as if to defy the weakness that was enticing her, and spoke within herself.

"It is right and best. The other would be madness. I should be unhap—," but even the thought shrank back unfinished in the presence of a great truth. Hush!—the first violin—the haunting, thrilling Toreador music! Over her nature swept a second wave of stern resolve. And yet the eternal feminine still asserted itself. Resolved—irresolute; firm, undecided—Elinore paused, for one recapitulating moment before the irrevocable amen of her choice should be said.

In the adjoining box a plainly-gowned woman had entered, was seating herself with the children, beside golden-haired Agatha. Turning to her with a quick scream of joy, Agatha's chubby finger slid down the front of the plain black waist, from one button to another, while the sweet, shrill voice rang out: "Rich man!—Poor man!—Oh, auntie, auntie, it's poor man!"

Everyone who saw, and heard, and understood, smiled; some who had counted buttons in a long gone childhood, sighed; but the person who sat alone in No. 11 grand tier neither smiled nor sighed. Turning startled eyes upon the little fortune teller, Elinore Willoughby's resolve gave way before the sacred featherweight of omen to which her heart was ready to respond.

The child Agatha counted buttons, and by so doing became the unconscious arbiter of a destiny.

TOMMY ATKINS IN PEACE.

He Sometimes Turns from the Path of Righteousness and Is Punished for It.

We have heard and read so much about the self-sacrifice, devotion to duty and goodness of heart of British soldiers during the Boer campaign that some will be surprised to read that they are not always like this, says Chambers' Journal; that, in fact, soldiers occasionally behave badly, and are punished for doing so, when not in front of an enemy. Indeed, it would not be far from the truth to say that the best side of British soldiers comes out in war and the worst side in peace. When things are peaceful Mr. Thomas Atkins is liable to get slack as a soldier and a man. Then the war-cure comes to brace him up and make him think less of himself and more of otners. I know of many soldiers who were made other men by the hard living, hard work and enforced abstinence from alcohol which they experienced in the Boer war. Seeing comrades falling out of the ranks for the last time makes men think seriously who never did so before. * * * As in an ordinary trial a prisoner may object to a clergyman who, he thinks, has some prejudice or grudge against him, so at a court-martial he is always asked if he is satisfied with the officers selected to try him. One Tommy, when the president asked him this question, looked at the officers sitting solemnly before him, and answered: "I object to the 'ole blooming lot of yer."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Stuck by Electricity.

There was an occurrence bordering on the marvelous upon the bridge that crosses the railway tracks at Second avenue and University NE., Minneapolis. The driver of a scavenger wagon rushed into the Second Precinct police station and said that several horses were stuck on the bridge and that no amount of effort could get them across, and the man thought some supernatural agency was the cause. The officers, after investigation, concluded that in some manner the bridge structure had become charged with electricity. Every time an effort was made to induce a horse to move the animal was found entirely unable to lift a foot. After considerable work the harness was cut from the team attached to the scavenger wagon and a rope attached to pull the horses loose. Another horse attached to a single rig was treated in like manner, after which the bridge was closed and an officer placed there to prevent further happenings of the kind. Later the officers cut the street railway feed wire, and it was found that no difficulty was experienced, showing that the bridge in some way had become charged with the electric fluid.

Cut the First Wheat.

It seems incredible that the man who "cradled" the first crop of wheat sown in Minnesota is still living, and hale and hearty. It is a fact, however, that Hugh Hoy, now living in Minneapolis, is the man who, with James Brophy, cut the first wheat on Governor Ramsey's farm just west of the site of the new capitol in St. Paul. This same wheat was the first ever sown in Minnesota, which, within the lifetime of a living man, has become one of the greatest wheat producing territories of the world. Governor Ramsey had much trouble in finding someone to garner his crop. Mr. Hoy says it was one of the finest bits of standing wheat he has ever seen, coming up breast-high on the cradlers, who at that time used the regulation hand implement for cutting the golden grain.

Money Secured.

Through the liberality of James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern road, M. G. Morton of Winona, and other friends of the institution, the Hamline university has secured a $100,000 endowment. The money was secured through the instrumentality of President G. H. Bridgeman. Some time ago Mr. Hill made a pledge of $50,000 on condition that a certain amount be raised as a permanent endowment for the university. Later he promised to give one-half of that sum for the purpose of securing $100,000, a part of the larger endowment. M. G. Morton, whose full endowment is $30,000, gives his half of that sum towards the $100,000 now secured.

Crop Bulletin.

Dry weather prevailed in the Red River valley during the week ending May 29; elsewhere there were showers. The temperatures were very low for the season, with frosts the morning of the 25th, which seem to have been most severe in the central, southern and eastern portions of the state; it is said to have nipped young corn, barley and tender garden stuff in some exposed places, but permanent injury is not anticipated. Early corn and potatoes are well up, and in southern counties are large enough to cultivate. Timothy, clover and wild grass promise good hay crops.

News in Brief.

A large moose passed down one of the streets of Stephen. He quietly jogged along until the village dogs got after him, when he took to his heels and gave them a lesson in jumping fences and other obstacles.

Farmers in the southwestern part of Polk county have found grasshoppers in their fields, and believe them to be of the true Rocky mountain breed. The bugs are numerous enough to do considerable damage.

The residence of Peter Thiel, on the Stockton road, near Winona, has been destroyed by fire. Mr. Thiel was away at the time, and his invalid wife, who was confined to her bed, was alone. Neighbors saw the flames and arrived in time to remove her from the house in safety. Very little of the contents of the dwelling was saved; loss, $1,000.

Burglars entered Lindenberg Bros.' clothing store at Faribault and secured about $50 worth of clothing.

The state feed and dairy commission is considering the advisability of taking the defective pure lard law into court to ascertain if it is not possible to construe it valid.

James Shoemaker, president of the board of trade for many years and one of the best known residents of Mankato, was killed by being run over by a freight train that was switching close to the Omaha freight station.

State Auditor Dunn received a draft for $10,000, the remainder of the unpaid insurance on the Duluth normal school partially destroyed by fire last winter. The whole amount of insurance carried and received was $40,000, which will be expended in restoring the building.

A buck and doe fawn ran across Ed Peterson's farm in Fossun, near the White Earth reservation line. Theodore Belfye, Mike Gorwick and Frank Lique started after them with rifles, each separating. Belfye was accidentally shot and killed by Gorwick.

Millions for Baseball.

A million of dollars are spent every year upon the game of baseball, but large as this sum is, it cannot begin to equal the amount spent by people in search of health. There is a sure method of obtaining strength, and it is not a costly one. We urge those who have spent much and lost hope to try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It strengthens the stomach, makes digestion easy and natural, and cures dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness and weak kidneys.

CLEANLY WOMAN.

Erroneously Thinks By Scouring Her Scalp That She Cures Dandruff.

Cleanly woman has an erroneous idea that by scouring the scalp, which removes the dandruff scales, she is curing the dandruff. She may wash her scalp every day, and yet have dandruff her life long, accompanied by falling hair, too. The only way in the world to cure dandruff is to kill the dandruff germ, and there is no hair preparation that will do that but Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide killing the dandruff germ, leaves the hair free to grow as healthy Nature intended. Destroy the cause, you remove the effect. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide.

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

June 12th, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is just simply wonderful the change your medicine has made in me. I feel like another person. My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

SPORT IN WESTERN CANADA.

While the Farmer's Grain Is Ripening and His Stock Growing Fat, He May Have Plenty of Shooting.

There is probably no country on the American Continent where the life of the farmer carries with it that assurance of comfort and success as does Western Canada. Nor is there to be found anywhere else such a pleasant combination. Game abounds everywhere and nowhere does it afford such perfect amusement. A noted sportsman writing of the favorite pastime says: "There is one particular spot where I saw a man drop 70 mallards one morning, and bring them all to bag, too, for they dropped in open water or on flat prairie. At the right season of the year you can see black lines and triangles cut sharply out against the sky all round you, moving very swiftly, and you begin to wonder whether you have enough cartridges to hold out. You can hear the prairie-chicken crowing like barn-door fowls; and a little to the north-east is a bit of marshy ground, cattle poached, and dappled with gleaming pools, where the snipe are nearly as thick as mosquitoes. A thin column of blue smoke curling up in the distance shows you where a few wandering Indians have pitched their camp, but there is no other indication of civilization in sight. Still, the neighborhood is well-settled, and a short drive will bring you to a farmhouse where you can buy the finest butter and the freshest eggs for uncivilized prices.

"A very short railway journey will bring you to a country full of deer and the lordly wapiti, the king of the deer tribe the world over; and down on the flat, boggy land by the lake shores the moose will stand knee-deep in water on the summer evenings, ready to lie down when the flies get bothering. All day you breathe the wild free air of the prairie, and at night you are lulled to sleep by the surge and ripple and splash of the waves on the beach, broken now and then by the weird banshee-cry of strange water-fowl." Particulars regarding settlement of the lands of Western Canada can be had from any agent of the Canadian Government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in your columns.

Worms

CASCARETS are a sure cure for tape worms and those other pests of worms that make the lives of children and their mothers miserable. Any variety of parasites that live in the human stomach or bowels, and feed on the substance which should properly nourish the body, are dislodged by Cascarets Candy Cathartic, and expelled. One or two tablets usually drive them out, and persistent use is sure to do away with the unwelcome intruders. Many children and older people suffer from worms without knowing it, and get thin and weak, although their appetite is good. The best way to find out is to take Cascarets. Never accept a substitute!

—Brooklyn Citizen.

"A tape worm eighteen feet long at least came on the scene after my taking two CASCARETS. This I am sure has caused my bad health for the past three years. I am still taking Cascarets, the only cathartic worthy of notice by sensible people."
GEO. W. BOWLES, Baird, Miss.

DELANO, FRIDAY, June 7, 1901.

DELANO DIARY

—Quite a number contemplate taking in Minnetonka on the excursion rates, Sunday.

—The Millers defeated the Minneapolis Blacks Sunday, score 8 to 16. The team will go to Wayzata the 9th.

—The Catholic Order of Forresters gave a social dance in the I. O. O. F. hall last night. There was a large attendance, many being present from out of town.

—Notice has been given by the council that village water for sprinkling purposes may be use from 6 to 9 a. m. and from 5 to 9 p. m., from April 15 to November 1.

—The village council has voted to appropriate $50 toward a celebration here the 4th. A subscription list has been going the rounds and a big celebration is in progress of ripening.

—The Village council is having the River street watering trough moved from in front of Conzet's shop across Bridge street. The new place is not a good one; teams being watered will block up a business corner.

—We have been favored with several light rains in this vicinity the past couple days. While not quite as much as some would like to see, it will aid quite materially in freshening up fields, and removing the anxious look from the faces of the husbandmen.

—The High School students gave a reception to the graduating class Wednesday evening and a very pleasant social time was had. Most of the alumni were present, also several of the school board and their wives. Most of the evening was spent in dancing. Ice cream and cake were served.

—The weather this spring seems to have a peculiar way of changing from hot to cold and from cold to hot, in a manner that is not very much appreciated generally. This last cold spell has led up to the comment that the thing that was rare as a day in June was a day in December. It probably won't be long however before we get the other extreme.

—Councilman Lindsley objected to donating $50 to the 4th of July committee, claiming there is no law authorizing the expenditure of village funds in such a way. We don't think the council is following all the directions laid down by law, nor are they adhering so strictly to economy as they claimed they were a short time back.

—The Wright County Epworth League is planning for their second annual convention to be held in July at Clearwater. Officers were elected last year as follows: President, Miss Eva W. Ward, Buffalo; 1st Vice Pres. Miss Myra Snow, Otsego; 2nd Vice Pres., Miss Anna Ferrel, Montrose; 3rd Vice Pres., Miss Nellie Clark, Monticello; 4th Vice Pres., J. J. Catlin, Delano. Sect. Viola B. Cunningham, Delano. Treas., D. Whitney, Clearwater. Junior Pres., Mrs. Rev. Fairbanks. Clearwater.

The convention is to be held the Friday before the second Sunday in July.

—We never expected to hear a man, from a public platform, in this country, announce to an audience that Washington and his followers made a mistake, when they hewed this narrow strip of United States out from under the iron heel of their tyranical rulers. But the unexpected does happen, some times, and it did Sunday night. If our Revolutionary fathers made a mistake, and it is best to correct mistakes, of course it would follow that we should return our narrow strip of United States to the mother country and quietly submit to their ruling over us. Men with such ideas are opposed to freedom in any country. They want a king, and if it is possible they should have what they want. But it does not follow that liberty loying people who fought for independence made a mistake, or should be ruled by a tyrannical monarch.

—Commencement exercises for the graduating class of the Delano High School were held in the City Hall last Monday night, and was one of the finest occasions of the kind ever held in Delano. Such programs increase the interest of the people in their school, and incite students to more faithful and earnest work.

The evening opened with music by the orchestra, followed by a solo "Creole Love Song" by Miss Mabel Young. Miss Nellie B. Sutton then delivered an oration on "Why Women Should Be Educated". She treated the subject understandingly and in an interesting manner, and spoke well. The next on the programme was a violin solo "Schier Dreisig Jahre bist du alt" by Master Herbert Bronkow, which was very fine. Following this was an oration "The Benefits of History" by Miss Merel Jones, who left quite a favorable impression of her literary and oratorical ability. Misses Webber and Murphy gave a selection from "Cavalleria Rusticana" on mandolin and piano. This was followed by the speech of the evening by Miss Maria S. Sanford, of the State University, who gave a very brilliant address on "Morals and Manners". Miss Mollie Maxfield sang a solo "September", and was followed by Mrs E. F. Scheig in a reading "Absolution". Diplomas were then presented to the two graduates, Misses M. Merel Jones and Nellie B. Sutton, by the president of the school board, and during music by the orchestra presents and flowers were carried upon the platform by little girls. After the program was completed, school mates and friends crowded around the graduates with congratulations for the successful termination of their work at the Delano High School.

The hall was beautifully decorated with the national colors and a variety of flowers and ferns. The class motto "Semper Gradientes" in the class colors, green and white, had a conspicuous place above the platform. The hall was filled with a large, interested and attentive audience. All in all the occasion was one to inspire our citizens with renewed interest in school, and create in them a desire to see the day when their children will become graduates.

WALL STREET.

(From the Chicago Herald.)

In Wall street, where the margins go,
To which the streams of money flow,
A bear was short, his credit low,
And stocks were rising rapidly.

He loudly begged for mercy there
But Wall street didn't seem to care,
They put on pressure everywhere
And laughed around him fiendishly.

In Wall street when the sun was low
A bear saw all his margins go
And loud he murmured in his woe—
The bulls had gored him terribly.

And little lambs were lying there
Beside the prostrate, bleeding bear,
All victims of that sad affair.
Poor things, and bleating piteously.

Yet Wall street opened up next day,
To shear them in the same old way,
For fools can never learn, they say—
Therefore it goes on endlessly.

Filipinos Cannot Land.

San Francisco, May 3e.—Nineteen of the seventy eight Filipinos who arrived here yesterday en route to the Buffalo exposition will not be permitted to land. The physicians at the marine hospital and the immigration officials decided to send them back to Manila for the reason that they are afflicted with loathsome and contagious diseases.—Minneapolis Times.

LIFE WITHOUT LIFE.

I.

Little to do, and little to say,
He lives long in his fat, white way;
Nor dreams that Fate at a judgment stands
To shackle forever those placcid hands!
He looks not into his heart to see
The gods are not, where the gods should be!
He hears the the orphans wailing cry,
And grips his gold as he shambles by;
Yet breathes the breath of the world and sky!

Masters! I'd rather be a clod—
Senseless, under the blue of God—
Driftwood cast on a sea-swept stream,
Than grip my gold and curse Love's dream!
Yea! in Poverty there shall be
Riches enough—thank God—for me!
A sword that hath never lain in rust,
And shall not, while there is strength to trust
That a lily of Love shall bloom over Love's dust!

—F. L. Stanton.

A Startler.

A gentleman whose hearing is defective is the owner of a dog that is the terror of the neighborhood in which he lives.

The other day he was accosted by a friend, who said:

"Good morning, Mr. H. Your wife made a very pleasant call on us last evening."

"I am very sorry," came the startling reply. "I'll see that it don't occur again, for I'm going to chain her up in future."—London Telegraph.

COMMENCEMENT ORATION.

Benefits of History.

Perhaps sometime in our school days we have heard the complaint, "What's the use of studying history?" and we may have thought the same thing ourselves as we pursued some dry historical text book.

Let us consider for a moment why this important study so often fails to interest the young student. It may be because he did not study it long enough, or perhaps he did not read extensively enough to get more than simply an outline of facts and dates.

To enjoy anything we must enter into it. It is to be expected that a study made up simply of dates, dry accounts and facts, will raise the mind of an ordinary scholar to an enthusiastic pitch? The most important thing is lacking. Life must be put into our heroes; the acts must be real; we must put ourselves in place of heroes and think how we would have acted under the same circumstances. Then by studying the incidents, details and anecdotes we are helped to remember the important facts, and though slowly, yet certainly, surely we find our study becoming a real pleasure.

History may be called a study of the lives of great men, as it is so closely connected with the biographies of heroes.

We all admire great men and it ought to be a pleasure to us to read of their achievements. Their failures and successes are a lesson to us and fill the reader with a patriotic desire to do great things.

At first thought there may not seem to be many material benefits to be derived from this study, but as one looks deeper into the subject he soon discovers what a vast number of organizations, political, educational, and religious, are founded upon the institution of history. To understand their purposes and accomplishments we must know their origin.

Our republic is founded upon a written constitution. This remarkable document was not produced out of the brains of wise men so much as planned along the line of historic development of government. Jefferson, Washington, Hamilton and the other great men who framed it were careful students of history. Had these illustrious American patriots done as did the wise men of France a little later, forged a constitution out of perfect theories, unconnected with history, it would, like this French constitution have been a mere experiment, subject to all the weaknesses of former republics. Without a thorough knowledge of these governments, their rights and liberties, privileges and duties, the causes of their temporal strength and final downfall, the founders of our republic would have had a very difficult and almost impossible task before them when they met to amend the Articles of Confederation and finally presented to the states for their approval, the foundation of this flourishing nation—the Constitution of the United States.

It is also important to understand the circumstances and know the history of our country after its organization in order to understand its laws and customs.

Our court decisions are always determined by the results of former court proceedings. Our lawyers study the legal affairs of the states and countries that have the best reputation for justice and render their decisions accordingly.

Then the adoption of the Christian religion has made a great change in all of our institutions. It has given men equal rights and privileges and taught them to be honest and upright in their dealings with each other. It has made possible such prosperity and peace as we all now enjoy. To fully appreciate this great institution of ours we must study the history of its origin and development.

We may find entertainment too, in reading of how the shepherds followed the guiding eastern star until they came to the manger where the Savior lay; his early life and teachings, his crucifixion and final resurrection. Then how the first Christians were persecuted and hated by all people and compelled to hold secret meetings and live in the most uncomfortable places and endure great hardships. Even after Christianity was well established, freedom of worship was not always allowed. The history of our religious development is very interesting as well as instructive and ought to be studied by all. Many of our customs are derived from religious observances, such as the celebration of Christmas and Easter, our two most sacred holidays and the manner of their celebration has been handed down from generation to generation and is still observed by us.

Then we have many other holidays which would be of little importance to us if we did not know why they were set aside for celebration. If we had to depend upon tradition for facts our interest in these special days would decline as generation after generation the story of their origin became changed. If we had never heard the story of how the Puritans suffered cold and hunger duting the first long winter spent in this new country, and how thankful they were for all they received we would probably think of Thanksgiving day as of little importance excepting as a day of pleasure.

The fourth of July may be enjoyed as much by the small boy who never heard of Washington and doesn't even know the meaning of the word "independence", as by the older person, but as he becomes older, and more thoughtful, the celebration would seem foolish to him if he had not learned of the tyranny our ancestors suffered before the Revolutionary war, and what the Declaration of Independence must have meant to them.

Decoration Day was first made a legal holiday after the civil war to show our love and respect for the gallant soldiers who died to preserve the Union. The last day to be set aside by law for observance is Dewey Day, which marks the anniversary of the most important historical fact of the nineteenth century.

In studying the literature of a country it is very important that we study the history also; the two are almost inseparable. There was never a great literary era that did not follow great historical events, and to understand the literature, the circumstances under which it was written must be closely observed.

To appreciate the old Greek and Roman writers we must think in what perfect comfort and luxury they lived, with nothing to do but bask in the warm sunshine of their gardens while being taught the graceful arts of music and rhetoric. Their writings would naturally be as their lives, easy and graceful.

Then we find a very different kind of literature in the independent and liberty loving Scotts. They show, in all their writings, that they are great admirers of nature and lovers of the home life.

By studying the history of the English people we find that they are from all parts of Europe. They are interested in many subjects as is shown by their literature which is written on many themes.

Individuals are also influenced by their surroundings to such an extent that their writings are characteristic of the time in which they were produced. It is often said that Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was one of the direct causes of the civil war, but at the same time the author was moved to write it by the conditions that surrounded her. Milton and Bunyan were influenced by the great Puritan movement to write their famous masterpieces "Paradise Lost" and "Pilgrim's Progress. The religious conditions in England at that time are well brought out in these works.

Owing to the wide vocabulary the writings in the English language are more expressive than those in any other language. To know why this is so let us study the history of the English language.

When the Celts were driven back by the Teutons some of their words were retained, but the language became mostly Teutonic. Then the Danish invasion brought in new words and finally when the Norman French conquered England they established their language in the courts and among the higher classes of society, while the Anglo Saxons still retained their native tongue, and the Latin language was used in religions affairs. Finally these three languages, Latin, Teutonic, and Norman French, became intermingled and a wide vocabulary with many synonims was the result. To read intelligently we must know the history of the language in which we are reading as well as the historical facts. Could we appreciate the historical novel if we did not know the true history around which the fiction is woven?

When we consider that history is a record of the past, and that each day is helping to make a history for the future we will no longer confine it within the narrow limits of a school book, surrounded by dates and other insurmountable barriers. But it will be a study of people, their conditions and necessities, and then the first and last causes of failure in interest will be removed.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE MAGIC OF EDUCATION.

Let that man gloat, whose ill-considered plea
Calls life a hollow mockery—a bead
Within the whirlpool of a grasping greed—
A worn bark drifting on a luckless sea—
A rose without a rose's liberty—
A blind man's journey, with no guide to lead—
A weary, passing show for none to heed—
Let that man gloat! Then, let him come to me!

I'll tell him that, beyond his narrow ken,
There blooms a field whose glories are so rare
That all the prizes won by living men
Are infinitely vague—beneath compare.
I'll tell him, out to touch Minerva's train,
To feed the fanning of her subtle breath,
Would fire a life whose limitless domain
Cannot be bordered by the realms of death.
—ROBERT MACKAY, in Success.

TUESDAY'S storm visited Adrian, Minn., in the form of a tornado and caused considerable damage, blowing down a number of buildings and unroofing others. There were no fatalities.

THE third term bubble, floated out by Senator Depew, and kept going by a very few others for a short time, has been thoroughly exploded by the President himself; declaring that he would not be a candidate for a third term; neither would he accept a nomination for a third term if it were tendered him.

A TERRIFIC explosion occurred in a coal mine at Port Royal, Pa., and as a result sixteen men are dead and a number injured. The cause of the explosion is not known, but is thought to have been caused by carelessness of some of the workmen with their lamps. The mines are full of fire damp and it is thought the bodies may not be recovered for a year. There was also much loss of property.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE received somewhat of a hard blow this week in Chicago, at the hands of Judge Tuthill, of the Cook county court. He made a decision that hereafter, children of Christian Scientists etc., when ill, or in need of medical assistance, should be sent to hospitals or similar institutions where they can be treated. He holds to the opinon that adults may employ "faith cure" or "Christian Science" to their hearts content, but that children should not be allowed to suffer or die from want of proper attendance, because of their parents superstitions or ignorance. We believe the judge has about the right idea.

Money vs Patriotism.

"Put money in thy purse" seems to be the motto of most people now-a-days. A few years ago people thought more of other things than they did of sordid wealth. The greatest philosophers, statesmen, authors, doctors were men of little wealth, but they sought fame. George Washington refused a money consideration for his valuable time and services in aiding in securing life, liberty, and happiness to himself and fellow men. Men vied with each other in celebrating the nation's birthday. For years the 4th of July was patriotically kept. Young and old Americans, and liberty lovers turned out to listen to the reading of the Declaration of Independence, to the singing of patriotic songs, and to patriotic speeches by the more zealous advocates of a republic.

How changed. Now people must be hired to take part in celebrating the nation's birthday! Money must be paid to the youngsters to act as calathumpians. The music must be bought and the speeches paid for. Often times the reading of the Declaration of Independence is dispensed with. It takes too much time from the games to be competed for, and for which money must be subscribed by the townspeople or voted by the village council.

Such a 4th of July is very similar to a burlesque on the genuine and patriotic observance of the day.

Does any one think Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration for a money consideration? That John Hancock and others signed it for pay? That Washington and his followers placed their lives in the balance for the sake of making so many cents per day?

Maple Plain.

There seems to be more building going on in the country than there has been for several years. Those who furnish building material seem to be having it all about their own way.

Benny Drake is at home sick with scarlet fever. The house has been quarantined.

All members of Gorden Granger Post No. 120, Maple Plain, is requested to be present at their next regular meeting, on Saturday at 2 p. m., June 29.

Maple Plain and Lyndale creameries are running on full time and doing a prosperous business.

One day last week John Coffin got quite badly hurt, being thrown from his bicycle.

Most of the country schools are now closed.

The people south and south west of Maple Plain will have rural free delivery July 1st. Should be extended to the Philippine islands. There is some talk of another being started from Maple Plain P. O. should everything work all right.

The rain early this morning was a thing much needed and will help out all the crops.

The army medical association, of St. Paul, held a few days ago, recommended the reestablishment of the army canteen, a thing they seem to think much needed.

From Boer Land.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The Rev. H. D von Bruckhuisen, of Pretoria, South Africa, the minister who closed the volksraad with prayer after President Kruger's ultimatum had been read to that body, is in this city. His brother, Dr. H. J. von Bruckhuisen, of the Orange Free State, who served in the Boer armies, accompanies him. Their mission in this country is to raise money for the Boer women and children now in refugee camps. Rev. Dr. von Bruckhuisen said in an interview:

"Our women and children, who are at present concentrated in camps established by the British are in a horrible condition. It was bad enough when I left South Africa, but I know from a letter that I received—one only the other day from my sister—that it is a hundred times worse now."

When the doctor left South Africa he said he was virtually banished by order of Gen. Waxwell, military governor of Pretoria. Dr. von Bruckhuisen said further of the camps: "In an official report made by Dr. Donald F. McKenzie, of the British army, on Feb. 18 of this year, the British government is notified that the conditions are horrible, the death rate appalling, and the food furnished wholly unfit to eat."

The Afrikanders, Rev. Dr. von Bruckhuisen avers, will never be over come, and all reports to the contrary are false. The Boer army numbers 15,000 to 17,000 men, and is constantly being augmented by Cape Colony Boers. The Boer Forces are now armed with Lee Metford rifles, he says, and they have tons of ammunition buried which they can use at any time against the British.—Globe.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7, 1901

The republican scheme for reducing the Congressional representation of the southern states which restrict negro suffrage has been revived and it is said to have more influential backing than the movement that was started last winter. At that time it was understood that Mr. McKinley, who had just began to believe in the possibility of a white republican party in the South, opposed the idea and was instrumental in baying it laid aside. It is doubtful whether he has changed his mind on the subject, but some of the men who are quietly pushing the revived scheme express the opinion that by next winter the failure of making white republican recruits in the South, under the name of Mc Laurinism, or any other, will be so plain to Mr. McKinley that he can be counted upon to keep his hands off, if not to help along the scheme. The increased power given to Congress by the insular decisions of the Supreme Court is used by the men who are working the scheme as an argument for the political necessity of cutting down Southern representation so as to make it certain that the republicans will retain their majority in the House, the loss of which might play havoc with the party's insular policy. There are not a sufficient number of Senators and Representatives in Washington to form any idea of the strength of the revived scheme, but it is being manipulated by shrewd men who have no scruples about securing political advantage in any way, and it will be wise for democratic Senators and Representatives to be vigilant.

There were other than legal reasons for the decision of the administration not to call an extra summer session of Congress to legislate for the Philippines. One was that it was thought that a few months exercise of the autocratic authority conferred by the Spooner amendment would get things on the islands in a condition that would be less inviting to Congressional interrogation than they are at this time, and another was the fear that a Congressional debate on a Philippine tariff bill might precipitate a general discussion of the whole tariff question.

Gen. Samuel Pearson, of the Boer army, passed through Washington this week, on his way to New York, where he has been called to confer with the agent of the Boers, on important business, which he hopes relates to an honorable peace. Speaking of the situation in his unfortunate country, he said: "We still have about 26,000 men in the field, we have all the ammunition we need, and we have sufficient horses and foodstuffs. British reports to the contrary notwithstanding. My regular information from the seat of war tells me that only half of what is going on in South Africa is known and published in the newspapers here, and then it is not at all reliable. All news goes through English censors. There has been considerable more fighting down there lately than the American people have been informed of. Much activity is displayed throughout the Transvaal, the Orange Free State and Cape Colony. Kirtzinger's commando has been very successful recruiting Cape Dutch for operations against the British, and if Kitchener or Roberts can boast of having invaded the Transvaal, we can reply with the invasion of Cape Colony. Our soldiers are only fifteen miles from the sea coast, which speaks for itself. The men who are at the head of our army are young, energetic, prudent and just. They know when to strike and how to do it to obtain the best results with the least difficulty and at the smallest cost of life. We are just as anxious for peace as you, but it must be an honorable peace, otherwise we will fight-fight until the last man falls."

Ex Representative and ex-Judge Springer, accompanied three Indian chiefs to the White House, where they went to present a petition asking the president to withhold his signature to the proclamation opening the Kiowa, Commanche and Apache Indian reservation to settlement until a delegation representing these tribes can reach Washington and be heard. They claim that the treaty under which the 2,000,000 acres involved are alleged to have been ceded was never approved by the majority of the Indians and that to allow it to be put into effect will be a rank injustice. Mr Springer says that Mr. McKinley can if so disposed, defer opening the land to settlement until Congress has an opportunity to reconsider its action providing therefor. But inasmuch as secretary Hitchcock has turned down all protests against the opening, it is not likely he will be so disposed.

The alleged civil government that is to be established in the Philippines, will be civil in name only until after Congress legislates on the subject, as it is to be under military control. The islands are to be kept under military control because of the belief that the establishment of a real civil government would put them on the same footing that was given Porto Rico by the Supreme Court decision. There are tricks in all trades, and republicans are specially apt in tricks relating to government.

Representative Livingston, of Ga., who is in Washington to attend a meeting of the Industrial Commission, is strongly opposed to any constitutional amendment restricting negro suffrage in his state. Speaking of the matter he said: "I think our people are against such amendment to our state constitution. We are getting along nicely with the negro in Georgia."

THE GREAT AFTERWHILE.

Ah me! the things that we mean to do,
In the great, great afterwhile;
When our ship comes in,
We're sure to begin,
And we'll keep right at it, too.

Yes, yes, my boys, I know it is true
That we mean just what we say,
But afterwhile is a mythical place
In the realms of an unborn day.

The railway of life is supposed to run
Through the land of this unborn day,
And the great afterwhile is a station there,
Where people do fine things, they say.

But thousands, my boys, are traveling this road,
Whose hands are as white as the snow,
Who meant to stop off at the great afterwhile
In the years of the long ago.

But somehow or other they never quite reached
The place with the high-sounding name,
So they traveled along with the rest of the crowd
Who hunted for fortune and fame.

Yet fortune or fame ne'er came to them, boys,
And, neither, will they come to you,
If you wait to begin, in the great afterwhile,
All the grand things you mean to do.

'Tis best, then, to begin right here,
In the land of the greater to-day,
And work while you wait,
For your ship might be late—
Then you'd miss half of life, I fear.
—G. W. Hendricks, in "Success."

THE PRICE OF THE BARKER'S RABBITS

By Carroll W. Rankin.

THE Barkers lived in a little house surrounded by a big garden, about midway between the high school building and the church; and the little Barkers always took a decided interest in whatever happened to be going on in either establishment. If a concert was given in the schoolhouse, the little Barkers gave one as nearly like it as possible in their barn. If there was a wedding at the church, the little Barkers promptly duplicated it upon the side porch of their house. Little Katherine's baby doll had done duty at so many christenings that even its own mother couldn't remember the names it had accumulated.

Nothing ever "stumped" the little Barkers. No imitation was ever too difficult. Their Salvation Army was, in their own opinion at least, a trifle better than the real one that nightly paraded the streets; and as for their circus—but mere words could not adequately describe that circus. It is enough to say that no one who saw it ever forgot it.

The older children outgrew these pastimes in the course of years. Alice developed into a most proper young woman, and no one would have suspected that dandified Harold's principal ambition had once been to shine as a chimney-sweep. Katherine abandoned the doll of many names, and grey into a stately and rather solemn young person of 15, and it fell to Tom and Grace to keep the neighborhood in a cheerful frame of mind. They did their duty nobly, however, and managed to have proper and easily shocked Alice upon pins and needles most of the time.

Mrs. Higherest, the wife of the banker, who lived opposite the Barkers in a big, beautiful house, furnished them with many valuable ideas; and her most gorgeous entertainments were faithfully copied, down to the minutest details. But as Grace and Tom grew older, they, too, began to grow dissatisfied with mere imitations, and to long for real weddings and funerals, and real receptions, with something more substantial in the way of refreshments than imaginary ice cream.

When Mrs. Higherest entertained a distinguished novelist for a whole week, giving dinners, and finally a huge reception to him—in spite of his protests, for he was a modest lion—the little Barkers were green with envy. Mrs. Barker attended one of the dinners; Alice and Harold were invited to the reception, but the only invitation vouchsafed by Mrs. Higherest to the little Barkers was an urgent one to remain upon their own side of the street while these festivities were in progress.

But Tom and Grace had reasons for wishing to meet the novelist. Grace, all unconscious that such a speech might be uncomplimentary, was longing to tell the writer that she thought the cover of his book was extremely pretty, but that she didn't care a great deal for the story; while Tom, who intended to be a novelist himself, in order to have dinners given for him, wanted to find out how the thing was done.

Consequently, when Mr. Barker discovered in the celebrity one of his own almost forgotten college mates, and invited the great man to prolong his stay for the purpose of paying him a visit and talking over old times, there was joy in the little Barkers' hearts. Mrs. Barker, however, was not quite so jubilant. She knew the resources of the little Barkers. Alice, for the same reason, did considerable quaking in her shoes; and Harold took it upon himself to read his young brother and sister a series of lectures upon etiquette in general, with a few impromptu remarks upon the treatment of celebrites in particular.

For the first three days all went well; then Grace had an inspiration. An inspiration in Grace's hands was about as safe as giant powder in a match factory, and upon the appearance of the first symptom of anything like an inspiration, Grace was usually banished to bed, before the microbe should have time to develop into a full-fledged idea. Grace had learned to be cautious about revealing her thoughts, and her mother, being occupied with the problem of feeding the clan, failed to notice the preliminary signs.

The distinguished guest arrived on Wednesday. At recess time on Friday afternoon Grace unfolded her plan to a group of excited girls, while Tom, on the other side of the school building, was the center of a larger and still more excited group of boys.

"It's the chance of a lifetime," said Grace. "You can't afford to miss it. Remember the time. Admittance to all parts of the grounds, two cents."

"Three o'clock sharp," Tom was saying. "Oh, yes, he'll be there, sure. The minister's coming to play chess with him at half-past three. He'd rather play chess than eat. Oh, he'll be there all right."

At a quarter to three the following day a quiet, middle-aged man in glasses seated himself beside a little table upon the pleasant, vine-shaded veranda of the Barker house, quite oblivious to the fact that Grace, flat on her stomach in the grass, was printing along the veranda rail, in large letters with white chalk, the words: "The greatest show on earth. Only two cents."

A few moments later the patrons of the show began to arrive in little groups of two or three. Each child, after paying two cents to Tom, whose box office was discreetly screened from his mother's view by the large white rose bush near the gate, paused on the lawn to gaze for awhile at the unconscious celebrity, who was intent upon a chess problem.

After a prolonged stare, with mingled feelings of awe, respect and curiosity, and, above all, a desire to get the full worth of his or her money, each child withdrew reluctantly toward the back yard. Here they were received by Grace, who formed them by twos, regardless of size, into a long line.

"Now wait here until I come back," said she, when apparently the last child had arrived, "and mind you don't make a sound. If you do," continued Grace, who was born to command, "the game is all up, and you lose your money. A little noise would spoil it all. I won't be long."

"A few of my little friends," said wily Grace, appearing upon the veranda a moment later, "would be so glad if you would shake hands with them. They've heard such a lot about you." This, thanks to Grace, was strictly true, for she had talked of nothing but the novelist for three whole days.

"What? What's that? Oh, shake hands with your little friends? Yes, of course," said the novelist, reluctantly putting a printed chess problem into his pocket, and bringing himself back with an effort to an everyday world. "Why, really, my dear, I am very much touched. This is the prettiest, and probably the sincerest, compliment I have ever received."

The young conspirator had the grace to blush at this, but she did not allow herself to waver. She realized that it was too late for qualms of conscience.

"Please stand right here, where they can reach you easily," said Grace, adroitly placing the gratified author just behind the glaring inscription on the veranda rail, and standing back herself for a momentary but critical survey of the resulting effect. "Just a little more this way. There, you look very well, indeed! I'll be back in a minute with the children."

"WHAT'S THAT? OH, SHAKE HANDS WITH YOUR LITTLE FRIENDS?"

The novelist, somewhat surprised at the number of his admirers, shook hands cordially with each shy guest, never suspecting for a moment that mercenary Tom, with rabbits in his mind, had collected a penny in advance for each handshake.

It was the belated minister who, arriving upon the scene, discovered the sign upon the porch and pointed it out to the astonished novelist, who happened to have, fortunately, a keen sense of humor. The sound of their uproarious merriment brought Mrs. Barker and Alice to the porch, whereupon Tom and Grace promptly and discreetly vanished.

"Well," said Grace, when a safe harbor was reached, "we'll probably get whipped for this, even if we are too old; and Alice will go around in a state of mortification for the rest of her natural life, but he wouldn't have laughed like that if he'd minded very much."

"Anyhow," said Tom, philosophically, "we took in money enough to buy four rabbits, and I'm going after them right now, before anyone tells us not to."—Youth's Companion.

Boots Lost in Falling.

The fact that persons who fall great distances often lose their boots in the descent has not yet been explained. Perhaps the most recent case is that of Mr. Charles James, of St. Agnes, who was unfortunate enough to fall a distance of 120 feet in Polbreen mine. During the fall both his boots (which had been tightly laced) came off and were discovered in the shaft fathoms above him. The phenomenon is not confined to miners.

Maine's Canneries.

Latest-News!

Mrs. McKinley is reported as still improving.

The M. W. A. have been holding a convention and yesterday's parade is claimed as one of the grandest ever witnessed in the Capitol city.

Corn King Phillips, of Chicago, visited Minneapolis yesterday and made a speech. He declared that corn raisers had it in their power to set a price on corn if they saw fit to do so, when it has matured and before he has sold any.

Manilla, June 13.

Gen. Sumner has returned here and has reported to Gen. Wade the failure of negotiations for the surrender of Cailles, the insurgent leader in Laguna province. The Filipino apparently believes he can hold out now that the rainy season has begun.

Disappointment is felt here at the backward conditions in Southern Luzon. Some insurgent camps have been discovered and destroyed. Lieut. Cowen, with a detachment of fifty men, killed five insurgents near Jove lar.

Pioneer Press special.

New York, June 13.—Senator Chauncey M. Depew was asked tonight what he thought of a proposition to nominate Mark A. Hanna for president.

"Hanna for president?" said he. "Grand good fellow; none better in the world; patriotic citizen, noble specimen of American manhood and statesmanship; warm friend of mine. He has the good will of the whole community, is a true friend of the party and a true friend of the American people at large.

"But with all my admiration for Senator Hanna I want it distinctly understood that he cannot be nominated. New York is going to elect the next president. We've got our friends Odell and Roosevelt to look after, and we're going to do it, and do it handsomely."

The school and college debates will soon be over, and then will come the long summer vacation. What the poor old country is going to do in the meantime is a problem for the sages.

Since the civil war the population of the United States has expanded from 35,000,000 to nearly 80,000,000. A period of 40 years covers many mighty changes in this country.

The pastor of a New Jersey church has established a nursery where babies may be left during service. Probably he dislikes having his sermons interspersed with impromptu solos.

The Turkish government has concluded to rescind its order prohibiting the importation of typewriters into that country. Someone has convinced the sultan that the machines are not loaded.

Good luck simply thrusts itself upon some people. A New York society girl got married recently to a man who claimed that he was a French count and who now turns out to be a horse doctor.

Since a New Jersey justice has decided that "damn" is not a swear word it will probably seem insufficient for the needs of those who use it, and they will be compelled to hunt a new and more emphatic term.

A woman in Ottawa, Kan., has offered to pay $1,000 for proof of the existence of God. If she will only have patience and will wait long enough she will find out all she wants to know without its costing her a cent.

The law of the last legislature of Kansas making it a misdemeanor to steal a ride on a train has caused the hobo army to leave that state. A few years ago Kansas was the paradise of tramps, but this law and an avowed purpose of the authorities to compel them to work in the harvest fields have caused them to leave.

A London dispatch says that paintings worth thousands of dollars have just been found in an old shop where they were doing duty as fire screens. Every time an artist becomes pressed for funds, he pulls up some moth eaten picture from a basement, "finds" it in an old attic, or does something of that sort and sells it to the gullible public.

There was much amusement among the friends of Justice Brewer, of the supreme court, at his expense, because he procured a marriage license in the District of Columbia, which is not valid outside the district, in order to be married in Vermont. Thus a man most learned in constitutional law may be perfectly ignorant of local statutes.

Judge Danforth, of the Maine supreme court, had this to say in connection with the case of a defaulting bank cashier recently sent to prison: "I wish that the law permitted me to send with the accused every one of the bank directors who, through a long term of years, expected you to do your work, live respectably, bring up a large family and be honest—all on a salary of $600 a year."

The numerous expeditions to the north pole or thereabouts, either planned or under way, go to show that the game is fully as popular as ever. It is not that the explorers care a rap about the pole, or what is to be found there. But it is safe to assume that they are fond of adventure, and without doubt they are fond of notoriety. Hence the money expended and the risks taken for a purpose that promises no great material benefit to the world.

The American Hall of Fame has the following dimensions: Length of colonnade, 504 feet; height, 20 feet; breadth, 16 feet; length of museum, 200 feet; breadth, 40 feet; height, 16 feet. Tablets now are: Washington, Lincoln, Webster, Franklin, Jefferson, Clay, Adams, Grant, Farragut, Lee, Marshall, Kent, Story, Peabody, Cooper, Fulton, Stuart, Morse, Whitney, Audubon, Gray, Edwards, Mann, Beecher, Channing Emerson, Hawthorne, Irving and Longfellow. Five tablets are to be added every five years.

A Pennsylvania doctor says that appendicitis, with which women were until recently seldom afflicted, is now almost as common among them as among men. He ascribes this increase of the disease among them to the use of the bicycle, to golf and other outdoor sports. What are the women to do, poor things! First, they are tearfully and prayerfully urged and implored to engage in outdoor sports for the sake of their health; then they are told that if they do so they will have appendicitis. Life, as regulated by doctors, has complications.

Judge Stake, of Hagerstown, Md., has decided in the case of Mrs. Nannie Curtis that if a married woman finds her husband loitering about the streets when his presence is required at home she has a right to go up to him and say: "Go right along home now," and shove and push him as much as is necessary to make him obey, especially if he is found keeping company with another woman. It is difficult to see what more the women can ask. Surely, Miss Susan B. Anthony will now be called off, as the right to vote is no longer necessary.

DEATH OF NOTED WRITERS.

Close of the Careers of Sir Walter Besant and Robert W. Buchanan at London.

London, June 11.—Sir Walter Besant, the novelist, died at his residence in Hampstead, after a fortnight's illness, from influenza.

Sir Walter Besant was born at Portsmouth, England, in 1838. He was educated at King's college, London, and at Cambridge university, from which he graduated with high mathematical honors. He was intended for the church, but abandoned this career for literature. He was for several years professor of the Royal college of Mauritius, but resigned on account of ill health and returned to England. His first work, "Studies in Early French Poetry," was published in 1868. In 1873 appeared "The French Humorists," in 1877 "Rabelais" and in 1882 "Readings from Rabelais." Meantime his first novels, "Coligny" and "Whittington," had appeared and the writer had formed a partnership with James Rice in the production of a series of novels that bear their names. The most famous of Mr. Besant's own novels is "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," a work which led to the establishment of the People's palace in East London.

Among the author's other books are "Children of Gibeon," 1886; "The World Went Very Well Then," 1887; "For Faith and Freedom," 1888; "The Bell of St. Paul's," 1889; "Arnold of Lyonnesse," 1890; "The Rebel Queen," 1892; "The Master Craftsman" and "The City of Refuge," 1896. Of late years Mr. Besant gave his time largely to a series of illustrated historical works on old London, which he handled in an interesting way.

Mr. Besant founded the Society of Authors, an organization formed to promote the well-being of the profession, and he was editor of the monthly organ, the Author.

London, June 11.—Robert Williams Buchanan, poet and prose writer, is dead.

Robert Williams Buchanan was born in Staffordshire in 1841. He was the son of Robert Buchanan, socialist, journalist and missionary. He was educated at Glasgow university. His first writing was poetry. "Idylls and Legends of Inverburn" appeared in 1863 and "London Poems" in 1866. Several other volumes of verse followed. In 1872 appeared "The Fleshly School of Poetry," a fierce attack upon the poems of Rossetti and Swinburne.

Much of his later work was written for the stage. Among his dramas are "A Man's Shadow," "Dick Sheridan" and "The Charlatan." His first novel, "The Shadow of the Sword," was published in 1876. In 1879 followed "A Child of Nature" and in 1881 "God and the Man." Two humorous stories in verse, "St. Abe and His Seven Wives" and "White Rose and Red," attained wide popularity.

BANKS ARE THRIVING.

Comptroller's Reports for the Year Show an Unusual Increase in Depositories and Deposits.

Washington, June 10.—All the reports called for by the comptroller of the currency dealing with the condition of national banks at the close of business April 24 are in, and the showing is held by treasury officials to be a remarkable one, far in excess of anything of the kind in history. There is a total of 4,064 banks; at the close of business April 26, 1900, there were 3,631. Total resources are $5,630,794,367; in 1900, $4,811,956,048. Total individual deposits, $2,893,665,449; in 1900 they were $2,449,212,656. Loans and discounts are $2,911,526,276; in 1900, $2,566,034,990. Surplus funds and undivided profits amount to $416,017,134; in 1900 they were $383,757,200. Lawful money in reserve, including the five per centum redemption fund with treasurer, is $565,669,294; last year it was $516,190,886. The average reserve held is 29.1 per cent.

Wheat Fields Devastated.

Wichita, Kan., June 10.—A correspondent from the scene of devastation in Kay county, Oklahoma, says that the storm of Friday night ruined the wheat crop of 400 farms west and northwest of Blackwell. These farms are all in one body of territory. The farmers, who had purchased twine and harvest machinery, are asking the local dealers to take them back, and the dealers have referred the matter to the factories. The loss of crops will cause no distress, as the farmers are in good condition financially, owing to a succession of good crops during the past five seasons.

Question Still Unsettled.

Washington, June 10.—The United States government has again appealed to the powers to submit the present issues at Peking over the indemnity propositions to the arbitration of The Hague tribunal. Mr. Rockhill, who has been watching for an opportunity, cabled Secretary Hay Friday night for permission to make a proposition and the secretary Saturday morning cabled him authority to do so. It is believed that the ministers at Peking have become involved beyond extrication in the present issues and this proposition may be the only way out.

Indians to Invade Chicago.

Detroit, Mich., June 8.—A special to the Tribune from St. Joseph, Mich., says: The tribe of Pottowatomie Indians living in Van Buren county, held a secret powwow at Hartford Friday to listen to a report of scouts sent to Chicago. By a unanimous vote the tribe decided to sail for Chicago June 22 under the leadership of Chief Isaac Quigno, the youngest and most daring full-blooded Indian of the tribe. The Pottawattomies propose to invest the lake front of Chicago and then proceed to prove their claims to the land which they believe will be sustained.

Stolen Coin Recovered.

Milwaukee, June 10.—A Sentinel special from Mineral Point, Wis., says: Thirteen thousand dollars more of the gold coin stolen from the First national bank on the morning of May 24, has been recovered. It was found in the earth vault of a common outhouse of the City hotel, about a block from the looted bank, at which the prisoner, Steward Jelleff, boarded. The gold, when found, was in five bags, one containing $9,000 and the others $1,000 each. This find and the $8,000 before recovered comprises all the gold missing from the bank.

Murder and Suicide.

Flint, Mich., June 7.—Mrs. Jennie Parish, a widow aged 34, was shot and almost instantly killed by Lewis Weeks Thursday night in her home here. Weeks came to Mrs. Parish's home and demanded admittance, but was refused. He broke in the door, and then told Mrs. Parish he had come to kill her, at the same time firing two shots into her right side. Weeks escaped. He has a wife and three children. Mrs. Parish named Weeks as her slayer before she died. Her daughter Carrie, aged 12, witnessed the shooting.

FOUND GUILTY.

Jury in Chicago Declare Unger and Brown to Be Insurance Conspirators.

Chicago, June 11.—Dr. August M. Unger and F. Wayland Brown were Monday found guilty of conspiracy to commit the insurance frauds which culminated in the death of Marie Defenbach last fall. The jurors, who for 24 days have listened to the evidence and arguments, were unanimous for conviction on the first ballot. It took them only 55 minutes to look over the judge's instructions, sum up the evidence and prepare their written verdict. Punishment by imprisonment in the penitentiary for an indeterminate term of from one to five years is the penalty.

[The Defenbach case may be said to have had its inception April 3, 1900, when Dr. Unger, under the assumed name of Dr. Scott, in company of Marie Defenbach, called on one of the officials of the Independent Order of Foresters. Marie sought to secure $5,000 insurance, and after some weeks of waiting her name was finally entered on the rolls of the organization. This was the beginning of a series of dealings with insurance companies and organizations which finally resulted in an aggregate of $12,000 in insurance being secured on the life of the girl. This money was distributed as follows: Independent Order of Foresters, $5,000; New York Life Insurance company, $5,000; Knights and Ladies of Honor, $2,000. If they had been successful in all their efforts she would have carried a total of $67,000 in insurance. Brown and Smiley came into prominence through an arrangement making Smiley, as her affianced husband, the beneficiary in the foresters' policy. The girl died on the night of August 25. For an hour before her death she suffered intense agony. She called repeatedly for Dr. Unger. The day following the body was embalmed at a neighboring undertaking establishment. Brown and Smiley called at the house and made all preparations for the funeral and the disposition of her personal effects. Tuesday she was cremated at Graceland in accordance with the provisions of a will found in her bedroom and dated August 23. Smiley and Brown set to work to collect the $5,000 policy in the foresters and Unger sought to get the money called for in the other two policies. Smiley attempted to probate the will and the publicity brought about an expose, arrests and finally conviction.]

THREE GIRLS DROWNED.

Sad Result of a Boating Accident on the Delaware River Near Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, June 10.—A party of six persons, three men and three girls, while sailing on the Delaware river Sunday afternoon, off North Essington, a few miles below this city, were thrown into the water by the swamping of their skiff during a squall, and the three girls were drowned. The names of the girls are: Rosie Koons, aged 17 years; Mary Koons, 19; Mamie Traynor, 22. The party were guests of the Federal Boat club. Other members of the club heard the cries of the unfortunates and immediately set about rescuing them. The three men were quickly hauled into other boats, but the girls sank before they could be reached.

DECLARED CONSTITUTIONAL.

Iowa's Anti-Cigarette Law Held to Be Valid by the District Court at Marshalltown.

Marshalltown, Ia., June 10.—Judge Burnham, of the district court, Saturday decided that the Iowa cigarette tax law is constitutional, and that the property of dealers in cigarettes and owners of buildings where they are sold may be attached and sold for said taxes. There are several thousand dollars in this county alone in back tax money due the state. Similar suits pending in other counties have been awaiting the decision in Marshall county. The American Tobacco company, it is said, will appeal.

Dr. Daly Commits Suicide.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 10.—Long-continued brooding over the official criticism of his course in the "embalmed beef" scandal after the close of the Spanish war caused the suicide of Dr. William Hudson Daly, formerly major and chief surgeon in the United States volunteers, in this city Sunday. He shot himself in the right temple and died immediately. Dr. Daly was severely criticised by the United States board of inquiry for statements he had made before the board supporting Gen. Miles' charges against the commissary department.

Famous Painter Dead.

New York, June 10.—Edward Moran, the eminent marine and landscape painter, died Sunday afternoon in his apartments and studio in Fifth avenue, from uraemic poisoning, superinduced by a complication of diseases from which he had been suffering for about a year. Edward Moran was born in England in 1829. When he was 12 years old the family came to America and settled in Maryland. Later they went to Philadelphia. Moran first opened a studio in Philadelphia, but 25 years ago he came to New York, where he has since made his home.

The Law Is Valid.

Omaha, Neb., June 11.—Judge Baker, in the district court, decided that the statute known as the female labor law of Nebraska, prohibiting owners of manufacturing and mechanical concerns, stores and shops from working female employes for more than 60 hours a week is constitutional. The case was one wherein William Wenham, a laundryman, was charged with overworking female labor. The court held that it was necessary to limit the hours of female labor in order to protect the public health.

Founded the Elks.

New York, June 7.—George W. Cumberland, known to the American stage as George W. Thompson, "Father of the Elks," is dead in Brooklyn from blood poisoning, following an operation upon his hand. Funeral services will be held to-day. He was born in New York city in 1836. He is said to have founded the order of Elks 35 years ago, becoming first exalted ruler of New York lodge, No. 1, in 1868.

Postpones Return to Peking.

Shanghai, June 10.—An imperial edict issued June 6 announces that, owing to the hot weather and the advanced age of the dowager empress, the return of the court to Peking has been postponed until September 1, which the astrologers pronounce to be a lucky day on which to commence a journey.

TEXANS FIGHT.

Shooting Affray in Houston in Which Two Men Are Killed and Two Wounded.

Houston, Tex., June 8.—As the result of an indictment charging hog theft, a shooting affray occurred here Friday in which Thomas Payne and L. G. Echols were killed. J. B. Perkins was fatally and Dave Echols badly wounded. Payne's son was on trial, and the two Echols had been summoned as witnesses. The men met downtown, and after a few words the shooting began. Perkins was a brother-in-law of Payne, and he and L. G. Echols fired at about the same time. Echols' bullet struck Payne and at the same instant Perkins shot and killed Echols. Dave Echols opened fire on Perkins and Young Payne. Two bullets struck Perkins, and a wound in the groin will probably prove fatal. Perkins wounded Dave Echols in the arm, and amputation will be necessary. The younger Payne was not hurt. The street was crowded at the time of the shooting, but no one save those directly involved were hurt. Every bullet fired struck the mark with the exception of one, which young Payne fired and which struck his father, though he was probably dead at the time.

BOERS DEFEATED.

Are Surprised by a Band of British Scouts Near Warm Baths and Routed.

Pretoria, June 7.—Col. Wilson, with 240 of Kitchener's scouts, has surprised and routed 400 Boers belonging to Beyer's command, 34 miles west of Warm Baths. The Boers resisted stubbornly, but finally broke and fled, leaving 37 dead, 100 prisoners and all their wagons and supplies, including 8,000 cattle, in the hands of the British. The loss of the latter was three men killed and 15 wounded.

Beyer's main command arrived on the scene soon after the engagement, but failed in an attempt to recapture the supplies. Beyer was thus practically left without any transport or supplies.

London, June 11.—Lord Kitchener in a dispatch from Pretoria, under Monday's date, says the number of Boers killed, imprisoned or surrendered during the last month totaled 1,640. From June 1 to June 9, 26 Boers were killed, four were wounded, 409 were made prisoners and 33 surrendered, and 651 rifles, 115,550 rounds of ammunition, 120 wagons and 4,000 horses were captured.

DYNAMITE EXPLODES.

Collision of Freight Trains Results in Five Deaths—Both Trains Are Destroyed.

Binghamton, N. Y., June 10. — A freight train taking water at Vestal, ten miles west of here, Saturday night, was run into from behind by a double-header wildcat freight and the explosion of a large quantity of dynamite in one of the cars killed five men, injured seven others and blew both trains to atoms. The explosion was terrific and was felt at a distance of 30 miles. In addition to wrecking both trains, most of the windows in Vestal and at Union, across the river from Vestal, were shattered. Many of the large plate-glass windows in Binghamton were also broken.

Sheriff Checks a Mob.

Carrollton, Ga., June 8.—The nerve of a Georgia sheriff, whose name is Joseph Merrill, Friday upheld the law of the state and saved the life of a negro from a mob. In protecting the negro, who was saved from the gallows only a few hours before through the efforts of his lawyers, one life was lost and two men were wounded. The arrival of the state militia averted threatened trouble Friday night, and at nine o'clock a special train bearing the negro, whose crime was the murder of a little white boy whom he found fishing alone, was speeding towards Atlanta under guard. The man killed in attacking the jail was George Bennett, of Carrollton, and the wounded men are Thomas Smith, also of Carrollton, and an unknown man.

Escape Punishment by Law.

Toronto, Ont., June 8.—Of the three men, Fred Lee Rice, Thomas Jones and Frank Rutledge, extradited from Chicago to stand trial for the robbery of a bank in Aurora, Ont., Rice is the only living survivor of the trio to serve out the 21 years' imprisonment to which he was sentenced Friday morning. Two tragedies have put Jones and Rutledge beyond reach of the law. Jones died from bullet wounds received in a desperate attempt to escape from the officers who were transferring the prisoners from the courthouse to the jail last Tuesday, and Rutledge committed suicide Friday by jumping from the gallery in the jail to the stone court, 30 feet below.

Paying Hawaiian Debt.

Washington, June 8.—Mr. W. W. Ludlow, one of the treasury officials who went to Honolulu in company with W. F. MacLennan, chief of the warrant and bookkeeping division, to pay off the public debt of the Hawaiian islands, has returned to the city. Payments were begun on May 7, and on May 23 $2,135,000 had been paid off in Honolulu, and about $900,000 in San Francisco, leaving only about $120,000 yet to be paid in Honolulu and about $1,000,000 of the debt which is held in London. The London holders will be paid January 1, 1902.

Can't Compete.

New York, June 8.—Thomas W. Lawson's yacht, the Independence, will not be allowed to compete in the trial races preliminary to the races for the America's cup unless she shall be chartered by some member of the New York Yacht club who will enter her for such events as she may be qualified to take part in. After a meeting of the challenge committee it was decided to return Mr. Lawson his proposition to charter the Independence to a number of New York Yacht club gentlemen who comprise the challenge committee.

Fifty-Nine Drowned.

Victoria, B. C., June 11.—The steamer Kinshiu Maru arrived Monday from the orient. She brought news that a Chinese passenger boat bound from Chu San to Ning Pi was upset during a squall on May 8, and out of 68 on board only nine were saved. Thirty bodies were washed ashore.

What Our Flag Stands For.

Wherever the American flag is mised in token of sovereignty, it stands for liberty and independence. What the flag is to the nation, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to the individual. It gives you freedom and protection from your ailments. When your stomach gets out of order causing dyspepsia, indigestion and biliousness, or when you are nervous and unable to sleep you should try it. It will strengthen your stomach, steady your nerves and induce sound sleep.

"Do you not wish now," inquired the prison visitor, "that you had followed the straight and narrow path?" "Dat's de one I did foller," replied Jimmy Dores. "If I'd only dodged inter dat crooked alley dey'd never 'a' ketched me."—Philadelphia Press.

A BALD NEWSPAPER MAN.

Getting a New Crop of Hair, and Has No More Dandruff.

Everybody in the Northwest knows Col. Daniel Searles, the veteran journalist and publicist of Butte. Jan. 10, 1900, the Colonel writes: "I used a couple of bottles of Newbro's Herpicide with marvelous results. The dandruff disappeared; a new crop of hair has taken root, and the bald spot is rapidly being covered." Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ that digs up the scalp in scales as it burrows its way to the root of the hair, where it destroys the vitality of the hair, causing the hair to fall out. Kill the dandruff germ, with Herpicide.

A GLORIOUS SIGHT.

Fields of Wheat in Which the Stocks Were So Thick It Was Impossible to Drive Between Them.

To the Editor:

A gentleman from Duluth made a trip through a portion of Western Canada last summer, and writing of what he saw, says:

"Wheat, for instance, will average twenty-five or thirty bushels to the acre. I saw shocks so thick in the field that it would be almost impossible to drive between them. Winters, it is said, are longer than near Duluth, but the Japan current, warm chinook winds and dry atmosphere make the winters comparatively mild."

Thousands of such testimonies are to be had from settlers who have taken advantage of the low-priced lands of Western Canada. During the present year new districts will be opened up in the Saskatchewan Valley, and advantage should be taken of this at once. Information can be had from any agent of the Government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in your columns.

Help for Women

Who Are Always Tired.

"I do not feel very well, I am so tired all the time."

You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.

Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MRS. ELLA RICE.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women.

COMMON HEROES.

The Clerk's Wife.

In a little stuffy villa with an overwhelming name,
Where the slate roof clashes vilely with the bricks of lurid flame,
In a little dusty villa in a little dingy street—
She is toiling late and early, bravely making two ends meet;
O she walks abroad befeathered, (Hist! the petticoat is frayed),
But at home she tucks her sleeves up, she is cook and parlormaid;
O the grates that she must polish! O the plates that she must rub!
O the dusting, cooking, mending! O the floors that she must scrub!

Keeping up appearances,
Aching heart and soul!
Must, of course, look ladylike—
What's the price of coal?
Must, of course, look ladylike,
Highlows down at heel—
Rather die than fail to be Perfectly genteel!

O, her lord must have his sleep out, he has work in town to do—
It is she who lulls the baby when it howls from twelve to two,
It is she who gets the breakfast—it is he who pats her cheek
When he sallies forth to London for his "three-pound-ten a week;"
O, she goes to church on Sunday in a wondrous hat and gown,
And she drops into the sidesman's bag what sounds like half-a-crown,
O the busy day's contriving! O the nightmare in the dark!—
But the vicar's wife gets tea-cake when she calls on Mrs. Clerk.

Keeping up appearances,
Smiling through it all!
Husband stricken down at last—
O the doctor's call!
Change of air and change of scene,
Fortnight down at Deal,
God! the suburb's tragedy—
Three-pound-ten genteel!

The Runaway Train

By Elizabeth Cherry Waltz.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

IN the fresh morning air with the sunshine beginning to send golden shafts through the eastern gap, a long freight train came pulling around the curve and drew up on the side track at Buzzard's Run station. The conductor was a young man with a strong and rather intelligent face. He had on the heaviest load of the season in coal and lumber, and was inwardly doubtful as to how the train would take the down grade on the other side of the mountain. He was also doubtful whether his orders to stop at Alta tank for water was a wise one, but he knew nothing but obedience to orders, and he also knew he must have water. There was plenty of time to think about it here at Buzzard's. The express was late, and the local would only be 30 minutes behind it. So Buskirk sat down on a pile of ties near the engine and enjoyed his leisure.

Not for long, however. The station agent came out and beckoned him wildly. When he reached the door of the telegraph office, Atkinson, the red-headed youth from Charleston who presided at the instrument, was busy at the clicking sounder. He motioned with his elbow, and Buskirk sat down in the one available chair. Atkinson clicked off something energetically and then wheeled about.

"Say, Buskirk, Flasher is beating your time. Lettie went up to Ash Grove to a big dance with him last night. She is going home on the local—the whole crowd is on."

Buskirk grew white. It was a sudden and unexpected blow. Lettie Rhodes was his promised wife, and they were to be married in the late spring. Everyone knew it, everyone expected it. He could not believe Atkinson at first.

"Is this a job?" he said, after a moment, "because it's a poor one. Lettie don't like Flasher a little bit. She's told me so. Why, you know, we are to be married in two or three months. I was buying some things in Philadelphia—furniture and such."

"Flasher's a deep one," said Atkinson, "and he claims to fly high with the passenger department. Lettie's on the local all right. Mae Kenzie, down at Ash Grove, was just asking if you two had quarreled."

Buskirk sat still for three minutes. The shrill whistle of the coming express came clearly.

"I'd give half my life if I dared let Bill Cross take her over the mountain and go down on the local to Tipton," said he, then more slowly, "but it would never do. I could see Lettie a few moments, but I am lucky if I get over and down without a break down the grade—for I've got to stop for water at Alta."

Atkinson shook his head.

"Why didn't you water at Hall's or Kirby's with such a heavy train, John?"

"Water tank at Hall's being repaired—been leaking for a year—orders for Alta—that's all."

The express whistled again and, in a few seconds thundered by and puffed up the cut and out of sight. Buskirk's pained face moved Atkinson.

"Say, I only told you so you'd know what's up, Buskirk. I hate Flasher. Now go in and marry her before he gets her. Carry her off—anything. I'll help. I'm not redheaded for nothing."

"If I could only be sure," groaned Buskirk.

"Here, be a man. Go out to the local. You know these crowds from Tipton going home from a dance. Heads all out the windows, half of them on the platform. Show up and see whether they're together. There's 31 whistling now. Come on, John."

The local pulled around the curve and slowed up as if unwilling to stop, so hard was it to start up the mountain. The Tipton crowd was evidently on board. Shouts and laughter resounded from doors and windows, and, on the platform, were young men and women crowding out to salute Atkinson, who knew everybody. Buskirk stood out, grimy, white and defiant in the morning sunshine. His presence made a sudden silence, then raised a great shout.

"Hello, John, we've got Lettie! Lettie, there's John. We stole a march on you, Buskirk!"

There was Lettie in her flimsy pink gown, with a white hat and tumbled hair. Lettie, his little girl. His heart ached until it seemed that it would burst. Flasher was there, behind her, smirking and conscious. But John Buskirk was no man's game.

"Wait for me at the station, Lettie," he called. "We're due 20 after and side track at Tipton."

He waved his hand and stepped back. But he could not see his train for a mist in his eyes as he strode on.

Coal and lumber, 43 heavy cars. He felt the danger at Alta in his very blood. Railroad men do—but they always go on. So he climbed up and the whistle blew, the engine bell rang, and the train unwillingly crawled up, up and over Flat Top mountain.

As it swept round the last curve and began to go down grade John Buskirk could see far into the valley below. He could see the white smoke of the local leaving Tipton. Would Lettie wait for him? If she was not waiting there he did not care whether the train went down safely or not—save for the other men.

Alta was a third of the way down, a water tank filled by a mountain stream and not often used. There was a switch ran into a loop in a sort of hollow behind the tank, and he had to pull in there to fill the boiler. The train was so long it was a terrific strain to get in and hold together. He was afraid of the end of the train, and stayed in the caboose while the engineer carefully pulled in on the loop.

Bump! The engine was stopped and the jar went from car to car, clanking chains and pins and bars. Suddenly Buskirk and his flagman, Cross, clutched each other. They were certainly moving, and someone was screaming hoarsely. Buskirk looked out in time to see the two brakemen jump, and then his heart leaped to his throat.

The train had parted at the switch, and he was on a runaway section that was rolling down the mountain.

It was too late to jump now. Cross uttered one sound and jumped over a one-hundred foot embankment. Buskirk thought it useless. Death had come. He only thought of Lettie, for his mother was dead, and he was going to her in spirit.

Down, down; on, on, then a grinding jar, a jerk! Seven or eight cars jumped the track, but two cars and the caboose went on, on, on forever, it seemed—until John Buskirk's senses left him and he fell heavily to the floor.

At Tipton there had been events. Lettie Rhodes had declared when the train entered the village that she was going to wait for the freight. In vain Flasher expostulated and the others laughed. She said she would wait, and so took her seat on the wooden bench outside the station house.

Flasher, who had some uneasy reasons for anxiety, decided to wait with her. Lettie was weary, and did not care to talk, but she watched the mountain top, and after a little saw the train come around and heard it rumbling, whistling and roaring. Alta tank was on the other side of the cliffs, so the first intimation she had of the disaster was a strange slipping sound high above, and then the runaway train came in full sight, frantically tearing down, rocking, leaping, a monster of speed. Then the hidden engine shrieked and shrieked and called to the people below.

"See!" cried Lettie. "Oh, the train, the train! It has broken in two. It is coming!"

Flasher was panic-stricken.

"Run—it will come in here—all the switches are closed. Run, Lettie, run!"

Lettie turned to him with an ashen face.

"Run? Yes, run for the men. John's on that train—somewhere—O!"

Far down the cliffs tumbled the loaded cars, crashing timber, coal, grinding iron.

"Over the cliff," said Flasher, shaking; "everybody's gone now."

"The caboose is still on—it's running on—it will go around. We must open the switch—into the sand bank."

"Wait!" gasped Flasher. "There's no time. It will kill you."

But Lettie was over the tracks and away to the switches. One ran into a gravel and sand hill, well up against it, and the track closed there. She could hear the rails humming, but Lettie was a railroad girl, and she knew what to do. She pushed the rusty switch down just in time and threw herself upon the ground. There was a flash past her—only a second—and then a grind, a thud, a crash of splintered wood and breaking iron. All was over.

So it came that, when John Buskirk opened his eyes, his head was in Lettie's lap.

"So you waited, did you?" he tried to say.

Then Lettie cried bitterly.

"If you were not half dead I'd tell you what I thought of you for running about with other women in Philadelphia."

"Who told you that—Flasher?"

Lettie nodded.

John Buskirk tried to wipe his bleeding cheek with his hand.

"It was my married sister," he said, huskily, "and if you'll lean down here I'll whisper just what we were doing, Letty."

Clocks with "Wheels."

"Clocks are certainly queer things," said the man who was tinkering at the hall clock in a suburban house the other day. "They get cranky spells, just like people. Sometimes they really act as though they were bewitched. A friend of mine had a little clock that had behaved itself and kept good time for years. One day it took a notion to lay off for awhile, and they couldn't get it started again. My friend's wife was cleaning the room several days afterward, and she took the clock and laid it down flat on its back on a chair. It started to go at once, and ticked away at a great rate, but as soon as she placed it on end it stopped again. Well, they set it, and for a time it acted all right as long as it remained on its back. But it soon got cranky again and refused to go. The other day, just for fun, they turned it upside down, and would you believe it, that crazy clock started off again. Now it only runs when it is standing on its head, and they are wondering what new foolishness it will develop next."—Boston Record.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Will Ignore State Board.

The board of regents of the state university has settled, so far as they are concerned, their relation to the state board of control. They will not recognize the authority of the state board of control. The regents rely on a decision of Attorney-General Douglas, which favors them. He gave his opinion that not only are the regents not under the new board, but that they cannot legally even delegate their authority to the state board. This action of the board of regents will come as a relief to many friends of the university, who feel that it differs so much from other state institutions as to render its being placed with them under the jurisdiction of the board of control injurious rather than beneficial.

Work is Stopped.

Work has suddenly stopped on dam No. 2, in the river near Minnehaha. Orders have been received from the war department to discontinue work on the dam until otherwise notified, although the work on the lock will go ahead as before. The real cause of the action is said to lie in the fact that the work cannot be completed for the sum that was allowed for it. The lock will easily come within the estimate, which was $490,000. The estimated cost of the dam, however, was placed at $108,000; while the recent investigations prove that it cannot be completed for less than $225,000.

Killed by an Engine.

Milo Aldrich, a well-to-do farmer, purchased a threshing engine and separator and started with the outfit from Mankato for his home, four miles west of Amboy. When a few miles from Mankato, on the approach to the Jones ford bridge, a narrow piece of roadway, the machine rolled down a 30-foot embankment, rolling over three times. Aldrich clung to the engine and was instantly killed, it finally landing on top of him. He was 53 years old and leaves a wife and one son. This son was with him, but escaped without injury.

Distinguished Themselves.

Two Minneapolis boys have distinguished themselves in Paris. They are Leon Gillette, who spent some years in the offices of the Kieth company, architects, and Edwin Hawley Hewitt. They are studying architecture and took the spring examinations for admission into l'Ecole des Beaux Artes. Nine places were allotted to the United States. Hewitt stood first and Gillet third, both ranking above the resident students. The examinations, which were conducted in French, were both oral and written, and were very thorough. Mr. Hewitt is a son of Dr. Hewitt, an instructor at the university.

The Old Story.

The 11-year-old son of John Cassiday, of Clearwater, was killed by the playful use of a revolver. In the absence of the parents upon Decoration Day services, the children, five in number, obtained a weapon belonging to the hired man. It was found unloaded, but during the play one of the children had placed a cartridge in the barrel, unnoticed by the boy who was playing with it. When cautioned by the other children not to point towards anyone, lest it might be loaded, he replied, "No, it is not. See here!" and placing the muzzle to his neck, pointing upwards, discharged it, the ball passing through the head.

Log Shipments.

The business of transporting logs by all-rail routes from the woods to the saw mills in Minneapolis has lately assumed tremendous proportions. The Backus-Brooks and the Scanlon-Gipson lumber companies have contracted with the Northern Pacific for the transportation of their logs this season, the contracts covering daily hauls for a period of three months. Nearly 500 cars per week are received.

EGYPTIAN MEN AND WOMEN.

What Can Be Learned of Their Characteristics from Ancient Drawings.

In face the men and women were very much alike, but there is a subtle charm about the female faces that is replaced by a placid dignity in the male. In both the features are delicate and of a somewhat aqueline type, and the figures are tall and slight. There is very little indication of muscle, but the men are broad-shouldered and thin-flanked, while the women, in spite of their stiff attitudes, are graceful and refined. In both the forms are soft and rounded. The resemblance between the men and the women is, of course, increased by the men being always clean-shaven.

In the paintings and bas-reliefs there are certain conventions which do not apply to the statues, and for these due allowance has to be made, says the London News.

In early times, all drawing and painting on the flat (and bas-relief is but a form of this) had to serve two purposes. One was to convey information, the other to be ornamental. It is doubtful which is the earlier of the two. The man of the stone age, when he scratched his realistic mammoth on a piece of reindeer bone, either wanted to convey to his brother man that he had seen a fine specimen of this interesting animal, or else he did it because he thought it pretty, or he may have had both motives. In any case we have here the common origin of art and writing.

The information picture dwindles down through hieroglyphics to mere symbols of sounds, the pictorial origin of which is entirely lost. The decorative picture gradually loses all wish to convey information and subsists entirely for its pleasure to the eye. But the Egyptians had not got so far as that; when they drew a man there had to be no mistake what it was. He had all to be displayed, as it were, to the best advantage. The legs were shown sideways so as to give the whole length of the feet, and one leg was put in front of the other, so that neither could be concealed. Then there came a difficulty about the body; if that were sideways, too, one shoulder would be lost; so that the body must be seen frontways. The arms, again, are best seen sideways; fortunately, as both shoulders are shown, they do not interfere with one another. Again, a profile is more characteristic than a full face, but a profile eye is a poor, foreshortened thing.

So in this profile we insert an eye seen to its full extent, and then we really have done the man justice. This eye, seen full face while the head is profile, gives naturally a peculiar expression, which makes people talk of the long, narrow eyes of the ancient Egyptians. They very likely had nothing of the kind. Then, again, the twisting of the body makes the shoulders seem too broad. The ideal is certainly broad-shouldered, but not so much so as this would make it appear.

Snail's Great Strength.

Snails are gifted with wonderful muscular strength. They possess the convenient faculty of being able to fast a long time. Locard has succeeded in bringing back to life snails that he had left without food for a year and six months. Another French investigator has kept snails for three and one-half years without light, without food, and almost without air, in a closed box. Their muscular strength is shown by their ability to drag for long distances solid objects on which they have fixed themselves. Larbaletrier tells of a snail which he saw dragging for about ten minutes a stone that weighed 67 times as much as itself. In the winter the snail retires into its house and closes the door with a plaster of calcareous mucus. It sleeps for six months, but it wakes in the spring with an enormous appetite.—Nature.

Cats to Check the Rabbits.

Australian papers state that the experiment of the West Australian government in turning domestic cats loose in the southeastern districts of the colony to check the invasion of rabbits from South Australia has been a pronounced success. The felines destroyed immense numbers of the pests, and in some cases almost cleared the squatters' runs of the rabbits. In anticipation of the demand which is expected for cats for this work breeding establishments are being started. It is believed, however, that it will be found much cheaper to import the animals.—N. COULDN'T WEAR SHOES.

Sumpter, Ill., June 10.—Mrs. J. B. Flanigan, of this place, had suffered with Dropsy for fifteen years. She was so very bad that for the last three years, she has not been able to wear her shoes. She had doctored all the time, but was gradually getting worse.

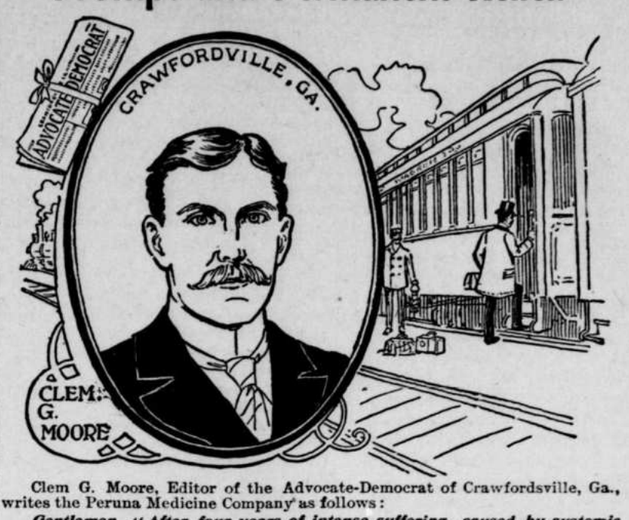
Last winter Mr. Flanigan, who was very much discouraged, called for some medicine at Mr. J. J. Dale's drug store in Carmi. Mr. Dale persuaded him to have his wife try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and he bought six boxes. His wife used five out of the six, before she was entirely cured. She is now as sound and well as ever she was, completely restored to health, and free from any symptom whatever of Dropsy.

To say that Mrs. Flanigan is pleased at her wonderful deliverance, does not half express her feelings, and she and Mr. Flanigan are loud in their praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and of Mr. Dale for recommending this wonderful remedy to them.

The fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mrs. Flanigan of such a severe case of Dropsy, after the doctors had given her up, has made them the most talked-of remedy ever known in White County.

FOR SYSTEMIC CATARRH

Peculiar to Summer Pe-ru-na Gives Prompt and Permanent Relief.



Clem G. Moore, Editor of the Advocate-Democrat of Crawfordsville, Ga., writes the Peruna Medicine Company as follows:

Gentlemen—"After four years of intense suffering, caused by systemic catarrh, which I contracted while editing, and traveling for my paper, I have been greatly relieved by the use of Peruna. I gave up work during these years of torture, tried various remedies and many doctors, but all the permanent relief came from the use of Peruna. My trouble was called indigestion, but it was catarrh all through my system, and a few bottles of Peruna made me feel like another person, noting the improvement after I had used the first bottle. Peruna is undoubtedly the best catarrh remedy ever compounded.—Clem G. Moore.

This offers an unsurpassed opportunity for those desiring to hunt new homes and farms, to go into the northwest and look over the country, or for those wishing to visit relatives or friends or to make pleasure trips, to do so.

Same Old Trick.

After six months of darkness the arctic sun creeped shyly over the edge of the glacier. Mr. Ojibiwockky had just returned from the Eskimo club. "What time is it?" asked Mrs. Ojibiwockky, suddenly waking up. "Quar'er pash February," replied Mr. Ojibiwockky, somewhat thickly. It was in reality half past May, and having no desire to pry into family affairs, we will draw a veil over the scene that followed.—Philadelphia Record.

DEATH

begins in the bowels. It's the unclean places that breed infectious epidemics, and it's the unclean body—unclean inside—that "catches" the disease. A person whose stomach and bowels are kept clean and whose liver is lively, and blood pure, is safe against yellow fever, or any other of the dreadful diseases that desolate our beautiful land. Some of the cleanest people outside are filthiest inside, and they are the ones who not only "catch" the infections, but endanger the lives of all their friends and relatives. There's only one certain way of keeping clean inside so as to prevent disease and that is to take CASCARETS. Perfect disinfectant and bowel strengtheners. All diseases are

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, June 14, 1901.

DELANO DIARY

--Willie Mowatt has gone into the berry business now, and is supplying our home market with good fresh fruit.

—A report has been circulated that C. J. Buckley will supersede F. H. Lindsley as Post Master, at Delano, about July 1.

—Prospects for good crops of everything seem fair now. Farmers are wearing their blandest smiles ever since the late rains, which were of untold value to Minnesota.

—Where the roadgraders are used a marked improvement in roads is noted. Roads are left with better drainage and much more smooth than where worked in the old way.

—The wrecking outfit removed the wreck from the roadside, on the West side, today. The cars had been taken from the track allowing trains to pass before the wreckers got around.

—Fair Day passed off in much the usual manner last Saturday. There was a large attendance, and a large amount of business transacted. Horses and cows are both up pretty high in price.

—It is not likely that there will be so many straw stack fires this fall as there has in the past. Farmers will remember that last winter they would have been glad to have their straw to sell, or to feed to their own stock.

—Mrs. Summers, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hehn, died at Columbus, Ohio, and the remains were brought here for burial. Her husband accompanied them. The funeral was from St. Peter's church, on Monday.

—The Delano Pioneers Association meets with Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Carleton next Thursday afternoon, at their home on Franklin Ave. The meeting is to be held in the afternoon to accommodate some who do not keep late hours.

—The story going around about connonading hailstorms to break them up and prevent them destroying vineyards, orchards and the like, is now by eminent scientists pronounced a fake. The elements are more powerful than man's devices.

--Some thoughtless or careless people have been digging up the sod along the road in front of the Delano cemetery. It doesn't add to the beauty of the cemetery from the road. A nice sod sidewalk along the front would look much better than holes in the ground, and would be much pleasanter to walk over. Get your sod a little further away.

--The guard over Diphtheria patients in the town of Franklin, reported in town Monday that one man had tired of quarantine and gone away, leaving for a farm toward Hutchinson. He should have first been thoroughly disinfected and had a permit from the Health Officer. People can't be too careful about spreading contagious diseases, and diphtheria is one of the most fatal.

—Farmers got up smiling Tuesday morning. They had got what they so long wished for, a splendid, warm, soaking rain. Crops are pronounced all safe now sure. But they should be harvested on the first days that they are at all fit. The fall rains often spoil much grain in this state. Crops should be gathered when they are ripe, not after they have shelled out. The Lord has promised a seed time and a harvest, and those that work accordingly thrive best.

—Quite a number of Delanoites went on the excursion trip to Spring Park Sunday. Two special trains were run down taking passengers from as far west as Willmar, and there probably were over a thousand pleasure seekers from along the line. The Delano Millers ball club played at Wayzata and won the game by a score of 7 to 8. Willmar and Litchfield had a game at Spring Park, the former winning by a score of 2 to 4. The trains returned about 8:30 in the evening.

—Any Physician and Surgeon that would humiliate himself enough to sign one of the printed contracts sent out from the headquarters of the G. N. must have little respect for himself or his profession. Why should he contract to take one half what he receives from other customers? Or why should he contract to take the rail road's crippled people off their hands and make no expense for them? If the doctor wants to ride on the cars he must pay for the privilege the same as other people, and there is no good reason why the railroad shouldn't pay for what it gets at the usual rates.

—A wreck occurred Thursday just before 4 P. M. As an engine with a few cars backed up to couple onto the balance of the train which had been left in the cut, on the west side. When the cars came together one old, small car, broke in two in the middle, and two more cars were overturned; a load of rye bursting out the top of a car. One brakeman had a narrow escape, jumping to a car that did not leave the track. It would have paid the company better to have discarded the little old car before.

—We visited Fergus Falls this week and were surprised to find such a flourishing city. They claim 7,000. There are many manufacturing establishments located there, good waterpower being furnished by a branch of the Red River. Electric lights, waterworks, and modern improvements are used. A nice little lake is a place of enjoyment. The prairie winds keep the air fresh and pure. Good business houses and fine residences, and commodious church and school buildings betoken the prosperity and enterprise of the people. The Hospital for Insane located there is one of the nicest of the kind. There is less about it to remind one of a jail than there is about many similar places. Things are more quiet and cheerful than in some institutions of a similar nature. The trip is a long one, it being 189 miles from St. Paul. The country, most of the way, is well settled and the crops are fine.

Personal.

Prof. Judson was in town last Friday.

J. W. Carlock visited City friends this week.

C. J. Buckley visited the cities, Wednesday.

Carl Hildebrand, Joe Merriman and other Woodmen attended the convention at Minneapolis this week.

Miss Mary Catlin left for St. Peter yesterday afternoon on account of the illness of her mother, who lives there.

Mrs. Wash Rader and Miss Blanche, of Minneapolis, came up Monday for a visit with Delano relatives and friends.

William T. Ziebarth, of Shady Lane Farm, Grant county, visited Delano relatives and at "Bill" Ziebarth's place today.

Among arrivals home from the city this morning were John Teischler and family, Fred C. Keespohl, Henry Hellman and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamley, son, and two daughters, of Minneapolis, visited with I. H. Baltuff and family in Delano, this week.

O. W. Crawford was a GAZETTE caller Fair Day. He expects to go to St. Paul to work in the office of Secretary of State Hanson.

Miss Edna Ross, of Duluth, visited her grandmother here this week. She arrived Wednesday evening and will leave Saturday.

Mrs. Frank A. Barth and three children and her mother came this way Tuesday to take the train for a visit with her brother at Clontarf.

Among Fair Day visitors to Delano we noticed John Casey, of Corcoran town, Sam Thompson, James Jenkins, and Nic Franzin, of Greenwood.

Dr. Catlin was called to Fergus Falls this week on account of the sickness of his wife. He found her recovering her usual health, and returned home Thursday morning.

Dr. H. E. Cassel, of Litchfield, renewed old acquaintances in Delano for a short time yesterday, while waiting for the wreck to be cleared away, so the passenger train could pass.

Advent Christian Camp Meeting.

The annual campmeeting of the Advent Christian Conference, of Minnesota, will be held at Anoka, commencing Saturday evening, June 22, and continuing over two Sundays. Services will be conducted every day by able preachers along purely evangelical lines. The meetings will be held on the grounds used by the seventh day people, just outside the city limits, a very pleasant and convenient place for such a meeting. Anoka can be reached by railroad over the Great Northern and Northern Pacific lines. A good bridge crosses the Mississippi opposite the city, and teams from the west can cross at Champlaine.

The Advent Christian people, sometimes known as First day Adventists, hold the Bible as their only creed, and Christian character as the only test of fellowship. A cordial invitation is extended to all, especially to everyone interested in the revival and advance of vital, agressive Christianity along spiritual lines.

Retires From Health Board.

ABERDEEN, S. D., special, June 10.—Dr. H. E. McNutt has handed in his resignation as superintendent of the Brown county board of health, to Dr. Edwards, president of the state board of health. Failure of the county commissioners to allow Dr. McNutt proper compensation for his services in the smallpox cases is given as the reason of his resignation.—Pioneer Press.

Litchfield News Ledger: Say, have you noticed that the British have not whipped that little band of Boers yet. Wonder if they think Buller was a failure and that the thing was easy if only handled right.

Broad Axe: President McKinley says he has no ambition to become a third term candidate. That is quite natural since Mark Hanna is out for the job.

THE FLOWER OF LIBERTY.

What flower is this that greets the morn,
Its hues from heaven so freshly born?
With burning star and flaming band
It kindles all the sunset land;
O, tell us what its name may be—
Is this the flower of Liberty?
It is the banner of the free,
The starry Flower of Liberty!

In savage Nature's far abode
Its tender seed our fathers sowed;
The storm-winds rocked its swelling bud,
Its opening leaves were streaked with blood,
Till lo! earth's tyrants shook to see
The full-blown Flower of Liberty!
Then hail the banner of the free,
The starry Flower of Liberty!

Behold its streaming rays unite
One mingling flood of braided light,—
The red that fires the Southern rose,
With spotless white from Northern snow,
And, spangled o'er its azure, see
The sister Stars of Liberty!
Then hail the banner of the free,
The starry Flower of Liberty!

The blades of heroes fence it round,
Where'er it springs is holy ground;
From tower and dome its glories spread;
It waves where lonely sentries tread,
It makes the land, as ocean, free
And plants an empire in the sea!
Then hail the banner of the free,
The starry Flower of Liberty!

Thy sacred leaves, fair Freedom's flower,
Shall ever float in dome and tower,
To all their heavenly colors true,
In blackening frost or crimson dew,—
And God love us as we love thee,
Thrice holy Flower of Liberty!
Then hail the banner of the free,
The starry Flower of Liberty!

COMMENCEMENT ORATION.

Why Women Should be Educated.

The education of woman is thought by many to be a new idea, but in reality it is very old. It has grown so marvelously in the last century especially in America, and embraces so many lines of thought and work, that there is little wonder that it appears new.

In the savage state, men and women are equal in strength, knowledge and skill, it is that there knowledge and ability is shown in different tasks from those of the savage men, but their duties are far more intricate. And as these people gradually emerge from barbarism into civilization, the duties of the woman increase as rapidly as that of man, and are just as difficult; therefore to overcome these difficulties her education must increase as rapidly as man's education.

In ancient Greece and Rome the women were educated as well as the men, up to a certain time, when the education of men far exceeded that of women. Then they were not respected, but distained and regarded as being very little superior to the lower animals.

But look at the result of this condition of affairs. The people became dishonest, licentious and corrupt, and as a result of this corruption, two of the greatest republics that ever existed were blotted out.

It may seem a strange coincidence, but it is true nevertheless, that those countries which have advanced farthest in civilization, and which stand at the front today, are those in which women are well educated. These countries might even be classified in their advancement in civilization according to the degree of education which has been attained by them.

On looking over statistics we find that the United States stand first, then England, France, Germany, Spain and Italy follow each other in the civilization and in the education of woman.

The framers of the Constitution studied the conditions of Greece and Rome, and in forming this new republic profitted by the mistakes of the old. And indeed it would have been a sad thing had we not profitted by their mistakes in regard to the education of women.

It has been very truly said, that there never was a great man without a great mother. Look at Washington and Lincoln, our two greatest presidents. These men owed their greatness to the training and influence of their mothers. Lincoln himself, said, "I owe all I am to my mother."

Therefore since a woman has so great an influence in forming the character of her child, ought she not to be well educated that she may judge what is best for its welfare.

The education of woman will raise the people to a higher level and it is not only of the greatest importance to the individuals themselves but to the whole nation, for the home and the home life are the foundation of this great republic. Let once the home be universally scoffed and jeered at and the end of our republic has come. If then, the nucleus of our great common is the home, how necessary that there should be equality of education. This factor seems to me has done more than any other in making our home life what it is today.

This becomes evident when we consider heathen lands where the women are only slaves. Can their countries boast of an advanced civilization in proportion to their ignorance?

As long as it is and always will be necessary for many women to enter a field of labor outside the home, they certainly ought to have all the advantages which education can give, that they compete with man in his sphere. And in these days of specialties, greater training is demanded than ever before; therefore to obtain and keep a good position, one must be well educated in that particular line of work in which he may engage.

In many parts of the United States woman suffrage is being agitated. It is indeed true that women are more fitted to vote than ignorant foreigners, but as long as this government or any other is based on military rule, so long must women content themselves to be ruled by those whose physical strength enables them to enforce the laws that they have made.

On the other hand, it is said that women are represented by the male members of their families, but this is true only so far as the women are able to use their influence, and in order to do this well it is necessary to understand the laws of this country, the causes of existing, and the result of changes upon the welfare of our country.

Great benefits aside from that of knowledge are obtained while attending school. The gathering together of people of all nationalities, of religious creeds, and of all circumstances of life, brings about a better understanding and greater sympathy and tolerance of feelings and beliefs of other people. It tends to keep people from being vain, conceited and selfish, for no where are they treated so much alike as at school. There, industry and natural ability ranks above either wealth or beauty.

Besides this, the many productions of art and literature, by women, has shown that the education of woman in those lines have not been wasted. Moreover it is universally conceded by men, that women are the greatest novel writers of the age. Perhaps some will contend that literature and art are of small consequence; but Harriet Beecher Stowe did as much toward bringing about the freedom of the slave as any abolition agitator or orator.

And in this new century which we have just entered upon, we shall undoubtedly see as many, if not more, wonderful achievements accomplished by educated women.

NELLY B. SUTTON.

St. Cloud Times: Senator Tillman is not a good man to try to bluff. Senator McLaurin should have known that as well as anybody.

Anoka Herald: The American flag is a pretty good thing, but so is the constitution, and it is just as well that the Filipinos and the Puerto Ricans don't get both at once. There is sometimes danger in prodigality.

Minneapolis Tribune: Chauncey Depew's suggestion of a third term for President McKinley has attracted such wide attention and caused such varied comment that he has just reiterated it in a Chicago interview. The most sensible view of the whole matter, however, is taken by that class of public men represented by our own Senator Clapp, who says it is three years yet before the question becomes vital, and judgment can well be suspended.

LeSueur Sentinel: Two more cadets have been discharged from West Point. This time it was on conviction of having obtained leave of absence wrongfully. They made a pretext of some sort to get the leave and then were caught by an army officer drinking at a bar in Newberg. Perhaps after awhile, it will be possible to establish some sort of discipline at West Point. If not, then better do as suggested, dismiss school for a couple of years.

Sherburne County Star News: Chas. A. Towne has shaken the dust of Minnesota from his feet and gone to New York city to live. There are a good many men Minnesota could spare better than Towne, notwithstanding some of his ultra views on political questions. He is certainly a brilliant young man, and has many friends who will gladly hear of a prosperous career for him. In an interview in New York he continues to express fears of an empire and says that Republican leaders are considering the advisibility of running McKinley for a third term as president. We think Towne looks at this matter through jaundiced eyes, but should he happen to be right in his prognostications, there would be the greatest uproar throughout the country that has been witnessed for many years. The people would never stand for a third term president, no matter how splendid a man the candidate might be.

Sauk Centre Avalanche: Good bye, my dear American boys! You ain't going to be it any longer. The boys of the foreign parents are the ones who are going to come to the front from now on. Scan the lists of graduates from the University, Hamline, Carlton and other high institutions of learning, and you will discover that English names are the exception rather than the rule. You rather have fun than secure an education that would fit you for something better than menial labor. You rather run the streets and learn to smoke, swear, play cards, etc.; than take time to cultivate your brain and prepare yourself for some profession. All right, if that's what you are after, you'll get it, easy enough. Only wait about two decades and you will be shoveling sand, sawing wood and the like, and the boy who secured an education will be the man who will pay you for this kind of work. You made your choice, and you must take the consequences—Anoka Union.

Pettigrew Rails at Hill.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 10.—"I would rather vote for Mark Hanna than for David B. Hill for president," said ex Senator Pettigrew here in an interview.

"Silver Republicans throughout the country feel that way. I have no objection to a man sailing under a flag he fights under, but I don't like to see Republicans like Hill and ex Gov. Francis, of Missouri making trouble in Democratic and Populist ranks.

"As to reorganization of the Democratic party, well, it reminds me of the tail wagging the dog."

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

ARNOLD WINKELRIED.

"Make way for liberty!" he cried;
Made way for liberty,—and died!—
It must not be: this day, this hour,
Annihilates the oppressor's power!
All Switzerland is in the field,
She will not fly, she can not yield,—
She must not fall: her better fate
Here gives her an immortal date.

Few were the numbers she could boast,
But every freeman was a host,
And felt as though himself were he
On whose sole arm hung victory.
It did depend on one indeed:
Behold him—Arnold Winkelried!
There sounds not to the trump of fame
The echo of a nobler name.

Unmarked he stood amid the throng,
In rumination deep and long,
Till you might see, with sudden grace,
The very thought come o'er his face;
And by the motion of his form,
Anticipate the rising storm;
And, by the uplifting of his brow,
Tell where the bolt would strike, and how

But 'twas no sooner thought than done!
The field was in a moment won:—
"Make way for liberty!" he cried,
Then ran, with arms extended wide,
As if his dearest friend to clasp;
Ten spears he swept within his grasp:
"Make way for liberty!" he cried—
Their keen points met from side to side;
He bowed among them like a tree,
And thus made way for liberty.

Swift to the breach his comrades fly—
"Make way for liberty" they cry,
And through the Austrian phalanx dart,
As rushed the spears through Arnold's heart,
While instantaneous as his fall,
Rout, ruin, panic, scattered all;
An earthquake could not overthrow
A city with a surer blow.
Thus Switzerland again was free;
Thus death made way for liberty!

JAMES MONTGOMERY.

THE Augustana synod of the Swedish Lutheran church, in session in Jamestown, N. Y. by a vote of 81 to 71 retained in their church constitution the clause excluding from membership in the church "members of the Masonic order or other secret or atheistic society."

SHERIFF SCHILPLIN, of St. Cloud, is reported by the Times to have secured from the band of gypsies that had been robbing people of their money the sum of $1,301.25 which will be returned to the owners. Light fines were imposed on the parties who got the money through fortune telling and other schemes.

REPORTS from South Africa are not favorable to the English. Of a party of 250 Victorian mounted rifles only two officers and 50 men escaped when surrounded by Boers near Welmansrust, 2 officers and 16 men were killed; 4 officers and 38 men were wounded; the balance being captured and released. The reports of the large number of men, women and children dying among those herded together by the English don't impress people as being the right thing.

THE bitter campaign fight started out in South Carolina has been abruptly terminated by Senator McLaurin withdrawing his resignation from the hands of the Governor. Of course then there is no use for Senator Tillman to resign. So South Carolina seems destined to have no voice in the settlement of many important questions which will be before Congress next winter. Though both Senators were supposed to be Democrats it turns out that they are voting against each other.

FOR several years people have been reading that the Boers were just about on their last legs and would soon be obliged to surrender. But they seem to keep up, and only lately captured a lot of British horsemen. It is the same way in the Philippines. "The situation is well in hand" has been heard so long that all hands are growing weavy. It looks considerably as if certain parties didn't wish to close those wars or that they are bigger wars than they are claimed to be and the governments don't like to ask for more men and means with which to carry them on. Most people are getting anxious to read of something else in their newspapers than the killing of men.

WE take no stock whatever in the newspaper reports that a third party is being started, and that Bryan is favorable to it. Bryan is a member of the Democratic party. He has been consistent and constant. He has been misrepresented and lied about many times before, but has always proven true to his principles. If the republicans and republican democrats should, by hook or crook, wrest from the present management the affairs of true democracy, it is possible that the people may rise in their might and unite on a party platform of principles and nominate Bryan for president. But so long as democracy is in democratic hands we believe Bryan will, notwithstanding newspaper reports to the contrary, be found in line, or in the lead.

SOME of the papers, more especially Republican papers and those that for the past few years have trained with them, are hard at work trying to convince their readers that Bryan, Towne, and others of their kind must be turned out of the Democratic party before it can win. They claim that Daye Hill, Dan Lawler and a few more would lead it on more satisfactorily. In making a change like that the men who have born the brunt of the fight for the past five years would have to be turned out. That means every Democrat who voted democratic principles at the two last elections would have to give up their places in the ranks to those who opposed those principles.

Oh no, we guess not. Democrats are made of sterner stuff. They will not at the beck and call of their opponents surrender principles that are dear to them; dear to every true American, for the chance of electing Dave Hill, Dan Lawler or anybody else to an office as a democrat. If those men wish to turn democracy upside down let them do it as they have been doing it. Let every honest democrat stick to his principles and see that the nominees of his party do the same.

Faith Cures.

Nearly every day reports are published of people relying on faith cures, and without remedies, such as are ordinarily used, dying, or allowing their children to die. Lately authorities have taken hold of the matter and secured medical aid for little sufferers whose parents did not believe in such means.

It seems strange that intelligent people, on most subjects, are so strange in matters of health. Men who hold good positions in society or in business consult clariovoyants, and trust their lives, when sick, or the lives of their little ones, in the hands of ignorant, and often wicked people. They claim to think the prayers of such will save them from death or cure them of disease, though they, themselves never pray, but continue to go about taking the name of their Maker in vain.

In other matters they make use of the means at hand to accomplish the ends sought, why not do so with their bodies? A farmer sows the grain, and is careful to get good grain, clean from weeds, to sow it at the right time and in the best possible manner, then he expects the harvest. Business men go to their offices, stores, or shops, attend to business and expect a return. By the sweat of their brows the laborers earn their living. Nobody thinks of sitting down and doing nothing and getting an honest living. Even the tramp must travel, and beg for his meals. People should, when sick, get the best physician obtainable, and add their prayers to his efforts, and then they might have reason to feel that they had done their duty, and hope and expect results.

Old Settler's Day.

Old Settler's Day is observed once a year by the Pioneers in many counties in the state, and by the Territorial Pioneers, at the Minnesota fair ground once a year. Each year the bent forms and gray heads come together for a jolly good time; to rehearse their experiences of the early days of this state; to tell of hardships, suffering, want, death; to recount the bright spots, in the making of a new country; the wonderful growth of crops and the rapid increase of wealth of some of them. Some of the old settlers came to Minnesota for their health. Some came for the purpose of making money; some to seek a home; some as Horace Greely put it "To grow up with the country." They all enjoy occasions where they can come together and renew old acquaintance, and recall the events of the fifties, the days when these fields and homes were broad prairies and big woods, peopled with Indians and here and there a hardy pioneer and his family.

Each year, as time goes on, finds fewer and fewer of those whose axes first rang out on the frosty morning breezes, or of the good wives who prepared the frugal meals of the day, able to be present. Many have passed on to be pioneers in the great beyond.

Wright county Old Settlers used to meet on Feb. 22. It was too cold generally for many to attend. The meeting time was changed to June 17, so that the weather would be more pleasant. This year a postponment was had to the 25th of June so that the Governor might be present. It is hoped that all that can will be present at Buffalo on next Thursday. A picnic dinner is to be held in the Court House grounds.

Is Phillips a Populist?

MINNEAPOLIS, June 13.—A limited number of members of the National Farmers' Alliance listened to a short address tonight by "Corn King" Phillips of Chicago at the West hotel. The address dealt principally with corn and corn "corners."

"Let the government," he said, "tax the farmer a cent a bushel on his corn crop and with the money build elevators in which to store a hundred million bushels of corn and pay forty cents, Chicago basis, for it and the world will pay the same price. There is not so much of it that we need worry about an extra large crop or two. With the government ready to pay forty cents for it, the farmer can borrow thirty cents from his country bank if he needs the money and carry the surplus for seven years if need be."—Duluth News Tribune.

Costly Surrenders.

To many the items in the Manila news dispatches may contain a mystery. We see daily accounts that a few Filipino officers and men have surrendered, bringing in a large number of rifles. For instance, a late dispatch says that "two officers and five men were captured with sixty rifles." What was this little squad doing with so many guns? There is no premium on prisoners, but $30 is paid for each Filipino rifle that is surrendered. So half a dozen men can come in, bringing as many rifles as they can carry, perhaps a wagon load; if they bring in 100 guns they get $3,000. How many times these guns are smuggled out of camp and sold back again to the United States is a mere matter of conjecture. Our Filipino campaign may be glorious, but it is also costly.—St. Cloud Times.

Mrs. Nancy B. Irving's offer of $1,000 reward for any successful business man who can conduct his business for one month without lying, has stirred up a tremenduous commotion in Chicago. The offer seems to have rubbed a raw spot. It has also called out many responses. Two bank presidents, presuming upon Mrs. Irvings' inability to make a conclusive test, have applied for the reward. But cold chills must have vibrated up and down their respective spines when she icily announced her purpose to look into their tax records before paying either of them the money.—The Public.

THE FIRST OF JUNE.

Now have come the shining days
When field and wood are robed anew,
And o'er the world a silver haze
Blends the emerald with the blue.

Now doth summer clothe the land
In garments free from spot or stain—
The lustrous leaves, the hill untanned,
The vivid meads, the glaucous grain.

The day looks new, a coin unworn,
Freshly stamped in heavenly mint;
The sky keeps on its look of morn;
Of age and death there is no hint.

How soft the landscape near and far!
A shining veil the trees infold;
The day remembers moon and star;
A silver lining hath its gold.

Again I see the clover bloom,
And wade in grasses lush and sweet;
Again has vanished all my gloom
With daisies smiling at my feet.

Again from out the garden hives
The exodus of frenzied bees;
The humming cyclone onward drives,
Or finds repose amid the trees.

At dawn the river seems a shade—
A liquid shadow deep as space;
But when the sun the mist has laid,
A diamond shower smites its face.

The season's tide now nears its height,
And gives to earth an aspect new;
Every shoal is hid from sight,
With current fresh as morning dew.
—John Burroughs, in Century.

Free Lunches for Bees

THE amateur experimental farm stands far back from the dirt road in a three-acre grove of big oaks and hickories. Under the trees the grass grows thick and is everywhere starred by hundreds of blue and yellow violets, buttercups, wild strawberry blossoms, trilliums and a dozen other blossoms.

These are the first flowers of a backward May, and have a greater interest to the amateur experimental farmer than the more gorgeous blossoms which appear in the summer and fall. The late blooming flowers have, as a rule, settled the country from Maine to California. They are to be found everywhere and have no peculiar interest. It is early in the year that the flowers peculiar to each locality appear, and it is among them, therefore, that one looks for individual charm and interest.

Take the common blue violet of the woods, for example. As a rule, the seeds of the violet are fertilized by the honey bee, which, while sucking honey from one blossom, gets its body covered with the pollen from the stamens, and on visiting the second violet blooms rubs this pollen off on the pistils and so fertilizes the seed. In order to attract the bee, whose services it so much needs, the violet has put on a bluish-purple dress. Careful experiments have proved that the honey bee, like Julius Caesar, is especially fond of purple. But the advertisement of a purple dress and of the sweet odor which is borne abroad by the breeze would not be enough of itself to insure the visit of the bee. So the wise violet "sets out a free lunch" in the shape of nectar for its visitor. This "free lunch" is so placed that it is impossible to get it without brushing against the pollen-laden stamens. Moreover, the violet further advertises the exact location of its store of hidden sweets by the delicate dark lines which may be noticed running downward on the two upper petals of the violet and pansy. These lines are called "honey guides," and at the point where they meet in the heart of the flower the "free lunch" is spread for the bees.

Ants and other crawling things would like to eat the honey of the violet, but they are so small they would not be likely to brush off and carry away the pollen, and they could not be depended upon to fertilize the other violets. Therefore, the violet bars them from its free lunch counter. The barrier to ants and other insects without wings is a little wisp of hairs which grows in the violet's throat. To a man's eye these hairs are not formidable even under the microscope, but to the ant they are an impassable dungeon.

There is a good reason, too, for the violet's habits of always looking down, and that reason is not innate modesty, as the poets have supposed. If the flower grew erect the rain and the wind might wash or blow away the pollen, and for that reason the flower droops.

It might seem, at first glance, that things would be badly mixed up by these visits of bees and butterflies; that the pollen of the violet would be shaken off on the pistils of the rose, and that all sorts of hybrids would be produced. As a matter of fact, there is little trouble. In the first place, the pollen of one flower has, as a rule, no effect on the pistils of another species. Secondly, the various insects which serve as pollen carriers have each their own special favorites among the flowers, to which they practicaly confine their attentions. In return many flowers make special provisions for and offer special attractions to a certain kind of insect.

There is the purple clover, for instance. It is fertilized almost exclusively by the bumble bee, and in New Zealand, until bumble bees were imported and made permanent residents, the purple clover had to be fresh sown every year with seed brought from England. Lacking the aid of the bumble bee, the seed of the native grown clover never came to maturity.

In return for the assistance of the bumble bee the purple clover has placed its "free lunch" of nectar at the bottom of long blossom tubes, which are too deep to be reached by the short proboscis of the honey bee.

By way of showing that he was not above a joke, Huxley, the great philosopher, has demonstrated that there is a direct connection between the number of old maids in a given locality and the quantity of purple clover in the same section. Old maids, says Huxley, are fond of cats; cats eat field mice; field mice are the enemies of bumble bees, which they injure by destroying the stores of honey; bumble bees are the pollen carriers of purple clover. Therefore, the more old maids there are the more cats there will be, the fewer field mice, the more bumble bees, and, consequently, the more purple clover.

On many plants there are two kinds of blossoms, one containing pistils only and the other the pollen-bearing stamens. In the maple, for instance, the blossoms containing pistils all grow on the lower branches of the tree, the pollen-bearing flowers appearing on the upper branches. Notice, now how this suits the habit of the bee, which is depended on to fertilize the blossoms. The bee begins always at the lowest branches and works its way up as regularly as the postman, finishing with the top, where the pollen-bearing blossoms are thickest. Thus, when it attacks a fresh tree, its body is already covered with pollen from another tree. This pollen is shaken off on the pistils of the flowers which grow on the lower branches, and which are thereby fertilized. Then as the bee works its way upward it renews its supply of pollen from the upper flowers and carries on the supply to the next tree.

Few flowers fertilize themselves. Most of them are dependent either upon insects or the wind. Speaking broadly, the flowers which are showy and fragrant are fertilized by insects. The bright color and the pleasant odor are the advertisements of the flower. The colorless and the odorless blossoms are, as a rule, dependent upon the wind for fertilization, and, because the wind is an uncertain quantity, they produce an immense quantity of pollen, which may sometimes be seen blowing from trees in clouds.

The common jack-in-the-pulpit, or Indian turnip, is fertilized by flies or gnats, which are led to fly or slide down its cup by the scent of the nectar contained at the bottom. Once inside, the unfortunate insects are not able to get out. The space is too confined for them to use their wings, and the walls of the "pulpit" are so sleek that no insect can scale them. Finally, the stamens of the flower break open and release the shower of pollen, which falls down over the bodies of the prisoners. Then the wall of the cup splits open near the bottom and the pollen-laden insects are released to carry the pollen on to some other "jack." Here they rub against the pistils and fertilize them. But after performing this favor the "jack" often holds the flies prisoners, and keeps them locked up until they starve to death. The bodies of half a dozen or more insects may often be found in the bottom of the cup of a ripe "jack."—Chicago Tribune.

Bargaining Over a Doctor.

In a certain North Dakota town there are two physicians, one elderly, with a long record of cures; the other young, with his record still to make. The older doctor was inclined to surrender some of his night work to the younger man. An exchange cites an instance in which this "turning over" was attempted.

One winter's night Dr. B—— was roused by two farmers from a hamlet ten miles away, the wife of one of whom was seriously ill. He told them to go to the other doctor, but they refused, saying that they preferred his services.

"Very well," said Dr. B——, thinking to put a convincing argument before them, "in that case my fee is $10, the money to be paid now."

The men remonstrated, but the doctor was obdurate and shut down his window. He waited, however, to hear what they would say.

"Well, what shall we do now?" asked the farmer whose wife was ill.

The reply must have been as gratifying as it was amusing to the listening doctor. It was:

"I think you had better give it. The funeral would cost you more."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

His Grounds.

"And on what grounds do you base your application for a divorce?" asked the lawyer of his client.

"Exertion, sah."

"You mean desertion, I suppose. Your wife has left you, doubtless."

"No, sah, she hasn't left me, sah."

"Then you can't ask for a divorce on the ground of desertion."

"I said exertion, sah. Dat's de ground perzackly. She done exert herself continually to make me mizzable, sah. Put it on de ground ob exertion, sah."—Detroit Free Press.

Latest-News!

London, June 21.—The pro-Boer Daily News says it hears that the rebellion is sprerding omniously in Cape Colony. It says that it is stated that about 6,000 residents of the Cape Colony, mostly farmer's sons, have joined the Boer commandoes.

Mrs. Botha is quoted as authority for the statement that Gen. French was coptured by the Boers and released on parole, broke his parole, was recaptured and sentenced by Gen. Botha to be shot, but on offer by Gen. Kitchner to release 1,000 Boers from the prison camp at Simontown was again given his liberty. Why didn't the papers publish this news before Mrs. Botha brought it out?

When St. Paul and Minneapolis hold a big fair, we speak in advance for special Buffalo Day. Nothing less will enable Buffalonians to show their appreciation for the hearty, enthusiastic interest which Minnesota has shown in our fair.

The dedication of the Minnesota building yesterday was made an occasion worthy of one of the greatest and most progressive states of the Union. It gave evidence of the importance which Minnesota attaches to exsositions, and will arouse an interest in Minnesota's exhibits of her industries and resources which will be of lasting benefit. Buffalo thanks Minnesota. We hope the Minnesota visitors are enjoying their trip to the fair as much as Buffalonians enjoy entertaining them.—Buffalo Express.

DELANO, Wright Co., • MINN.

The census contains many surprises, one of which is that Maine and Vermont, regarded as finished states, show a greater increase in population than Kansas and Nebraska.

Pearl Harbor, in Hawaii, is to be the site of the most important American naval station in the Pacific. Large machine shops and a big dry dock will be built, and it will be a first-class repair station for our war vessels.

"Kind words are the music of the world," said one of the American speakers at the London chamber of commerce banquet. The phrase is not found among familiar proverbs, but deserves to be given a place.

The English language is marching on. Australia is now the third largest English-speaking country in the world. By the recent censuses, English is spoken by 130,000,000 people in the United States and the British empire.

A New York company has been organized to build a railroad in Nova Scotia, 235 miles long, and it will receive one of the largest subsidies ever paid by the Canadian government. Americans will run and officer the road. It is no use trying to fence in American enterprise.

William Bryan, of Ohio, it is said, has evolved a plan for applying electricity to tough meats, with the result of making them tender and palatable. The man who can insure the tenderness of steaks deserves much of a grateful and long-suffering world, and his name will surely go thundering down the ages.

Evelyn B. Baldwin, the Arctic explorer, says he has no doubt that the great electrical forces which manifest themselves in the aurora borealis will yet be transformed into motor power to do the bidding of man. Man has harnessed up about everything else, and ought not to let this enormous power go to waste.

An American promoter who has been in London several months has returned home with plans for a Transalaskan railway, which, it is claimed, will give the United States a land route directly to the doors of Siberia. The enterprise is said to be backed by abundant American capital, and its promoters say it will open up regions of great agricultural as well as mineral wealth.

Officials of the patent office in Washington declare that inventions patented by women "are of just as practicable a nature as those got out by men." The first woman inventor to take out a patent in this country was Mary Kies, who devised a new corset in 1815. Succeeding efforts by women have included all sorts of ideas, but of late culinary utensils, furniture, furnishings and wearing apparel are in a big majority.

The medical examiners at West Point who have rejected 25 per cent. of the young men who presented themselves this year for examination on account of defective eyesight should not overlook the fact that the great military hero of the war with Spain could not tell a palm tree from a sky scraper at 50 yards. Col. Roosevelt went into the fight at San Juan with no less than six pairs of spectacles on his person and he is now vice president of the United States.

The new automatic Luger pistol, 1,000 of which have been bought in Germany for the American army, is one of the most remarkable weapons ever invented and is said to be capable of discharging 116 bullets in a minute. The weapon was invented by George Luger, a former officer in the Austrian army, and is made by the same people who make the Mauser rifle. With bullets coming toward him at such a rate an enemy would be kept rather busy doing the dodge act.

The Wisconsin wife who brought suit for divorce because her husband asked her to do the housework made a mistake in selecting her husband as well as hitting upon a ground for separation. The judge safeguarded the family when he threw the case out of court as without reasonable cause for action. If the necessity for doing housework were to be added to the other accepted grounds for divorce it would not be long before the man who permitted the water pipes to freeze would be in danger also.

Prof. E. F. Nichols, of Dartmouth college, Hanover, N. H., with the assistance of Prof. St. John, of Oberlin college, Oberlin, O., has perfected an instrument which will measure the heat of a candle one mile away, and of the stars millions of miles away. The question as to whether or not any heat is sent off from these bodies to the earth has long puzzled the scientists, but by means of this instrument the question has now been answered in the affirmative. The instrument is called a radiometer and is of complex construction.

It is now stated that there are 1,000 cases of leprosy in the United States, and that congress will be asked to do something to stamp it out. The government has been investigating the matter during the past few weeks, and is surprised at the number of cases reported by city and county officials throughout the country. In New Orleans 74 cases are reported, most of them being Italians. The state of Minnesota reports 23 cases. The best way to avoid the danger of such disease is to start early in the game and make a relentless fight.

Statistics from the census show that Massachusetts, which was the third state in density of population in 1790, is now second. It started in Washington's time with 47 inhabitants to the square mile and has now 349. Connecticut stood second in 1790, with 49 people to the square mile; it now stands third, with 187. Every New England and eastern state has increased its density of population in the last 20 years. New Jersey has now 250 inhabitants to the square mile; New York, 152; Pennsylvania, 140; Maryland, 120; Delaware, 94.

SIGNS OF HARMONY.

Significant Visit of Federal Leaders of Porto Rico on Gov. Allen—Legislature to Meet July 4.

San Juan, P. R., June 18.—At a mass meeting of the federal party held Sunday Francisco Acuna was elected party leader to succeed Munoz Rivera. As a first step toward establishing harmonious relations between the federal party and the American authorities, a committee composed of Senors Acuna, Santiago Palmer and Diaz Navarro paid their respects to Gov. Allen Monday and offered him their cooperation in whatever measures would advance the best interests of Porto Rico. It is now thought that the time has come when party bickerings should cease and be overlooked and that all men should unite in a common desire to aid the government. The committee informed Gov. Allen that they were satisfied the intentions of the administration had been for the best.

Washington, June 18.—Secretary Hay Monday received the following telegram from Gov. Allen of Porto Rico at San Juan:

"Unanimous vote to-day, heads of departments, fixed date for the special session of the legislature for July 4. The date or proclamation will be announced at the session."

The proclamation referred to is that which will declare free trade to exist between the United States and Porto Rico, after a designated date, in conformity with the terms of the Foraker act, which allowed two years to test the ability of the island to sustain itself through internal taxation. Gov. Allen's reports have indicated that under the Hollander act Porto Rico is now ready to assume free trade.

SURPRISE THE BRITISH.

Boer Force Attacks Band of Australian Mounted Rifles Killing Many—De Wet Defeated.

London, June 17.—Lord Kitchener has cabled from Pretoria, under Sunday's date, as follows:

"Near Welmansrust, 20 miles south of Middleburg, 250 Victorian mounted rifles from Gen. Beaston's column were surprised in camp at Steenkoolspruit by a superior force of Boers at 7:30 p. m. June 12. The enemy crept up to within short range and poured a deadly fire into the camp, killing two officers and 16 men, and wounding four officers and 38 men, of whom 28 were slightly wounded. Only two officers and 50 men escaped to Gen. Beaston's camp. The remainder were taken prisoners and released. Two pompoms were captured by the enemy. Full details have not yet been received."

London, June 17.—The serious reverse which Lord Kitchener reports is the first accident of the kind that has happened to the Australian contingent, and it is supposed to be due to neglect of proper picketing. Although it is offset by the defeat inflicted upon DeWet, the loss of the guns is regarded as a serious matter which will encourage the Boers to continue the struggle.

London, June 17.—Lord Kitchener reports to the war office from Pretoria as follows:

During the march from Vrede Gen. Elliot's column engaged De Wet near Reitz, June 6. After severe fighting they captured 71 loaded wagons, 45 prisoners, 58 rifles, 10,000 rounds of ammunition and 4,000 cattle. The Boers left 17 killed and three wounded. Our casualties were three officers and 17 men killed and one officer and 24 men wounded."

MURDER CHARGED.

Four Brothers Accused of Killing an Old Fisherman Near Rock Island, Ill.

Rock Island, Ill., June 18.—Charles Wendt, an old fisherman residing at Cordova, Rock Island county, was found dead Monday in his boat floating in the Mississippi river. He had been shot with a shotgun fired at such close range that the wads of the gun were imbedded in his face. Coroner Eckhart placed four brothers, Edward, Harvey, Elmer and Curley Stiles, under arrest. They had a quarrel some time ago with Wendt over a fishing net, and since had made threats against him. They admitted having been up the river in their steam launch, and that they had a gun with them. An examination of their ammunition disclosed wads like those picked out of Wendt's face.

Empress' Latest Plans.

London, June 18.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Globe, telegraphing under Monday's date, says he learns in Chinese quarters that the dowager empress proposes, when the court reaches Kai-Fong-Fu, in Honan, to announce that the emperor has been killed by brigands and that Prince Tuan's son has succeeded to the throne. The dowager empress will then establish a new capital at Kai-Fong-Fu, which will be connected by railway with Nanking. The contract for this railway will be given to John C. Fergusson, of Boston, who, the correspondent understands, will sell the concession to the Russians.

Statue of Bismarck Unveiled.

Berlin, June 17.—The Bismarck statue, facing the column of victory in front of the reichstag building, was unveiled at midday Sunday in the presence of the emperor and empress. Prince Herbert Bismarck, Count von Buelow, Prince Hohenlohe, the ministers and the members of the legislative houses and the memorial committee. There was an imposing array of officers, officials, veterans' associations, students, etc., and an enormous gathering of people.

Pontiac Wins First Prize.

St. Paul, Minn., June 17.—Pontiac (Ill.) camp proved its superiority to its competitors in the Modern Woodmen drill contests, which closed Saturday, and was given first prize, $500. Its percentage was 99 1-40. Rockford, Ill., with 98.9 is second and takes $400; Kansas City, 98.85 and $300; Des Moines, 98.5 and $200; Rock Island, Ill., 98.05 and $87.50; Topeka, Kan., 98.05 and $87.50; Dubuque, Ia., 97⅝ and $50.

Jury Disagrees.

New York, June 17.—The jury which listened to the evidence against Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy, accused of the murder of "Dolly" Reynolds, reported to Judge Newburger at 10:25 o'clock Sunday morning that they could not agree on a verdict. The judge at once discharged the jury. It is said the final ballot stood four for conviction and eight for acquittal. This is Dr. Kennedy's third trial for this crime.

BIG BOATS COLLIDE.

Ferryboats Crash in the East River, New York—Loss of Life Is Feared.

New York, June 15.—The wooden side-wheeler Northfield, which has been in the service of the Staten Island Ferry company for the past 38 years, was rammed Friday night by the steel-hulled propeller Mauch Chunk, used as a ferry boat by the Central railroad of New Jersey. The collision occurred just off the Staten Island ferry slip at the foot of Whitehall street, and in less than 20 minutes afterwards the Northfield, which was crowded with passengers, sank at the outer end of the Spanish line pier in the East river.

A few of the Northfield's passengers were hurt in the accident, and the police believe that some lives were lost. Capt. Daniel Gully, of the tug boat Mutual, who saw the ferry boats crash together, says that immediately after the collision between 25 and 30 of the passengers leaped into the water and that many of those perished. Capt. Gully also declares that he is sure over a hundred of the Northfield's passengers were drowned. The captains of other tugs who were early on the scene, however, are inclined to think that the disaster was not so serious as regards loss of life. Thus far no dead bodies have been recovered.

The question of which boat had the right of way was the cause of the disaster.

TRAIN KILLS FOUR.

Buggy Struck at Grade Crossing at Flint, Mich., and Occupants Crushed and Mangled.

Flint, Mich., June 15.—The Pere Marquette passenger train due here at nine o'clock Friday struck a double carriage at the Hamilton avenue crossing in the suburb of Oak Park and instantly killed four well-known people.

The dead:

Maj. George W. Buckingham, Flint.
Miss Abbie Buckingham, Flint.
Mrs. Thomas Applegate, Adrian.
Mrs. William Humphrey, Adrian.

Several factory buildings adjoin the track at Hamilton avenue and prevent a clear view of the track. Maj. Buckingham drove directly in front of the train, which was traveling at high speed. The pilot of the engine was broken by the force of the collision, and the bodies of two of the ladies, terribly mangled, were found on it. Engineer Wiggins says he had sounded the whistle for the crossing and the first he knew of the carriage was when his engine struck it.

Mrs. Applegate and Mrs. Humphrey had been guests of Maj. Buckingham during the state G. A. R. encampment which ended Thursday night.

MAGNIFICENT HOTEL BURNS.

Mineral Springs Hotel at West Baden, Ind., Reduced to a Ruin—Guests All Escape.

West Baden, Ind., June 15.—The Mineral Springs hotel was destroyed early Friday morning. The fire broke out at ten o'clock in the bakeshop at the south end of the hotel. It burned rapidly and by three o'clock the hotel had been completely consumed. Two hundred and twenty-five guests registered at the hotel at night. Nobody was hurt, but most of the guests lost their effects. The guests were transferred to French Lick and most of them left for their homes on Friday morning.

The loss on the hotel building is estimated at $250,000, with insurance aggregating $110,000. In addition to this the loss in diamonds, jewelry and clothing belonging to the guests will, it is estimated, reach $50,000.

The conflagration had its origin in the kitchen. Out of the 268 guests who had registered at the hotel the evening before, only 12 succeeded in escaping from the burning building with all their personal property.

Would Regulate Woman Suffrage.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17.—An ordinance proposing the regulation of woman suffrage was introduced in the constitutional convention by Mr. Craig, of Dallas. The resolution, which caused considerable debate, provides that all women who are permitted to vote must be over 20 years of age, must be able to read and write; her husband must pay $5 in taxes or must have earned $300 the year preceding. If single, the woman must pay $5 in taxes or have earned $300 the year preceding. Divorced women, excepting those granted a decree on the ground of adultery, cannot vote.

Favorable Crop Reports.

St. Paul, Minn., June 18.—Crop reports from the entire Northern Pacific system indicate very favorable conditions. The seventh bulletin issued from Vice President Hannaford's office states that throughout Minnesota there is plentiful moisture, with the ground in such condition that without more rain crops will not suffer until well into July. A few North Dakota points report slight damage from frost, but not enough to leave permanent traces. West of the Dakotas favorable conditions prevail.

Cailles to Surrender.

Manila, June 17.—Cols. Infant and Guivara, representatives of Gen. Cailles, have signed the name of their principal to an agreement to surrender. Under the terms of this agreement Gen. Cailles is to assemble his men at Santa Cruz, Laguna province, as quickly as possible and there surrender himself and his command to the American authorities. The exact number of his force is uncertain, but there will probably be more than 500.

Yukon River Open.

Seattle, Wash., June 15.—The Yukon is open from end to end, according to news brought down by the steamer Dolphin, which arrived Friday. The ship brought down $40,000 in gold dust. The presence of $7,500,000 of gold dust in the banks at Dawson has caused a renewal of speculation as to what the total output of the Klondike will be this year. Estimates range from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Dies in Insane Asylum.

New York, June 18.—James F. Wambold, who many years ago was one of the best-known minstrel men and circus clowns in the country, is dead in the Overbrook (N. J.) insane asylum, a branch of the Essex county asylum, of which he had been an inmate for 26 years.

TRADE REVIEW.

Improvement in Volume and Tone Is Helped by Weather and Crop Conditions.

New York, June 15.—Bradstreet's says: "Reports to Bradstreet's show a further improvement in the volume and tone of distributive trade, which had its inception in the better weather and crop conditions. Following the check given to the crop damage enthusiasts by the June crop report, which can hardly be regarded as other than brilliant for wheat, comes assurances that the conditions on June 1, good as they undoubtedly were, have been further improved. What is true of the smaller cereals is also largely the case as to corn, though the latter is backward and needs warmth. Cotton crop prospects have likewise been improved, though the low condition is apt to offset some, if not all, of the increase in acreage.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "Confirmation by the agricultural bureau of recent private estimates of the wheat crop has given to business a tone of greater confidence. Retail operations both east and west are larger, and distribution of merchandise by the wholesale trade is increasing in dry goods and boots and shoes. The labor situation is gradually mending, with the appreciation of the fact that in some directions manufacturers would be glad of a temporary shut down of works. Wheat declined to a more reasonable level with withdrawal of speculative support. The government report of condition of June 1 was chiefly responsible. A crop this year equal to the greatest ever harvested was indicated by the official statement, and as department figures have generally proved below the final yield, there was heavy selling of options, with a fall below 80 cents for cash wheat at this city. Foreign buying promptly decreased, with the prospect of more satisfactory terms. Notwithstanding somewhat lower quotations for corn, the provision market has developed much strength, and pork products at the west are receiving the attention of speculators to an unusual extent, mess pork rising to $15.75 here.

"Failures for the week numbered 179 in the United States, against 162 last year, and 23 in Canada, against 21 last year."

INDICTED.

True Bills Returned Against Five Men in the Grand Rapids Waterworks Scandal.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 15.—Five indictments were returned Friday by the grand jury which has been investigating an alleged water works scandal. The names of the indicted men are: Thomas F. McGarry, Stilson V. MacLeod, Lant K. Salsbury, Gerrit Albers and Henry A. Taylor, of New York. The result was no surprise to those who had kept track of the investigation, but it was expected there would be a dozen true bills returned, among them a number of aldermen.

Salsbury, MacLeod and the others were arrested Friday afternoon and arraigned in the superior court. Salsbury is charged with receiving a bribe of $25,000 from McGarry and $75,000 from MacLeod. Albers is charged with offering a bribe of $3,000 to Alderman Renihan. Albers pleaded not guilty.

FAKE HAIR PREPARATIONS

Do Hair No Good, But Often Cause It to Fall Out.

Many hair preparations are "fake" because they are merely scalp irritants. They often cause a dryness, making the hair brittle, and, finally, lifeless. Dandruff is the cause of all trouble with hair. It is a germ disease. The germ makes cuticle scales as it digs to the root of the hair, where it destroys the hair's vitality, causing the hair to fall out. To cure Dandruff, the germ must be killed. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Newbro's Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ, thereby leaving the hair to grow luxuriantly.

DARE TO TRY.

Dare to try!
What though a thousand critics wait
To cavil at the thing you do?
Have courage—gaze upon the great
Names written high
And know that they had critics, too.
Whose glory men acknowledge now—
Had Colon harbored in his breast
Dread of the critic's scorn his prow
Had ne'er been pointed to the west.

Dare to try!
Not one immortal line or word
Of Hamlet would enrich our tongue,
And no man ever would have heard
The bitter cry
From Lear's poor, bleeding bosom wrung
Had he that touched but to adorn
Sat down in dread of critics who
Forever wait to laugh to scorn
The things that other people do.

BECAUSE OF A BOX OF TOOLS

BY JANE ELLIS JOY.

THE sign in the window, "Furniture Neatly Repaired," was all that distinguished Max Hombach's home and place of business from the other narrow-fronted tenement houses in the row.

While Mr. Hombach's shop on the ground floor was full of odds and ends suggesting his occupation, books, newspapers and certain of the magazines indicated that the man of the glue-pot and hammer was a man of some mental culture.

Evidently the magnetic influence of Mr. Hombach was considerable; many were the friends and admirers that called to see him in order to hear his "views" on the questions of the day.

In summer time the talk was carried on at the front door steps; but during the cold weather the little meetings took place in the work room, where Mr. Hombach's ringing voice not unfrequently kept the tenants of the house, as well as those in the houses adjoining, awake until midnight.

Of course Mr. Hombach was a nuisance, but his neighbors bore with him on account of the little boy whom he had adopted. "Max must have a good heart," they reasoned, "to take in a strange child and be so kind to him."

Little Randolph Hombach was the waif of a steamboat disaster of some ten years ago. Max, then about 30 years of age, had been one of the passengers. In the panic a baby was handed to him to save. The mother never reached shore. Failing to find any relatives for the child, the man, who had no relatives of his own, concluded to keep it.

At present Mr. Hombach was at work mending a broken table. The fierce frown on his forehead indicated that he was also occupied with some mental problem. When, presently, he heard the sound of light footsteps in the hall, the frown disappeared.

The boy was coming home from school. He stopped a few moments to talk to a woman in the entry; then he came into the workroom with his customary: "Hello, father," adding: "Miss Elizabeth Bradley wants the loan of your chisel. May I take it up to her now?"

Mr. Hombach started as if he had been struck, his countenance changing with the quickness of lightning. Although generous to a fault, he had drawn the line of generosity and neighborliness at his tool box, the contents of which were almost sacred in his eyes.

"Lend my chisel—to a woman! A woman! As if a woman could touch a tool without spoiling it! My gracious, Randolph, do you think I am mad?"

"Haven't you an old chisel somewhere, father?" asked the boy. "I don't like to tell Miss Elizabeth that you won't lend her a tool because she's a woman. She can't help that."

Mr. Hombach threw back his bushy head, while a smile that he tried to hide shot out of his eyes. Nervous and tempestuous in manner himself, of all things he admired calmness in others, Randolph's quiet dignity quite delighted him.

"The boy is a diplomat," he thought to himself. "What a cool head! Ah, some day he will sit with the great men of the world. Well, I guess you may take that chisel to Miss Bradley," he said, presently, and began to work.

Miss Elizabeth Bradley, who was a dressmaker in a small way, lived in the back wing of the second floor of the house. She might have been 30 or 35. She did not look old, but was still not what would be called "a young lady." Randolph felt that he would not have liked her so well if that title had fitted her exactly.

"Thank you," she said, admitting the little Bismarck into her apartment. She was trying with some ill-assorted tools to make a cabinet out of a grocery box. The boy looked on the work with interest, and the two began chatting.

Perhaps few things in Miss Bradley's monotonous life gave her so much pleasure as listening to Randolph's talk about the discussions that were carried on nightly downstairs. He was still so small and childish-looking that the fluent phrases he repeated so glibly savored to her of "cuteness." She liked to "draw him out," as she said, and frequently asked what "pa" thought about this or that.

"Well, I guess your pa's got lots of nice sensible ideas," she remarked as a rejoinder to Randolph's elucidation of what his father believed in regard to "territorial expansion."

Miss Elizabeth herself did not know what the term meant, but she had some excellent ideas about making gingerbread. She had a fragrant loaf of it on hand, and she stopped working to cut a large slice, which she brought to Randolph on one of her prettiest china plates.

The thought returned to the boy mind that Miss Elizabeth was very much nicer than any younger lady. One could be quite comfortable beside her; she had no "airs;" she wasn't "giddy;" she didn't tease and make fun of boys as young girls did. If fate had provided him with a mother instead of a father, he felt he would have liked a mother like Miss Elizabeth Bradley.

Here, however, the object of his thoughts interrupted.

"I doubt I'll have to trouble you again, Randolph," she said. "Please take the chisel back to your pa with my compliments, and bring me up a little saw. Mine is so big and clumsy that I can't manage it."

"Certainly, Miss Elizabeth, I'll—ask him," responded Randolph, with some misgivings as to what would be the outcome of this second appeal for the loan of a tool.

It did not promise well for the success of his errand that, going downstairs, he heard his father arguing vehemently with a man in the workshop. He waited outside until the man had gone. But. Mr. Hombach, pursuing a habit he sometimes indulged in, continued to demolish the argument of his vanished opponent.

"You are wrong," he vociferated; "the present need of the country—"

"Father," interrupted a clear, beseeching voice, "Miss Elizabeth Bradley—"

But Mr. Hombach was too deeply stirred to heed or even to notice the boy. "Your argument is based on an exploded theory! You don't know—"

Randolph was obliged to wait until the argument was concluded. Then he said, speaking very earnestly, in his clear, boyish tones:

"Miss Elizabeth thanks you for the chisel, father. Here it is. See, it isn't spoiled. She's a very nice, careful lady, Miss Elizabeth is. She needs a little saw very badly; hers is an old, rusty one, and it won't work."

"What! What's that!" exclaimed Mr. Hombach, raising his black brows with a fresh start of horror. "Does the woman want a saw now? I was a fool—a fool! I might have known I was only making trouble for myself! Bah!" His disgust turned to severe irony. "Maybe the woman would like the tool box!"

"Miss Elizabeth is going to give me a slip off her pink geranium," said Randolph.

Mr. Hombach grunted unwillingly, and the frown deepened between his eyes.

"Will you not lend the saw, father?" pleaded the boy.

"No," said Mr. Hambach.

The tool box stood on the work bench in sight of both. On top was just such a saw as Miss Bradley wanted. Randolph looked at the narrow, gleaming blade anxiously, then at his father. "How is Miss Elizabeth to finish her work?" he asked.

Mr. Hombach shook his bushy hair impatiently. "I cannot lend tools! No, no! The woman has no sense! My tools are my friends! Who ever heard of lending a friend?"

Randolph's countenance fell; but in a moment he brightened with a new thought.

"O, father," he gasped out with breathless eagerness to test the availability of his idea, "couldn't you take the saw upstairs yourself and do the work for Miss Elizabeth—for the sake of the saw, you know?"

Mr. Hombach's brows went up again, and he ran his fingers through his thick, upstanding hair as if the idea was difficult of comprehension.

"Sure enough, Randolph," he said in an altered tone, his combative spirit all gone. "How absurd of me not to have thought of that it first. Yes, yes, of course, that is the only sensible thing to do, and it will take only a few moments."

To himself he continued as he went upstairs with his tool box: "That little Randolph of mine is no common boy. Whoever he is, there is the blood of a statesman in his veins. He'll make his mark in the world."

Miss Elizabeth Bradley did not ask for the loan of any more tools. As the weeks passed Randolph noticed that his father went upstairs to chat with her now and then, to the great disappointment of the men who called every evening to discuss politics, and to the relief of the neighbors who wanted to sleep.

"I guess there's something in the wind," gossiped Mrs. Marary of the second floor front to her neighbor of the hall room.

"O, it's all settled; she's makin' the weddin' dress," came the reply; "and I'm right glad, it's so suitable all 'round. It ain't right for a man and a boy to be eatin' at a rest'rant day in and day out. The only wonder is they didn't make a match of it long ago."—Boston Globe.

Mucous Lining and Music.

It's mean to tell this joke, but it's too good to keep. A popular society matron has a daughter who has a beautiful voice and is a very pretty girl. She has never taken singing lessons, and some of the singers have been consulted by her as regards their terms. One of these instructors has talked a lot to the mother about giving her girl lessons, and assured her that he was the fellow to develop that voice until it would be a "peach." He argued the matter over and over again every time he saw the lady, and finally she said: "I wish my daughter to learn to sing, Prof. High Notes, but she is not well. She is suffering constantly from a sort of indigestion, and I don't think she feels well enough to take the lessons."

"Pooh, pooh, my dear madam," replied the professor. "Nonsense! With my teaching and ten cents' worth of cream of tartar she will be cured at once."

And yet this obstinate mamma has not struck the trade. Maybe the daughter has objected to the ten cents' worth of cream of tartar.—Louisville Times.

He Was Undoubtedly Guilty.

An old negro named Ephraim, having been sworn on the jury in a murder trial in one of the southern states, for some time stubbornly resisted a verdict of guilty for no other apparent reason than his aversion to capital punishment in general. Finally the foreman explained to him that it was a question either of hanging the prisoner or hanging the jury, and that it all depended on him. "'Fo' Gawd, suh," replied Uncle Ephraim, "on dem reasonments de pris'ner am sho' guilty."—Chicago Chronicle.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Trouble Feared.

The burning of the Indian village at Mille Lacs lake by Sheriff Edward C. Leggett is reported. It is also intimated that serious trouble will ensue owing to this destruction of property. As far as can be learned, it appears that recently the sheriff notified the Indians of the village to remove from the tract of land on which their tepees were situated. They refused, claiming ownership of the ground in question.

The sheriff, on May 26, according to reports, with a number of deputies, removed the effects belonging to the Indians, and then set fire to their huts. It is contended that the land in question is claimed by a man named Kennedy, and that it was through his efforts that the sheriff was induced to act. It is possible that owing to the wiser council of their chief the Indians will permit the United States district attorney to adjust the difficulty. Gov. Van Sant advises this action.

Crop Bulletin.

Good rains fell in nearly all parts of the state during the week. The heaviest measured rains were 2.46 inches in Polk county, 2.01 inches in Wilkin county and 1.50 inches in Douglas and Chippewa counties; the lightest rains seem to have been in Hennepin, Dakota, Wright, Nicollet, Kandiyohi and Nobles counties. In a few scattered places hail fell, that in Sherburne county being heavy enough to injure a considerable area of rye. The rains have been a great benefit to all vegetation, especially the late sown grains, grass and pastures, and all crops are now growing finely except corn and grass, for which the temperatures have been too low. The seeding of flax and barley on lands in the Red River valley which could not be plowed last fall is going on, as is also the seeding of millet and corn for fodder. Winter rye and winter wheat are in head.

Full of Dynamite.

A contractor named Michael O'Brien, engaged in directing excavations in Minneapolis, cleaned out a como car the other morning very effectively. O'Brien told the man sitting next to him that he had over 40 pounds of dynamite in his pockets, and that was no idle jest. O'Brien had all the dynamite he claimed to have, and moreover his vest pockets were bulging with fulminating caps. The man and several acquaintances left the car. Three women on the car got off at the next crossing, and six men had business on adjacent streets. O'Brien took a transfer to Second street northeast, but announced that he wasn't going to tip off his dynamite to the next car load.

"Why, if they only knew it," he remarked, "they travel round with men packing dynamite every day in the week."

Home Wrecked.

The home of Henry A. Sauer in Minneapolis was partially wrecked by a huge boulder. Fifty feet from the house an excavation was being made and a ledge of rock was being dislodged by the use of dynamite. In this particular instance a large piece, after sailing through space for a distance, made for the Sauer home. It struck the roof and tore through it, and crashed through the floor very near to where Mrs. Sauer sat with a babe in her arms.

Cremated.

The remains of Mrs. Mabel Walker, a young woman who committed suicide at Lincoln, Neb., were cremated in St. Paul. Her mother came all the way from Tacoma to implant the kiss of maternal love before the body was consumed. The funeral service was read by Rev. C. D. Andrews, of Christ church.

According to the dispatches, Mrs. Walker's death was due to her drinking wood alcohol and cocaine.

A PIKE COUNTY MIRACLE.

Velpen, Ind., June 17.—William O. B. Sullivan, farmer of this place, and who is a brother of ex-Representative Sullivan, of Pike and Dubois counties, has had a remarkable experience recently.

Mr. Sullivan is 49 years of age, and has been a citizen of Pike county for 30 years. For two years he has suffered much with Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism. His shoulders and side were very sore and stiff, and his back was so bad he could hardly straighten up at all. He had palpitation of the heart, and a smothering which was very distressing. He used three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and is as strong and well as ever he was. He pronounces his cure a miracle. Mr. Sullivan's statement of his case is startling:

"A month ago I was a cripple. Today I can do a hard day's work every day, and have not a single ache or pain."

The Picturesque Pan-American Route to Buffalo is a very appropriate designation of the Grand Trunk Railway System, which has made the most ample preparations to accommodate visitors to the East this summer.

A new train was inaugurated June 2, known as the "Detroit and New York Express," which leaves Dearborn Station, Chicago, at 11:32 a. m. The equipment is new and strictly up-to-date, every comfort of the traveler being provided for. Meals are served a la carte between Chicago and New York at any hour to suit the convenience of patrons.

From Detroit the train speeds eastward, stopping en route at Mt. Clemens, whose waters are famous the world over, leaving the State at Port Huron, and entering Canada via the great "St. Clair Tunnel," that marvel of engineering, passing during the night through the important cities of London and Hamilton, crossing the magnificent single arch double track steel bridge over the Niagara Gorge, arriving at Niagara Falls, N. Y., at 4.25 a. m., where stop-over may, under certain conditions, be made without additional cost by deposit of railway ticket with agent.

Buffalo, the Pan-American City, is reached at 6.15 a. m., where stop-over is granted on tickets to points beyond Buffalo, on payment of $1.

The trip east of Buffalo via the Lehigh Valley Railroad through the lake region of New York State is like passing through a fairyland of beauty. The view of the historic Wyoming Valley from the mountains which arise on either side is strikingly beautiful—one which the traveler will long remember, even when gazing upon scenes of wider fame.

At South Bethlehem connection is made for Philadelphia, which is reached at 3.47 p. m.

New York is reached at 4.33 p. m., a most convenient hour, as it allows ample time to reach hotel or residence, dine leisurely, and enjoy the whole evening in the city.

For sleeping car reservations on all trains, and for any additional information, apply to J. H. Burgis, City Pass. and Ticket Agent, 249 Clark St., corner Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

To the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

The most popular railway from the Northwest to the great show at Buffalo will be the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

It runs, every day, five beautiful trains from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago, connecting directly with all Eastern lines.

Its celebrated Pioneer Limited (the famous train of the world) leaves Minneapolis 7:30 p.m. and St. Paul 8:10 p.m. daily, arriving Chicago 9:30 next morning.

Special features of the "Milwaukee's" service are the observation, buffet parlor cars on day trains, private compartment and standard sleepers on night trains, as well as buffet smoking cars and the best dining service in the world.

Tickets at cheap rates will be on sale every day at all points on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y to Buffalo and return, and the maximum comfort can be obtained by using this line.

Write to J. T. Conley, Ass't Gen'l Passgr. Agent, St. Paul, for the "Milwaukee's" Pan-American folder (one of the completest and most comprehensive guides yet published of the exposition) and all information concerning rates, etc.

Impressed Upon His Notice.

The various features for which the Lackawanna Railroad has become noted are involuntarily impressed upon the notice of the passenger, who realizes the luxury of hotel or club appointment in the electric lights; the smooth-running journals of the wheels; the extraordinary cleanliness made possible by the use of anthracite coal, avoiding all dust and nauseating smoke; the consciousness of being always on time—which comforts force an ease of mind and body most favorable to the enjoyment of the unsurpassed scenery through which its lines pass. It is but the natural sequence that the Lackawanna is prosperous in like degree to its excellence of service, and its warm friends are equal in number to its whole list of patrons, for once to test its service means an ardent admirer and friend earned for the road.—Van Etten Breese.

Cheap Round Trip Rate Between St. Paul, Minn., and the Pacific Coast.

On July 5th the Northern Pacific Railway will place in effect a low first-class round trip rate of $45.00 from eastern terminals to Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. Dates of sale at eastern terminals will be from July 6th to July 13th inclusive, and the final limit for return will be Aug. 31st, 1901. Destination must be reached not later than July 18th, stopovers being allowed IN EITHER DIRECTION within the transit limits.

This offers an unsurpassed opportunity for those desiring to hunt new homes and farms, to go into the northwest and look over the country, or for those wishing to visit relatives or friends or to make pleasure trips, to do so.

How shall a mother who is weak and sick with some female trouble bear healthy children?

How anxious women ought to be to give their children the blessing of a good constitution!

Many women long for a child to bless their home, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs, they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the parts, curing all displacements and inflammation.

Actual sterility in women is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all expectant or would-be mothers.

Mrs. A. D. Jarret, Belmont, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. Before taking your medicine I was unable to carry babe to maturity, having lost two—one at six months and one at seven. The doctor said next time I would die, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I did not die, but am the proud mother of a six months old girl baby. She weighs nineteen pounds and has never seen a sick day in her life. She is the delight of our home."

Mrs. Whitney's Gratitude.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try your Vegetable Compound, and was soon relieved. The doctor said I never would be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and half. The next time I continued to take your Compound; and I said then, if I went my full time and my baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old, and is as healthy and hearty as any one could wish. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I was so bad that I did not dare to go away from home to stay any length of time. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 4 Flint St., Somerville, Mass."

Sour Stomach?

Back up a sewer, and you poison the whole neighborhood. Clog up liver and bowels, and your stomach is full of undigested food, which sours and ferments, like garbage in a swill-barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, headache, furred tongue, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. CASCARETS quietly, positively stop fermentation in the stomach, make the liver lively, tone up the bowels, set the whole machinery going and keep it in order.

Don't hesitate! Take CASCARETS to-day and be saved from suffering!

"After I was induced to try CASCARETS, I will never be without them in the house. My liver was in a very bad shape, and my head ached and I had stomach trouble. Now, since taking Cascarets, I feel fine. My wife has also used them with beneficial results for sour stomach."

—Big posters are out announcing that Delano will celebrate the 4th of July.

—C. R. Carleton is thankful to Uncle Sam for an increase of pension to $12 per month.

—A number of Delanoites have been keeping track of court proceedings at Buffalo this week.

-Cap. Castle has engaged in the flour and feed business in the Swedeback brick store, on Bridge street.

—The Casper Janicula children are to go to an orphan asylum soon. Rev. Savs is seeing to having them cared for.

—Tuesday evening's train from the West was about six hours late. It is reported the cause was a wrecked work train west of Willmar.

—A reception was given in honor of Miss Hattie Colby, in the I. O. O. F. hall last Monday evening. She left the next day for her home at Empire, Minn.

—John Eppel went to Royalton last Tuesday to play with their ball team against Long Prairie, the next day. He won his game by a score of 2 to 8. Good for John.

—A copy of the Delineator for July has been sent us. It is a fine Magazine. Its fashion plates, in three colors, are up to date in styles as well as in workmanship.

—A great many Delano people expect to take in Old Settler's day at Buffalo next Tuesday. Arrangements are being made for a ball game between the Millers and the Buffalo team.

—Mayor Horsch's new River street residence is being built. The foundation is laid and before long His Honor expects to "sit on his own stoop and smoke his own pipe" if he pleases to do so.

—The pupils of the St. Peter's school will give an entertainment in the city hall next Wednesday evening. They have been practicing in the hall the past week and a good program can be looked forward to.

—Several fishing parties to neighboring lakes, this week, report splendid catches of croppies, sunfish, pickeral, pike, bass and bullheads. This seems to be an unusually good season for fishing in this vicinity.

—The I. O. O. F's, in regalia, held church on Sunday, at 10 a. m. in the M. E. church. Rev. A. F. Thompson preached. A number of visitors were present. After preaching, a dinner was given at their hall. Several members from Armstrong attended.

—A reception was given in the Odd Fellow's hall to the Misses Reichel, who have been engaged in the millinery business here the past couple of years, and who expect to leave soon for their old home at Waverly. A very enjoyable evening was spent. Refreshments were served.

—The Pilgrim, "Magazine of Progress", published at Battle Creek, Mich, is on our desk. It is a well gotten up and interesting and instructive publication, $100 per year. It is a nice thing for a family to receive such literature once a month. There is something interesting to each member of a large family.

—On Saturday night Tiff Hittsman lost most of his barn by fire, caused by lightning accompanied by a terrific shock of thunder. It is claimed that Tiff turned out as quick as he ever did for the "Johnnies" canons and without preparing for dress parade helped get his horse, buggy, harness and chickens out of the burning barn. The fire company turned out and notwithstanding mud and rain soon had the fire out.

—Billy, the berry boy, had rather a novel experience a few days ago, and his customers had to forego the pleasure of berries for Sunday. Billy took the bridle off of his new horse so that he might drink better; the horse saw some nice grass and thought he would take the opportunity to have a little. The berry buggy was overturned and Billy came home on horseback, without the berries. He expects to be more fortunate next time.

—The Howard Lake base ball team came down to Delano last Sunday, after having suffered defeats at Willmar and Litchfield the two days previous, intent on distinguishing themselves and showing their superiority to anything in the country round about. They rooted furiously in the second inning, and spiced the rest of the game with kicking. The score was 14 to 2 in favor of Delano at the end of the ninth. Howard played three games last week with the score 41 to 4 against her. Pretty good showing.

—School election comes in a few weeks. Two new members of the Board of Education are to be chosen. Nothing helps a town more than first class schools. First class schools can only be had when there are men on the board who are interested in having them. Members of the Board of Education should visit the schools frequently, and know just what is being done, and what is needed, and see that the schools are doing the work they should. Delano has enough school children to have as good a school as is in the county and they should have it.

—In mentioning the graduating exercises of St. Thomas College, Wednesday's St. Paul Dispatch has this to say about one graduate from Long Lake, and who is well known here:

"Peter A. Roy, who has more than ordinary oratorical ability, delivered an oration "The influence of Greek Literature on Roman Poetry" and:

"The fifth act from "King Richard III" was presented very successfully, under the direction of Prof. F. Lee Chawan. P. A. Roy, who played the role of King, has dramatic talent out of the ordinary and his performance of the part was much above that of the average amateur. There was both strength and finish in his work and a valuable self forgetfulness."

Peter's name also appears frequently on the list of prizes awarded.

Vincent Yany, of Delano, also makes a good showing.

—The Delano Territorial Association met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Carleton. All claim to have had one of the best times since the organization of the association. Four new names were placed on the roll. Mrs. Carleton has some fine old relics of the past, which the company enjoyed very much. Among them a pencil drawing of "Liberty" by her mother; several letters to her father, Dr. Moses Shaw, from John Q. Adams, and Henry Clay; old fashioned crockery, plated candle stick and snuffers and fish knife. Tea was served from a teapot which belonged to Mrs. C's grandfather, Orchard Cook, of Saco, Maine, who was a friend of Thomas Jefferson's, and which once held tea served to that eminent patriot and statesman. Strawberries from the home garden were served in plenty, and were of exra fine flavor. Mr. Carleton is 78 and Mrs. Carleton 79 years of age but both are as sprightly as many much younger people and entered into the fun with as much pleasure as any present. The next meeting is to be an invitation, with Mr. and Mrs. John Rader at their fine country residence in Independence, on Thursday, July eighteen.

—Everybody who wants to enjoy a good celebration the 4th, should come to Delano.

John, Julia, and Grace Cunningham spent a few days in Minneapolis, returning home Tuesday morning. Mrs. Alva Catlin came up with them.

Among those coming home this morning on the G N. train were T. B. Rader and wife, M. E. Muckey and wife, J. M. Conzet and wife, I. F. Baltuff.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Halgren, of Watertown, came home from Minneapolis Tuesday evening. They had accompanied their daughter, Mrs. Dr. E. E. Shrader, that far on her trip to Buffalo, N. Y.

Advent Christian Camp Meeting.

The annual campmeeting of the Advent Christian Conference, of Minnesota, will be held at Anoka, commencing Saturday evening, June 22, and continuing over two Sundays. Services will be conducted every day by able preachers along purely evangelical lines. The meetings will be held on the grounds used by the seventh day people, just outside the city limits, a very pleasant and convenient place for such a meeting. Anoka can be reached by railroad over the Great Northern and Northern Pacific lines. A good bridge crosses the Mississippi opposite the city, and teams from the west can cross at Champlaine.

The Advent Christian people, sometimes known as First day Adventists, hold the Bible as their only creed, and Christian character as the only test of fellowship. A cordial invitation is extended to all, especially to everyone interested in the revival and advance of vital, agressive Christianity along spiritual lines.

Next Tuesday, June 25, is to be observed at Buffalo as Old Settler's Day. Let all old settlers be present.

Teacher's training school will be held at Buffalo from July 8 to August 4. Teacher's examinations to follow.

Court is dragging its weary length along. It bids fair to last a couple more weeks. Latham's rail road cases take up their share of the time and attention of the court.

Buffalo business men have taken hold of the entertainments at that place and with the aid of people who respect laws and wish to have a Christian community expect to do away with the Sunday pow wows. That's right. If people from the cities or other places wish to find a place to spend a part of the summer they don't seek for a town where Sunday is made hideous, as a rule.

From the Times we learn that the ladies of Monticello have opened up a reading room for the men and boys of that place. This is a great convenience to many a man or boy who would spend his time in idleness or worse; and who improving his opportunity to read good books may change his life from one of uselessness to one of the most useful in the community. Every village should have a good reading room.

Something should be done towards marking section corners in Wright county so that they may be found. In many places now, it is well nigh, if not quite impossible tho locate the original corners. Some are in the middle of a cross roads and the roads have been traveled and worked until no mark is left; bearing trees have been cut down and the stumps have decayed or been dug up. Many disputes could be easily settled by having a corner from which to find where lines run. Some counties have iron stakes set up at the section corners. Wright county ought to have some.

The Old Settler's Association meets at Buffalo, on June 25. Gov. Van Sant is to speak. A big turnout is looked for.

A French Lake Woodman's Mysterious Death.

BLACK DUCK, Minn., June 10.-Louis O. Engstrom, a laborer, was found dead about two miles down the right of way by a party of surveyors late yesterday afternoon. Mr. Engstrom had been initiated into the Woodman lodge Saturday night, and received his insurance policy for $1,000, which was found in his pocket. The policy is payable to his father, Ole Engstrem, French Lake, Minn. There are no marks of violence on the body. A post mortem will be held today.—Wright County Times.

St. Cloud Times: The republican party ought to be able to give the country something better to choose between than a term for McKinley and the nomination of Hanna.

Duluth Herald: When the Declaration of Independence is publicly read in Duluth on the Fourth of July, these words of Abraham Lincoln should be read at the same time: "The authors of the Declaration of Independence meant it to be-as thank God it is now proving itself-a stumbling block to those who in after times might seek to turn a free people back into the paths of despotism. They knew the proneness of prosperity to breed tyrants, and they meant when such should reappear in this fair land and commence their vocation they should find left at least one hard nut to crack."

St. Cloud Times: When the United States government makes hazing at Annapolis and West Point unappealable cause of dismissal the brutal pastime will cease in national institutions and begin to grow unpopular in all others. The red Indians were the first hazers on this continent and showed their victims as much pity as many colleges do.

The Commoner: In view of the prominent part taken by Justices Brown and White in changing our form of government, a reader of the Commoner suggests that the national colors should be changed to Red, White and Brown. But as Justice Gray also joined in the decision, why not make them Gray, Brown and White?

The Commoner: The press dispatches report that Charles Foster, former secretary of the treasury, has made application for a discharge in bankruptcy. His assets are put down at nothing, while his debts amount to $747,008 34. There was a time when Mr. Foster was considered a financier, and when his opinion upon a financial question was regarded as infallible by the lesser lights in the financial world. As one never knows how much credit to give to the opinion of a great financier (until his debts are paid) it is a great deal better for each citizen to study public questions for himself and not accept the opinion of any one as conclusive.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 14, 1901

Mr McKinley again demonstrated when he knocked the bottom out of the third term bucket by declaring that he would not again accept a nomination that he is one of the shrewdest politicians in his party. He knows there are breakers enough ahead of the republican party without the addition of a third term elephant, as he frankly acknowledged when he said:

"There are now questions of the greatest importance before the administration and the country, and their consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of the thought of a third term". Mr. McKinley knows there are several public questions of importance which may wreck all chances of the republican party to elect the next president, and wishes to impress that fact upon the minds of some of the prominent members of his party who act as though they thought the administration owned the country and could do anything they pleased without jeopardizing the future success of the republican party. The immediate effect of Mr. McKinley's announcement was a sort of fluttering activity among those who are coaxing the growth of boomlets for the next republican nomination for a number of men, including Senators Fairbanks, of Ind.; Hanna and Foraker, of Ohio; Platt, of Conn.; Lodge, of Mass.; Cullom, of Ill.; ex-Senator Spooner, of Wis., Gov. Odell, of New York, and Judge Taft, of Ohio, Chairman of the Philippine Commission. A notable thing about the situation is that there isn't the slightest evidence of a Roosevelt boom in Washington. Mr. McKinley has said that he didn't want another nomination himself, but he hasn't said that he didn't wish to name the man, and he won't say so. Shrewd observers will ascertain Mr. McKinley's favorite before betting on the name of the next republican candidate. Representative Richardson, of Tenn., the democratic leader in the House, who is in Washington, said of Mr. McKinley's anti third term announcement: "It is what anybody could expect. No man is good enough to be elected President three terms. It is a rule that has never been broken and never will be. I think Mr. McKinley is too good a politician to ever undertake to violate that rule or precedent."

Nothing more autocratic has occurred in official circles for a long time than the announcement that the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of Patents would grant no hearings during July and August. It is a fit sequel to Boss Platt being allowed to put a political figurehead in charge of the enormous business interests of the Patent Office. That order, if not set aside by higher authority, will delay the business of every inventor whose case requires a hearing for more than two months and pile up a class of business already in arrears, which will be a future incentive to improper and unjust decisions. These men will continue to draw their salaries during July and August and the government will continue to make a profit on the Patent Office. The injustice of such conditions is apparent to all and the rumpus it will raise will be heard in Congress next winter. The only possible reason for the order is that the Commissioner of Patents and his assistant wish to take things easy for those two months, without regard to the interests of those who will be affected by the order. It is an outrage, which should cost the Commissioner his place.

After thinking the matter over the Cubans accepted the Platt amendment, just as it passed Congress, and their action has been officially communicated to the War Department.

Mr. T. J. McElroy, of Chicago, who belongs to a family of old time democrats, thinks that Mr. McKinley's upsetting of the third term boom which had been started for him, ought to be decidedly beneficial to the democratic party. He said on the subject: "Where can you find another man prominent among the leaders of the republican party whose political life is not entwined with the trusts which sell their products, made in America, at a lower price abroad than they get at home, and this because the high tariff of the U. S. over protects them. Mr. McKinley's declination to run for the Presidency again certainly makes the race among the leaders of his party to succeed him an open one, and it should encourage the democrats to come together and develop their real strength."

The impression prevails among the labor leaders, who are already at work preparing to bring pressure upon Congress at its coming session to reenact the Chinese exclusion law, which expires next May, that the administration is secretly, if not openly, against reenactment, although they do not care to talk about it for publication at this stage of the fight. They hint, however, that if the administration opposes reenactment there will be some lively times in Congress, which will have and effect on next year's Congressional campaign.

Although Judge Springer, attorney for the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache Indians who are protesting against the carrying out of the treaty providing for the opening of their lands, in Oklahoma, to public settlement, has not received much encouragement from the authorities, he is still pushing the matter. A delegation of Indians arrived in Washington today to personally present to Mr. McKinley the protest of what they claim to be a majority of the tribes, and a suit against the Secretary of the Interior will be heard next week in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Officials say the lands will be opened according to programme

Who Lost?

A banker sauntering home from his dinner saw a $10 bill lying on the sidewalk. Of course he picked it up and took the number of it in order to find the owner. While at home his wife remarked that the butcher had sent in a bill amounting to $10. The only money he had with him was the money he had found, which he gave to her and she paid the butcher. The butcher paid a farmer for a calf. The farmer paid it to a merchant, who in turn paid it to his clerk, and the clerk, owing the banker a note of $10, went to the bank and paid off the note. The banker recognized the bill as the one he had found, and which up to that time had settled $50 of debts. On careful examination he found the bill was counterfeit. Now, will some of our financial friends tell what had been lost in the transaction and by whom, if any?—Ex.

Turning the Joke.

From the Evening Wisconsin.

A story is told of a certain prominent railway director who is equally renowned for his ability to make or take a joke. An employe, whose home is in the country, applied to him for a pass to visit his family.

"You are in the employ of the company?" inquired the gentleman alluded to.

"Yes."

"You receive your pay regularly?"

"Yes."

"Well, now, supposing you were working for a farmer instead of the company, would you expect your employer to take out his horses every Saturday night and carry you home?"

This seemed a poser, but it wasn't.

"No," said the man, promptly. "I would not expect that; but if the farmer had his horses out and was going my way, I should call him a very mean fellow if he would not let me ride."

The employe came out three minutes after with a pass good for twelve months.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

HARDSHIPS OF CHILDHOOD.

I wish 'at I could go to work
Away in town somewhere,
Like my pa does, and have a ceance
To stay all day down there,
And have some fun like other folks,
Instead of bein' here,
And lissenin' to ma yell out:
"I want you, Waldo, dear!"

I never go across the street
Or round the block to play
Without I hear her hollerin':
"C,me in here, right away."
And when the Hudson boys come up,
As soon as I begin
To have a chance to bat she says:
"Now, Waldo, dear, come in!"

I can't pile up things in the yard
Because she comes and takes
One look and then holds up her hands
And hollers: "Mercy sakes!
Clean all that rubbish out of here;
My gracious, goodness me!"
I wish I be an orphan boy,
And then I guess she'd see.

She just goes round all day and tries
To think up every way
There ever was to never let
A boy get out to play;
Whatever I would rather do,
She always tells me "No!"—
I wish I'd die, and then I guess
That she'd be sorry, though.

I wish 'at I was big enough
To work down at the store
'Cause then, you know, a person's ma
Can't make him mind no more;
I'd like to go down town with pa
Almost before daylight,
And get a chance, sometimes, to stay
Till 10 o'clock at night.

And sometimes, when he missed his car
And had to walt, you see,
Then he'd be glad that I was there
To keep him company.
And then nobody's scold me, 'cause
My shoes wore out, and say
I wasn't worth the bother that
I made them, anyway.

I don't see why it is that pa
Comes home sometimes so sad,
And can't eat hardly eanything—
He ought to just be glad,
'Cause all he has to do is work
And never miss a day,
With crowds of people there to help
Keep lonesomeness away.

I wonder why a person's ma
Won't ever let you do
Or see or hear or say the things
You're always wantin' to?
She's always hollerin': "Come in
As quickly as you can!"—
I wish as soon as I was borned
That I,d 'a' been a man!

MINNESOTA editors visited the Pan American Exposition last week and some of them have written home short accounts of the splendid trip they had. The Exposition, all claim, is well worth visiting. Editor Dare, of Elk River, praises the Executive committee of the Editorial Association for their attention to every detail in arranging for the trip. He says he stopped at the largest hotel in the world, at Buffalo, and that he was enjoying the outing immensely.

DEMOCRATS seem determined to try again for supremacy in political affairs. They believe in the motto "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." And they consider questions unsettled until they are settled right. They believe in the sovereignty of the people. They are for a government for the people, by the people, and of the people. They believe in principles. They want good men to administer the laws of the land in accordance with the constitution of our country. They are not particularly anxious to get men calling themselves democrats but who act and vote like republicans. They feel that little or nothing would be gained by so doing, but that their cause would suffer loss rather than gain by having the power in the hands of such men. If they would succeed in nominating two first class men in entire harmony with each other and with party principles, they would stand a first class show of winning votes.

REPUBLICANS are rustling round at a great rate for a candidate for president. It looks as if they had made up their minds to select by exclusion, and as if Marcus Aurelius Hanna would finally be the choice. They have already had McKinley up, but he thinks best, in this matter at least, to follow precedent, and refuse to run for more than two terms. Foraker, Fairbanks, and others have been mentioned. Roosevelt might be the people's choice, but it looks as if M. A. Hanna would have the main say about who shall be the nominee and as if his choice would be Marcus Aurelius Hanna. After the nomination is made the people will have an opportunity to vote and it is possible that the man on another ticket may win out and be president after all.

Much Reading for Little Money.

The New York World has got the cost of printing down to a minimum. Its latest offer of its monthly newspaper magazine is interesting if from no other cause than that it shows the acme of "how much for how little."

The Monthly World is a 32 page magazine with colored coyer. Its pages are about the size of the pages of the Ladies' Home Journal, and it is copiously illustrated in half tone. The illustrations are the result of the best artistic skill, aided by all the latest printing press appliances, making a magazine unrivalled in the quality of its contents and its appearance.

Each issue contains stories of romance, love, adventure, travel; stories of fiction and fact; stories of things quaint and curious, gathered together from all over the world; the results of scientific research, and editorial reviews. It numbers among its contributors the leading literary men and women of the day.

A feature each month is a full page portrait of the most famed man or woman of the moment in the public eye.

In collecting and preparing for publication the literary matter and art subjects for the Monthly World no expense is spared.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 14, 1901

The same interests-the sugar and tobacco trusts-which made Mr. McKinley turn such a sudden somersault on the Porto Rican tariff question are now working to make him nullify the provisions of the Foraker act. That act provided that whenever the legislature of Porto Rico notifies the President of the U. S. that a system of internal taxation has been put into effect that would meet the expenses of the government of the island, the president should issue a proclamation declaring free trade with Porto Rico, and that in any event the tariff on Porto Rican products should cease to exist March 1, 1902. An extra session of the Porto Rican legislature has been called to meet July 4, for the purpose of giving the president the notification provided for in the Foraker act and requesting him to issue a proclamation declaring free trade. This the trust interests are working to prevent on the pretended ground that the system of internal taxation provided by the legislature of Porto Rico will not provide the necessary revenue, but in reality because they intend to prevent free trade between Porto Rico and the U. S., if they can. Their plan is to compel Mr. McKinley to decline to issue a free trade proclamation, and then to get Congress to amend the Foraker act, extending the tariff on Porto Rican products, before it expires by limitation. It is difficult to say what the result will be. Mr. McKinley wants free trade with Porto Rico, as he did when he sent his annual message to the last Congress, but the trusts compelled him to eat his words and do their bidding then and they may be able to do so again.

Russia is hitting back at this government, which the short sighted policy of the administration has involved in a triff war. First, the Russian duty on American machinery was raised and now the duty on American resin and bicycles goes up a notch or two. When it is remembered that what we buy of Russia is not a drop in the bucket compared with what we sell her, the silliness of a system of tariff retaliation between the two countries is apparent. It is quite certain that this sort of policy will not result in extending our foreign markets, an object that Mr. McKinley constantly professes to keep in view. Secretary Gage has just ordered a counterveiling duty placed on sugar from Italy.

The industrial Commission has received a number of affidavits concerning the Standard Oil Trust, which will be printed in its permanent report. Following is an extract from one made by F. S. Monett, former Attorney General of Ohio: "Campaigns come and go; commissions investigate and egislatures meet and adjourn, and magazine articles are written and read, and yet, through their monopolistic and criminal exactions, the Standard oil combination of transportation and distribution thereof levy tribute upon the owner of the oil rock and exact from the consumer of the refined oil and its by products an unnatural profit. The public are its victims; the little band of law violators owning the controlling shares are the beneficiaries of the plunder. The public for a short time stand aghast at their very boldness and defiance. The government alone can check their abuses."

Senator Jones, of Ark., Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has been in Washington all the week. He talked freely of the political outlook, but said he wished it understood that he made no pretense of representing anybody but himself in the opinions expressed. He thinks that the next session of Congress will devote a great deal of time to the Philippine question with which the Supreme Court has said Congress alone has power to deal, and that out of the discussion will grow the principal issue of next year's Congressional campaign—"Ought the Constitution to follow the flag"? Senator Jones thinks the democrats will take the stand that we should not control any people who are not considered good enough to enjoy all the rights and privileges of American citizens; that we should assist the Filipinos to set up an independent government, notify the powers that we will brook no interference with it, and then withdraw our flag from the Philippines, but believes that a majority of republicans will stand by the programme of holding the islands for the money that can be made out of them. He said that the democrats would fight the ship subsidy bill, which he expects to see pushed to the front again, just as hard as ever; that he doubted whether Babcock's much talked of anti tariff bill would ever get out of the House Ways and Means Committee, and rather expected the order of the transcontinental railroad bosses, to smother Nicaragua Canal Legislation, to be obeyed by the republican leaders.

Representative Clayton, of Ala., who has just returned from a visit to the Constitutional convention now sitting in that state, says the elimination of the Negro vote is certain. As to its effect upon the state he said: "I have seen it suggested that with the elimination of the negro vote some of the states in the South will go republican. This is certainly not true of Alabama. It has not been true of Mississippi, Louisiana or South Carolina. Alabama will remain a democratic state." Of the republican threat to reduce southern representation in Congress and the Electoral College, Mr. Clayton said he had no fear. He called attention to the fact that Massachusetts had had a limited suffrage for many years, and no suggestion had ever been made to reduce its representation.

A CRY IN THE NIGHT

By Florence Roney Weir.

(From the People's Home Journal. Reprinted by Permission.)

"NOW I hope you realize, Pennington Brush, how perfectly awful it would have been!"

"I don't know as it would have been particularly awful. You were divorced from him, anyway."

"But how would I have felt if I had said I would marry you, and then received the telegram five minutes later telling me to get ready for my husband's funeral?"

"He ain't been your husband for 14 years," persisted Bennington Brush, "and, if he had, he's dead now, anyhow, and they are a-bringin' him home on the five o'clock, though what in the world they are luggin' him back to you for, after all these years, is more than I can see."

Mrs. Brewster shivered, although the night was warm for September, and wrapped her arms in her apron. Pennington feared she was taking cold, yet still he lingered.

"You don't feel—that is, you can't make it seem right—to give me an answer to-night, I suppose?"

"Indeed, I cannot,' she said, with a curling lip. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself to press such a question on a woman looking for her husband's remains to come over the hill at any minute."

"Dumb him!" muttered Brush; "he cut me out of an answer just this way 15 years ago, and made a miserable man of me—"

"Not just this same way, Pennington," Mrs. Brewster said, soberly enough; but Pennington saw a twinkle in her eye. It made him savage.

"You care so little about him you can make a joke of him, yet you hold me at arm's length on account of him. I presume you will feel called upon now to go into mouring for him—for a man who deserted you 14 years ago and has never shown his face since!"

Mrs. Brewster sighed.

"I suppose I ought," she owned, then looked apprehensively up the lonely country road, where the solemn load might now appear at any time.

Pennington Brush turned on his heel.

"If he had known that your grandmother left you her property, and that you came into possession last week, he'd a-come back alive instead of the way he is coming. He was mean enough." Then he relented. "Rose, let me stay in my old room in the tower to-night, where I slept when your grandmother lived here alone. You will need me."

"No; you go along to your own bed in the factory. Old Mr. and Mrs. Porter are coming. They'll be here in a minute, now, so go along."

"Well, just as you say. Good night, Rose."

He came towards her and awkwardly made a move as though he would kiss her. She shrank back horrified.

"Pennington Brush! And he coming over the hill yonder?"

Pennington looked quickly towards the hill, but there was nothing in sight save the bare summit and the darkening sky above. He bade her good night again and walked rapidly away towards the cheese factory, where, since Rose Brewster had taken possession of her grandmother's home, he had slept in a little room in the attic.

Rose watched him until he disappeared in the cheese factory door. She shuddered again and went in to take a look around at the stiff rooms, doubly gloomy now, in anticipation of the coming of the pale guest. Her grandmother had been a penurious old lady, and as yet Rose had no opportunity to introduce the little homey touches with which a woman of her disposition inevitably surrounds herself. For Rose was a cozy little body, who had been cheated out of her birthright of love and domestic happiness by an unfortunate marriage with a scamp. She was 40 now, but comely and desirable, as Pennington Brush knew to his sorrow.

When Pennington arrived at the factory he determined to sit outside and smoke until he heard old Mr. Porter's buggy. The night was still, and he was sure he could hear it when it drove up to Rose's door. However, as the old people were to stay all night, they might take it into their heads to walk across the fields instead of driving around the road. He decided they must have done so, for soon he heard the wagon bearing his old rival's body creaking over the hill from the opposite direction. He saw lights in the parlor windows and in the porch, and he knew by the sounds that Rose was receiving her runaway husband into her home again after 14 years.

A telegram had come the day before telling her he was dead, and his last request had been that his body should be sent to her for burial. It touched her deeply. To think that she had been upon the point of yielding to Pennington Brush's repeated pleadings the very hour she had received the intelligence of Brewster's death and his belated remembrance of herself.

Presently Pennington heard the rumble of men's voices again as they came out of the house, and the wagon jolted back the way it had come. He could hear it going down the opposite side of the hill, until at last the sound died away in the distance. Mrs. Brewster meanwhile was alone with the dead, for old Mr. and Mrs. Porter had failed to arrive. She stood in the middle of the forlorn parlor, lamp in hand, gazing at the coffin, which had been placed between the two front windows. She felt it was her duty to lift the cover and look at the man within, yet at the thought a shuddering horror took hold upon her. She took herself to task. Was this the way to feel towards a poor mortal who asked her forgiveness in this strange manner? She recalled the day they were married. She thought him very handsome then, with his straight nose and long, blond mustache. She resolutely set the lamp down and removed the upper part of the coffin lid. His face appeared to her suddenly and so frightfully near. He was old now—like herself; his face was pinched by the reckless years, and his long mustache was gray, but he was Henry Brewster, the same who had broken her heart in her young womanhood. She stooped to put the cover on the floor, then rose quickly and stood gazing on the motionless features. Suddenly she turned as though struck with an unbearable horror and went out of the room. Her eyes were dilated and her face was more deathlike in its frozen pallor than the face of the man in the coffin.

Pennington Brush went to his room about 12. He had blown out his light and removed his coat when he heard a cry or call. He listened, and imagined he heard a woman's voice calling his name. He hurried out of doors and sped swiftly up the path towards Mrs. Brewster's. He stepped lightly upon the porch, determined not to frighten her by knocking, if it had been but a trick of his imagination, she asleep and everything quiet within. He peeped cautiously through the parlor window, and the sight which met his gaze froze the blood in his veins. Rose Brewster sat in the middle of the room, pointing a pistol at the man who was sitting bolt upright in his coffin. As Brush gazed, almost doubting his senses, Rose called with all her might and main:

"Pennington, Pennington Brush!"

The window went in with a crash, the broken glass falling upon the carpet in showers. The coffin was upset, and the supposed dead man lay unconscious from a blow planted heartily by Pennington Brush where it would be likely to have the greatest effect.

POINTING A PISTOL AT THE MAN IN THE COFFIN.

The next instant Rose Brewster was sobbing hysterically in Pennington's arms.

"Oh, I couldn't have stood it another minute. I should have gone crazy if you hadn't come as you did, because I couldn't have kept him there much longer. Don't leave me, don't leave me, Pennington."

"No, darling, never again. Keep still, dearie, and get me something to tie this pretty bird with before he comes to."

"No, no; let him go, Pennington. Remember, he was once my husband."

"Indeed I'll not let him go—except to jail. We'll put him where his funeral will do some good next time he has one. Maybe it isn't the man who was your husband at all."

"Oh, yes, it is," wailed Mrs. Brewster. "It must be. No other man could be so mean!"

After it was all over and there had been a trial instead of a funeral, Mrs. Brewster told how it happened. When she stooped to set the cover of the coffin down she heard the man breathe, and knew that he was living. In a moment it flashed over her what the rascal intended doing. The men who brought him were undoubtedly accomplices. Hearing of her little fortune, and knowing her to be a lone woman, they had come to frighten her to death and rob her. With superb presence of mind she brought the pistol from her bedroom, and none too soon, for when she returned the scoundrel was sitting up in his coffin, making ready to get out. There she had held him—with an unloaded pistol—while he begged and threatened. When the strain became unbearable she began calling for Pennington, with little hope that he would hear, and when he crashed through the window, his eyes blazing with fury, he seemed to Rose Brewster like an angel from Heaven.

The neighbors said it served her right; she should have married Pennington Brush ten years before. And Pennington was in the habit of taking them out to the barn and showing them a coffin, which he said he would sell cheap, because it was second-hand.

Hetty Green's advice to women speculators may be summed up somewhat like this: "Don't; but, if you do and lose, don't cry about it."

A statistician puts the taxation dealing with crime in this country at $200,000,000 and the annual stolen income of criminals at $400,000,000. The value of measures to prevent crimes may be estimated accordingly.

The director of the census does not hesitate to predict that the population of the United States will be 300,000,000 in the year 2000. The beauty of long-range prophecy is that the reputation of the prophet cannot be injured.

New York reports that horses have become remarkably scarce in the market. The horseless era predicted was not of this kind. People will have to fall back on automobiles until the business of horse breeding takes a wider range.

A woman in Pennsylvania walked 28 miles to take her first ride on the railroad, and when she saw the iron horse disliked its appearance so much that she turned about and walked home. The tramp of 56 miles would be a sufficient taste of the strenuous life for most people.

What grinds our United States senators is that a quart of plums will not supply the crowd of applicants who could appropriate a train load. When the politician who can duplicate the miracle of the loaves and fishes comes along he will have no difficulty in being president for life.

When Washington was inaugurated president, Rhode Island ranked first among the states in density of population. It stands first now. In 1790 it had 63 inhabitants to the square mile. Fifty years later it had 100. In 1860 it had 161, and in 1900 407 people to the square mile.

By the death, almost simultaneously, of Sir Walter Besant and Robert Buchanan, England loses two of its most noted literary men of the present period. Both possessed exceptional gifts in the writing of poetry and novels, and both were ardent workers in various social reforms.

A leading life insurance company, it is stated, upon the petition of a number of its prominent policy holders, has made a special and more favorable rate of insurance for those who are total abstainers from the use of alcoholic beverages. British companies have favored total abstainers for some years.

The Chinese exclusion law runs out in 11 months, but the authorities at Washington say that there is nothing to be feared, even if congress does not extend the provisions of the act during the next session, as a treaty negotiated with China has practically the same provisions, and the treaty holds good until 1904.

There are six surviving governors of New York—Cornell, elected in 1879; Cleveland, elected in 1882; Hill, first elected in 1885; Morton, elected in 1891; Black, elected in 1896, and Roosevelt, elected in 1898. Three of the six, after having been governor, attained honors in the field of national politics—Cleveland, as president; Hill, as senator, and Roosevelt as vice president.

A New York baggage smasher picked up a trunk the other day and did the usual act of jamming it into the corner of the car and trying to break it in two. There were explosives in the trunk, however, and it is now said that if he gets along well the baggage man can leave the hospital and go back to work next month. Of course, everyone who has traveled feels sorry for the poor man.

Every hard-working young man with little money permits himself at times to imagine how agreeable his sensations would be if he were suddenly to become possessed of leisure and wealth, but it is quite probable that those sensations would be no pleasanter if actually experienced than are those enjoyed by the rich St. Louis youth who has grown tired of aimless amusement and has settled down to hard work as an apprentice in a steel mill.

The arrest in London of Earl Russell on a charge of bigamy will result in a trial which will settle the question of American divorces so far as England is concerned. The earl was divorced in Nevada, as also was his present wife, whom he afterward married in that state. English law officers hold that neither is divorced according to British custom, and they will proceed against him for bigamy in bringing a new wife within their jurisdiction. If these divorces hold good in English law Nevada may look for considerable accessions to its tourist population.

It is a satisfaction to those of us who are growing old and already feel the twinges of rheumatism incident to age to know that the doctors are working vigorously to find the mischievous microbe which is the hidden cause of the ill. Some ten years ago the blame was laid on the staphy lococcus pyrogenes albus; then, again, the streptococcus was held under suspicion. Lately the diplococcus has been thought guilty of inciting rheumatic fever. No doubt a very small animal with a very long name is the rascal that is doing all the mischief.

The New Century club, of Philadelphia, has done a real service to all individuals and organizations interested in charities affecting children in compiling the statutes of every state in the United States concerning dependent, neglected and delinquent children. Workers in philanthropy are becoming more and more convinced of the fact that it is wiser to care for and educate all such children and fit them to be honest, self-supporting citizens than to attempt the almost hopeless task of reforming the idle and vicious after maturity.

THE STORM'S WORK.

First Reports of Loss of Life by Flood Exaggerated.

Now Said That Deaths in Coal Fields of West Virginia Will Not Number More Than 60—Property Loss Enormous.

Roanoke, W. Va., June 25.—It is now reported that not over 60 people are missing in the coal fields as a result of Saturday's flood. The town of Keystone, while much damaged, is not wiped out, as reported. No estimate of property loss has been made either by coal operators or the railroad officials. The loss, however, is far up in the thousands. No definite news has been received from the coal fields, as all the wires are still down, and there is no means of communication. The estimates that 200 or more lives were lost is certainly too great. The railroad companies' loss will reach $500,000.

Reports Exaggerated.

Bluefields, W. Va., June 25.—At this juncture it is extremely hard to determine the exact situation of the flood. Wires are now open to Ennis, W. Va., this point being practically the mouth of the devastated section. At Ennis the depot and post office were washed completely away and miles of track torn up. No trains are going farther west than Ennis. Two thousand men are repairing the damage to the Norfolk & Western railway. The estimated damage to railway property now is $1,000,000, though this does not include the loss sustained in loss of revenue. The entire property loss is estimated at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. It is now positive that the reports of 200 lives lost were exaggerated, but officials estimate that the number of lives lost by flood will run up to 75 easily.

Great Suffering.

It is reported that there is great suffering in the coal fields, two-thirds of the miners being homeless. No trains are expected to enter the fields for three or four days. Reports from the west say it is estimated that at least eight miles of telegraph poles are entirely gone west of Vivian yard. It is almost certain that the large lumber interest west of Vivian and near Welch has suffered greatly, the damage probably running up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The Stricken Section.

The devastated section covers an area of about 20 miles west of Bluefield. It is a narrow valley, not much wider than a broad street in some places. Coal mines are scattered all along the road. Keystone, the town reported to have been so greatly damaged, and which was at first believed to be wiped out of existence, is a village of between 2,000 and 3,000 people and is built along the narrow valley and on the sides of the bluffs. There is a creek which runs through the town, over which most of the houses are built on piles and rocks. This creek runs in a zigzag way through the narrow village and has a gradual fall. The mountains on either side loom up for hundreds of feet and the town is so narrow in places that one is obliged to go into the middle of it to see the sky. Persons familiar with the situation of the town say that it would be a death trap if the flood was as heavy as reported.

Appeal for Aid.

Charleston, W. Va., June 25.—After a consultation with Secretary of State Col. William M. O. Dawson and Adjt. Gen. Baker, Gov. White issued the following appeal to West Virginians only:

"Executive Department, June 24.—To the Citizens of West Virginia: An appalling disaster by flood has overtaken the people of the Flat Top coal region. The loss of life and property is very great. While I am as yet without definite information, undoubtedly great destitution and suffering will follow. Aid is required to care for the sick and the destitute and bury the dead. Generous gifts of money are urgently needed, with which necessary supplies can be purchased. Contributions may be sent by wire or otherwise to the adjutant general at Charleston, or any bank at Bluefield. He gives twice who gives quickly. A. B. WHITE,
"Governor."

In Illinois and Ohio.

Lincoln, Ill., June 24.—This city and vicinity was visited Saturday night by a destructive tornado which did $100,000 damage. The storm came from the southwest and its path was 1½ miles wide by 12 miles long. The Lincoln mattress factory was almost totally destroyed, while severe damage was done to the Illinois asylum for feeble minded children, Illinois odd fellows' orphans' home, Lincoln college, the roller flour mills and the county poor farm. Several stores were unroofed, houses wrecked and thousands of trees torn up. An elevator at Middletown was destroyed and stores were damaged. Reports of damage by the storm came from rural districts. At Elkhart freight cars were blown from tracks, and great damage was done to wheat, corn and oats.

Columbus, O., June 24.—There were severe storms in many sections of Ohio Saturday and Saturday night, and considerable damage was done to property and crops. No fatalities have been reported, but a number of people were injured.

Many Killed by Tornado.

Omaha, Neb., June 22.—A dispatch from Naper, received here, says: One of the most destructive tornadoes to human life that ever occurred in Nebraska crossed down the Keyapaha river Thursday evening at six o'clock. Of one family, named Andreson, of seven five are killed, and out of another family of six two are killed and the balance, except the father, are fatally injured. Of the family of Jacob Greening, the father is badly mangled, the mother is not expected to survive, four children are dead and one child severely injured. All wires in the vicinity are down and only meager reports are obtainable.

Disaster in Boston Harbor.

Boston, June 24.—While coming into the harbor Sunday morning on her regular trip from Maine ports, the steamer City of Bangor, of the Bangor Steamship company's line, during a dense fog ran down the naphtha launch Estelle, anchored off Deer Island beacon, directly in the steamer's path. Five men on the launch were thrown into the water, and two were drowned, the others being rescued with considerable difficulty.

AN ASSASSIN'S VICTIM.

Hoshi Toru, Japanese Statesman, Stricken Down at Tokyo—Was Once Minister to United States.

Yokohama, June 22.—Hoshi Toru, who was minister of communications in the last Ito cabinet, was stabbed Friday at a meeting of the city assembly at Tokyo and died shortly afterwards.

Hoshi Toru was Japanese minister at Washington and was formerly president of the house.

The assassin of Hoshi Toru is a man of about 50 years of age, occupying a good social and public position. He declared the blow was struck in the interests of the country.

Ever since the recent crisis which caused Marquis Ito to resign there have been riotous scenes both in the imperial and municipal assemblies resulting from the efforts of the reform party to introduce modern transportation and educational methods in the domain.

Washington, June 22.—Officials of the Japanese legation were shocked when informed of the assassination of Hoshi Toru. His service here as minister lasted from 1896 to 1898. He is well known both in diplomatic and official circles. Before coming here he was prominent in the politics of his country and on returning to Japan he became a member of the cabinet, serving as minister of communication. His official life in Washington and at home were marked by vigor and decisiveness, and these characteristics brought him much enmity in certain political circles of Japan. This resulted in charges affecting his integrity as a member of the cabinet, and rather than compromise his associates by the controversy he tendered his resignation and began libel suits against his detractors. Feeling ran high over the affair and it is probably due to this that the fatality occurred. Mr. Hoshi leaves a wife and one son, the latter nine years old. He was 48 years of age, and beside his prominence in politics was a student and a man of literary accomplishments.

HOSHI TORU.

MEETS A TRAGIC DEATH.

Adelbert S. Hay, Son of Secretary of State, Accidentally Falls from a Window at New Haven, Conn.

New Haven, Conn., June 24.—Adelbert Stone Hay, former consul of the United States at Pretoria, South Africa, and eldest son of Secretary of State John Hay, fell from a window in the third story of the New Haven house in this city shortly before 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning and was instantly killed. The dead man was a graduate of Yale, of the class of '98, and his death occurred on the eve of the university commencement, which brought him here Saturday, and in which, by virtue of his class office, the young man would have been one of the leaders. The terrible tragedy has cast a gloom over the whole city and will undoubtedly be felt throughout the day, which heretofore has been so brilliant and full of happiness for Yale and her sons.

The full details of the terrible accident will never be known. Mr. Hay had rooms at the New Haven house for commencement week. It is generally supposed, however, that after going to his room he went to the window for air, and, sitting on the sill, he dozed off, and, overbalancing, fell to the pavement below, a fall of fully 60 feet. The

Mr. Hay was appointed consul to Pretoria to succeed Consul Macrum December 4, 1899. It was charged that Macrum had shown undue favors to the Boers. As the representative of the United States Consul Hay had charge of the interests of British subjects in the Transvaal and was several times the medium of communication between the contending forces.

Mrs. McKinley Improves.

Washington June 25.—For the first time since she was brought home from California in a very feeble condition, Mrs. McKinley Monday was able to go downstairs and join the president while the latter was at luncheon. She remained at the table for some little time and then returned to her room, having enjoyed the break in the daily routine of life for the past month. Apparently she was not fatigued by the extra exertion. Mrs. McKinley's general condition continues favorable and Dr. Rixey said she was improving steadily.

Gold Output.

New York, June 22.—The Engineering and Mining Journal publishes complete estimates of the gold output in the United States and in the world at large last year. The figures, $118,435,562 for the United States and $255,924,654 for the world at large, comparing with $99,518,712 and $311,505,947 in 1899, do not differ materially from the estimates of several months ago.

THOUSANDS OF MILES AWAY.

After the model of the Rowton houses in London, Milan will soon have an Albergo popolare, with room for 450 men. It will have electric lights, baths, clean linen, reading-room, etc., and the cost will be only ten cents a day per person.

AMBROSE M'KAY'S CASE.

Rockbridge, Mo., June 24th:—The neighborhood and particularly the members of Rockbridge Lodge, No. 435, A. F. & A. M., are feeling very much pleased over the recovery of Mr. Ambrose McKay, a prominent citizen and an honored member of the Masonic Fraternity.

Mr. McKay had been suffering for years with Diabetes and Rheumatism, which recently threatened to end his days. His limbs were so filled with pain that he could not sleep. He was very bad.

Just then, someone suggested a new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—which has been much advertised recently, as a cure for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

After Mr. McKay had used a few doses, he commenced to improve. His pain all left him, and he is almost as well as ever. He says Dodd's Kidney Pills are worth much more than they cost. They are certainly getting a great reputation in Missouri, and many very startling cures are being reported.

To the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

The most popular railway from the Northwest to the great show at Buffalo will be the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

It runs, every day, five beautiful trains from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago, connecting directly with all Eastern lines.

Its celebrated Pioneer Limited (the famous train of the world) leaves Minneapolis 7:30 p.m. and St. Paul 8:10 p.m. daily, arriving Chicago 9:30 next morning.

Special features of the "Milwaukee's" service are the observation, buffet parlor cars on day trains, private compartment and standard sleepers on night trains, as well as buffet smoking cars and the best dining service in the world.

Tickets at cheap rates will be on sale every day at all points on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y to Buffalo and return, and the maximum comfort can be obtained by using this line.

Write to J. T. Conley, Ass't Gen'l Passgr. Agent, St. Paul, for the "Milwaukee's" Pan-American folder (one of the completest and most comprehensive guides yet published of the exposition) and all information concerning rates, etc.

He Stopped His Paper.

"Sir!" exclaimed the oldest citizen, as he walked into the business office of the daily paper, "I see in your sheet of to-day, sir, an article to which I take exceptions, and I want my paper stopped, sir! And when James F. Anderson says stop, sir, he means stop, sir!"

"Phil," wearily murmured the circulation manager, "go out and tell Bobt' stop th' press an' lock up; ol' man Anderson has quit us!"—Denver Times.

The Saucer's the Thing.

"Mustache cups?" said the clerk in the chinaware department. "Yes, sir. Here's a pretty design. Cup and saucer, one forty-nine."

"But," said Mr. Porquepacque, "that ain't the saucer that goes with it."

"O! yes."

"Not much it ain't. There ain't no mustache guard on it."—Philadelphia Press.

Both Murder and Suicide.

The after-dinner speaking mania at medical banquets is at its height. What a pity it is that men who have nothing to say, and who do not wish to say it, are compelled to say it to men who do not wish to hear it. —American Medicine.

Horrible Combination.

"What a saving of time and other things there would be," remarked the Observer of Events and Things, "if a man could take his first ocean voyage and his first smoke at the same time."—Yonkers Statesman.

Perils of the Poles.

Three expeditions are trying to locate the south pole, and six are after the one at the other end of the world. This means nine new faces on the lecture platform next year.—Baltimore American.

HER FOURTH.

HE rose in the morning, good Dame July,
And looked at the clock with a smile and a sigh,
As she stood in her spotless gown.
"He never was known to be late," she said;
"It surely is time he was out of his bed.
I hope he is hearty and well, the dear!
Such a beautiful nap he has had! A year
Is none too long for him. Hark! What's that?"
She gave her ribbons a hasty pat,
And smoothed her apron down.

A thump, a bang, on the floor above.
"He's up!" she cried, with a look of love.
A bang and a thump—and then
Down over the stairs with a bound he came,
And shouted, and hugged the dear old dame
Till her cap fell off and her breath was gone.
He called for his drum and he called for his horn,
He danced and whistled and laughed and sung,
And raised such a breeze that the flags he flung
From the windows flapped again.

"It's only my Fourth!" good Dame July,
To the wondering neighbors that hurried by,
With motherly pride explained;
"He is just a little bit noisy and wild,
I must confess; but the dearest child!
My others are all of them gentle and mild,
But children differ—it's always so—
And boys will be boys, of course, you know!"
And down on her motherly knees she went,
And helped him to fire off his gun, content,
Though her fingers were burned and her apron rent,
And her ribbons all spotted and stained.

It was early dawn when his fun began;
From garret to cellar he romped and ran
Through the neat little, sweet little house.
He strewed the parlor with tangle of toys,
The walls reechoed with riot and noise;
He broke her china and rumpled her hair,
And wore all her pretty new carpets bare;
And the sun went down, and the stars came out
To see what the racket was all about;
And at twelve o' the clock with a final shout
He frightened the midnight mouse.

"The dearest child!" said Dame July,
And she looked at the clock with a heartfelt sigh,
As she righted her cap with care.
"I hope he has had a good time, the dear,
And—will stay asleep for at least a year!
The sweetest children sometimes, I find,
Are a trifle wearing to the body and mind.
For boys will be boys, and I'm rather glad
My Fourth was the—only—boy—I—had!"
And sleepily nodding her dear old head,
"I guess I had better be going to bed—
I'm a little bit tired—myself!" she said,
And went to sleep in her chair!

FOURTH OF JULY FRESH AIR FUND

BY JOSEPHINE VAN TASSEL

THERE were two schoolhouses in the Fifth ward. One for the Kindergarten and the Primary and the two lowest classes in the Grammar. The other for the seven higher classes. Miss Swinton was the principal of the lower school and Mr. Sutphen the principal of the higher. Two such popular teachers had never been known in Abington, strict and firm yet gentle and kind, popular with everyone and universally respected. Miss Swinton always had an adoring circle of girls, yes, and boys, too, around her at recess-time. To-day there was more than the usual crowd—but they stood a little way back, and only the Thompson twins leaned on her chair, one on each side of her, and fingered her chain and rings and looked up adoringly into the kind brown eyes.

"Dear Miss Swinton, was that story you told us yesterday all true, every bit of it?" asked Dottie.

"And is the little girl going to die if she can't get away by the salt water?" cried Tottie.

"And did her father die down in Cuba?"

"And did her mother go out to nurse her father and catch the fever and die, too?"

"And is her auntie sick and lame so she can't work for money, but only get a home and clothes for working for that stingy old Barker?"

"Sh! Sh! Dottie—you mustn't"—began Miss Swinton, but Dottie hurried out her question so quickly she had no time to say any more.

"And is her uncle 'way up in the Klondike, and—and—"

Then both chimed in together:

"And is he all the relation she's got, and don't they know where he is—and will she die—certain sure—before they could possibly find him?"

Miss Swinton had been bobbing her head in answer to all these questions so fast that she looked a good deal like a Chinese mandarin—and now when the twins stopped to take breath she answered:

"Yes, yes, my dears, it is all true, every bit of it. Dear little Sallie Manson is so very, very weak that the doctor says she can never get well unless she can get away for a month at least to the seashore and have good, nourishing, wholesome food, and her poor aunt is almost distracted, for though the hospital people will find her a home for a week or perhaps two, there would be no one to take care of her, and two weeks would not be long enough."

Then the twins straightened up and walked away without even stopping to beg for a kiss, and every one of Miss Swinton's admirers followed them, and Miss Swinton sat there looking after them with a queer little half-puzzled smile.

"I wonder what bee those children have got in their bonnets now," she said to herself.

Meanwhile Dottie and Tottie, as everybody called them, though their real names were Sarah Josephine and Amelia Ann, walked straight down to the playground, and all the primary scholars followed them, and they found all the big girls and kindergarten tots waiting for them in the shade under the big elm.

"What did she say?" cried the biggest girl.

"Is it all true—every bit?" anxiously asked the very littlest one.

The twins nodded solemnly and Dottie cried:

"And I most know that lovely Miss Swinton is going to give up her vacation and spend the money for that poor sick Sallie—and she didn't ought to, 'cos she's all run down anyway, my mother says; and first thing she knows she'll be sick herself," and Dottie looked mournfully 'round on her companions and gave a pathetic little sniff.

"And whatever should we do if Miss Swinton d-i-e-d," dolefully mourned Tottie.

By this time all the Kindergarten tots and more than half of the Primaries were in tears, and the rest were sniffling, and even the big girls looked red-eyed and mournful.

"And my mamma said that Fourth of July would be here day after to-morrow, and I'd have some money then—all my own—and I asked her if I might and she said: 'Yes.'"

"Might what?"

"What did you ask her?"

"How much money will you have?"

"What did she say?"

"Is it all your own?"

Dottie looked around with the approving self-conscious smile that comes from superior virtue, and Tottie answered for her sister:

"Of course it's all our own and mamma said yes—we might give it to Sallie Manson—and I said I was going to ask everybody to give theirs too, and then maybe Miss Swinton wouldn't have to stay at home and d-i-e."

Dottie nodded solemnly and looked eagerly around.

"It's the Fourth of July money," she said, explanatorily. "The money we'd spend for firecrackers and torpedoes and lemonade and going to Boston to see the balloon—"

"And the soldiers," chimed in Tottie.

"And the fireworks," finished Dottie. "Mamma says it's always half a dollar apiece, and most always more, and she'll give us that, anyway, and papa says maybe he'll chip in, too."

"Do you mean you're going to give up your firecrackers and torpedoes for the Fourth?" asked a big boy, incredulously. "Huh, you would be a fool!"

Dottie turned on him.

"Yes, I am," she snapped. "Guess I'd rather never, never see a firecracker again than to have my dear Miss Swinton d-i-e-e," and the blazing blue eyes filled with tears at the mere thought.

"Or poor little Sallie Manson, either," snapped Tottie.

"Don't mind him, dear," cried Aggie Davis, the prettiest of the big girls. "Boys are mean things anyway. They couldn't be self-sacrificing if they tried. We girls will all help you, Dottie. We can give up things that we like better than boys like firecrackers, and I'm going to ask mamma to take back that lovely blue sunshade she bought me yesterday—I guess Mr. Black will give her back the money when he knows what I want it for."

"Oh, how lovely of you!"

"Isn't that beautiful of her?" the girls chorused admiringly, and Tommy Trott got red in the face and walked off over to the other corner of the yard, winking to the boys to follow him—and they did, even though there wasn't a bit of shade there and the big thermometer stood at 98 degrees.

"Shake hands, Tommy. I'll take it all back. Boys can be generous and self-sacrificing and smart too, Tommy." Then she laughed a little and Tommy twisted away, and with a shout of: "Come on, fellers!" ran down to the fence and jumped over it—three times—standing jump, and it was most as high as Tommy's head, too.

Nobody stopped to play on the way home that noon. Everybody ran just as fast as their legs could carry them—that is—everybody but the Thompson twins. They walked very slowly indeed, weighed down by the responsibility of taking care of all that money.

Miss Swinton, when she went to the window at five minutes past 12, wondering at the unusual silence, opened her eyes in astonishment. Not a boy or girl was in sight except the Thompson twins, and they were slowly and carefully turning the corner.

That afternoon when school opened Dottie and Tottie walked up to Miss Swinton's desk and carefully laid on it two open boxes. One was nearly full of pennies, five-cent bits, dimes, quarters and halves, and one big silver "cart-wheel." In the other reposed a leathern pouch from whose open mouth issued a perfect stream of varied coins.

"Yessum," said Dottie, in answer to an inquiring glance from her teacher. "They're from us—it's the money for our firecrackers—"

"And lemonade and ice cream," put in Tottie.

"And why do you bring it to me? Do you want me to buy them for you so you can celebrate here at school?"

"Oh, no!" please!" cried Dottie; "give it to Sallie Manson and then—"

"And then you can go away."

"And have a vacation—"

"And Sallie'll get well—"

"And you won't get tired out and d-i-e-e-e," finished the twins together, throwing four chubby arms round Miss Swinton's neck and bursting into tears, while they hugged her till they almost choked her to death.

When she could get her breath, Miss Swinton thanked them all in such simple, earnest words that even the littlest child understood how good and brave and kind she thought they were. Then she kissed all the girls and shook hands with all the boys—and a prouder, happier lot of children never danced and made merry in the town hall on any Fourth of July than the Thompson twins and their classmates.

To be sure, there weren't any fireworks or refreshments. But the happy face of Sallie's aunt, as she thanked them all for the chance of life they had given her little niece, was better than all the fireworks in the world; and when Mr. Sutphen made them a speech and told them how proud he was of the boys and girls of Ward Five, it filled their hearts so full that nobody thought of refreshments.

And did the big, big boys and girls in Mr. Sutphen's own school do anything to help?

Why, of course they did! You didn't suppose they would let the little ones get ahead of them in generosity, did you?

And between the two schools they raised a little over $200. So you see there was enough to let Miss Manson go with Sallie to take care of her, and when she came back in the fall, just before Thanksgiving, "stingy old Barker" told her aunt she might bring Sallie to stay with her until her uncle came back.

"'Tain't likely she'll eat enough to bankrupt me," he muttered. "Anyhow, I ain't goin' to let no passel of children git ahead of me."

In spite of the absence of fireworks, and lemonade, and ice cream, all the children—boys and girls too—agreed that they'd never had so jolly a Fourth of July before, but they changed their minds the next year.

What happened? Oh, you can guess, can't you? Well, I'll help you out a little. I'll just whisper two or three words in your ear—"Sallie's uncle—Klondike!"—Ladies' World, New York.

"THERE'S ALL OUR FOURTH OF JULY MONEY—IN A BUNCH."

DISOBEDIENCE.

"And I told Jimmie to stay in the yard!"

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Miraculous Escape.

Lightning played "Home, Sweet Home" with variations on the electric connections at the home of Louis L. Dunn, in Minneapolis. The front of the building was wrecked, and every carpet in the house ripped up. All electric wiring was burned out, and the bells fell to the floor, while the telephone box went up in smoke.

Forty people were in the house when it was struck, and that none of them were killed is miraculous. A recital was being given by Miss Anna O'Dowd, a sister of Mrs. Dunn. All of Miss O'Dowd's pupils had gathered for the occasion.

Mr. Dunn and Mr. Gleason attacked the conflagration with bed quilts, and subdued the flames in the lower part of the house. Then, proceeding to the attic, they had a hard fight, because the fire there had gained good headway. Fifteen minutes from the time the lightning struck all danger from fire was past.

The appearance of the house inside was chaotic. A checker board which lay on the floor among the children was shivered into splinters. The bolt seemed to have dodged between the occupants of the apartments to do its work.

Crop Bulletin.

There were rains nearly every day of the week. The rains came in very heavy showers, and generally accompanied by lightning and thunder. In Nobles, Murray and Redwood counties there were tornadic conditions on the morning of the 11th, with violent winds, covering small areas, and causing considerable loss to town and country buildings. In other parts of the southern half of the state there was hail at scattered points, which was very large in size, but fortunately in small amounts; but the only crop injury seems to have been in Big Stone county, where many corn fields were seriously injured. With seasonable temperatures and abundant moisture, all the small grains are doing splendidly; late sown flax and barley, and those seeded on spring plowed land, are coming up and growing nicely.

Grasshoppers.

Prof. E. B. Forbes has temporarily taken charge of the department of entomology at the state college of agriculture at St. Anthony Park, and is now at work in the Red River valley exterminating grasshoppers, having taken up the work where Prof. Lugger left it at his death. According to a letter received by Dean Liggett, of the agricultural college, from Prof. Forbes grasshoppers are infesting that part of the state in large numbers. The work of exterminating the pests with the famous "hopper dosers," the method used by Prof. Lugger, is being successfully carried out and will lessen the bad results this year. It is feared that unless all fields are carefully and thoroughly plowed this fall there will be great destruction of crops in the northwest next year.

Strange Drowning.

By the overturning of a boat in Snail lake, St. Paul, Thomas P. Cronin and Louisa Ellwanger were thrown into the water. Cronin started to swim to shore and asked the woman to cling to him, assuring her that they would be safe. Miss Ellwanger, however, clung to the boat and was later rescued by three boys. Cronin was caught in the mud and drowned. There was no part of the lake where the water was more than four feet deep. Cronin was an employe at the St. Paul Foundry and Machine Works.

Corner Stone Laid.

The laying of the cornerstone of the Norwegian seminary at St. Anthony Park was the occasion for an outpouring of the Norwegians of the Twin Cities. The delegates to the convention attended in force. When the cornerstone was laid fully 4,000 persons were on the seminary ground. Nearly all of the officers of the United Church were seated on the platform during the ceremonies, and the service was in charge of Rev. T. Tjornhom, of Fergus Falls.

Wound Up.

The affairs of the American Mining and investment company will be wound up by Albert H. Hall, who was appointed receiver by an order of Judge Pond, and who furnished a bond in the sum of $5,000 for the faithful performance of his duties. This company has occupied an elegant suite of rooms in Minneapolis for some time and was exploiting stock in the Kettle Curlew and other alleged gold mines in the northwest.

News in Brief.

The total enrollment in the Minneapolis schools the past year was 37,539, a gain of 1,373 over the figures for the previous year.

A 6-year-old son of Frank Meyer was drowned in the river at Hastings by falling from a skiff.

H. A. Winslow, one of the best known horsemen in the northwest, died in Minneapolis from an accidental overdose of morphine.

Mrs. Bertha Schilling was sentenced to 2½ years at Stillwater for the murder of Hazel Murphy in the Columbia theater brawl in Minneapolis.

The office force of the Oliver Mining company has been moved bodily from Pittsburg to Duluth.

For the fortnight ending June 17, 590 new cases of smallpox were reported to the state board of health. Secretary Bracken says that the disease is increasing, and this is due to lax methods in various districts.

The special election at Pine Island on the question of issuing bonds for waterworks and extension was voted down—75 to 47.

Bishop Cotter, of Winona, who has been sick at Rochester, is now out of danger.

J. J. Hill will erect a $50,000 residence in St. Paul, as a wedding present for his son Louis, who was recently married in New York.

The postoffice at Oakbury, Washington county, has been discontinued.

Minnesota's fish commissioners will ship bass fry to restock Maple Lake.

Fire caused a loss of $3,000 to Yerxa Bros.' grocery store in Minneapolis.

Ex-Senator Edward H. Ozmun, United States consul at Stuttgart, Germany, has been appointed aide-de-camp on the staff of Gov. Van Sant, with the rank of colonel.

The New Bicycle.

Bicycle manufacturers state that the bicycle for this year will be practically the same model as 1900, as improvement seems to be impossible. Precisely the same is true of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It represents the limits of science, and it is impossible to make a better medicine for the stomach, liver, kidneys and blood. Try it for dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, flatulency, or sour stomach, and you will be convinced. Never take a substitute.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S QUEUE.

It Hid a Luxuriant Suit of Straight and Very Dark Hair.

The Father of his Country concealed a luxuriant suit of hair beneath his queue wig. Many now wish the old fashion were in vogue, to conceal thinned hair or baldness. Yet no one need have thin hair nor be bald, if he cure the dandruff that causes both. Dandruff cannot be cured by scouring the scalp, because it is a germ disease, and the germ has to be killed. Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ—no other hair preparation will. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." There's no cure for dandruff but to kill the germ.

Cheap Round Trip Rate Between St. Paul, Minn., and the Pacific Coast.

On July 5th the Northern Pacific Railway will place in effect a low first-class round trip rate of $45.00 from eastern terminals to Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. Dates of sale at eastern terminals will be from July 6th to July 18th inclusive, and the final limit for return will be Aug. 31st, 1901. Destination must be reached not later than July 18th, stopovers being allowed IN EITHER DIRECTION within the transit limits.

This offers an unsurpassed opportunity for those desiring to hunt new homes and farms, to go into the northwest and look over the country, or for those wishing to visit relatives or friends or to make pleasure trips, to do so.

It is better to be sensible than to be "smart."—Wellspring.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician. She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

Paradoxical.

This is the way he wrote to her:

"Molly: I has not had a line from you in three weeks. Has you throwed me over?"

And this is the way she answered him:

"John: Hain't you hearn tell that I am on a sick bed, where I am slowly a-dyin', an' can't write a line to save my life, you fool, you?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He thinks he lives, but he's a dead one. No person is really alive whose liver is dead. During the winter most people spend nearly all their time in warm, stuffy houses or offices or workshops. Many don't get as much exercise as they ought, and everybody knows that people gain weight in winter. As a rule it is not sound weight, but means a lot of flabby fat and useless, rotting matter staying in the body when it ought to have been driven out. But the liver was overburdened, deadened—stopped work. There you are, with a dead liver, and right now is the time for resurrection. Wake up the dead! Get all the filth out of your system, and get ready for the summer's trials with clean, clear blood, body, brain free from bile. Force is dangerous and destructive unless used in a gentle persuasive way, and the right plan is to give new strength to the muscular walls of the bowels, and stir up the liver to new life and work with CASCARETS, the great spring cleaner, disinfectant and bowel tonic. DELANO, FRIDAY, June 28, 1901.

DELANO DIARY

Subscribe for the GAZETTE, $1.00.

--July 4th comes on Thursday next week. Delano is to celebrate.

--A heavy rain fell last night. No one is complaining that there is not rain enough now.

--A class of 24 is to receive their first holy communion at the Catholic church, June 29.

—Charles Graves, of Long Lake, a veteran of the Rebellion, died suddenly Wednesday.

—Rev. Savs is figuring on his usual summer outing. He has labored hard this season and needs a rest.

—The price of flour is down in Delano, to a dollar a half sack. Competition is the life of trade.

—I. Gutzwiller has the foundation laid and is moving his barn on the Brasie property on Third strhet.

—Binders and twine are going into the country daily now, getting ready to harvest the fine stand of grain.

—George F. Walker, formerly miller at Delano, was sunstruck in Minneapolis yesterday and died at his home.

—Farmers are getting up lots of fine hay between showers. There has been considerable mowed away this week.

--For alleged attempted assault Sumner Cooper 17 years of age has been sentenced to the Reform School until 21.

—Prof. S. A. Farnsworth has rock hauled and is preparing to lay foundation and enlarge his N. Third street residence.

—The few past hot days and nights have been just the thing for corn. The fields never looked better so early in the season.

—Neighbor H. C. Parslow brought us Saturday, one of the finest bouquets of roses we ever had. Those American beauties are splendid.

—The jury found John Renswick guilty of the charge of subornation of perjury. We understand he will appeal the case to the Supreme Court.

—Our village authorties might afford to haul the grader over the streets once during the summer. It would level up many places that need leveling.

—The Skylarks, Delano's 15 year old team, went to Waverly Sunday and were defeated by a score of 9 to 11. They will have to brace up if they wish to emulate the old Cricketts.

—Rev Berry, of Minneapolis, preached at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning. Rev. Hixon, of Minneapolis, held Episcopal services in the evening. He administered the ordinance of baptism to three adults.

—People should be extremely careful of themselves and of their teams during such hot days as we have had this week. A good many cases of overheating and some deaths are reported throughout the country.

—The few hot nights we have been having drove people to spend many hours outside their houses, where they could catch a breeze. A few mosquitoes and flies have made their appearance, and help keep people awake.

—The platt book of Wright county, canvassed for a few months ago by Frank Gorman has been published by the North West Publishing Co. It is neatly gotten up and will be useful on many occasion. Mr. Pinkney, of Minneapolis, delivered to the Delano subscribers yesterday.

—A band of Russian gypsies struck town last Tuesday afternoon and proceeded to tell fortunes good or bad according to the size of the coin given them. A couple instances of "want my money back" were reported. People will bite; and the flimsier the bate the bigger the bite.

—A drove of young western horses has been here most of the week for sale. The men in charge, so far as we have seen, have been far more humane than any of their predecessors in the business that have visited Delano. They can handle a horse without ruining him, or bruising him all up.

—Ernest Swartz, son of Frank Swartz, a former Delanoite, is base drummer of the band that is to play here the 4th. His father used to belong to the famous Delano band and pounded the base drum in an early part of Delano's history, at a time when Delano didn't have to go away from home to get music. With all the musical ability to waste here it seems as if Delano might have a brass band now if anybody tried very hard to have one.

—The Minneapolis Greys came up last Sunday and tried to play ball with the Miller's. Only four and a half innings were played when the game was called on account of rain, with the score 11 to 0 in favor of Delano. The day seemed to be a bad one for Minneapolis teams all around this part of the country: The Black Diamonds only scored 3 tallies while the Watertown Stars were piling up 27, and the Javas were beaten at Long Lake by a score of 2 to 18.

—We have been requested to mention the fact that the "linen shower" for the first baby of the century born in Delano, has not been forgotten, and that it has not been given up, but only postponed for a season. It is to take place in the near future, and promises to be a swell affair. Some people forget or neglect to notify the Health Officer of births in their family. Of course such can't be expected to receive the attention of the ladies. The records are to go by.

—The Delano Millers will go to Litchfield tomorrow morning to play the ball club of that town. A hard game is expected.

—The pupils of the St. Peter's school gave their entertainment last Wednesday night to a fair sized audience. Notwithstanding the extremely hot weather the parts were well performed and those in attendance much pleased.

—William Stanley, living adjoining Delano, handed us figures concerning his dairy business as follows, for the year beginning June 1, 1900 and ending June 1, 1901:

Number of cows grades 4.
Pounds of milk for year 22,868.
Test of milk 4 2 to 4.4.
Money for year's milk $192.85.

This makes a pretty good showing for cows after taking out the milk used by a family of three, $48.21 per head, besides the calves.

—Thomas Shaw, on Thursday, had some samples of the effect of hail on wheat, pie plant and thistles at Maple Grove, Hennepin county, a few days ago. The wheat straw was all that remained, the wheat had been threshed; the pie plant stalks looked as if a calf had chewed them up. It is claimed that rabbits could be picked up in plenty over the fields after the storm. The crops in that vicinity looked well a few days ago; now some fields are being plowed up for planting fodder corn.

—Farmers ought to get their hay out of the way before harvest as much as possible, and they should harvest their small grain a day before they think it is fit rather than a day afterwards. How many a fine field of wheat, oats or rye has been hard to gather and that with a big loss after a rain and little wind had tangeled it up, when it should have been in shock instead of standing in the field. Farmers as a rule in the woods don't cut their grain soon enough. On the prairies where they have so much, they begin earlier and have found that early cut grain ripens after it is cut, considerably.

THE SAME OLD THING.

A scent of orange blossoms fills the fragrant breath of June,
And Cupid's putting up a sign; "My ousy day!"
For, bless you, the wedding bells will be a-ringing pretty soon,
And young fond hearts be throbbing in the sweet old way.
The same old guests all "prominent in swell society,"
Will flutter into church like human butterflies,
And crane their necks all out of shape, and twist around to see
A BRIDE WHO'S TALL AND STATELY AND a groom this size.

Dr. O'Connor moved into his new house yesterday.

County Cullings.

Gov. Van Sant said in his Buffalo speech: What we want is patriotism. We need patriotism more than we need protective tariff; more than we need free trade. We need it more than we need gold—standard or free trade.

Judge Giddings, in his talk to the Old Settler's Association took occasion to say that he didn't see why the boys forsook the fine farms of Wright county for life in the cities or towns. Of course the Judge grew up among the sand banks of Anoka county. If such farms as they have over there can produce so good a Judge, there's no telling of the possibilities of fertile Wright county farms.

Attempted to Poison the Family.

Last Sunday morning Mr. Leyi Cochran at Smith Lake discovered that parisgreen had been strewn over a lettuce patch in his garden. This seems to have been done some time during the night, and the miscreant, who ever he was had evidently been to anxious to see that enough was put on so as to prove effective, and had not taken the time, or did not see to distribute it evenly and consequently the discovery was made by Mr. Cochran as he came out to the patch to take up some lettuce.

Mr. Cochran has many friends and few enemies—as all men have—but did not think that any of those few enemies would be inquitous enough to try to take his and his whole family's life.--Cokato Enterprise.

Tuesday at the County Seat.

Tuesday was a big day at Buffalo. Old settlers turned out to attend the annual meeting of the Wright County Old Settler's Association. They came from all parts of the county, and some from outside the county, Gov. Van Sant getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning in Winona, and riding on the cars until about noon, to be present. The people took a picnic dinner in the Court House grounds. After dinner, President Geo. W. Florida called the meeting to order. The Annandale band played a piece; the Annandale quartette gave a song. Gov. Van Sant was then introduced to the audience, and standing up in a buggy, delivered the address of the day. He waxed eloquent when he touched on old settlers, old soldiers, or patriotism. He believed in all of them. He believes that every man, white or black, should be free when under the American flag, that our agreement with Cuba should be carried out, that the volunteer soldier is the protection of this country. His speech was attentively listened to by the large audience, most of his hearers standing the entire time of its delivery. Judge Giddings, of Anoka, made a short speech; the Buffalo choir rendered a song. Mrs. Nellie Darrow, and Mrs. Dr. Scheig gave recitations.

The election of officers resulted in the selection of President, D. R. Farnham; Secretary, James Sturgis; Treasurer, M. F. Powers; Chairman of Executive Committee, B. F. Lamson, he to select his associates on the committee.

The usual collection was taken, Mr. Drake, "That old Blacksmith of Monticello" contributing one of the largest pieces of silver in the hat.

After other exercises were over, the people, many of them, went over to the new park, where Buffalo and Wayerly played the first game on the new grounds. Buffalo won by score of 15 to 16.

Eagle on Third Term.

"The President shows his characteristic frankness in his recent announcement about a third term. No one will question that he is right, as no one will question the fact that if any man should have a third term, it should be William McKinley."—Eagle.

The Old Bird apparently couldn't give her song without ending up with the third term possibility. Had she stopped when she should it wouldn't look so bad But to prolong her screech with "as no one will question the fact that if any man should have a third term, it should be William McKinley", is showing the true inwardness of the Old Bird. She don't seem to forget her bringing up; though her two heads came from different countries, and one of them a country where freedom rings from mountain heights; the tail feathers which trail so badly in the rear of the prolonged third term duet;

Aw! For a third term;
Want Democrats squirm?
Says Chauncey M. Depew,
Editor Buckley too.

seems to have sprung from the pin feathers of head No. 2.

Want patriots squirm? Want every true friend of a republic squirm? Want the voters of the United States bury every man that intimates the base stretch of authority toward anything indicating or hinting at the possibilty of a kingdom, beneath a pile of ballots, wherever opportunity may offer, so deep that he will never get even a first term for dog catcher or any other office of trust and honor in this country? The possibility of McKinley or any other man being worthy of a "third term"! It is truly unAmerican. Banish the thought from your old country pate and be an American and with Americans stand, and sing, crow, shout, or screech if you must, but never for a third term of one man for president.

Among Our Exchanges.

Broad Axe: Wall street would much rather see a democrat elected presidens in 1904 -provided it has the privilege of saying what democrat it should be.

Broad Axe: At the root, there is just one question in politics and that is, "Shall the man who labors be compelled to support the man who is idle from choice?"

Broad Axe: When the democratic party has been reorganized to suit the men who bolted Bryan in 1896 and 1900, you will need a magnifying glass to find a democratic party in Minnesota.

Duluth Herald: The pension shark attorneys are still clamoring for the retirement of Commissioner H. Clay Evans. But President McKinley has so far resisted their appeal and is standing by the commissioner who is performing his duties faithfully.

Star News: The trusts and ultra protectionists are overplaying the game in abusing Congressman Babcock for his sensible views regarding a revision of the tariff. The people are with the Babcock idea and "the people" are a hard crowd to run up against when thoroughly aroused.

Litchfield News Ledger: What a job of jollying up of the county newspaper men Gov. VanSant has on his hands this week. The question is will he be able to fill them so full of enthusiasm as to forget that they were the biggest toads in the puddle just before election, and fell entirely out of sight about fifteen minutes after the vote was announced. Let's see, there was a man named Lincoln who said something about fooling people, that might be applicable in this case.

Elk River Star News: At the Alumni reception recently a lesson was given to persons no better bred than to carry on conversation during a musical programme, when the performers of an instrumental number walked off the stage and refused to try longer to compete with the noise in the back part of the hall. Anyone who has been asked to perform in public in any capacity, should always be given respectful attention, as the opposite is a direct insult to the performer.

World: That the British Parliament should by a vote of 253 to 134 sustain the reconcentrado policy—that is, the policy of making war upon women and children—is melancholy enough. That they should sustain it in face of figures showing an enormous death rate among the old men and the women and a plague death rate among the children is giving the lie to all British pretensions to humane feelings. The British are murdering in South Africa and cannot call it war.

LeSueur Sentinel: Russia has at last discovered the way to get even with the United States for her outrageous, prohibitive tariff. So long as we are not exporting, it mattered little what the tariff was laid at or how prohibitive it became, to the manufacturer. He never ceased howling for a higher rate. Now that we are exporting and must have foreign markets or get out of business, it is a different story. Tariff reformers need not exert themselves any longer. The situation will relieve itself. The loudest protectionists will now clamor loudest for lower rates. The example of Russia, in retaliating upon us by laying prohibitive duties on American goods, will be followed by other nations.

The Medico Legal Journal notes a marked increase in the substitution of cremation for burial. Up to 1889 there had been only 519 incinerations in the United States, but in the ten years succeeding there were 7,805 and the record shows a constant increase. Medical men give the practice their approval, as cemeteries are sometimes a menace to the health of the neighborhoods in which they are situated, but a physician writing to the journal above mentioned suggests the need of stricter regulation of cremation. Reduction of the body to ashes destroys all evidence of poison and affords a convenient method of covering up a murder. The writer suggests and with reason, that legal regulations should hedge about the practice of cremation to the end that examinations may be made in all cases of suspected poisoning before it is forever too late.

Times: Recent medical statistics show that for every 655 persons in the United States there is one registered physician. This is not an allotment which promises a yast income to a physician, but he would not starve upon it, providing all the 655 persons were still believers in the orthodox methods of physical healing. This is only an average estimate, however. Minnesota doctors are twice as well off nearly, as the average doctor, for this state gives 1,094 people to each physician. Possibly this is due to the fact that Minnesota has such a climatic reputation for health that it doesn't pay to bank on ailments here. This theory should extend to California, then, but it does not for California has but 416 inhabitants to every one of its doctors.

Late Literary News.

What to do with one's summer vacation is a perrenial question. Most people have neither the money nor the wish to go to an expensive, overcrowded seaside or mountain resort, and yet every man needs a few days devoted to pleasure and a complete rest at least once a year. The Cosmopolitan for July gives a solution of the problem in a well written, illustrated article, "A Houseboat -The Modern Palace." Undoubtedly a house boat offers a cheap and comfortable vacation, and the ranks of its devotees are constantly swelling.

"Tarry Thou Till I Come".

"The Wandering Jew" is having a wonderful revival in literature lately. The first book in this fascinating field was "Salathiel," by George Croly, Christ's words to whom, "Tarry thou till I come," spoken beneath the weight of the cross to the scoffing Pharisee, sets the Jew wandering. Most notable followers of this story were Eugene Sue's masterpiece, and "The Prince of India," by the author of "Ben Hur." General Wallace himself praises Croly's "Salathiel" as one of the six greatest English novels ever written. One New York publisher has lately issued an illustrated edition at $1 40 net. Now comes John B. Alden, so well known as the pioneer in cheap book publishing, with an excellent addition at 25 cents; even this, with a view to widely extending the knowledge of his publications, he offers to mail postpaid to the readers of the BUFFALO GAZETTE for the nominal price of 12c, if they will order at once, and mention the paper. Doubtless, many will accept his offer. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 442 Pearl St., New York.

Turning the Joke.

From the Evening Wisconsin.

A story is told of a certain prominent railway director who is equally renowned for his ability to make or take a joke. An employe, whose home is in the country, applied to him for a pass to visit his family.

"You are in the employ of the company?" inquired the gentleman alluded to.

"Yes."

"You receive your pay regularly?"

"Yes."

"Well, now, supposing you were working for a farmer instead of the company, would you expect your employer to take out his horses every Saturday night and carry you home?"

This seemed a poser, but it wasn't.

"No," said the man, promptly, "I would not expect that; but if the farmer had his horses out and was going my way, I should call him a very mean fellow if he would not let me ride."

The employe came out three minutes after with a pass good for twelve months.

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

NOTHING IS GAINED WITHOUT GRIT.

There's nothing that's gained without grit—
Remember that always, my lad—
Ambition will solemnly sit,
And energy, mayhap, go mad.
Unless grit will push them along
To the goal where success reigns supreme
Your life's but a somnolent song,
Your struggle a wearisome dream.
Ah, then, if the nail you would hit,
Be sure that you do it with grit;
For, until you do,
You will find it quite true
That nothing is gained without grit,
My lad—
That nothing is gained without grit

You struggle until you are old,
Then say, with a sigh, "Nothing won,
Oh, why didn't some one take hold
And drive me till something was done?"
Why didn't you know how to grasp
The value of each flitting day,
And not let old Idleness clasp
You tight in his meshes, and say:
"Ah, lad, you can't win on your wit,
It takes lots of courage and grit—
You may conquer a place
Near the first in the race—
But nothing is gained without grit,
My lad—
No, nothing is gained with grit."

ROBERT GRAY in Success.

THE new law abolishing the use of stamps on money orders, bank checks, ect went into effect July 1.

THE Seventh National Bank, of New York, went to the wall on Thursday. On Saturday, The City National Bank, of Buffalo, went into a receivers hands.

NEBRASKANS are rejoicing that the rain fell Monday and saved their crops. It was getting terribly dry, and they had almost given up hopes. But now they are looking for one of the biggest crops of corn the state ever had.

FOUR regiments, four thousand troops, volunteers whose terms had expired were mustered out of service at the Presidio, Cal., Sunday. Gen. Shafter retired from active duty; Gen. S. M. B. Young, taking his place. Three regiments more mustered out on Monday finishes the U. S. volunteer force.

SENATOR JAMES H. KYLE died at his home, Aberdeen, S D., Monday, June 1. He had been sick but a short time, and it was thought he would recover but on Sunday his case turned for the worse. He leaves a wife, a son, and a daughter.

He was independent in politics. His term in the U. S. Senate would have expired, March 1903.

PHILIP P. WINSTON, of Minneapolis, died suddenly on Monday at the Augustana hospital in Chicago. In company with his brother he left Minneapolis Sunday on a business trip, apparently in his usual good health. It is thought the extreme heat had a depressing effect on him.

He was born in Virginia in 1843; was a lieutenant in the confederate army, a farmer, afterwards coming to Minneapolis where he engaged in railroad construction with his brothers.

He married a daughter of the late Col. John H. Stevens, who with a son and daughter survive him.

He was a prominent Democrat, once Mayor of Minneapolis, a member of the Legislature and Treastrer of the Democratic State Central Committee.

THE Old Bird up street has been growling against Capt. Van Sant, some time. And he's our republican governor. This week she turns loose on Moses E. Clapp; and he's our republican Senator. She don't like their appointments. She claims the man recommended by Senator Clapp as consular agent to Holland is a "free silverite". What ails the Old Bird anyway? Why is she letting out such copperhead, and traitorous screeches against the government? After all her blowing wouldn't it look as well for her to keep still and let the Governor and Senator select good men for positions of trust and honor; even if they are free silverites? Hasn't she told us for years "free silver is dead"? Why then keep stirring the carrion up? If that's Mr. Hodgeson's only failing in your eyes why don't you keep still? What is the use of your threatened "roar" anyway?

DEMOCRATS want a candidate for President in 1903 who is in sympathy with democratic doctrines, who believes the Declaration of Independence meant something; who believes that the Constitution of our country should be lived up to; who has been tried in the balance and not found wanting; who is a fearless leader; who is honest, upright, sober, consciencious, energetic, able, true, a good citizen of the United States. They are not, just now, worrying themselves much about what particular man shall head their ticket. But when the time has rolled round for the nomination, democrats, as if with one voice, will doubtless be able to select the man, and the votes of the people to elect him. We want no hothouse politician that has been cased up, and a little coloring stained onto the glass, here and there, to keep out the scarching rays of an awakened Democracy, for three or four years. Why as soon as he was planted out where the full rays of public opinion, long since formed, could get a fair chance at him he would wither and shrivel, and by the time the votes were cast he would learn that the people prefer proof of pride in principles; that the Democrats are not so anxious to electa president as to be inveigled into voting for a man opposed to their principles, but painted up for the occasion, and calling himself a Democrat. They don't want a man who can travel from the Empire state to the North Star state to make a speech and then dare not say what he believes on a live question of the day.

Democrats should be on guard. They should be sure that so far as lies in their power, every candidate and every delegate, chosen for any purpose, represent so far as possible, the principles of our country, be patriotic, honest, and reliable, and then we can't go far astray when it comes to choosing a candidate for president.

Let the Dispatch Answer.

The Pittsburg Dispatch is very much disturbed because the editor of The Commoner is "egotistic" enough to differ from the Supreme Court.

Why does the Dispatch single me out for condemnation? Why does it not criticise the four Supreme Judges who had the temerity to dissent from the majority? Why does it not castigate Justice Harlan for saying that the decision marks the beginning of an "era of legislative absolutism"?

If the editor of The Dispatch desires employment that will last during the heated term, let him try to answer the following questions: Is a constitution a good thing for the people of the United States? If he answers "No!" he attacks constitutional liberty. If he answers "Yes", then let him answer the second question,—why is a constitution good for the people of the United States but not good for the people of Porto Rico?

These two questions look easy, but he cannot answer them to his own satisfaction or to the satisfaction of his readers. Therefore, he will content himself with scolding those who refuse to accept the court's decision as binding upon a great political question. But those questions will have to be answered. —Commoner.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28, 1901.

Secretary Gage is chafing under the muzzle that has been put upon him by the administration, and some predict that it may result in his resignation. Since turning the matter over to the diplomatic branch of the government with the hope of reaching a satisfactory settlement of the tariff war with Russia, into which Secretary Gage's blundering construction of law plunged this country, Mr. McKinley informed Secretary Gage that he must cease talking for publication about the acts which led to the tariff war. This Mr. Gage is inclined to regard as a double reflection on his judgement, but whether he will take it seriously enough to resign is not yet apparent. Those best informed express the opinion that the interests which placed Mr. Gage in charge of the financial branch of the government will intervene, if necessary, to prevent his resigning, as they do not wish to take any chances with a new man.

The republican fight over the control of the Pension Bureau is growing sensational. Commissioner Evans this week made a statement -his first public resistance to the demand for his removal -that breathes defiance between the lines and may be considered a dare to Mr. McKinley to redeem the written promise of the Republican National Committee to Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, during the campaign last year, that evans would not be continued at the head of the Pension Bureau during this administration, if Mr. McKinley were reelected. Mr. Evans intimates that in addition to the desire of the pension sharks to control the work of the Pension Bureau there are republican politicians who wish a change because they have not been allowed to dictate in defiance of law appointments and promotions in the bureau. Taken all in all this statement of Mr. Evans would be "hot stuff" in much colder weather than that which Washington is now passing through, and his friends say he has unlimited ammunition for more of the same sort and that having become tired of being abused for doing his duty and standing between the government and a ring of pension looters, he will use it without regard to who is hit if the fight against him is kept up Democrats are playing the role of intgrested spectators in this fight. Gen Sickles, who used to be a democrat, and who is a leader on the anti Evans side, was a McKinley stumper both in 1896 and 1900, and "Corporal" Tanner, who seems to be second in command, is a republican who was summarily kicked out of the office of Pension Commissioner by the late Benjamin Harrison for doing the very thing that Evans is being fought for not doing.

The opinion is increasing among democrats that the republican talk about revising the tariff so as to hit trust controlled articles is nothing more than a vote making bluff. In many Congressional districts in the west and middle west there is a strong sentiment among the republican voters against trusts. It is to keep this vote from being lost to the party that the tariff revision talk was started, and it is expected that a considerable number of republican representatives from that section will make speeches during the coming session of congress in favor of taking the duty off trust controlled articles, not because they expect or really desire any legislation along that line, but because the speeches will make good campaign documents in next year's Congressional fight.

It seems that Secretary Gage's order imposing a countervailing duty on Italian sugar, on the suspicion that Italy was paying an export bounty on sugar. The Italian government has officially informed this government that it does not pay a bounty on sugar exported, just as Russia did. Matters of this sort are too important and far reaching in their effect to be determined upon without absolute knowledge of the facts

Within a few days-probably next week-the advisory headquarters of the Ohio republicans will be established in the Canton home of Mr McKinley, and the adviser in chief will be no less a personage than Mr. McKinley himself. Although there is no national issue involved in the Ohio campaign this year, unless the election of a legislature that will name Senator Foraker's successor can be considered such, Mr McKinley is very anxious that the republicans shall win, not that he would grieve to see Foraker lose his seat in the Senate, but because of its moral effect on the Congressional campaign of next year. As a shrewd politician he recognizes that unless the republicans can retain control of Congress many of his plans concerning the Philippines will be upset, as he has no idea that all those plans can be put into effect through legislation by the present Congress.

IN GLAD CONTENT.

The world, they say, is gettin' old an' weary as can be!
But write me down as sayin' it's good enough for me!
It's good enough with all its grief, its pleasure, an' its pain;
An' there's a ray of sunshine for every drop o' rain!

They stumble in the lonesome dark, they cry for light to see;
But write me down as sayin' it's light enough for me!
It's light enough to lead us on from where we faint an' fall,
An' the hilltop nearest heaven wears the brightest crown o' all!

They talk about the fadin' hopes that mock the years to be;
But write me down as sayin' there's hope enough for me!
Over the old world's wailin' the sweeter music swells;
In the stormiest night I listen an' hear the bells—the bells!

This world o' God's is brighter than we ever dream or know;
Its burdens growin' lighter—an' it's Love that makes 'em so!
An' I'm thankful that I'm livin' where Love's blessedness I see,
'Neath a heaven that's forgivin', where the bells ring "Home" to me!

THE DESIRE OF HER HEART

By C. Wynne.

THE road from Burnthwaite to the nearest town was long and winding, and on hot days there was very little shade for some way. It was a sunny July afternoon when I propped my bicycle against the bank and leaned back luxuriously in the shadow of the pine trees, under the nodding foxgloves. I could catch glimpses of the distant blue mountains and the lake sparkling in the sunshine, and it was not easy to start again along the hot, dusty road.

For the moment I almost decided not to go on to the few cottages by the roadside where some of my old people lived.

I was just beginning to feel ashamed of myself, and trying to shake off my laziness, when looking down the road my eyes rested on a most extraordinary object.

Was it a reaping machine running away with a bath chair? Or some terrible instrument of torture, being conveyed to the museum in the town? Or just a mangled heap of tricycles being towed slowly home?

I gazed and gazed till my eyes were dazzled, and still slowly, ponderously, the strange object advanced, hidden now and then by a cloud of dust or a sharp turn in the road.

It reached my shady spot at last, and I could see that it was an ancient tricycle of marvelous construction, to which was attached a still more ancient bath chair. An old man worked the tricycle, the perspiration pouring down his face, while his wife sat in the chair with a look of awed delight on her face.

They did not look around them, but gazed steadfastly in front as they advanced slowly up the hill.

When they had disappeared in the distance I tried hard to recall where I had seen the two quaint old people, and it then flashed into my mind that they lived in one of a group of cottages in a lane leading from the main road

I had missed my way one day, and stopped to ask for a drink of water at their cottage.

Sezing my bicycle, I determined to follow this old couple, and learn the history of their wonderful machine.

They were sitting in the little kitchen when I arrived, the old man tenderly watching his invalid wife in anxiety lest the ride should have been too much for her.

The walls of the room were covered with clocks of all descriptions, but most of them had stopped, and some ticked feebly, as if wearing out with age like the old watchmaker who loved each of them so dearly.

A little expressed admiration of some of the quaint carved oak cases soon warmed the hearts of the two old people, and before long I was sitting by them listening to the story of their ancient tricycle.

"Anna canna' dae withoot fresh air, she pines and pines indooers, but she has nae poower to stan', and she maun bide liggin' (lying) or sittin' a' day long. But I'se a rash (strong) auld man, and I made a plan, and yan day I bought an auld tricycle, and fixed her chair on t' front, and noo she can gang oot every day."

The gentle old woman gazed with admiration at her "maister" and looked to me for sympathy. They both seemed overwhelmed with his cleverness and originality.

"An' a' the laadies an' gentlemen look at us on t' roaad as if she was t' queen herself oot ridin'."

I hardly wondered that "all the ladies and gentlemen" turned to gaze in amazement at the strange machine and its owners, but I could not say a word to mar their intense pride and delight in the precious tricycle, although I had a great fear that some day they would all come to grief together.

When we had fully discussed the subject of the tricycle, I asked if they would like me to come and read to them sometimes. Old Wolf's face clouded at once. "It's a lang time syne I'se oppened t' Buik, it's liggin' (lying) on t' parlor table with a floower pot on t' top!" he said, bitterly.

"Aye, Jawseph," his wife said, gently, "it wad dae me guid tae hear a bit o' t' Buik yance mair."

"Weel, Anna, if thoo wants thoo shall," her husband said, more gently. While he fetched it his wife told me a pitiful story. "Jawseph did gang regular tae t' chapel two year syne; but yan day ther coom a minister wha' praiched that t' Bible were not a' the Word o' God, and Jawseph he's sair hot-tempered, and he went oop after an' taud t' man he were a liar—he were that mad. They toorned him oot o' t' chapel, an' he hasna' been syne. He thinks God will ne'er forgie him for speakin' sae tae His minister."

I said nothing just then; I think I felt too sympathetic with Wolf and angry with the conceited young preacher who tried to upset the simple faith of these people. I read a few verses for the old woman, and ended with a passage in Hosea: "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely," and as I closed the family Bible I saw the great tears falling down the man's cheek and spashing on the table. "Wull, He tak' me back, dae ye think?" he asked, brokenly.

"Mr. Woolf, He says the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin," I answered.

There was a long silence, while the clocks ticked steadily on and on, and at last the old man laid his head on his arms and cried: "Lord, I'se been a sinfu' an' rebellious man, but wilt Thoo take me back for the sake of Jesus? Amen."

The sun was setting when I left the little cottage. As I looked through the lattice window the watchmaker was kneeling by his wife's chair, sobbing like a child.

The poor old man's heart had grown bitter in those two years.

I heard more about it later on. He had got into a great passion, but the stern deacons treated him very cruelly, and would never believe that he had any reason to be angry. The foolish young minister had so impressed them with his own cleverness that they were ready to coincide with him in whatever he might like to say.

But peace returned to the little cottage that night—"the peace of God which passeth all understanding"—and nothing came to mar their happiness, until one day a great grief befell them.

"Jawseph" granted the loan of the precious tricycle to an inexperienced young man, who had been very pressing. They watched him wheel it away with fear and trembling and a strong presentiment of coming evil. They were almost prepared for the bad news, when the young man appeared later on, with a rueful face. He had fallen into a ditch and broken the brake—he was very sorry, but had no money with which to get it mended.

It did not seem such a terrible calamity to him, but to them it meant the crushing of all their joys—no more wonderful journeys along the high road, no fresh air for the poor invalid!

When I heard the woeful story I offered as delicately as I could to pay for the mending, and left half a crown for the purpose. But next time I found the tricycle still unmended, and then it was that first of all I discovered their extreme poverty.

They "hoped I would not be angry, but they had spent the money on bread, they were so hungry." My eyes filled with tears, and they looked intensely relieved that I was not vexed.

It is not easy to help north country people with their proud, independent spirit, and I had to be very careful—

"I WILL LOVE THEM FREELY."

but they did not again want for food.

Still I noticed a little cloud on Anna's face, but it was a long time before she would tell me what it was that troubled her. One day, in a burst of confidence, she said: "I'll tell yo wat troobles me. I'se got everything ready against I dee, but I've nae shrood, an' I should be sae happy if I juist had that—but I'm prayin', an' I do believe God will send yan tae me. Aye, but I wad be happy an' a', if I juist had a bonny shrood against I dee!"

I thought long over this trouble. I did not want to weaken her faith by supplying the money, and I knew it would grieve her if I did. She would think it had seemed like asking, but I need not have troubled.

She was sitting by the fire with a beaming face when I went there next time. "It's coom," she cried. "He heered ma praayer, an' Mrs. Ritson brought me a flannel gown she had nae use for. It's worn doon t' front, but I'se patched it oop, and the patches will never show when they fold my hands ower, like this."

Her cup was full to overflowing that day, and as I looked through the lattice window on my way down the path I saw the two sitting together—"Jawseph" reading aloud from the great Bible, and Anna tenderly folding the beloved shroud, while the clocks ticked cheerily on the walls, and I thought they ticked faster than usual, as if they too were rejoicing with the old watchmaker and his wife.—The Quiver.

Latest-News!

This morning's Pioneer Press gives as casualties of the 4th in St. Paul, thirty nine seriously injured. Four will loose one or both eyes; four more have their eyes hurt; one boys skull is fractured; little girl struck by stray bullet. Mud cans prove most disastrous.

LONDON, July 4.—The dispatch read last night by Mr. Broderick in the house of commons was the first really definite announcement that the government has made that the peace negotiations have failed. It revived keen interest in the war.

Dispatches from the front say the Boers still have 13,000 men in the field and declare that unless the war can be finished during the next two months, the prospect is that it will continue for another year.

The morning again urge the government to make vigorous efforts and to make no further attempts at negotiations.

Much Reading for Little Money.

The New York World has got the cost of printing down to a minimum. Its latest offer of its monthly newspaper magazine is interesting if from no other cause than that it shows the acme of "how much for how little."

The Monthly World is a 32 page magazine with colored cover. Its pages are about the size of the pages of the Ladies' Home Journal, and it is copiously illustrated in half tone. The illustrations are the result of the best artistic skill, aided by all the latest printing press appliances, making a magazine unrivalled in the quality of its contents and its appearance.

Each issue contains stories of romance, love, adventure, travel; stories of fiction and fact; stories of things quaint and curious, gathered together from all over the world; the results of scientific research, and editorial reviews. It numbers among its contributors the leading literary men and women of the day.

A feature each month is a full page portrait of the most famed man or woman of the moment in the public eye.

In collecting and preparing for publication the literary matter and art subjects for the Monthly World no expense is spared

A battalion of 400 United States engineers and bridgebuilders will soon be throwing dirt in the Philippines and building trolley lines to the interior.

There is nothing like making nature's forces do man's wants. There is now a gigantic scheme on foot to make Niagara falls furnish the light and power for all cities and towns within a radius of 100 miles.

Lieutenant Hobson in the course of a speech delivered in Boston the other day gave it as his opinion that the faults of sailors as men were largely due to the fact that they were for the most part so much without homes and away from the influence of women.

Walter Crane, the president of the Arts and Crafts Society of Great Britain, says that American steel construction is coming into general favor and use in England, and that the modern American skyscraper is to become a common sight in London. America sets the fashion for them all.

Clarence L. Thurston, son of the Nebraska senator, recently appointed secretary of the United States legation in the Argentine Republic, is the youngest American diplomat and the youngest man ever appointed to such an important position. He has barely attained the age of 21 years.

Frank Eddy, of Minnesota, who prides himself on being the homeliest man in congress, has had a brand of cigars named after him and some patent medicine man wants his picture as a recommendation for use in advertisements. The congressman now thinks he is eligible for a place in the New York hall of fame.

It will take 15 more votes to elect the next president of the United States than were required to elect McKinley last fall. There were 447 members in the last electoral college, but under the reapportionment there will be 476 in the next. The states of the North Atlantic seaboard gain nine votes in the electoral college by the new allotment, the sixteen ex-slave states gain ten, and the middle and far west gain ten.

According to the English census returns England is becoming one big city. Agriculture is languishing and the sturdy yeomen who once fought England's battles so well are disappearing. Her armies must now be recruited largely from the slums, which to patriotic Englishmen should occasion some alarm. The country boy usually makes a good soldier, while the youth bred in the slums is generally a very poor one.

In the United States there are 268,000 Indians. Of this number 45,250 draw rations regularly, while 12,600 more are provided at various times when they are unable to work or do not feel like it. In the latter class are included most of the Indians who have grown old and are deserted by their young relatives. The total cost of purchasing and distributing rations to the Indians last year reached the sum of $1,231,000. It will be even more in 1901.

The farmer's boy who drifts to the city finds, in nine cases out of ten, irregular work, a dingy little room in a bad street, food that he would have disdained in his country home and irresistible temptation to spend every dollar which he can get hold of. The city boy reaching the country finds just as hard work and longer hours, but work in the fresh air and sunshine, with comfortable surroundings, good food and all the social standing of which his character makes him worthy.

Experiments are being made by the department of agriculture with a view of doubling the yield of corn without additional expense or labor by a system of cross breeding. The theory is not yet made public, but farmers are advised to be more careful in selecting seed. This should be done while the corn is standing by selecting the best stalks instead of going to the crib and selecting the biggest ears. It is given out that the department has 10,000 hybrids, among which are 200 new and distinct varieties. Go west, young man, and buy a farm.

A machine that will do the work of 30 expert mathematicians is being constructed by the government in its scientific instrument shop in Washington. It is to be an improvement on an instrument in use in the bureau of the coast survey which has charge of calculating the tides. The machine now in use does wonderful things. There is a little crank on the lower left-hand side, and at a simple turn of that crank the machine will give the answer to a problem involving 19 separate calculations. It works out the complicated calculations of tidal variations.

While the politicians of France are joining the politicians of other European countries in ranting against American competition and urging the exclusion of American products, many French grain buyers are now in Kansas making large contracts for wheat. This well illustrates the situation of the present time. Europe may talk all she pleases of boycotting American products, but when those products are needed in European countries, as American wheat is this year needed in France and elsewhere, there will be no trouble.

SENATOR KYLE DEAD.

Passes Away at His Home in Aberdeen, S. D., After a Brief Illness.

Aberdeen, S. D., July 2. — United States Senator James H. Kyle died here at 6:05 p. m. Monday. Senator Kyle was stricken about ten days ago. His trouble was of malarial origin and resulted in a functional affection of the heart, which caused the greatest alarm. A consultation of physicians was held and his case soon took a turn for the better, the heart action growing stronger and the general condition much more encouraging. One of the latest bulletins from his bedside last week was to the effect that he had passed the danger point and that his recovery would be certain, though slow. The senator had a similar attack in the east some time ago, and was liable to a recurrence of the trouble. His health has not been robust for a year or so. His relapse Monday was not expected, however.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Thunderbolt Strikes Pier in Chicago Dealing Death to Eleven Young Fishermen.

Chicago, July 2.—Eleven boys were killed by a bolt of lightning Monday afternoon. They had been fishing on the pier near Montrose boulevard and had taken refuge under piling. Another was injured so badly that he will die.

Willie Anderson, the only person to escape death, was taken from under the heap of bodies with his legs and back paralyzed by the shock, but it is thought he will recover. That portion of the pier covered by the rude zinc roof was so small that the victims had been crowded together in a heap. They were pressed so close together that all had been killed by the one thunderbolt as by a current in electrocution. The Anderson boy was in such a position that he failed to receive the full force of the charge. The faces of the dead were blackened almost beyond recognition and the bodies were scarred and seared from head to foot.

The catastrophe is unprecedented so far as recorded lightning fatalities are concerned. In Chicago, so far as ex-Chief Swenie's memory reaches, there has been no one instance where more than one or two persons were killed by a single bolt. In the early months of the world's fair four persons were struck by a lightning stroke at the Grant monument in Lincoln park, but only one was killed.

In "Haydn's Book of Dates" the largest fatality recorded is from a bolt which killed nine persons. That was in 1819 at a church in the Alps.

STRIKE IS ORDERED.

Iron and Steel Workers Unable to Agree with Employers on New Wage Scale.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 1.—Twenty thousand men employed in the mills of the American Sheet Steel company were ordered out on strike Saturday night. They will attempt to force out 10,000 more, who are nonunionists. After that will come over 150,000 more who are employed in the various mills of the United States Steel corporation. If the plans of the officials of the Amalgamated association are carried out the beginning of July will see one of the greatest industrial strikes ever known.

The strike order is a renewal of the trouble between the Amalgamated association and the sheet combine, which began at McKeesport last April, when the employers gave in by recognizing the union. At that time the amalgamated officials threatened to call out every member in all the plants of the United States Steel corporation, which owns the sheet mills. When the employers made terms peace was declared until June 30.

Many Die from Heat.

New York, July 2.—Monday was the hottest July 1 on record. At 3:10 p. m. the thermometer at the weather office reached 98 degrees. Between the hours of two a. m. and midnight there were reported 57 deaths and 141 prostrations in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx. From midnight Sunday night to nine o'clock Monday night 21 deaths and 36 prostrations had been reported in Brooklyn.

Tragedy in Ohio.

Newton Falls, O., July 2.—Rollin Hawkins, a farmer residing near here, shot and killed his wife and then tried to shoot himself, but was not seriously injured. The couple had quarreled. Mrs. Hawkins was lying on a couch when her husband shot her from behind, the bullet entering the back of her head. Hawkins is in jail.

Big Coal Combine.

Cleveland, O., July 2.—The Leader says: "Before the 1st of September all of the big companies producing bituminous coal will have been gathered into one organization, similar to the United States Steel corporation. The capitalization will be enormous, probably second only to that of the big steel trust."

Found Guilty.

Eldorado, Kan., June 28.—Jessie Morrison was found guilty of manslaughter in the second degree late Thursday afternoon for the murder of Mrs. Olin Castle. The penalty is not more than five years or less than three years in the penitentiary.

HAVOC OF WIND AND RAIN.

Several Deaths and Much Damage to Property Reported from Indiana and the Northwest.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 29.—A special to the Sentinel from Brazil, Ind., says: During a storm about six o'clock Friday evening lightning killed four men who were at work harvesting in a wheat field on the J. C. Halbert farm near Lodi. The killed are: Frank Bridgewaters, Anderson Webster, John Wiggle and Samuel Stewart. Anderson Webster was a prominent farmer of that section, owning the farm adjoining the Halbert place.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 29.—With all the accompanying phenomena of a cyclone except the funnel-shaped cloud, a heavy electrical and rainstorm swept over this city at four o'clock Friday afternoon. The streets were filled with anxious crowds watching the clouds, and when the storm finally broke the only wonder is more were not injured. Holly Bennett was killed by a live wire. Dell Eck was shocked by a live wire; Mrs. Morey, leg broken, shoulder dislocated.

St. Paul, Minn., June 29.—Friday afternoon at four o'clock a heavy wind and rainstorm struck this city and neighborhood, drenching everything thoroughly and doing considerable damage of a minor sort, although amounting to a heavy loss in the aggregate.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 29.—A furious electrical storm with wind, rain and hail accompaniments, passed over this city late Friday, doing much damage to property.

West Superior, Wis., June 29.—A severe storm struck this place about five p. m. The heavy rain was preceded by an electrical display that burned out many motors and raised general havoc.

New Richmond, Wis., June 29.—A veritable mud storm passed over this section late Friday afternoon. The storm came up from the west in the most threatening fashion, but went to the north and south of the city, doing great damage to growing crops, to trees and outbuildings. There was a tremendous downpour of rain and hail.

La Crosse, Wis., June 29.—A tornado doing thousands of dollars' worth of damage passed over this city at seven o'clock Friday evening. The storm came from the west, accompanied by fierce wind, heavy rain and lightning. Trees were uprooted and plate glass destroyed.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 27.—The storm which struck Pittsburgh and vicinity Wednesday afternoon was short in duration, but terrific in power and disastrous in effect. The lightning and thunder was practically continuous for about 30 minutes, the wind attained a velocity of 30 miles an hour, and rain fell at the rate of three inches an hour. The temperature fell 24 degrees within an hour. One woman was killed instantly by lightning, and several other persons may die from the same cause, numberless houses and churches were struck by lightning and several picnic parties were panic-stricken.

IS SAVING MONEY.

Uncle Sam's Finances in Splendid Condition—Receipts Exceed Disbursements by $76,000,000.

Washington, July 1.—The comparative statement of the government's receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year ended Saturday shows an excess of receipts over disbursements of approximately $76,000,000. This is only about $4,000,000 below the estimate made by congress at the beginning of the last session in December, 1900, at which time the secretary estimated the receipts from customs would be about $245,000,000. The final figures will probably fall short of this amount by $6,000,000.

The receipts from internal revenue sources were estimated last December at $300,000,000, while the final figures will show over $307,000,000. The receipts from miscellaneous sources were estimated at $34,600,000. These will also show a considerable increase. The expenditures for the year will be $7,000,000 in excess of the estimate. During the fiscal year 1900 the surplus revenues amounted to nearly $24,000,000, while the surplus of the present year will reach $76,000,000, and possibly a still higher figure.

In view of the fact that the revenue reduction bill passed at the last session of congress will go into operation at the begininng of the fiscal year, to-day, treasury officials estimate that the loss from this source will be about $40,000,000. It is not expected, however, that the net reduction from this source will reach that amount, as the officials look forward to a year of even greater prosperity than the one just closing. If this expectation is realized, the officials believe that the revenues from internal sources alone will be not greater than $30,000,000 below the figures of the present year.

It is also confidently expected that the receipts from customs will materially increase during the coming 12 months, so that, notwithstanding the reduction made in the last revenue bill, the total receipts from all sources may even reach or exceed those of the fiscal year of 1901.

Well-Known Philanthropist Dead.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 2.—Rev. William A. Passavant, of this city, died suddenly of apoplexy Monday at Jumonville, where he had gone for a few days' vacation. Rev. Passavant was prominently connected with the charitable work of Pittsburgh and was widely known as a philanthropist. He was born in 1857, became a preacher in the Lutheran church and devoted most of his time to the endowment of hospitals.

Bishop Potter Bereaved.

New York, July 1.—Mrs. Eliza Rogers Potter, wife of Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, Protestant Episcopal bishop of New York, died suddenly early Sunday morning at the family residence in this city. Mrs. Potter's death was due to heart failure, superinduced by the intense heat of the last few days. Bishop Potter was at his wife's side when the end came, but none of her six children was present.

CLOSES ITS DOORS.

Seventh National Bank, of New York, in Hands of Receiver—Forces Assignment of Brokers.

New York, June 28.—The Seventh national bank was closed at 10:45 Thursday by order of Comptroller Dawes and the following notice was posted on its doors:

"This bank is in the hands of the comptroller of the currency.

"FORREST RAYNOR,
"National Bank Examiner."

At the same time William N. Cromwell, the bank's attorney, gave out the following statement:

"In justice to the depositors and stockholders of the Seventh national bank, William Newton Cromwell, the bank's attorney, has advised the bank to suspend payment."

This action was taken after a protracted conference in the directors' room of the bank, which was participated in by the new president, Edward R. Thomas, ex-President William H. Kimball, Edwin Gould, Lorenzo, Semple, who is one of the directors, and several other members of the board.

William Nelson Cromwell, special counsel for the bank, gave out the following statement from President Thomas and added that he wes engaged in preparing a plan for reorganization of the affairs of the bank and that it was believed a satisfactory plan would be presented at an early date:

"Mr. Edward R. Thomas, president of the Seventh national bank, stated that the difficulties of the bank were due solely to the making by the previous executive officers of large advances to Messrs. Marquand & Co., and that the security thereon was of an unmarketable character, although of considerable intrinsic value. That upon the urgent application of the board, he and his associate, Mr. Edwin H. Gould had furnished financial assistance upon adequate securities and upon the assurance that the obligations of Marquand & Co. would be made good by this morning. That the firm had, however, failed to fulfill expectations and while he and Mr. Gould and some of the directors were willing to furnish further financial aid, it was not deemed by them as just either to the depositors, stockholders or the public to invite deposits and credit until the affairs of the bank were again placed upon an absolutely safe basis. That for this purpose reasonable time was necessary, and to prevent unfair preference or advantages, the board determined, with the advice of counsel, to suspend operations for the present."

New York, June 29.—The failure of the firm of Henry Marquand & Co., bankers and brokers, the name of which has been connected with the embarrassment of the Seventh national bank, was announced on the stock exchange Friday. The firm made an assignment to Frank Sullivan Smith. The assignment was without preferences. No statement of assets or liabilities was made with the assignment. The cause is primarily laid to the failure of the Seventh national bank.

Unofficial information was to the effect that the liabilities will be not far from $8,000,000, of which amount $6,000,000 was said to be due to banks, trust companies and other creditors, and $2,000,000 to Henry G. Marquand, father of the senior member of the firm.

Washington, July 1.—Comptroller of the Currency Dawes has appointed a temporary receiver of the City national bank, of Buffalo, N. Y. It is thought the losses of the depositors will be large. The bank owes its depositors, according to its last report, $1,567,694. It has $190,000 of government funds on deposit. Its total liabilities are $3,802,103. To offset this it has a capital of $300,000, with a surplus of $220,000.

YALE THE VICTOR.

Harvard Is Beaten in the Annual Boat Race at New London, Conn., by Eight Seconds.

New London, Conn., June 28.—Yale won the 'varsity race with Harvard by less than a length in the last 100 yards of the four-mile struggle. It was one of the most beautiful contests between the crews of two universities ever seen on the river. From the sound of the referee's pistol until the finish it was anybody's race. The official time was: Yale, 23:37; Harvard, 23:45.

The freshmen race and the four-oar contest preceded the big event of the day. The freshmen eights were sent off up the river for their two-mile row just after five o'clock. Yale crossed the line four and a half lengths ahead. Time was: Yale, 10:27 4-5; Harvard, 10:48. In the four-oar race Harvard won. Time: Harvard, 11:49 1-5; Yale, 12:09 1-5.

NOTED JURIST EXPIRES.

Judge Woods, of Indianapolis, Who Became Famous Through the Debs Injunction, Passes Away.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 29.—Judge William A. Woods, of the United States circuit court, died suddenly Friday night wile lying abed in his apartments at the Delano, on East Michigan street. Death came a few seconds past midnight, while his wife was at his bedside. Death was caused by the hardening of the outside arteries of the heart—angina pectoris.

Judge Woods became widely known through the famous Debs injunction, which afterwards became an issue in national politics, and "government by injunction" became a current term in political parlance.

Assessment Levied.

Washington, June 28.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor has authorized an assessment on affiliated organizations for the purpose of aiding the striking machinists in their contest for a nine-hour day. A circular letter will be sent out immediately and it is estimated that $50,000 will be secured in response to the first call.

Founder of Dawson Dead.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., June 28.—Joseph Ladue, the founder of Dawson City, in the Klondike, died Wednesday evening at his home in Schuyler Falls. Mr. Ladue had not been well since his return from Alaska, and spent last winter at Colorado Springs in a vain search for health.

More Gold Arrives.

Seattle, Wash., July 2.—The steamship Victorian arrived Monday from Skagway with 75 Dawsonites and between $800,000 and $1,000,000 in gold, part of the spring clean-up in the Klondike district. Of the gold $510,000 was consigned to the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

State Fair Will be Better Than Ever.

Forty thousand dollars is offered in premiums and purses. A new agricultural hall is being constructed to provide for a more general attractive and useful display. The American Shorthorn Breeders' association and the American Hereford Breeders' association will each conduct their next national exhibition and sale at this fair, giving the whole live stock department a national character. All other industrial interests will receive energetic attention also, assuring exhibits of a most comprehensive character. Amusement features have been strengthened. The race program is strong in every way. Contracts with some of the best specialty people in the country have been signed, and Pain's best spectacular fireworks exhibition has been engaged, which, with the night racing, will furnish entertainment of a most elaborate character. The vice president of the United States will open the fair on Monday, Sept. 2, and deliver an address.

Teachers' Certificates.

State Superintendent Olson has adopted a rule for the extension of second-grade teachers' certificates. These certificates may be extended when the minimum standing recorded therein is 65 per cent and the average in all the branches is not less than 75 per cent and where the teacher is recommended by the county superintendent and city superintendent. Another condition is that the teacher must have taught in the state at least eight months during the past two years, and have shown an ambition to improve by atending institutes and teachers' summer schools, reading with the teachers' circle and taking one or more educational journals.

A Narrow Escape.

Little Tessie Teck, 9 years old, who lives near the Milwaukee railroad tracks in Minneapolis, was run over by three heavy railroad engines, and yet she lives and will recover. The little girl crossed the tracks and started to return. Just as she approached the main track she was struck by three passenger engines that were backing down to the railroad shops for the night. The little child was thrown in the middle of the tracks, and with the rarest presence of mind laid there motionless until the engines had all passed over her frail little body. Only a few bruises was the result.

Canned Potatoes.

Duluth customs officials received a shipment of canned potatoes en route for the Klondike. There were two carloads that came in on the Northern Steamship company's steamer North Wind. They came through from Hamburg, Germany, in bond. One car contains 169 cases and the other 192 cases. This is the first time that such a thing has happened in the history of commerce at that point. The goods were transferred to Great Northern cars and billed to Seattle, from where they will go to Cape Nome and the Klondike.

A Wild Man.

The village of Luverne and vicinity is in a ferment of excitement over the appearance of a nude wild man in the woods along Rock river. He makes frequent raids on farm houses near the river, frightening the farmers' wives, until life has become a burden to them. Sheriff Black, with a posse, has made an unsuccessful search for him. His identity is unknown, but he is thought to be a tramp operator who appeared several days ago, and who acted queer.

Lost.

Tightly clutching her prayer book, Mrs. Marie Grindall, 73 years of age, wandered into police headquarters in Minneapolis to find where she lived. The aged woman had left her home in the morning to attend divine services. Heretofore she had guided herself by the court house, but somehow she lost her bearings and late in the afternoon she found herself at headquarters. The officers learned that she made her home with her son-in-law, Adolph Gunther, and they found her address.

News in Brief.

A. B. Miller, a stationary engineer in a saw mill at Bruce, lost the sight of his left eye by the bursting of a water glass on a boiler.

A Bohemian named Tom Jeheca broke the glass in a vestibuled door of a Northern Pacific train while it was running 60 miles an hour, near Hinckley, and jumped. He landed on a sidetrack, among a lot of box cars. The train was stopped and he was picked up, apparently without serious injury.

The team of Henry Frentel, living near Young America, were frightened by the rattle of milk cans on the wagon and ran away, throwing Mr. Frentel out and killing him instantly. He leaves a wife and several children.

Clyde Maxwell was tried at Luverne for assaulting Miss Lottie Bruissane and escaped with a small fine.

The Omaha station at Belle Plaine was struck by lightning and burned to the ground, only the records being saved.

The cornerstone of the new Catholic church was laid at DeGraf.

T. Koniezny was found dead in the streets of Holden. A case of heart disease.

IN COUNTRY LANES.

O country lanes! white-starred with bloom,
Where wild things nestle, shy and sweet,
And all your waving grasses laugh
And pass before my eager feet—
Could I forever dwell with you,
Letting the old, mad world rush by,
And just be glad of wind and sun,
Of rocking nest and brooding sky!

How often, in the crowded street,
I dream of you, sweet country lane,
And feel, once more, your soft breeze soothe
My weary heart and tired brain;
Always above the city's din,
Above the clink of yellow gold,
I hear a wild-bird's ringing note,
I catch the scent of leaf-stirred mold!

Your grasses kiss my fevered cheek,
Your hawthorn drops her fragrant rain,
I am a child once more, and dream
That Heaven bides here, O flower-starred lane!

Unc' Shucks and the Witches.

By E. E. Garnett.

"PEOPLE are so tired of charity concerts and teas and bores in general," Sue complained, lugubriously.

"But even tired people must help each other," Mae insisted. "Let us ask Mrs. Brelle to suggest something."

The pretty widow was in a hammock, with Barnes in chatting distance on the piazza steps, and she did not welcome interruption.

"Will you?" called Joe, upon her silence.

"Will I what?" pouting.

"Help us to help Unc' Shucks?"

"And who," only half hiding a yawn, "is he?"

"He is old and poor and blind," explained Mae, making her climax with a most sweet compassion.

"And black," added practical Louise, "as the ace of spades."

The pretty widow looked bewitchingly reproachful. "No country poorhouse?" she murmured.

A rather chilled silence fell upon the piazza group. Mae's sensitive face flushed. Barnes went up the steps to her side.

"We cannot spare old Shucks to go there," he said, and enviously watched a fleck of moonlight bending to the ripples of her hair.

"Thank you"—shy, sweet eyes raised for an instant to his—"and will you help?"

He wanted to tell her that he would beg, dig, burn—do any outlandish dangerous deed she willed; but the words halted. He only got a bit red and nodded.

"Oh, if he's a pet," said Mrs. Brelle, sulkily, "we'd best take up a collection—that is the shortest way out of such annoyances."

"He's in the turn of the road, going out to the golf links," Louise put in, reflectively; she was housekeeper and found provisions an easier method of charity than cash. "When we go by for the big game next Tuesday we might give him a donation party."

There was a murmur of applause, to which Mrs. Brelle added a soft hand-clapping. The act displayed both hands and rings, and she smiled with pleasure over them.

"Very well," she assented, graciously; "I'll send a barrel of flour."

Mae threw a grateful kiss from her finger tips, but the widow was looking to Barnes and missed it.

Good nights were beginning. Getting from her hammock, the pretty widow gave a little start of alarm—such a shrill, weird call had rung out of the grove: "Who—who!"

"Screech owl," announced Joe. And Barnes added, in appropriately sepulchral tones, the old saw: "When a screech owl calls, witches answer."

"I hope he isn't calling his witches," said Mae, "to Unc' Shucks' donation."

"They're worse than witches," laughed Joe, "who have that business in hand. Just don't let them forget tobacco, and Unc' Shucks' luck is secure."

"I—he has tobacco."

"So like Mae," said Louise, "to take tobacco first."

"Well, a pipe," Joe protested, gravely, "puts heart into a man."

"And next in value," suggested Barnes, "shall we sprinkle him with a little silver?"

"Don't tell me any more," cried Mae; "I'm too happy."

The pretty widow was coming up the steps and noted the girl's face, and how Barnes sought the light of it. She followed to Mae's door.

"Can I come in, dear, for a minute?"

Mae drew up a cozy chair and waited absently beside it. Her eyes were still radiant, a dreamy look in them, happy and shy. The tone of Barnes' voice lingered with her and the look that said "good night." Hard to strike such a face frightened and white, but the pretty widow smiled and compassed it.

"You must forgive me, love, for hinting that your impulsive ways are liable to be misinterpreted."

"I beg pardon," growing attentive with a start. "What did you say?"

"Mr. Barnes is a man of the world," gently, "accustomed to a flirtation as to his wine at dinner. He—"

"Wait!" with unexpected dignity. "I do not care to hear you speak of Mr. Barnes. But of me—you were saying something of me?"

"Well," rising with an angry flush, "you are refusing a kindness. One would think that you mean—the way you look."

"The way I look?"

"My dear child," over a shoulder as she went to the door, "you look up at him as if you were kneeling before a shrine."

In those next days Barnes could not guess what the trouble was—how should he?—but he was quick to realize that Mae shunned him and, when she could not, was nervous and dumb and pale. Meeting her one morning in the shady lane that led toward the links, the look on her face grew suddenly unendurable to him.

"Mae," he cried, "what have I done? Are you offended with me?"

"No," cried Mae, startled and miserable. "No, of course not."

"Then why do you treat me like this?"

"This?" faltered Mae; then looking at him she suddenly flushed and with tears springing hurried away.

Passing on, puzzled and distressed, around a clump of hazel, he came upon the pretty widow; she had heard.

"I am sorry," she said; "oh, I wish I could help." Then, hesitatingly, "Perhaps it would be best to tell you."

"To tell me what?" sternly.

"Joe is jealous of you; see?"

"Joe? Joe!"

"You never guessed? Why, it is an old affair, since school days and pinafores."

"Joe!"

"He has been scolding the poor child, I suppose, and she is afraid to be seen with you; or, perhaps," gently, "she doesn't want to hurt you."

"Joe!"

"I am so sorry," holding out a plump, soft little hand, "so sorry!"

But poor Barnes could only say "Joe!" The idea, at first incredible under the bits of evidence that began to come in, grew past doubt. By the time he had reached home a mountain of proof was throbbing in his brain. He called himself a bat and hourly accumulated misery. Treachery, deliberate falsehood, never occurred to him.

A perfect day dawned for the golf play. Old Shucks sat out on his doorstone and gave smiles and blessings and smoked his pipe, while the gay groups came with their bundles and greetings. The old man listened keenly with head bent, identifying step or voice and giving a jolly comment or grunt all to himself as they passed on to their game.

"Dat ar stumble b'long ter Marse Joe; never could lift his feet, dat boy."

"Marse Barnes? ain' like hisself. Mighty down in de mouf fer Marse Barnes."

"Dar's de lil widder. Um; step like a cat. Um."

"Miss Louise, bossin' de earth. La, don' I know Miss Louise!"

"En Miss Sue, trottin' 'long b'hind, totin' de left-overs."

"Whar's Miss Mae?" suddenly louder. "Is I gwine miss dat chile? Whar's lil Miss Mae?"

"Here, Unc' Shucks."

"Somebody throwing bricks at yo', honey? You walk like yo' steppin' on yo' heart."

"She is quite happy, Shucks," said Barnes' voice beside them, "but she is afraid of hurting some one if she shows it."

Shucks turned his sightless eyes anxiously from one to the other.

"De truf bes', chile; better hurt 'em den fash 'em. What yo' happy 'bout, honey?"

"I—I don't know," faltered Mae.

"Um. What she happy 'bout, Marse Barnes?"

"It is her secret—and Joe's."

The old man leaned eagerly to catch her reply, but Mae's pretty head was tilted in indignant silence.

"Marse Barnes," turning a broad smile on him, "if yo' an' Miss Mae was to go ter de spring an' fetch me a drink I'd be mighty thankful; dat I would."

"I must speak to you," Barnes said as the girl would have turned away from him. "Let me at least have your forgiveness." So they went together down the pretty hill path, under the elm and hawthorn and winding through witch hazel to the old spring.

"Um," grunted Shucks, and filled his pipe, the smile still broad on his face.

Presently the pretty widow came to him.

"Have you seen," she began, anxiously. "I mean heard, anything of Mr. Barnes?"

"Marse Barnes gone on ter de links," shamelessly, "wid Miss Sue, marm. Yes, marm."

But he shook his grizzled head as she hurried away. "Dat how de cat jump," he mumbled. "Um. Old Shucks gwine feel a pain in his conscience 'bout dat falsifyin' an' dat barrel o' fine flour, um—uh—who dar? Marse Joe? Yo' late at de links, sar."

"I am not going to the links, Unc' Shucks. I am hanging about with my gun. Miss Mae is anxious about your chickens; she says a screech owl gets one every night."

"Dat he does, dat he does," indignantly; "an' I makes no doubt he's nappin' up one ob dem trees dis minute, dreamin' 'bout supper time, but," sotto voce, "yo wastin' shot firin' fer Miss Mae, chile, yo' shorely is."

Joe, all unconscious of this, went peering keenly along the edge of the wood, and the old man listened, his mind divided between chuckles for the spring and conscience-stricken grunts for the wood.

"Ah! here he is!" came triumphantly at last.

"Hit 'im 'fore he holler, Marse Joe!" Shucks advised, eagerly. "De ain't no luck in his screech."

So Joe took the owl silent and secured happy fortune to the donation party; at least that was the old man's verdict, but he shook his head dubiously when he considered Joe's share of it.

Tons of Dynamite to Be Exploded.

Three and one-half tons of dynamite are to be exploded under the narrows between Fort Hamilton and Fort Wadsworth. The dynamite was used in torpedoes during the Spanish war as a defense to the harbor. After the war Maj. H. H. Adams, of the engineer corps, instead of exploding the torpedoes extracted the charges and stored the dynamite. Maj. W. L. Marshall has advertised it for sale, but there have been no bids for it.

Maj. Marshall has therefore decided to sink the dynamite in casks of 500 pounds each into the waters of the Narrows. Electric connections are to be made with the forts and the dynamite will be exploded by the touch of a key. When Maj. Marshall sets off his 4,200 pounds of dynamite Staten island fishermen expect to get a wonderful catch.

TO SAVE SABLE ISLAND.

The "Graveyard of the Sea" to Have Trees Grown on Its Wreck-Strewn Shores.

The Canadian government is taking steps to prevent the washing away of what is familiarly known as "the graveyard of the Atlantic." During his visit to the Paris exposition, Maj. Gourdeau, deputy minister of marine and fisheries, made an examination of a number of sandy formations off the coast of France, which the French government has succeeded in preserving by the simple process of planting them with a particular tree, possessing binding quantities in its roots. The Canadian government decided to import some of these trees as an experiment on Sable island, and a quantity has arrived, and now awaits shipment to the island, where the trees will be planted around its now threatening shores, says the Buffalo Transcript.

The urgent need of this action can be gathered from the fact that the island was once 40 miles in length, while to-day it is barely half that length and only two miles in width. The encroachments of the sea have gradually shifted the sand until now over half of the island is completely submerged. It is anticipated that if the island is covered with trees it will stand out more clearly and sharply defined to the officers of ships in the vicinity than at present, and thus prove a boon to mariners, who dread this treacherous spot.

Notwithstanding its remoteness and inhospitable characteristics, Sable island possesses many points of interest which make it worthy of a visit. Its race of ponies, which are annually penned and shipped to Halifax for sale, is famous. It also contains a small colony of people who at least have no ground for longing "for a lodge in some vast wilderness." It is recorded that some years ago a ship, in whose timber a colony of rats had its abode, went down off the island, and the rats succeeded in getting ashore. Before long they had multiplied to such an extent as to have become a source of danger to the settlers, but it was not until they had well-nigh destroyed all the food supplies on the island and had brought the settlers face to face with starvation that the latter bethought themselves and imported some Nova Scotian cats, which kept the pest in check until a passing ship left a pair of foxes on the island. That was the beginning of the end of both rats and cats. The foxes soon overran the island. They killed, not only the rats, but the cats as well, and how best to deal with the foxes is now under consideration of the government.

When Bride and Groom Are Nervous.

Embarrassment appears to be the natural concomitant of matrimony. At least this is true in the incipient stages. Invariably, however, there is a striking contrast between the relative composure of the man and the woman. Both are nervous but never both at the same time. If they come a week beforehand to make arrangements she is rattled and he is cool; while on the day of the ceremony she rises to the occasion and he sinks under it. Thus, I have never seen a bride who was scared; I have never seen a groom who was not.—Rev. D. M. Steele, in Ladies' Home Journal.

"I never get angry with a fool," remarked a man who wanted to crush his antagonist.

"That," rejoined the other, "accounts for your always being on good terms with yourself."—Chicago Daily News.

trouble somewhere, and nervous prostration is sure to follow.

You ought to know that indigestion, exhaustion, womb displacements, fainting, dizziness, headache, and backache send the nerves wild with affright, and you cannot sleep.

BETTER THAN CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Jetmore, Kan., July 1st.—Mrs. Anna Jones Freeman, daughter of Mr. G. G. Jones, of Burdett, and one of the most popular ladies in Hodgeman County, has been a martyr to headache for years. It has made her life a continual misery to her. She suffered pains in the small of the back, and had every symptom of Kidney and Urinary Trouble.

To-day she is as well as any lady in the state.

This remarkable change was due entirely, to a remedy recently introduced here. It is called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and many people claim it to be an infallible cure for Kidney Diseases, Rheumatism and Heart Trouble.

Mrs. Freeman heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and almost with the first dose she grew better. In a week her headaches and other pains had gone, and she had left behind her all her illness and days of misery.

A medicine that can do for any one what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for this lady, is very sure soon to be universally used, and already the demand for these pills has increased wonderfully in Pawnee and Hodgeman Counties, where the particulars of Mrs. Freeman's case and its cure are known.

KILL THE DANDRUFF GERM

Or Your Hair Will Fall Out Till You Become Bald.

Modern science has discovered that dandruff is caused by a germ that digs up the scalp in scales, as it burrows down to the roots of the hair, where it destroys the hair's vitality, causing falling hair, and, ultimately, baldness. After Prof. Unna, of Hamburg, Germany, discovered the dandruff germ, all efforts to find a remedy failed until the great laboratory discovery was made which resulted in Newbro's Herpicide. It alone of all other hair preparations kills the dandruff germ. Without dandruff, hair grows luxuriantly. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect."

—William Batdorf has dissolved his partnership with the G. N. Ry. and is now carpentering in Delano and vicinity.

—Rye will probably be pretty much shocked up by another week. The crop is looking fine and the acreage is larger than common.

—Otto Marr Jr. is rejuvinating the front of his father's store on S. River street. He is improving the looks of the premises materially.

—Schiffer's show put up a tent on Ole Peterson's vacant lots on Bridge street, on Wednesday to be ready to rake in nickles on the 4th.

—Waverly postponed the 4th of July program until the 5th, on account of rain. Several Delanoites went up this morning to attend their celebration.

—John Swadner Jr. had the misfortune to have a piece of steel hit him in the eye while at work in the shop Monday. He now keeps it covered with a bandage.

—N. K. Coffin, while unrolling paper at Albert Eppel's new building, last Saturday, backed into the cellar opening and fell to the bottom. He was considerably shaken up.

—This morning's city papers claim that horsemen fear an epedemic of epizootic among their animals. It is said 50,000 horses in the east have been disabled by a recent attack. Only a few cases have appeared in the West so far.

—The Delano Territorial Association has been extended another invitation to hold a meeting away from home. This comes from George B. Wright, of Montrose. Great preparations are being made to make the trip and meeting at John Rader's an enjoyable occasion.

—A few of the alleys are sadly in need of attention from the Board of Health and from the committee on streets and alleys. Allays filled with manure and rubbish and used as a storing place for wagons and buggies are not in good condition to be traveled. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

—A man with a good looking team had some trouble to get one of them started on River street, during the extreme warm spell Wednesday afternoon. After the horse had concluded to move on the driver struck him severely with the whip and otherwise showed about as poor a disposition for a driver as the animal did for a buggy horse.

—Delano prepared to celebrate the 4th of July in grand style, but it rained and spoiled considerable of the programme. People came in from the country and from neighboring villages even through rain and mud. There was a big crowd in town. The parade headed by President J. D Young was put off until 1 P. M. It had to hustle about then in order to get under cover before the next shower. A number of nice floats, and a few bicycles decorated for the occasion, paraded through the principle streets.

Speaker Clauson was on hand, but owing to rain did not deliver an oration, Nelson and Ecklund's ball team, of Minneapolis, was ready to play, but it rained and prevented. A few of the other games, jumping, etc. came off. As for running, old and young, big and little, participated when a down pour of rain would be a little harder than before. Good nature seemed to be the order of the day notwithstanding the frequent shower baths.

Ayer's band, of Minneapolis, was about their business, and was voted a success by all who heard them.

But for the rain Delano would have doubtless, had the biggest day in her existance. But it rained.

Mrs. Cross and daughters, of Minneapolis, are guests of her sister, Mrs. Geo. W. Bolton.

Roy Wilder returned home Tuesday night from Voss, Minn., where he has been teaching.

Mrs. C. M. Johnson and daughter Kittie spent the 4th with Delano friends before going to Mayville.

Fred Rausch and wife and sister Hattie were guests of Hiram Dyer and family, at their old home on the 4th,

Mrs. Workman, of Pittsburg, is spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. John Sleight, at Rockford.

Mrs. Hamley, two daughters and son, from Minneapolis, were guests of I. H. Baltuff and family over the 4th.

Dah McCarter, of Hamline, was in town this week. If it had been near election time we would have suspected him of being on an electioneering tour.

George Fautch and sisters Mamie and Francis, of Milaca, came down Wednesday to spend the 4th with Delano friends and relatives. They will return Monday.

J. C. McDonald returned home from Bemidji Monday evening. He didn't go to the Pan American Exposition, but gave up the trip.

Mrs. Katie Bockman (nee Peterson) came down from the Northern pineries to enjoy the 4th with old friends. She brought a large number of state flowers.—lady slippers.

Mrs. Thomas and son Clarence and Mrs. Kittell and sons William and Harry and daughter Dora and their Cousin Clarenc Kittell, were guests at Wm. Mowatt's over the 4th.

A good many old Delanoites were here over the 4th. Among them we noticed Ernie Swarts, George Gifford, Mrs. Hopper and son Alfred, Charley Cunningham and wife, of Minneapolis; Geo. H. Blackwell, St. Paul; Len Sherrer, of Litchfield; Dr. Ed Wright and family, of Colfax, Wis; Alfred Johnson and wife, of Princeton. There were many others from nearer by.

LeSueur Sentinel: Mark the prediction. Within two years, the largest manufacturers in many lines of goods, will be free traders in this country. It was all very well to build up a wall so high that competition could not affect them and the home market be left entirely to Americans, while manufacturing was in its infancy. Now when we supply the home market and have to go abroad for additional room for our wares, the case is different. Now that Russia has learned how to shut us out, other nations will not be slow to follow her example. The only safety for the American manufacturer is in free trade.

An Essay on Habit.

A story is told of an English school master who offered a prize to the boy who should write the best composition in five minutes on "How to Overcome Habit;" at the expiration of five minutes the compositions were read. The prize went to a lad of nine years. Following is his essay:

"Well, sir, habit is hard to oversome. If you take off the first letter, it does not change 'abit'. If you take off another you will have a 'bit' left. If you take off another the whole of 'it' remains. If you take off another it is not wholly used up; all of which goes to show that if you want to get rid of a habit you must throw it off altogether."—Youth's Companion.

Military Schools.

AN ACT

to amend section 1225 of revised statutes so as to provide for detail of retired officers of the army and navy to assist in military instruction in schools.

Whereas the national defence must depend upon the volunteer service of the people of the states; and

Whereas those schools which shall adopt a system of military instruction are entitled to the assistance of the government in order to secure to the United States such a knowledge of military affairs among the youth of the country as will render them efficient as volunteers if called upon for the national defense:

Therefore, be it enacted by the Senate House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

That section 1225 of the Revised Statutes, concerning the detail of officers of the army and navy to educational institutions be, and the same is hereby amended so as to permit the president to detail under the provision of that act, and in addition to the detail of the officers of the army and navy now authorized, to be detailed under the existing provisions of said act, such retired officers of the army and navy of the United States as in his judgement may be required for that purpose to act as instructors in military drill and tactics in schools in the United States where such instruction shall have been authorized by the educatinal authorities thereof, and where the service of such instructions shall have been applied for by said authorities.

Sec. 2. That no detail shall be made under this act to any school unless it shall pay the cost of commutation of quarters of the retired officers detailed, the extra duty pay to which the latter may be entitled by law to receive for the performance of special duty, provided, that no detail shall be made under the provisions of this act unless the officers to be detailed are willing to accept such position without compensation from the government other than their retired pay.

Sec. 3, That the Secretary of war is authorized to issue at his discretion, and under proper regulation to be prescribed by him out of ordinance and ordinance stores belonging to the government and which can be spared for that purpose, upon the approval of the government of the respective states, such number of the same as may be required for military instruction and practice by such school, and the Secretary shall require a bond in each case for double the value of the property, for the care and safe keeping thereof and for the return of the same when required.

Sec. 4. That this act shall take effect immediately.

Signed by William McKinley, President of the United States, February 26, 1901.

William J. Bryan.

Special dispatch to Minneapolis Tribune.

NEW YORK, June 30.—"I want to reiterate," said Col. William J. Bryan, to a reporter today, "that I am not a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1904, and I also want to say that it is rank presumption on the part of Eastern gold democrats and others to attempt to reorganize a party they did their best to wreck."

"If these men want a party incorporating the principles they advocate it would be best for them to start a party of their own. They have no place among democrats.

"I have little to say on public questions to outside papers, since I have had a chance to talk through a paper of my own once a week. I am glad to say that the Commoner has surpassed my most sanguine expectations."

Col. Bryan, after spending the day in New York, left for Philadelphia on the congressional limited this afternoon. He lectures in Philadelphia tonight. He suffers greatly from the heat, and said that the weather was never so oppressive on the Western prairies as it has been here by the seaside today.

Maple Plain.

For as I passed by and beheld your devotions I found an altar with this inscription: To the unknown God. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship him declare I unto you.

And it came to pass in these days that there was much strife and contention in the land; men seeking honor, political preferment, and the emoluments thereof.

As the days go by the strife between political parties seems to wax worse. The main issue is what party shall have the ascendancy to power. The liberty of the people, the constitution of the United States, and the Declaration of American Independence have become only second considerations to the almighty dollar. It seems many of the people are running too much to foolishness and frivolity. Many are carrying too much sail and too little ballast. There is a certain amount of labor that must be performed by somebody. The farmer and producer must plant and sow in order that there may be harvest to reap. Already the wheat gamblers are speculating on the growing crops. The daily newspapers are teeming with prolific articles written from different parts of Minn., S. D., N. D. and other states telling what an enormous wheat crop this country will harvest. This is only mere speculation on paper, for in 24 hours it can all be destroyed by blight or storm.

For three years we have been involved in war with a race of people 8,000 miles from our shores, spending millions of money and sacrificing many lives for the purpose of bringing that country and its people under subjugation, a country which will never pay us for the powder that has been burned under the present administration. This country has undertaken to civilize this race of people, these Filipinos. If our country is going out to do charity work of this kind at a great sacrifice of life and money, we have a job on our hands that will last until Gabriel blows the last trumpet. The old addage is "Charity begins at home". And he who does not provide for his own house and household is denied the faith and worse than an infidel.

Under the laws of the state of New Jersey, trusts are formed. Is this American that under the laws of one state a trust or corporation can be formed that will give it the power to controll the prices on their manufactured goods or on a certain product of the country, to the detriment of the consumers of this country? Are these the principles of our fathers of '76? Never has been so recorded. The greatest good to the greatest number has always been our motto. Only day after tomorrow, the very air in this country will be red hot with patriotism, and it would only need the aid of a lucifer match to set it on fire. Many people are only patriotic at certain times. With them it is spasmodic. True patriotism lasts 365 days in the year.

We are having plenty of rain and potato bugs. The bugs are the worst they have been for years.

The rye harvest will be on the latter part of this week. But little hay has been made on account of the wet weather. Corn is doing well and there is a better prospect for small grain than there was a month ago.

Ben Drake talks of taking a trip to California soon.

Rural free delivery started from Maple Plain yesterday. In this the daily newspapers expect to reap quite a harvest.

A 16 TO 1 FARMER.

"Tarry Thou Till I Come".

"The Wandering Jew" is having a wonderful revival in literature lately. The first book in this fascinating field was "Salathiel," by George Croly, Christ's words to whom, "Tarry thou till I come," spoken beneath the weight of the cross to the scoffing Pharisee, sets the Jew wandering. Most notable followers of this story were Eugene Sue's masterpiece, and "The Prince of India," by the author of "Ben Hur." General Wallace himself praises Croly's "Salathiel" as one of the six greatest English novels ever written. One New York publisher has lately issued an illustrated edition at $1.40 net. Now comes John B. Alden, so well known as the pioneer in cheap book publishing, with an excellent addition at 25 cents; even this, with a view to widely extending the knowledge of his publications, he offers to mail postpaid to the readers of the BUFFALO GAZETTE for the nominal price of 12c, if they will order at once, and mention the paper. Doubtless, many will accept his offer. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 442 Pearl St., New York.

Self-made Man's Maxims.

The "bad boy" often makes the best man.

There are no elevators in the house of success

No man can stand on top because he is put there.

A man can be too confiding in others, but never too confident in himself.

A bad man with good manners often outdoes a good man with bad manners.

Clothes don't make the man, but good clothes have got many a man a good job.

Many a hero of the world sees a "no account" every time he looks in the mirror.

A college education is a good thing, but many a graduate finds himself overtrained.

The man who talks business at home is in danger of getting well meant but risky advice.

If you have $25 and want a job, it is better to spend $20 for clothes, four dollars for shoes and a hat and the rest for o shave, a haircut and a clean collar, and walk to the place, than go with the money in the pockets of a dingy suit.—H. H. Vreeland in Success.

TALE OF A STAMP.

I'm a stamp—
A postage stamp—
A two-center;
Don't want to brag,
But I was never Licked,
Except once;
By a gentleman, too;
He put me on
To a good thing;
It was an envelope—
Perfumed, pink, square;
I've been stuck on
That envelope
Ever since;
He dropped us—
The envelope and me—
Through a slot in a dark box;
But we were rescued
By a mail clerk,
More's the pity;
He hit me an awful
Smash with a hammer;
It left my face
Black and blue;
Then I went on a long Journey
Of two days;
And when we arrived—
The pink envelope and me—
We were presented
To a perfect love
Of a girl,
With the stunningest pair
Of blue eyes
That ever blinked;
Say, she's a dream!
Well, she mutilated
The pink envelope
And tore one corner
Of me off
With a hairpin;
Then she read what
Was inside
The pink envelope.
I never saw a girl blush
So beautifully!
I would be stuck
On her—if I could.
Well, she placed
The writing back
In the pink envelope;
Then she kissed me.
Oh, you little godlets!
Her lips were ripe
As cherries,
And warm
As the summer sun,
We—
The pink envelope and me—
Are now
Nestling snugly
In her bosom;
We can hear
Her heart throb;
When it goes fastest
She takes us out
And kisses me.
Oh, say
This is great!
I'm glad
I'm a stamp—
A two-center.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 13 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 13, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

IN THE FOREST.

There is nothing in nature I love like the trees
As they gracefully bend to the passing breeze,
Or they surge and toss like an emerald sea
As the strong wind shouts in his demon like glee.

The grand old oaks, how they foam and fret,
As they cast down their hoarded stores in a pit,
And toss their green heads in wise disdain
For the robber blast and his pilfering train.

The maples and alders lean over the brink
Of the mountain stream, where the rabbits drink;
And their soft garments trail like the robes of a queen
To the carpet of moss in velvety green.

And my weary soul bathes in this misty green
And the purpling blooms of a world unseen:
The cankering care, and thirst for gold
Drops off like a robe that is worn and old.

O, spirit that lives in the forest old,
I ask not for titles, or jewels and gold;
But lead me the way to the shrine of all good—
The rest that is deep in the midsummer wood.

JUST how much reformation there will be in the tobacco habit among school teachers remains to be seen. They are asked the question, "Do you use tobacco?" and are supposed not to use it. But on good authority we are informed that a young lady not long since had occasion to visit the State Superintendent of Public Instruction and afterwards declared she "could hardly see him for the tobacco smoke." The superintendent should be more careful to set a good example. He ought not to oblige young ladies to do business with him in the smoke anyway. Come out of the smoke Mr. Superintendent.

Our Country.

President Cyrus K. Northrop, of the Minnesota State University, is quoted as having, in a recent address, said:

"What a mass of evil our country contains! Crime abounds; saloons are everywhere; the consumption of liquors enormous; combinations and trusts threaten to hold the people by the throat and compel them to give up their money or their life; city governments are corrupt; legislatures take bribes; money and not merit sometimes make United States senators; laws are not enforced; the hatchet takes the place of officers of justice; taxes increase; the criminal and idle hang a dead weight on the necks of the industrious; the Sabbath is desecrated; the churches are cold; men leave religion to the women, and the church staggers under the blows of its own children."

What an arraignment. How true it is. And how necessary that the hundreds of graduates of our institutions be not found among the evil doers. It certainly can be no credit to an educational institution to have graduates whose characters are not so thoroughly established as to preclude their participating in the practice mentioned. To the learned of the land we should look for reformers of these evils.

Keep Good Company.

"Keep Good Company", is the advice of every careful parent or guardian to the children under their care. This is wholesome advice and should be followed. How easy it is for children to learn ungentlemanly manners from people who are evil minded or evil disposed. Good men and good women set good examples for those about them. Children usually imitate, to a great extent in action and in speech those with whom they associate. Hence the necessity of continually surrounding them with the best possible associates. If we would train up a child in the way he should go we would have him shun evil companions and mingle with those whose morals and manners were such as Christian people would approve of; such as would bear comparison with the Bible standard.

As with living companions we should be as careful of the reading our wards do. We should see to it that the best books and papers are furnished them, that they have reading matter in abundance that may supply them with information and amusement of a good healthful nature. Even the county papers which they are bound to read to learn the home news should be the cleanest, and purest papers the county affords. Papers which continually refer to wrong doing in a praiseworthy style, and lead, or tend to lead the young mind to see no wrong in Sabbath desecration, in imbibing intoxicating liquors, and in other things contrary to the teachings of Holy Writ should not be given the children weekly; if those which give the news, and condemns rather than praises wrong doing can be had. If we want good children we should give them good papers, and if we want good papers we should patronize them.

Too Much Drugs.

Many people are not happy unless they have drugs to take. They seem to think they need drugs. Just what for don't always appear. With some it seems to be because it is the fashion.

A good healthy person is a much more satisfactory neighbor than a confirmed doser. On rising in the morning it is much more agreeable to see your neighbors and your neighbor's children busy about the affairs of the day, and to have them accost you with a cheerful "Good morning", than to have them begin to tell you their ailments, their aches and pains, and how many bottles of "cureall" or "cure in a minute" or some "bitters" they had spent their money for, and feel that they need more; "appetite all gone".

As a matter of fact if they took no medicine to upset their systems their appetite would be better.

If a watch gets out of order it is carried to the watchmaker, who cleans it, and repairs it, and puts the smallest amount of oil on the points where friction occurs, and the watch runs and keeps time, and the owner is satisfied. He don't want his watch greased until it is gummed up so that it can't run. But when he feels badly he will hie himself off to some department store, or some quack medicine vendor, and lay in half a dozen or a dozen bottles of "kidney cure", "heart medicine" "pain killer" or "bitters" and in order that none be wasted, dose himself for weeks or months, for some trouble he never had. He will upset his whole system, perhaps, and make himself sick.

How strange that people trust their lives and the lives of their families to such treatment, when if a horse or cow is sick they are afraid they will lose it and call a veterinarian. One or two doses of a proper remedy often saves days or weeks of misery.

Youngers Paroled

On Wednesday, June 10, the board of pardons, Gov. VanSant, Attorney General Douglas, and Chief Justice Start agreed to to parole the Younger bros., Cole and Jim, who were put in the penitentiary for life, on Nov. 21, 1876, for the part they took in the Northfield bank robbery, and the killing of Cashier Hayward and a Swede.

The two men are to remain in Minnesota; on the 20th of each month they are to write the Warden a statement of how they are getting on. They are to work at some business for a living, where they will not be on exhibition.

There is considerable division of opinion as to the releasing of the two men from the prison. When they were incarcerated it was because under our state laws they could not be hung. Afterwards our statutes were made so that hanging could be the penalty. Nobody advocated hanging them, then. Now a law has been passed making it possible for them to be paroled, and they are the very first life termers to be paroled under the law. Well they may thank the good people of Minnesota, for their mercy and kindness in allowing them the freedom of the state.

On the action of there two men while under parole, depends a good deal whether or not others will be granted freedom from prison.

The Pioneer Press rather over does the thing in writing them up when it says "They are ten times better men than most of those whose unrelenting vindictiveness would have denied to their declining years the poor solace of being prisoners on parole." There are many in the state, and especially those living about the scene of their depredations, who did not favor releasing them, or anybody else in for life. Even one member of the Senate, when talking in favor of a bill for their release, said he would be willing to vote that the law permitting their parole be done away with as soon as the Younger boys were paroled. Was he vindictive to all others but the Youngers? It is pretty tough on the Minnesota people who didn't believe in their release to be told that they are ten times worse than the leader of the Northfield bank robbers But then it is only the Pioneer Press that makes the statement, and it doubtless expects the good people's forgiveness.

Has Not Changed His Mind.

Roanoke, Va., July 3.—William J Bryan was here a short time on his way to Pocahontas, Va. He made a short speech here on the station platform.

Mr Bryan said he had stood for the questions that several years ago dominated the Chicago platform because he believed in them. He had not changed his mind when the platform at Kansas City was enlarged to suit certain conditions. No backward step would be taken, he said, but even if one were taken it would be the same with him Mr Bryan said, in conclusion:

"I am fighting on, not so much to win, for I would rather die fighting for right than win fighting for something else."—St. Cloud Times.

Duluth Herald: The Philadelphia Press is authority for the statement that over $1,000,000 was spent in corrupting members of the last Pennsylvania legislature, which is distinguished as the most venal and unscrupulous ever known in that state, and hence in the Union. Votes on behalf of a Quay organization of the legislature, and then for the various "ripper" and franchise grab bills, are said to have commanded as high as $35,000 each in cases, and $10,000 and $20,000 were common payments. Many of the legislators return home with independent fortunes as a result of the session's work. The gang which bought them at such handsome prices will reimburse itself from the franchise and other steals on the state and people thereof.

FINERY AND FUSS.

The women folks are fixin' for a weddin', an' the fuss
The house is in here lately's only equaled by the muss
Of bastin' thread a-lyin' on the floor an' silken scraps
A-slippin' to the carpet off the sewin' women's laps.
The finery they're fixin' for our daughter's weddin' day,
An' her wardrobe, called a trousseau, will be simply grand they say;
There wa'n't no women flyin' round as crazy as a loon
When I married Mamie's mother in the golden month o' June!

I cannot help a-thinkin', when these ruffled things I see
The women folks a-makin', which they say's a lingerie,
All pieced up with embroidery an' tucked around with lace,
In her mother's clothes assortment them things never had a place.
Of course, I like t' see 'em, an' it's satisfyin', too,
T' think our girl can have all such, like folks that's well-to-do,
But with much less we entered on a happy life's forenoon
When I married Mamie's mother in the golden month o' June!

They've been t' see the florist, an' have all arrangements made
For flowers, palms an' orchids—quite a fancy price they paid.
A stylish preacher's been engaged t' tie the knot,
An', all in all, it seems t' me that nothin's been forgot.
We didn't have no flowers, but our life's been one of bliss,
We had a plain ol' parson, whom the bride paid with a kiss,
But two lives were simply blended an' two hearts were set in tune
When I married Mamie's mother in the golden month of June!

THE PROOF OF LOVE

By Elliott Flower.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

THE parish priest was reputed to be a good man and a wise one, but strict in his interpretation of the word of God. In worldly matters he was generous and kind-hearted, but in spiritual affairs he held closely to the letter of the law, and those who had offended against the church, however so slightly, rather shunned him. His manner at times was forbidding and his questions searching, but a spirit of justice pervaded all his acts and gave him an extraordinary power over his parishioners.

It was his reputation for justice that made the young woman anxious to see him; it was his reputation for severity and strictness in all church matters that made her hesitate on the threshold. She had a pretty face, but the imprint of sorrow was upon it. Scarcely more than 25 years of age, her black dress and veil proclaimed her already a widow, and her whole manner as she approached the priest showed her to be a devout Roman Catholic—a woman to whom the church was almost life itself.

"THERE CAN BE NO EXCUSES," SAID THE PRIEST.

"Father," she said at last, hesitating and pronouncing the words slowly, "I have a sin to confess—a dreadful sin."

"You can be guilty of no dreadful sin, daughter," he returned, kindly. "Your grief has overburdened your mind and you exaggerate your own faults. That is a failing few have," he added with a sigh, "but it has always been so with you, daughter; always so since—"

"You do not know, father," she interrupted. "You speak before you know what I would say. I have been guilty of the sin of lying."

"A sin that is lightly thought of in this world," he said, with a shake of his head. "But you meant no harm; 'twas a thoughtless, hasty act."

"No, father," she corrected; "it was done purposely. It was a lie deliberately told in the presence of death. It was a lie solemnly sworn to while you were in the next room waiting to deliver the last sacrament."

She spoke quietly but impressively, while the priest's face assumed an expression, first of doubt, and then of severity.

"There is no atonement for it," she went on, more quickly; "there can be no atonement for it! Nothing can excuse a lie sworn to before Almighty God!"

"There can be no excuse," said the priest, slowly, "but there can be forgiveness. Tell me about it, daughter. You could not have lied to your husband, to one you loved."

"I did not love him, father!" she broke in hastily, almost passionately. "I did not love him!"

"My child, think what you are saying."

"I did not love him," she repeated with deliberation. "I loved him once—you, who have known me from childhood, know how I loved him once—but love died, father, love died of neglect."

"He was kind to you," said the priest, half questioningly.

"Yes; he was kind to me, but I could have stood cruelty when I could not stand neglect. He was kind to me, but he left me to myself; he seemed to care nothing for me. He found his pleasures with others, and I—I—one day I found that love was gone, father; gone, never to return."

"Did he know this?"

"Yes, father; he learned it when it was too late." She was speaking sadly and softly now. "He tried to win back the love that he had lost, but it was too late—too late. Love once dead does not live again, however we may try to make it. I tried—indeed, I tried—to love him, but he failed to cherish love when it was his, father, and I had none to give again. He was thoughtless—I know now that he was only thoughtless—but he left me to weep alone with love until it died."

"If he had known—"

"Ah, but I could not ask for what was mine by right—not even in my unhappiness."

"Pride, daughter, pride!" said the priest with gentle reproach. "It gives nothing and demands much; it has wrecked many a happy life. He went to his grave without your love?"

"Yes, father, but he died happy. I made him happy, but— Oh, father, it does not seem right that it should be called a sin." She buried her face in her hands for a minute and seemed to be crying, but when she lifted her head she had partially regained her composure. "He tried so hard to regain my love, and sometimes I let him think he was succeeding. Surely there was no harm in that; there could be no harm in that, for he was kind and good to me, and—and I was sorry, father. I could forgive, if I could not love again. Then he sent for me when he was dying, and as I leaned over him he asked me in such a wistful way if I had learned to love him again. And I told him 'Yes.' What else could I do? Why should it be wrong, father, if it made him happy? But he doubted me. 'You say that because I am dying,' he said; 'you say that because you think it will make me happy and the church will overlook it.' Then he became excited—he was half delirious part of the time—and when I protested, he cried: 'Swear it! Swear it before God!' And I did, father—I got down on my knees in that chamber of death and called Almighty God to witness a lie. But he died happy, father; you know he died happy, and it was because of that lie."

"Are you sorry for it?" asked the priest, slowly.

She threw herself on her knees in front of him and cried passionately: "Oh, father, I know it was wicked to take God's name in vain that way, but I'm not sorry—I can't be sorry. It was a sin, a dreadful sin, but I'd do it again, father," and she suddenly looked up into his face with flashing, defiant eyes; "I'd do it again, if it doomed me to eternal damnation! I couldn't let him die that way when I could make him happy, even if it condemned my soul to the everlasting torments—"

"Peace, child," interrupted the priest, gently raising her. "It was no sin. You told the truth, although you knew it not."

GOT THE DESIRED BABY FOOD.

Father of a Starving Youngster Shows He Is Something of a Diplomat.

"What shall we do for the baby?" was often asked in a certain West side household recently. And certainly the baby needed something. It was pale and puny and seemed half-starved. The child was at the intermediary age when its natural food was insufficient, and still it was too young for beefsteak and potatoes, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"The child must have some baby food," said the mother.

"Yes," said the father, "he could have it if I were rich. It would cost $3 a week at least to supply him with baby food, and I get only $10 a week."

"But you are not going to let him starve?" she returned.

"No, I will manage to get it," he said. "If you will press my suit, dear, I will try to get some food tomorrow."

"What has the suit to do with it?" she asked.

"You will see," he said.

So next day the father of the starving young one went down town. He wore his Sunday suit that had done service for two years. When he entered one of the big drug stores he looked to be worth at least $5,000 a year. To a clerk he said:

"I called to see about baby foods. Our child is in need of some auxiliary nourishment, but I do not know what to get for him. My wife says our cook told the second girl that you might probably furnish us with some samples of the various kinds of foods you carry in stock. If you can do that we will try them and then I can order a supply of the kind that best agrees with the child."

"Certainly," said the clerk, and a package containing samples of seven kinds of baby food was forthcoming. The quantity was sufficient to last a month. When the supply is exhausted he will go to another drug store and tell the clerk what the cook told the second girl.

Much Reading for Little Money.

The New York World has got the cost of printing down to a minimum. Its latest offer of its monthly newspaper magazine is interesting if from no other cause than that it shows the acme of "how much for how little."

The Monthly World is a 32 page magazine with colored cover. Its pages are about the size of the pages of the Ladies' Home Journal, and it is copiously illustrated in half tone. The illustrations are the result of the best artistic skill, aided by all the latest printing press appliances, making a magazine unrivalled in the quality of its contents and its appearance.

Each issue contains stories of romance, love, adventure, travel; stories of fiction and fact; stories of things quaint and curious, gathered together from all over the world; the results of scientific research, and editorial reviews. Numbers among its contributors the leading literary men and women of the day.

A feature each month is a full page portrait of the most famed man or woman of the moment in the public eye.

In collecting and preparing for publication the literary matter and art subjects for the Monthly World no expense is spared.

The New York World will send six numbers of this newspaper magazine on receipt of fifteen cents in stamps. Address The World, Pulitzer Building, New York.

For the first time in its history during a heated term Havana is free from yellow fever. Chief Sanitary Officer Gorgas attributes the immunity, with its far-reaching consequences, to more thorough sanitation, but also and especially to destruction of mosquitoes.

According to Mr. Brodrick, secretary of state for war, the cost to England of continuing the campaign in South Africa, including the maintenance of prisoners, is $6,250,000 a week. War is an expensive luxury, besides being extremely unhealthy for the combatants.

In the five states of Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado and Connecticut the foreign population is 60,000 larger than it was in 1890, while in the same states the inhabitants of native birth have increased 1,000,000 in the same time. Foreign immigration is large, but the native element gains upon it steadily.

The congressmen will this year have trees as well as seeds placed at their disposal by the department of agriculture. Each congressman will receive 14,000 packages of vegetable seeds, 400 of flowers, 110 of tobacco, 40 of cotton, 30 of lawn grass, 25 of sugar beets, 50 of forage crops, 220 bulbs, 150 strawberries and 40 of grapes, besides 50 trees.

The trouble between Mr. Balfour, of London, and Miss Sartoris, granddaughter of Gen. Grant, proves to be nothing but incompatibility of temper. It is a good thing that they found this out when they were mere sweethearts and did not wait until after marriage for the appalling fact to transpire through the scandals of the divorce court.

Consul Mahin, of Reichenberg, says that, according to a report from Brussels, a Belgian engineer by the name of Tobiansky has discovered a method by which smoke can be turned into light. In operating his device the inventor collects the smoke from any kind of a fire and forces it into a receiver. It is then saturated with hydrocarbaret, and a brilliant light results.

It seems to be settled that Rear Admiral Schley will remain on waiting orders until the date of his retirement for age, which is October 9. Some of the friends of Admiral Schley have urged that he be detailed to prominent shore duty to round out his career, but the navy department has no place to which he could be assigned, and he is likely to fill in his period of active service on waiting orders.

The fact that persons who fall great distances often lose their boots in the descent has not yet been explained. Perhaps the most recent case is that of Charles James, of St. Agnes, who was unfortunate enough to fall a distance of 120 feet in Polbreen mine. During the fall both his boots (which had been tightly laced) came off and were discovered in the shaft fathoms above him.

The scope of wireless telegraphy will be limited on land by tall buildings containing iron and steel. Working of the Marconi machine on outgoing Atlantic steamers proved unsuccessful below the Battery because the currents from the transmitter to the receiver were affected by metallic influences ascribed by experts to the New York skyscraper. Nature is not prepared yet to surrender all her secrets to man.

Equinitis is the name applied to the disease which has laid up 100,000 of the 150,000 horses of Manhattan. In fact, it is grippe descended from the human species, and its effects upon other animals are analogous to those on mankind. The cure is essentially the same—rest, nutritious food and protection from wet and cold. Dry summer conditions are favorable to recovery if primary rules of health are observed.

Ernest Still, of Glencoe, Okla., has hit upon a novel plan to secure a wife and a fortune, and is raffling himself off at five dollars a chance, there being 3,000 tickets in all. Still agrees that the young woman who draws the lucky number will secure him for a husband and the $15,000 in cash. Judging from the fool scheme, it is an even wager that the woman who draws the "lucky number" will in time be willing to give $15,000 or twice that to get rid of him.

Prof. Johnston, of the University of Kansas, has discovered a means by which he expects to make the negro white. His method consists of inoculating the negro with the germs of leucitis, or albinism, a harmless disease which produces those oddities of nature known as albinos. While a colorless skin is the result of its work in a light-skinned person, the effect upon the negro is to bleach the skin only to a healthy flesh color. Prof. Johnston recently worked his discovery on a negro with success. The eyes alone did not change their color.

All the volunteers who took part in the war in the Philippines or who served in any part of America or its possessions under the army enlistment act of 1899 are now mustered out. Most of them were in the Philippines, and they have been conveyed to the United States in the past four or five months. This was a big job, and was accomplished without a hitch. A new army of 75,000 men, all regulars, has been created, and it is probably the most effective fighting force of its size in any country in the world. This army is not likely to be increased.

A leading insurance journal says that colds cost the life insurance companies a million dollars a month or more. It then quotes the highest medical authority in journalism as saying: "The philosophy of prevention is to preserve the natural and healthy action of the organism as a whole, and of the surface in particular, while habituating the skin to bear severe alterations of temperature by judicious exposure, and natural stimulation by pure air and clean water, and orderly habits of hygiene and health." Common sense.

TO BE OPENED AUGUST 6.

Synopsis of President' Proclamation Throwing Open Indian Lands to Settlers.

Washington, July 8.—The proclamation of President McKinley opening to settlement the lands ceded by Indians in the territory of Oklahoma has been given to the public. The proclamation covers the cessions made by the Wichita and affiliated bands of Indians in accordance with the act of March 2, 1895, and those made by the Comanche, Kiowa and Apache tribes in pursuance of the act of June 6, 1900.

According to the proclamation, beginning July 10 and ending July 26, those who wish to make an entry of land under the homestead law shall be registered at Reno and Lawton. The applicant will be required to show himself duly qualified to make homestead entry. After being registered applicants will be given certificates, allowing them to go upon the ceded lands and examine them in order to aid them in making an intelligent selection. During the first 60 days following this opening, no one but registered applicants will be permitted to make homestead settlements upon any of the lands, and then only in pursuance of a homestead entry duly allowed by the local land officers, or of a soldier's declaratory statement duly accepted by such officers.

The order in which during the first 60 days following the opening the registered applicants will be permitted to make homestead entry of the lands will be determined by drawings for both the El Reno and Lawson districts, publicly held at the United States land office at El Reno, Oklahoma, commencing at nine a. m. Monday, July 29, and continuing for such period as may be necessary under the supervision of a committee of taree persons, to be appointed by the secretary of the interior.

Preparatory to these drawings the registration officers will make out a card, which must be signed by the applicant, starting the land district in which he desires to make homestead entry, and giving a description of the applicant that will enable the local land officers to identify him. These cards will be numbered. At each land office, commencing August 6, at nine o'clock, must be presented the applications of those drawing Nos. 1 to 125, inclusive, and they will be considered in their numerical order during the first day, and the applications of those drawing Nos. 125 to 250, inclusive, must be presented, and will be considered in their numerical order during the second day, and so on at that rate until all the lands have been entered.

Settlers who are located on what is known as the "neutral strip," and who have improved the same, are given the preference in the matter of filing entries.

CAUSES MUCH SORROW.

Death at Honolulu of Paul Neumann, Long Prominent in Hawaiian Affairs.

Honolulu, July 2 (via San Francisco, July 9).—Paul Neumann died early this morning of paralysis of the brain, aged 68 years. He was one of the best-known and most-liked citizens of the islands, and his sudden death was a great shock to the community here. He was a very popular member of the bar, and had been mentioned as a gubernatorial possibility since the reports of Dole's possible resignation. Neumann represented the Hawaiian government at Washington and in various other capacities before annexation. In 1893 he represented Queen Liliuokalani at Washington during the troubles that followed the overthrow of the monarchy. Under King Kalakaua he held the post of attorney general. Before coming to Hawaii he lived in California, where he served three terms as a state senator. Neumann was born in Prussia. One of his sons is a cadet at Annapolis.

A FIEND CAPTURED.

Denver's "Jack the Ripper," Who Proves to Be a Demented Swede, Caught by the Police.

Denver, Col., July 9.—"Jack the Ripper" is caught. Almost red-handed with gore dripping from his clothes, his face bathed in blood, and flourishing a sanguinary knife, Christ Jensen, a demented Swede, stands accused of assassinating two women and killing the innocent little daughter of Mrs. Carrie C. Kinport. Shortly after midnight Jensen entered the room, barred the door, assaulted the child and carried the mutilated body to a vacant lot, where he slashed the body with a knife. The police believe efforts will be made to lynch Jensen.

DEATH WINS.

Illness of Pierre Lorillard, the Millionaire Tobacconist, Terminates Fatally.

New York, July 8.—Pierre Lorillard died at 2:10 Sunday afternoon. The death of Mr. Lorillard took place at the Fifth Avenue hotel, where he was taken from the Deutschland when that steamer arrived from Europe July 4. Mr. Lorillard's recent severe illness dated from June 20.

Various estimates have been made of the value of Mr. Lorillard's estate, and while its exact value at the present time is not known, it is believed that it is more than $25,000,000. As long ago as 1884 it was said to be from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000.

Consul General Stowe Resigns.

London, July 9.—A dispatch received here Monday from Cape Town announces that United States Consul General James G. Stowe has resigned and that he will sail from Cape Town on his return to the United States July 25. The resignation was based on the utter inadequacy of the salary of the post.

Says It Is True.

Salem, Ill., July 9. — William J. Bryan confirms the story that emissaries of Aguinaldo tried to see him last fall to make an offer of $100,000 contribution to campaign fund. He says he refused to meet the Filipino's representative.

END IS UNEXPECTED.

Close of Career of Prince Hohenlohe, Former German Imperial Chancellor, at Ragatz, Switzerland.

Berlin, July 8.—Prince von Hohenlohe, formerly German imperial chancellor, died at Ragatz, Switzerland, Friday evening.

Prince von Hohenlohe's death was generally unexpected here, as he left Berlin, several weeks ago, apparently in good health, although his increasing weakness was evident. The prince arrived at Ragatz extremely exhausted. His death is attributed to the weakness of old age.

Although Emperor William has fixed his departure on his trip to Norway for Monday next, it is deemed likely that his majesty will once more postpone the date of his starting on his trip in order to enable him to attend the obsequies. Owing to Emperor William's relationship to Prince von Hohenlohe, his majesty always called the prince "Uncle Chlodwig."

PRINCE VON HOHENLOHE.

Clodwig Carl Victor, prince of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst, was born at Rothenburg on March 31, 1819, and was the second son of Francis Joseph, prince of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst (of the line of Waldenburg). On the death of his father in 1841 Clodwig had just begun his judicial and historical studies in the University of Gottingen. A year later, after having passed his examination with distinction, he took a subordinate position in the public service as auscultator in the office of justice at Ehrenbreitstein. He next became referendary of the government at Potsdam.

At 27 years of age he became a hereditary member of the Bavarian parliament. The ministry, meanwhile, in Frankfort, sent him as ambassador to Athens, Florence and Rome. In 1849 he returned to Frankfort. Having married the princess of Seyn-Witgenstein, by whom he has a numerous family, he retired for ten years into private life, paying frequent visits to England, France and Italy.

In 1868-69 Prince Hohenlohe was elected vice president of the customs parliament of the German federation. In his capacity as foreign minister of Bavaria he issued his famous circular of April 9, 1869, directing the attention of the European cabinets to the serious consequences likely to arise from the decree of the ecumenical council of the vatican. Hoping to get the pope to withdraw his political opposition and viewing mere religious innovation with extreme indifference, the Prussian government slighted the warnings of the Bavarian minister and refused to take action against the contemplated decrees. In consequence of this desertion by the principal exponent of the unity party Prince Hohenlohe could not hold out against the attacks of opponents in the Bavarian parliament, and had to resign March 7, 1870.

In May, 1874, after the deplorable exit of Count Henry Arnim, Prince Hohenlohe was chosen German ambassador in Paris. He was one of the German plenipotentiaries in the congress of 1878. In August of that year he was reelected to the reichstag on the second ballot at Forchheim, Kulmbach, Bavaria, polling 9,800 votes, while his Catholic competitor had 8,600. After the death of Marshal Manteuffel, Prince Hohenlohe was appointed governor of Alsace-Lorraine, a position which he held until 1894, when he was appointed chancellor of the empire to succeed Caprivi. Prince Hohenlohe held the chancellorship until 1900, when he was succeeded by Count von Buelow.

CONSTITUTION'S FINE RACE.

Runs Away from Her Opponents, the Columbia and Independence.

Bateman's Point, R. I., July 8.—The Constitution won the race, finishing at about 5:45, beating the Columbia about nine minutes. When the time limit expired at 6:10 the Independence was about six miles from the finish line.

Bateman's Point, R. I., July 9.—The race Monday between the Herreshoff yachts Constitution and Columbia and the Crowninshield yacht Independence was sailed over a triangular course, ten miles to a leg, starting from five miles east-southeast of the lightship.

The preparatory gun was fired at 11:50 o'clock, and the starting gun was fired at 11:55 o'clock. The Constitution started off promptly, Independence and Columbia, however, having hard work in reaching the line in the handicap time.

The Constitution turned the first mark at 2:15:20 o'clock, as taken from shore, the Columbia at 2:26:10 and the Independence 2:55:25, 40 minutes behind the Constitution. At that time the Constitution was a good seven miles away, running towards the second mark.

The Constitution crossed the finish line at 4:54:20, beating the Columbia over three miles and the Independence nine and a half miles.

Injunction Granted.

Cleveland, O., July 9.—Judge Wing, of the United States circuit court, has issued a sweeping injunction against the striking molders on the application of the Otis Steel company, of this city. It enjoins local No. 218 of the Iron Molders' union of North America from picketing the premises or interfering in any manner whatsoever with the business or the employes of the Otis company. The court holds in effect that picketing is unlawful; that it consists of "organized espionage on the part of the union or others who are doing the picketing of the premises, or the employes of the firm in question." Commenting on the claim of the molders to the effect that their efforts had entirely been confined to persuasion, the court said: "Persuasion of itself, long continued, may become a nuisance and unlawful."

Held on Awful Charge.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 9.—Charles Dunn, a well-to-do lumber mill owner, and 65 years old, was arrested at Huntertown, ten miles north of this city, Monday night at ten o'clock, charged with the murder of ten-year-old Alice Cothrell. The little girl's dead body was found Monday afternoon in a cistern under Dunn's house. Last Wednesday the little girl was sent to Dunn's house on an errand. She did not return home, and search was instituted. But it was not until Sunday that her body was found.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Hypnotized.

Thor Tonclevald and wife, of Hanska, claim to have been robbed of a sum of money while hypnotized. A stranger representing himself to be a doctor stopped at their house and made inquiries about the health of Mrs. Tonclevald.

He declared that he could cure her of a trouble that she had long complained of, and agreed to do so for $100, to be paid him when the cure was effected. Three of the family were in the room with him, and they claim that he hypnotized them all and then suggested to Mr. Tonclevald that he go and get his money, which he did, the amount being $106.

The money was then returned to its hiding place, and the stranger brought the family out from under the influence of the hypnotic spell and soon left, saying he would be back in a few days. Later the money was found missing, and attempts to find the doctor have thus far proved unavailing.

Kills the Hoppers.

A deadly enemy to the grasshopper has appeared in many sections where the pest has worked considerable havoc during the past few weeks, and the hope is now expressed that all danger of further ravages from hoppers is about at an end.

The first hope in this direction was aroused by reports coming from Onstad and Fairfax, in Polk county, where it was stated that hoppers appeared to have lost their aggressiveness and were dying off in large quantities. An examination showed that small red insects, or parasites, were clinging to the dead hoppers, and those that were not dead were affected in a similar manner.

Buried Alive.

John Benson and Hjelmer Herbert met with a horrible death in the town of La Grand, Douglas county. They were engaged in digging a deep ditch for the purpose of draining a lake, when the loose soil closed around them and buried them completely. John G. Nelson, who was passing, made frantic efforts to dig them out with his hands, at the same time calling to Mr. Benson's son, who had been working with them. Other assistance was summoned, but before the earth could be removed both men were dead. Both were found in an almost upright position. The earth had closed in to a depth of about two feet above their heads.

Suicide of a Leper.

Ole Knuseth, who for fourteen years has been a victim of leprosy, put an end to his misery by hanging himself. Several years ago the man was sent by the county to an isolated farm several miles from Duluth, on one corner of which a hut was built for him. The past few months the disease had been affecting the unfortunate man's sight, and although he might have existed a number of years, a few weeks longer and he would have been totally blind. His body was found hanging from a rafter of his home, while a note was left to the effect that he was "glad it would soon be over."

A Mixed Brood.

Rev. C. F. Dykeman, of Aston, reports a curious incident in bird life that has come under his observation. A common barnyard fowl made her nest in some high weeds adjoining a public highway not far from Ashton. A quail passing that way found the nest and added to the collection of eggs. When the mother hen returned and began sitting she did not notice the difference in eggs and hatched out a mixed brood, in which quails predominated. She does not appear to notice the difference, however, and the feathered family is getting along very nicely.

Must Wait.

The first application of the law prohibiting marriages within six months after the divorce of either of the parties has been made at Duluth. Herman E. DeVilliers applied for a license to marry May Grenier, and on being questioned, said he was divorced two months ago. As arrangements for the wedding had been made, the couple were greatly perturbed when they were informed that they would have to wait four months longer.

News in Brief.

William White, son of a prominent farmer near Medford, was killed by the cars as he was hauling milk across the track.

J. A. Nash, of Minneapolis, broke his hip, but the doctors did not discover the fact for a week afterward.

University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind.

The attention of readers is called to the advertisement of Notre Dame University, one of the great educational institutions of the West, which appears in another column of this paper. Those who may have occasion to look up a college for their sons during the coming year would do well to correspond with the President, who will send them a catalogue free of charge, as well as all particulars regarding terms, courses of studies, etc.

There is a thorough preparatory school in connection with the University, in which students of all grades will have every opportunity of preparing themselves for higher studies. The Commercial Course intended for young men preparing for business, may be finished in one or two years, according to the ability of the student. ST. EDWARD'S HALL, for boys under thirteen, is an unique department of the institution. The higher courses are thorough in every respect, and students will find every opportunity of perfecting themselves in any line of work they may choose to select. Thoroughness in class-work, exactness in the care of students, and devotion to the best interests of all, are the distinguishing characteristics of Notre Dame University.

Fifty-six years of active work in the cause of education have made this institution famous all over the country.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S HAIR.

Its Profusion, at Her Age, Had Always Been a Wonder.

Over 80 years old, Queen Victoria yet had luxuriant hair, which was for years a marvel The court physician, following Prof. Unna's discovery, treated her Majesty's scalp with a germ destroying preparation, which he always kept secret. It is now known, however, that the remedy for dandruff, the germ destroying element, is embodied in Newbro's Herpicide, the only hair preparation on the market that does destroy the dandruff germ. Without dandruff hair will grow profusely, and falling hair will be stopped. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect."

A BROTHER'S LOVE.

Lostant, Ill., July 8.—James Watt, of this place, by one little act, has given a splendid example of that never dying love which exists between brothers, no matter how far apart they may be.

Mr. Watt was a great sufferer from Kidney Trouble and Nervousness. He was very much used up, and although he had tried a great many things, he had found nothing that would in any way relieve him. Some one suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, and he used six boxes, and was completely cured.

His first thought was for a brother in Belfast, Ireland, whom he knew to be afflicted in the same way that he had been. Mr. Watt immediately sent a supply of Dodd's Kidney Pills to this far-away brother, together with his recommendation based on his fortunate experience.

TO MOTHER.

'Twas a little house, so very small
That the highest part was scarcely as tall
As the cherry-trees, on either side,
Whose petals, left by the ebbing tide
Of vernal bloom, would a harbor find
On the long low slant of the roof, behind,
And mingle their snow, like surf by the sea,
With a coral drift from the old peach-tree.

'Twas a little house, and lilacs made
At small-paned windows a fragrant shade.
Roses and trumpet-vine clambered o'er
A latticed porch at the front room door.
And graveled paths through your flowers, sweet,
Made way for our eager childish feet
To press, where, safe hid by a dusky screen,
Was the "robin's nest" in the evergreen.

Those dear old flowers, I see them yet!—
The iris and pinks and mignonette,
The tiger-lilies and tall white phlox,
The love-forever and four-o'clocks,
The poppies and "rock'ry" out one side,
The violet bed, so long and wide,
Where I often stooped for the sweet bouquet
You carried to church on the Sabbath day.

And the house inside. So neat! So clean!
The carpet of gray and red and green;
The muslin curtains, and parlor chairs,
The tall old clock, and the rooms upstairs;
The "cookie jar" and the pantry shelves,
(Where you let us go and help ourselves)
And the kitchen stoop with a grape-vine woof
Through the wood-brown warp of its trellised roof.

I remember once, the sun had set
Though a passing splendor tarried yet,
You paused in the door, as one will wait;
The kiss-me-over-the-garden-gate
As high as you, and above my head,
Stood lush and still in the balsam bed.
And I placed, as we lingered, a flower there
In the soft dark coil of your wavy hair.
(How pretty you were in the afterglow
And, mother, I always think of you so!)

But all withheld from my youthful eyes
Were the toil and daily sacrifice
Of a dauntless spirit, a mind unfed,
Through paths your motherly duties led;
So, take as you did my posies then,
This later tribute from heart and pen,
And find, in the breathing of love's incense,
Something of triumph and recompense.

An Illogical Conclusion

By Florence W. Dinsmore.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

GORDON HAYNE had hardly taken his old seat at the club when George Hammond came up smiling.

"Congratulate you, old man!" he said.

"Thanks! On what?" responded Hayne from behind his paper. But next moment two other men repeated the felicitation.

Upon this Hayne looked up. "What's it all about?" he said. "Perhaps you'll explain?"

"Perhaps this will explain," mocked Hammond. And he read aloud a paragraph from a society journal:

"It is intimated, on the best authority, that the engagement of Miss Doris Atherton and Mr. Gordon Hayne will shortly be announced."

Hayne's teeth set hard, but his face did not change. "That's a stupid business," he said. "Somebody's blunder, which I shall have to contradict."

"Contradict!" exclaimed Hammond. "Why, everyone expected it a month ago. Then it's not true?"

"Not a word of truth in it," answered Hayne. And he walked away, leaving three puzzled faces behind.

Hayne went straight to the editor of the Social Calendar, with whom he had some acquaintance. The latter looked up from his writing with a smile.

"Ah, Mr. Hayne! Allow me to congratulate you!"

"That is precisely what I have come about," replied Hayne. "I want that notice of my engagement contradicted. It's a mistake."

"A mistake!" Deering stared at him. "How can that be? I had it from—"

"From whom?" Hayne leaned over the desk where Deering was pulling out some papers.

"From the lady herself. Yes, here it is. Written in the third person, but that's her monogram, you see?"

Hayne glanced at the dainty note, with its familiar breath of heliotrope. "Her monogram, but not her writing," he said. "This could not possibly have come from Miss Atherton. There is some strange mistake, and I can speak for both in requesting an immediate contradiction."

"Oh, certainly," answered Deering. "I am very sorry for the contretemps, but the utmost care is not an absolute safeguard, you know."

"Well," said Hayne, "there is nothing to be done now except to contradict it next week."

When his visitor had gone, Deering wasted a whole busy minute in trying to put together this curious puzzle. One month before, just such an announcement had seemed imminent. Then came Hayne's sudden departure, followed by much speculation as to whether the match had been broken off, or simply deferred. Next, his return, with the logical sequence of this notice in the Calendar. And last, the denial, which scattered the pieces again into hopeless confusion.

Meanwhile Hayne was thinking only that he was going to see Doris Atherton again. With every step his heart beat quickly against that bit of perfumed paper in his breast pocket. How it brought back their last meeting and their parting quarrel, his mad jealousy and his vow never to seek her again until she herself sent for him! And now— Well, she certainly had not sent for him; of course, she had known nothing of that mysterious announcement, but he owed it to himself to tell her that he was equally ignorant. And he felt an unacknowledged thrill of pleasure in the necessity of the meeting, painful and embarrassing as it must be.

As he sat waiting while his card was taken up, he looked eagerly around the room, so filled with reminders of bygone happiness. There was the piano, where they had sung together, the window box over whose blossoms their hands had met, the cozy corner where the first words of love had been spoken. But with her entrance, as they stood together again, face to face, yet so far apart, all the bitterness of the present swept back upon him.

There was no touch of hands, no lingering of eyes. Haynes bowed like a stranger. Miss Atherton glanced at him and then at the card she held. "You wished to see me on an urgent errand?" she said, repeating the penciled words.

"Yes," he answered, distantly. "This must be my excuse for troubling you," holding out the open paper and the monogramed note.

Her first blank wonder was followed by a flash of comprehension, and—was it amusement? Hayne bit his lip in anger, but as she raised her head he hastily banished all expression from his face.

"I am quite at a loss to account for this mystery," he said, formally. "Of course, I knew that you—I mean I wished to assure you that I—" He stopped, feeling that he was bungling horribly.

"Oh, yes; that goes without saying," she answered, demurely. "But I am afraid it is not a mystery to me."

"Not a mystery?" he repeated. "I can't imagine who—"

She smiled. "Perhaps you never realized what a thorough scapegrace that brother of mine is? You were always a favorite of Harry's," she went on, composedly, though her color came with this first allusion to the old time, "and he has wasted a great deal of argument since you went away. Now that you have come back— Well, I suppose he took the opportunity to play a bold game," smiling again. "His diplomacy is rather crude."

Hayne was piqued by her self-possession, and that phrase about wasted argument rankled. Was she entirely indifferent to him? She should not guess how much he cared for her.

He forced a laugh. "Then the little comedy may as well end now—since you don't share your brother's preference—"

The defiant words were never finished. For as he rose she looked up at him, and he saw that her face was pale and her lip quivering. The self-possession he resented had been only on the surface, and had given way under the strain.

He caught her hands. "Doris, you are not so heartless, after all! You do care something for me—Doris?"

She looked down at their clasped hands, and smiled. It was answer enough, and he was quick to seize his advantage.

"How could you let me suffer so long, Doris?" he said, with not very reasonable reproach. "You knew I would come if you sent for me. You might have written."

"I did write—a dozen letters."

"I never got one."

"No, for I tore them all up."

"You tore them up? And you could sacrifice me to your pride? Oh, Doris!"

"It was not pride," she declared. "I forgave you long ago. But I was afraid of another such scene. I thought if you were left to yourself for awhile, you would see the folly of it all, and come back in your right mind. For I felt sure you would come finally, whether I sent for you or not," smiling.

"Yes; I should have found some pretext," he confessed. "I don't think I could have stayed away much longer." He gave her hands a tender, triumphant little squeeze. "And now that we have forgiven each other," he said, magnanimously, "we won't say anything more about Jack Wetherell, will we, Doris?"

"I don't see why we should," she laughed. "He is Mabel's exclusive property. I told you that a month ago."

"Yes; but a month ago I was a jealous fool. Now—"

"Now even you can find no excuse for jealousy! Next week you may read their engagement in the Calendar."

"Bless the Calendar—and your brother! Doris," he broke off with a sudden laugh, "I told Deering to contradict that notice! Now what shall I do? Tell him it was a premature disclosure, but that he can announce the engagement next week?"

And Hayne laughed again, as he pictured Deering's face at this illogical conclusion.

LAUGH ON THE TEACHER.

Pupil's Truthful Response to an Invisible Problem Creates Fun for Her Fellows.

It was at the normal school that this happened, and the class laughed, says the Milwaukee Sentinel. It was a laugh on the teacher, too, but he didn't get angry, although it did break into the serious contemplation of serious studies with which he was trying to interest the students. It was in the study of psychology, and they were discussing what ideas first entered the human mind when certain words were spoken or written—whether the mind thought of one certain object designated by the word or the whole general class which is embodied in that word. To experiment on this mental phenomenon, in order to bring it more clearly to the attention of the students, the professor said he would write a word on the board, and then let one of them tell instantly what impression was made upon her mind. He called upon one of the pupils to be ready to think quickly and tell what her first thought was, after she saw the word which he was about to write. He stood close to the board, so that the word was hidden by his shoulders until he turned. He wrote the word "pig," and all of the class saw it except the girl who was standing ready to make reply. When he turned, he didn't get out of her way, and she couldn't see the word. In reply to his sharp, quick question:

"Now, what do you see?" she replied, naively: "I see you." And the class laughed.

C. E.'S IN CONVENTION.

Regular Programme Begun at Cincinnati — Delegates Hear Rev. G. Campbell Morgan.

Cincinnati, July 9.—After the business sessions of Saturday and the evangelist and other mass meetings of Sunday, the regular programmes of the twentieth international convention of the Christian Endeavor were begun Monday.

The chief topic of interest at the meetings Monday was the address, or rather, extemporaneous talk at the Central Christian church of Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of Baltimore, who is recognized among the church workers as the logical successor of the late evangelist, Dr. Dwight L. Moody.

The junior endeavorers met at the First English Lutheran church, where Treasurer William Shaw, of Boston, was the principal speaker.

A unique feature of the convention is the noonday evangelistic work arranged under the direction of Dr. C. L. Work, of Cincinnati. Services were held in the tenement and manufacturing districts by ladies and gentlemen visitors, who volunteered their services.

The afternoon's programme was equally as interesting as the one in the morning and enough meetings were held in the various places of assembling to give all visitors and local endeavorers a chance to attend. The big meeting at Auditorium Williston was presided over by James Lewis Howe, of Lexington, Va. It was devoted to a discussion of "The Twentieth Century Christian Endeavor Society." Chief among the speakers was Rev. Richard William Lewis, of Denver, Col.

DAWES WILL QUIT.

Comptroller of the Currency Tenders His Resignation—It to Take Effect October 1.

Washington, July 6.—Mr. Charles G. Dawes, comptroller of the currency, has tendered his resignation to the president, to take effect October 1 next. In answer to an inquiry, Mr. Dawes said:

"I have resigned because of my intention to be a candidate before the people of Illinois for the United States senate. It would not be possible for me, during the next year, to make a canvass for the senate and at the same time administer to my own satisfaction the important and responsible office I now hold. I am influenced solely in this action by what seems to me the plain proprieties of the situation."

CHARLES G. DAWES,
Comptroller of the Currency.

Mr. Dawes' term of office would not have expired until January 1, 1893.

Landslide and Flood Cause Loss of 300 Lives and Great Destruction to Property.

Tacoma, Wash., July 9.—Canton advices by the steamer Braemer give details of the loss of 300 lives by landslide and flood, occurring at Lung Keng in June. The landslide was caused by a tremendous earthquake which unsettled land and sea. There were many crashes resembling thunder and it became very dark. Native accounts state that a great flood of water poured out of the mountains, carrying everything before it. Two hundred houses were swept away and the fields swept bare of crops. Several great landslides occurred, carrying a large portion of Lung Keng into the bay. What appeared like a tidal wave followed, making it impossible for any who were carried into the water to escape.

IT WAS AN EXCITING RACE.

Leanders Beat Pennsylvania Crew by a Narrow Margin at Henley Regatta.

Henley, July 6.—To the disappointment of all the Americans at Henley the Leander Rowing club crew Friday morning defeated the crew of the University of Pennsylvania in the final heat for the Grand Challenge cup.

At the Isthmian the Pennsylvanians made a desperate spurt, but it was of no avail, and two men weakened perceptibly opposite the grand stand. The Leanders won by a length in 7 minutes 4 4-5 seconds.

King to Be Emperor.

London, July 5.—Mr. Chamberlain announced in the house of commons Thursday that a bill will be introduced changing the title of the king, "so as to more clearly recognize his sovereignty over the entire British empire." Members of parliament take the words to mean that another emperor is to be added to the world—that King Edward is to assume the title of "British emperor."

F. D. White Commits Suicide.

Syracuse, N. Y., July 9.—Frederick D. White, son of Andrew D. White, United States ambassador to Germany, committed suicide at 5:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at his home in this city. Prolonged ill-health and a persistent and exhausting nervous disease is given as the only possible explanation of his act.

Jessie Morrison Gets Five Years.

Eldorado, Kan., July 8. — Jessie Morrison was sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary at Lansing by Judge Alkman Saturday afternoon. She was convicted of killing Mrs. Colin Castle June 22, 1900, because of jealousy over Colin Castle. Miss Morrison received her sentence calmly.

HEAT AND HOLIDAY.

Together with Strikes They Serve as Slight Check to Progress of Business and Industrial Conditions.

New York, July 6.—Bradstreet's says: "Hot weather, holidays and stock taking, the first-named particularly, have limited trade in the period under review and caused a practical suspension in industrial activity in many cities. Against this seemingly unfavorable feature, however, is to be noted the fact that a good business has been done in all kinds of seasonable products at retail, and the check to trade at wholesale has been largely a postponement rather than actual elimination of business. The crop situation has on the whole improved, and corn and cotton, the two leading crops most in question at present, have gained some of the ground lost earlier in the season by cold weather. The wheat crop is certainly in a favorable condition, because harvesting has gone forward rapidly, and results have been on the whole quite satisfactory. Corn shows the heaviest advance for any week for a year past on reports of dry, hot weather damage, aided, however, by speculative manipulation and a fairly good export business.

"Commercial failures during the first half of 1901 numbered 5,759, with liabilities of $55,804,690, against 5,332 last year, for $74,747,452. In manufacturing lines there were 1,215 defaults, with $21,691,048 liabilities, while 4,189 traders failed for $24,864,307. The improvement over the preceding year was most striking in brokerage and banking insolvencies, which were $9,200,435 and $15,839,554, respectively, against $22,214,340 and $25,822,682 last year. This is the more noteworthy because the violent agitation in Wall street during May was calculated to cause serious disturbance, and the last week of June brought other failures through injudicious speculation and poor banking methods. While the half year's statement is gratifying, the second quarter makes a much better showing, liabilities declining $7,002,282, compared with the first quarter, and $17,623,675 in comparison with the second quarter of 1900. The average liability per failure was smaller than in the corresponding three months of any year since the records were first compiled. The proportion of bad debts to solvent payments through clearing houses was but 69 cents to each $1,000, and only one out of the preceding 105 quarters recorded a lower ratio, while the average amount of defaults to each firm in business was but $30.33, only seven other quarterly periods making smaller returns."

REFUSED BY BOERS.

Peace Negotiations Scorned — They Declare They Will Take Nothing But Independence.

London, July 5.—In the course of a discussion in the house of commons relative to the continuance of the war and the nature of the settlement, Mr. Brodrick, secretary of state for war, announced that Gen. Kitchener a few days ago granted permission to Commandant Gen. Botha to send a cipher message to Mr. Kruger, and also allowed a reply to be sent in cipher. The result of the concession was a meeting at which De Wet, Botha and other Boer leaders issued a proclamation to the burghers declaring that nothing short of independence would satisfy Mr. Kruger, and that fighting would continue until that was accomplished.

Dispatches from the front say the Boers still have 13,000 men in the field and declare that unless the war can be finished during the next two months the prospect is that it will continue for another year. The morning papers again urge the government to make vigorous efforts and to make no further attempts at negotiations.

London, July 9.—The financial secretary of the war office, Lord Stanley, in the house of commons Monday in answer to a question, gave the total number of Boers killed, wounded or made prisoners, from among the active commands, recently, as follows: March, 1,472; April, 2,434; May, 2,640; June, incomplete, 1,538.

PESTS OF THE FARMERS.

Grasshoppers and Locusts Do Great Damage to Crops in Red River Valley.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 5.—The grasshopper situation in some sections of Minnesota are alarming. Acting State Entomologist E. B. Forbes has just issued his first official statement of the existing conditions. He defines the boundary of the scourge in these words: "The Red river valley, all the way from Wilkin county to Kittson county, is suffering." The Rocky mountain locust is most prevalent. In the vicinity of Moorhead they are present in sufficient numbers to do great damage, if the weather conditions favor their work. In many places, he says, the insects have cleared up acres of young wheat, flax and potatoes, and the fields are as bare as they were previous to planting.

ASKS FREE TRADE.

Porto Rican Assembly Adopts a Resolution Formally Requesting the End of the Present Tariff.

San Juan, Porto Rico, July 5.—The first general celebration of the Fourth of July in Porto Rico was made notable by the passage and signing of the free trade resolution, the important step in ending for all time the tariff between the United States and its colony. It is asked that the present system be ended on July 25, the anniversary of the coming of the American flag.

The joint session of the assembly lasted three hours, and the action on the free trade resolution was unanimous. The assembly hall was crowded, and cheers greeted the announcement that Gov. Allen had signed the resolution.

Fatal Storms.

Port-au-Prince, July 9 (via Haytien cable).—A violent storm has been raging for three days past over the southern part of Hayti and San Domingo. Five persons were killed at Jacmel and nine people lost their lives at Les Cayes. Several sailing vessels have been wrecked. The region between Cotui and La Vega and the city of Santo Domingo has been inundated. Telegraphic communication is completely interrupted with Santo Domingo. The rivers have overflowed. A high wind continues as this dispatch is sent.

Pardoned by Governor.

Des Moines, Ia., July 6.—S. R. Dawson, who has served five years of a ten-year penitentiary sentence for shooting Walter Scott, his son-in-law, on Christmas night, 1895, has been paroled by Gov. Shaw. "Damascus" Dawson, as he is known, claims to have recovered the arts of making Damascus steel and of hardening copper. Capitalists who are interested in a company to develop Dawson's processes secured the evidence upon which he was paroled.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

Dr. Legrix, of the French Academy of Medicine, laments the growth of smoking among women. He says the practice leads to disease and death.

A jury at Indianapolis has acquitted a man charged with passing counterfeit money, the counterfeits having been put into a "jack-pot" during a poker game.

In a recent interview Bjornson declared that Europe consists of two races—the French and the others. "France," he said, "has surrounded herself with a Chinese wall."

Dr. Hannah W. Longshore, the first woman to practice medicine in Philadelphia, has just celebrated her eighty-second birthday. She has been a physician in the Quaker City for half a century, and was born there.

M. De Witte, the Russian minister of finance, is one of the few men who have risen above the bounds which aristocracy imposes upon his class. He is of humble peasant origin, and in his youth walked several hundred miles to join the czar's army.

"I think," said A. Bronson Alcott in one of his conversations, "when a man lives on beef he becomes something like an ox. If he eats mutton he begins to look sheepish; and, if he feeds on pork, may he not grow swinish?" "That may be," said Dr. Walker, of Cambridge, who was one of the listeners. "But, when a man lives on nothing but vegetables, I think he is apt to be pretty small potatoes."

Edward Tuck's gift to Dartmouth college of $100,000 for a building for the Tuck School of Administration and Finance, already established by him with an endowment of $350,000, is a noteworthy event. Mr. Tuck's plan promises to bring Dartmouth college into relations with the practical busy life of the United States. A school for the training of first-class business men will attract to Dartmouth many young men of ability.

A CHIP OFF THE OLD BLOCK.

She Caught the "Rebate" Idea from Her Father and Did Business on That Basis.

This incident is recalled because of the fact that the traveling freight agents recently made a flying visit to the city, and incidentally held their fifth annual convention, says the Detroit Free Press.

A daughter of one of this fraternity married a prosperous young business man of Detroit. Throughout the impressionable period of childhood she had heard much of rebates. The word was endlessly repeated in her father's conversation, and was not to be detached from her memory.

When the couple were about to engage in housekeeping her husband told her to figure out about what her household expenses would be, allow a margin in her favor, and fix the answer as determining the amount of the weekly allowance he would give her.

She had a long conference with the grocer, meat market attached and all vegetables in season. It was decided approximately what the weekly bill would be for her small family, and then she asked about a rebate.

"Rebate," he echoed, "why, bless your heart, I've put everything down to the lowest notch. Couldn't throw off a cent. Couldn't think of it. I must put everything high if you insist on a rebate."

"Well, that's just what I do. Every smart business person gives and takes rebates. Papa always thought more or less of them than he did of anything else in the world except himself and ready money. If I can't get a rebate, I'll go somewhere else. I'm no novice when it comes to business. Please understand that. What would trade and commerce be without rebates? I leave it to yourself."

So the grocer advanced his price 20 per cent., and allowed her 15 per cent. rebate, an arrangement highly satisfactory to herself. She secured an equally gratifying bargain with the dry goods merchant, the milkman, the dressmaker, the coal dealer and the ice man. Her husband scrutinized the figures suspiciously, but his chief aim was to have certainty and a system, so he made the allowance.

During the recent cyclone in stocks he participated. At the finish he was a squeezed sponge, and ready to begin life anew as a farm hand or a sewing machine agent. She cheerily opened up her rebate fund, counted out $3,000, enabled him to cover so that he cleaned up a competence, and then took him into the back yard to solemnly inform him that he would never prosper, unless he looked closely after the rebates.

Around the World Afoot.

A remarkable traveler is a Russian Cossack, who is journeying around the world on foot. He left his home on the slopes of the Caucasian mountains in 1892, and set out on a tramping expedition, with the determination of seeing the people and the countries of the world, having been filled with this desire from reading books of travel. During the nine years he has been in central Asia, Siberia, Manchuria, Corea, Japan, India, Persia, Turkey and the southern countries of Europe. He was in Paris during the recent exhibition there, and subsequently came over to London. He has yet to visit America, Australia and Africa. In the course of his wanderings he has experienced many strange adventures. He has gone days without food, and was obliged to make some of his sea journeys as a stowaway. He has acquired on his journey a fair knowledge of six languages. — London Chronicle.

Millions for Charity.

The gifts of American women last year for the purposes of public good aggregate a sum of over $20,000,000. Of this amount the largest individual sum is Mrs. Stanford's $10,000,00, and Mrs. Bradley's $600,000 is the next largest. During the previous years the gifts of 34 women in the United States for higher education amounted to $3,500,000, and of this sum Cora J. Flood gave the largest amount—no less than $2,000,000. Miss Helen Gould, besides her donation to the government, gave $40,000 for educational purposes.—Philadelphia Ledger.

—Read Schaffer's add for clothing, at half price.

—Will Basa bought a pair of young horses of Michael Devine a few weeks ago. He has been breaking them and now has a fine big team.

—Adickes brothers received a new threshing engine last week. It was fired up and helped unload itself from the cars. It appears to be a handy machine.

—Herbert Bronkow celebrated 4th of July. Now he don't take lessons on the violin. His right hand and his face are as powder marked as are those of some old veteran of the rebellion.

—A good watchdog is a nice thing in a neighborhood sometimes. But a fellow had about as well run the risk of being killed by robbers as to die for want of sleep on account of the barking of a dog all night.

—Delano Roller Mills seem to be doing their share of shipping flour these days. The mill has been run day and night a good share of the summer. There is money in milling business properly handled.

—The High School Alumni took an outing last Saturday night. They took a ride on one of the wagons fixed up for a 4th of July float, behind a four horse team. They had a very excellent time and all enjoyed the ride.

—The committee on streets and alleys has succeeded in removing a portion of the obstruction to travel in one alley. Let the good work go on. The committee is equal to the emergency if they but persist in their efforts till our alleys are clean.

—A. L. Jones has purchased the Frank Mann house, on the corner of River street and R. R. Ave., and on the river bank. He is having it straightened up and renovated generally. When he has got it to suit him, he expects to move his family into it. It will make a comfortable home and be near his livery business.

Long Prairie Leader: Wheat has dropped thirteen cents in the past three weeks. Is it possible that we are going to have Cleveland prices again under a Republican administration? The farmers' protected wool is also way down. On the other hand everything the farmer has to buy is doubled up in price. What's the matter anyway?

—Rye harvesting began Monday morning and much fine rye has been taken care of this week. Several crops standing in the field Monday morning should have been in the shock Saturday night, but the frequent showers delayed some farmers. Haying is being pushed since the 4th. It looks now as if an abundance of hay would be put up in good shape.

—The ball club held a meeting last Monday night and elected officers. C. H. Green was elected manager; L. E. Bartlett, assistant; Alfred Sandberg, secretary; O. F. Ball, treasurer; Elmer Erickson, captain; F. Q. Lindsley scorer. A satisfactory report was made of the business transacted up to date, and from this out the business affairs of the club will be conducted in a business like manner.

—The usual predictions are being made by some of our farmer friends that the chintz bug is going to take the crops. But so far, it is always a few farms away where they are bad. So long as they keep at a distance from everybody's crop there can be no harm done. F. F. Chancellor says he sent a few to the University Experiment Station to be inoculated with some disease to kill the whole lot. He expected them back soon.

—Vernon M. McCombs, a Hamline student, spoke at the M. E. church Sunday evening, on behalf of the American Sunday School Union. He received an offering for the purpose of helping pay the salary of a fellow student to continue the work in our country during the summer. There are many school districts where a Sunday school would be highly appreciated and productive of much good.

—Notices have been posted of the annual school meeting of Independent District No. 34. It is to be held on Saturday, July 20, at 7 P. M. at the School House. Two members of the Board of Education are to be chosen. Be on hand and help make the best possible selection. On the Board of Education depends, largely, the kind of school the district has. If we want a good school we should be careful to see that we have a Board that will see to having a good school.

—A great Scandinavian Fair has been planned for Minneapolis by the Scandinavian Literary Society. It is to be called the Vernamo Marknad, and will represent the oldest and best known fair grounds in Sweden. It will take place in the middle of July, opening up Sunday, July 14. The principal feature will be an old fashioned Swedish tavern with dining rooms and smoking parlors, where waiters and waitresses in old country costumes will serve the public. The fun part of the fair is to be reproduced. The receipts go toward a fund for celebrating special national holidays. We acknowledge receipt of two season tickets, —Last Saturday and Sunday were black letter days for the Delano base ball club. They lost a game on each day through general all around poor work—that is for the Delano team. Saturday afternoon, the Nebraska Indians defeated them by a score of 5 to 16. They were worthy opponents however, and play ball from the word go. They took one of the four games that Waseca has lost this year. The game here was on new grounds and the boys did not come up to their usual standard of excellence in all phases of the game. On Sunday the Watertown Stars defeated them by a score of 6 to 12. Undoubtedly the game of the previous day had considerable to do with it. Anyway the boys say they will never do it again. The team has now lost four games out of thirteen and has a percentage of .692.

—Reading people judge a town by its newspapers. If they think of visiting a county they hunt up a newspaper or two, published in the county, and look over the advertisements, and from the general make up of the paper judge of the kind of people living there. If they find advertisements of a good number of stores, blacksmith shops, lumber yards, and professional and other cards in a paper they say at once, "Why, that is a good town." But when they find that only a few of the many can afford, or have enterprise enough to advertise in the home paper they conclude that there is something wrong; that things are not as they should be and that the town don't amount to anymore than the people doing business there without advertising. A good live newspaper with an add or card from every business in town looks well, is a paying business, and pays not only the paper but the advertiser and everybody in town more or less.

At the County Seat.

The O'Hara vs O'Hara trial occupied the attention of Judge Giddings Monday and Tuesday.

The County Commissioners were in session Monday.

The Village council has leased Dudley's Park for the season. They have also taken steps to have the voters decide as to whether or not the village shall purchase a park now while the land is in market. The proposed site is a fine one from which a view of the village and of the lake can be had. Every town should have a park.

Summer school opened up Monday with 82 in attendance on the first day. Prof. Cranston, of Alexandria, and Superintendent Zech are in charge.

The term of District Court draws out pretty long.

Buffalo has a Solon who was paid to attend the Senate and help make laws last winter and now claims one of the laws passed is "null and void" and that he never saw it before it was shown to him about a month ago. We don't believe in paying people for what they didn't do.

Old Settlers Re union.

Atty. Briggs and wife entertained the following at their home Saturday: Mr. and Mrs. John Pierson, Sam Allen and wife, of Howard, Mrs. J. D. Young, of Delano, and Mrs. A. H. Taisy, of Donnelly. All were settlers of Minnesota in old territorial days and lived in the same town in 1856—Greenwood, Hennepin county. The reunion was a pleasant one and recalled memories of hardships and pleasantries in the days when this state was but sparsely settled—when people traveled on along cow paths to attend dances, meetings and evenings around a log fire, telling stories: when Indians and wild beasts infested the forests, which have given away to the productive and well improved farms of today. These old settlers started the moulding of the state into what it is today, they gave the best days of their lives up to facing hardships, and if they are now well todo, they deserve it all, and more.—Howard Lake Herald.

Among Our Exchanges.

The Darwin cheese factory is nearing completion. The machinery is now being put in, and in about a week the concern will be ready to receive milk. —Litchfield Independent.

Anoka Herald: The state board of health is seriously considering the proposition that all the lumber camps in the state which are known to have harbored men afflicted with small pox last winter be burned. It would be a rather expensive piece of work, but this expense would probably be less than that which would follow an epidemic during the busy season. One thing is certain, the people all over the state should assume a different attitude regarding small pox, or we may have an epidemic of the disease of a most virulent type. In its present state it is not much to be feared, but the best physicians warn us that it may assume a more malignant attitude without warning, if it is not kept under control.

Father to the Thought.

"Gustave Theden, president of the Minnesota Sugar Co., at St. Louis Park, says that sorghum is not practical, and ridicules the idea of S. M. Kenney's of Morristown, experiments. Theden says that the sorghum sugar properties were discovered long before Mr. Kenney was born and that the experiments are absolutely valueles so far as their having any bearing on the sugar industry of this country."

President Theden may be correct and no doubt the "wish is father to the thought" in this case, as it would mean death to the St. Louis Park Sugar Factory, if Mr. Kenney's theory should prove true, as we sincerely hope it will. —Valley Herald.

Banks In Trouble.

LONDON, July 10 -Mail advices received from Moscow report that two well known banks are in the last extremities, their paper being quoted at a third of its nominal value. It is added that the failure of these banks will certainly result in the ruin of many commercial houses. There is a general belief that a number of shaky concerns are sure to collapse. A recent ukase from the ministry of finance, instructing public companies to lodge their surplus cash with only first class banks is considered wise and necessary.—Duluth Herald.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 5, 1901

"Bonds, bonds, where are the bonds?" is a sort of game, something like "thimble, thimble"-etc. that numerous persons are engaged in playing. The bonds in the case are those alleged to have been issued by agents of the republic of Cuba, and the proceeds to have been expended in fighting Spain. Where those bonds are and how many of them are out is a question that is the key to the game and not likely to be fully answered until the holders of them make a demand on the Cuban government, soon to be established. One man, who probably knows about all that is to be known about those bonds, and may be has a big block of them himself, was in Washington this week, conferring with Secretary Root and Mr. McKinley. That was Gen. Maximo Gomez, who commanded what the Cubans were pleased to call an army when the Americans took possession of Cuba, and he came straight from the man who knows even more about the bonds than he does, because all that were sold had to pass through his hands. That man is Tomaso Estrada Palma, who was at the head of the Cuban junta in New York, where he still makes his home. Gen. Gomez talks a lot of rot about gratitude bringing him to Washington, but some very clear signs indicate that his real object is to secure administration influence for a Cuban Presidential candidate who can be depended upon not to turn the cold shoulder to Gomez and his friends who have Cuban bonds. But why he didn't fix it up with Gen. Wood, in Havana, without bringing the matter to Washington, is a little puzzling, although the fact that Gen. Wood's private secretary is with Gomez indicates that the visit to Washington was approved by Wood.

Senator Tillman passed through Washington this week, and he expressed some vigorous political opinions. For instance, he said: "It is stupid to talk about the democratic party being the enemy of the business interests. We did endorse the free coinage of silver, but events have proven that our contention as to the need of more money was correct The prosperity which the country has experienced is simply due to the large increase in the supply of gold through new discoveries. We are riding now on the crest of the wave, but it will not be long before we get into the trough. Hard times will come, and then what are the republicans to do. They have enacted a high tariff and have given us a gold standard and when they find that neither of these will avoid disaster, they will seek to find some other remedy, the result of which will be to help the rich without regard to the poor." Of the future democratic policy, Mr. Tillman said: "We will be against a carpet bag government for the Philippines, because we know the evils which such government brings in its train. I do not know that the money question will figure in the next campaign, but I do know that there will be plenty of vulnerable spots in the republican armor which we can attack." Of the probable democratic candidate, Senator Tillman said: "I do not yet see a candidate in sight, but, I for one, will not favor the nomination of any one who has not been identified with the party during the past four years I do not see how it is possible for so called democrats to expect the democratic party to endorse in 1904 the principles to which the republicans are now wedded, and yet they are solemnly discussing such a proposition. They expect the democrats to move side by side with the republicans and then win. That is not my way of making a fight."

Col. R. M. Johnson, Texas member of the Democratic National Committee, who passed through Washington this week, on his way to New York, said of the political outlook: "The democratic party is all right, and it has fully recovered from the defeat of 1900. What we want to do to win next year is simply to take advantage of our opportunities. The republicans seem to be all at sea on the tariff question, and in my opinion the tariff will again come to the front as an issue. But there will be other live issues besides the tariff in the next campaign."

Senator Hanna sent his private secretary to Washington to impress upon the mind of Mr. McKinley the necessity for his presence among the Ohio republicans to prevent the present bickering growing into a regular cut throat fight, and the result was that Mr. and Mrs. McKinley left Washington today for Canton.

As Mr. McKinley left Washington without appointing a new Pension Commissioner, it looks as though he had decided to allow Commissioner Evans to keep that position, notwithstanding the hubbub against him that has been aroused by the skillful agitation of profession "old soldiers", on the ground that his construction of the law has not given the old soldiers all that was coming to them in the way of pensions. It is hinted that an attempt is to be made to force Mr. McKinley to act by carrying the fight against Evans into Ohio politics.

BE TRUE.

Thou must be true thyself
If thou the truth would teach;
Thy soul must overflow
If thou another soul would reach;
It needs the overflowing heart
To give the life full speech.

Think truly, and thy thought
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and thy word
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

—Emerson.

GOV. L. A. ROSING would sound well to Minnesotians who like a fair, feerless and faithful chief executive officer.

FUNSTON'S report of the capture of Aguinaldo has been published lately. The more one reads of the matter the more he is disgusted with the whole affair. He admits using captured letters of Aguinaldos and writing answers forging the name of one of Aguinaldo's officers and we don't just know how many more crimes he committed to secure the Filipino general. But a man who admits breaking the ten commandments into so many fragments as he does can hardly expect people in this country to believe anything he says. Possibly it is, as first given out in some quarters, that the captured man is a brother of Aguinaldo, and not the general.

HENRY WATTERSON has succeeded in getting himself quoted by the lovers of the gold standard by praising up the Ohio convention for not endorsing the Kansas City platform and for trying to belittle Mr. Bryan. Of course Henry would see it that way. Hasn't he been doing what he could to assist the gold bugs for years past? If Henry believes in gold standard he ought to say so. And as Bryan has pointed out if the Buckeye gold bugs have got control of the Ohio democrats, they ought not to have shirked expressing themselves on the money question. They should have said, "We favor a gold standard."

A ST. PAUL paper has a picture of Judge Flandrau and a nice story by him about the Indian war in Minnesota's early days. That's all right. But it takes care to mention that the Judge is and always has been a leading Democrat, and how he hopes to live to see the party return to its principles, etc. As a fact the Judge has not been training with Democrats very much for some time. He in the campaign of 1896 advised Democrats to vote for McKinley, and as he has been on that side of the fence ever since, why parade him as a Democrat to be followed now? It is this kind of Democratic leaders that has helped McKinley and the gold bugs into power, and Democrats should not follow them now more than they did in '98.

SOME of the former neighborly nations to the United States have befiun to put on tariffs and trade restrictions against Uncle Sam's goods. Some years ago it was hard for our people to make goods enough to supply the home market in many branches. It has by improved machinery and other means, become possible for us to turn out manufactured articles in such abundance as to not only supply our own fellow citizens but to enter into competition with the goods of other nations in their home countries. These facts put our protective tariff laws in a different light with our neighboring and competing nations, and even convince some of our heretofore ardent protectionists that possibly we could do better by modifying our tariffs a little on some lines. It looks now as if free trade is bound to have a boom in this country.

WE were very much surprised a few days ago to hear an intelligent man past middle age, who appeared to be a citizen of this country say, "I sometimes think is a republic like ours able to cope with the questions before it." Our immediate reply was "It ought to be". He then went on to argue that capital was powerful and succeeded where it clashed with labor; that strikes usually ended favorable to the capitalists; that our independent voters were too easily influenced when it came to voting. He thought there would be a shaking up before long, but didn't know just what.

There is too much truth in some of these statements. But men must learn the lessons learned by the makers of the Declaration of Independence. They must learn that "We hold these truths to be self evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed;" are as applicable and just as dear to the heart of every true American citizen today, as they ever were. If men will learn their rights, the rights handed down to them by the revolutionary fathers, and stick up for them they will secure them.

City Held Liable.

DECATUR, Ill., July 16.—The city of Decatur today compromised the $15,000 suit of Mrs. Anna Hatfield for $7,500, making about $14,000 that will be paid. A number of boys had a private telegraph line across a street. Mrs. Hatfields boy was maimed for life, and James Lee's son was killed, while playing in Lee's yard. A storm broke the wire, and it fell, partly in the yard and on a trolley wire. The courts held that the city allowed the wire, a dangerous element, to remain in the street, and was liable. The cases were of importance as being without precedent.—Duluth News Tribune.

Nearly all the cities and many villages in Minnesota have been, and are permitting private wires and even public wires and other dangerous things within their limits. They not only tolerate the presence of wires but grant privileges to individuals or corporations to place their lines through streets and alleys. If the village is to be held responsible it is altogether likely that fewer permits will be given for dangerous elements. If the above decision stands, and we don't know why it should not, it is quite likely that in case trains that run regularly through towns at the rate of about a mile a minute kill or cripple somebody that the town will beheld responsible. It should be for permitting such contempt of laws.

REPUBLICANS in general and gold bugs in particular are worrying awfully this hot weather about who shall be the democratic candidate for president in '93. It is a long while yet. It would be better to build up and unify the party, on party, patriotic, honest principles, and look for the man that is honest and fearless and who will best represent the party when he is needed. This way of picking out a man, who will, through his friends, promise everybody everything, and who is not expected to give the country, the administration, the party and the people their desire; and who dare not say where he stands on leading issues; a man who suits the opponents of true democracy to a T, and whom the goldbugs had sooner have than to have a good Abraham Lincoln republican, is not the way that patriotic friends of a Republic like. People who favor a Republic, a Democracy, want to vote for principles in accord with life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; they want to have the greatest good to the largest number, and they want to arrive at the desires of the largest number by a free and honest vote and count. They don't want a government domineered over by trusts and the agents of trusts. They don't care to live in a country where it is openly charged that law makers and even voters among themselves are bought and corrupted in the discharge of their dearly prized and inherited right to vote.

Compulsory Vaccination.

ST. PAUL, July 16.—Secretary Bracken, of the state board of health, today consulted Assistant Attorney General Donahower, relative to his power to issue a general order requiring the vaccination of children throughout the state. In the opinion of the assistant attorney general it lies within the power of the state board to issue such an order when any infectious disease reaches the state of a general epidemic.

Dr. Bracken believes that smallpox has reached so nearly the proportions of an epidemic that such a step will be necessary to prevent its further spread. No order requiring a general vaccination has yet been issued by the secretary, but one is expected to appear within a few days.

It seems that if smallpox is to be suppressed in Minnesota vigorous measures must be resorted to. The disease has for a couple of years been very troublesome in different localities. Vaccination appears to protect in most cases. If people don't want to be vaccinated they should use other precautions, such as staying away from others if the slightest symptoms are manifested in their families.

No one should be misled into believing that smallpox has not existed in the state. It has been too conclusively proven that it has, to be successfully refuted.

Some claim that the prevailing disease is a new disease, neither smallpox nor chickenpox. We know of two families who had chickenpox, and within a year smallpox. One man swore he would not have his children vaccinated, and had taken them out of school on that account. The other family was not all vaccinated, some of them were. They with one or two other cases were all, in town, while chickenpox was quite prevalent.

The argument that the prevailing epedemic is not smallpox because of its mildness could as well be used concerning any other disease. Some seasons walking typhoid fever prevails; patients with marked symptoms of the disease are able to walk about during the entire time they are sick. Some seasons a large number of deaths occur from diphtheria; at other times more cases may occur, with but few or no deaths. Scarlet Fever, measles, and most diseases are found to vary at times. Because a disease is more fatal one year than it is another is no proof that the disease is not the same. And every doctor knows that some diseases are far more fatal in certain families than they are in others.

There has been within the past two years many cases that all united on calling chickenpox. There has been many cases that were as equally as pronounced smallpox. But few doctors seem to agree with the notion that there is a mongrel disease abroad in our midst. It is as well to be careful and where smallpox is suspected take all possible precautions to prevent its spread. At any time the comparatively mild disease may become severe and prove fatal enough to convince the most skeptical that it is smallpox.

THE STORM.

The squadroned troops of the Storm King rolled
Up from the dark'ning west;
With rumble of chariot wheels untold,
And glancing of towering crest.
And deep in the wood the bluebell heard
And waited with drooping head,
While out from the tree the twittering bird
Into the thicket sped.

With flashing of many a signal-light,
And mutter of martial drum,
He brought the conquering hosts of Night,
And the sun was overcome.
From hill and valley along his way
Were stricken the bonds of Heat
And not a leaf or a twig or spray
But blessed his hurrying feet,

Till the work was done; and adown the sky
He passed to the distance dim,
And drew his pennants, fluttering high,
Beneath the horizon's rim.
And deep in the wood the bluebell's face
Was covered with dewdrops o'er;
The sun peeped out from his hiding-place;
And the redbird sang once more.
—Edwin L. Sabin, in Youth's Companion.

. . The . . Reporter's Story

I AM a newspaper man—that is, I am employed on a morning newspaper to write news, not love stories.

In my "assignments" I meet many men and hear many strange tales, some true, but the majority not. But surely the strangest of all is that I am about to relate.

It is customary for newspaper men to buy almost every afternoon paper in order to familiarize themselves with events that have taken place in the time intervening between the previous issue of the morning paper on which they are employed and the following one. Not that this has anything to do with the story—except that it serves to introduce one of the characters. I always bought my paper from one boy—"Jim" Taylor by name—and thus formed rather a liking for him, for he was always courteous—and dirty.

"Jim," I had learned from him, was an orphan and lived at the Newsboys' lodging house. He had no care beyond earning enough to feed and clothe himself, and, of course, a sufficient amount left over for a ticket for "de gallery in the teayter," accompanied by the traditional pint of peanuts.

In the two or three years I had known "Jim" he had never been absent from his post of duty at the corner. But about two months ago he was missing from his accustomed "place of business," and although I made inquiries, I could get no information concerning him beyond the fact that his companions "hadn't heard narthin' of him." So, after pondering as to whether the little fellow had committed a criminal act and had been sent to some institution or had been run over by some vehicle and was perhaps lying in a hospital without relatives or friends to care as to the result of his injuries, and further inquiries proving fruitless, the name of "Jim" passed temporarily from my mind.

A week ago, upon going to the office to get my "assignment" for the day, I found that opposite my name on the book were these instructions: "See Senator H— in regard to the rumor that he had been offered the presidency of the —— national bank."

Going to the senator's house, my summons at the door was answered by a rather bright-looking boy dressed in the conventional blue suit with white metal buttons, of whom I inquired: "Is Senator H— at ho—well, I'm blessed if this isn't little 'Jim.' How in the world did you get here?"

At which "Jim" smiled a very broad smile and replied: "Yes, sir, the senator is at home. How did I get here? Oh, the senator will tell you that if he isn't too busy. Your card, please."

This was said in a tone plainly indicating that he was to be treated in a manner becoming his station as door boy, and not with the familiarity he had been accustomed to as newsboy.

My card was handed him, and he returned with the announcement that the senator would receive me in his study, and would I "please to walk in."

The senator proved to be a man of small stature, with clean shaven face, and had altogether a boyish appearance. After such formal introduction customary to newspaper men making themselves known to entire strangers, I boldly started in with: "Senator, I called to see you in reference to the rumor that you were offered the—oh, by the way, excuse me, but how do you happen to have 'Jim' Taylor in your employ? He and I are old acquaintances."

I could not resist the temptation to satisfy my curiosity on that score before attending to my official duty.

"Indeed," replied the senator, "I am very glad to hear it, for my wife and I think a great deal of James, and are happy to do a favor for any of his friends. As to how I came to employ 'Jim,' as you call him, it is a story well worth the telling, in confidence, of course, although the joke was on me.

"You see, about a year ago I was called out west to attend to some business concerning my committee. Continuous traveling is not conducive to improving a man's personal appearance, so you need not marvel that when I arrived in New York on the return from my flying trip to Cincinnati I was covered with dust and was looking rather seedy. Indeed, I was in such a hurry to get to my hotel that I paid no attention to my personal appearance, and so my face was dust-begrimed when I stood on the hotel steps.

"As I had only an hour to spare before starting off again—this time for Albany—I thought it would be a good idea to get some bright newsboy to carry a note I had written on the train over to Judge Brown's office. I had learned that a quarter of a dollar invested in a newsboy will bring quicker results than double the amount paid to an incorporated institution for the service of a slow-going messenger.

"Well, Jim Taylor happened to be standing near the hotel steps selling papers, so I called him and instructed him as to delivering the message. As 'Jim' had a great many papers, I said I would take them into the hotel and leave them with the clerk until he came back. Just as I was about to go into the office who should sing out a cheery 'Why, senator, how are you?' but Judge Brown himself. Glad to see him? Well, rather. I forgot that I was standing there on the steps of a public house with a mudgy face and a bundle of papers under my arm.

"The judge and I stood there for some minutes discussing some business matters, when our conversation was interrupted by a handsome woman, accompanied by an equally attractive young girl, who asked me for an evening paper and tendered a ten-cent piece in payment.

"The situation dawned upon me as quick as a flash and although my face assumed all the colors of the rainbow, I calmly (at least I think I did) handed over the paper and gave the young lady her change. Just imagine! She thought I was selling papers, and that in the presence of the judge, too! However, I smiled serenely. But when I overheard the conversation that ensued between the two ladies you can picture that smile changing into chagrin. It ran this way:

"'Poor fellow!' said the young lady to her companion, 'he looks as if he had seen better days.'

"'Yes,' responded the younger, 'but he seems old enough to keep his face washed.'

"This was too much. Abruptly leaving the judge, who was convulsed with laughter, I threw the papers away, rushed into the hotel office, registered, took a bath, was shaved, and left just in time to catch my train.

MY CARD WAS HANDED HIM.

"As James was waiting at the judge's office for him, of course I had departed before he came back, and so he did not get either his quarter or his newspapers, for I did not give him a thought in my chagrin and haste to get away.

"Well, I met the pretty young lady several times afterward at receptions, and those at the judge's house, too, mind you. And although the judge had not known her at the time of the ridiculous mistake, he immediately recalled the incident and came very near making the facts known to her. I managed to draw him aside in time to enforce a compact not to breathe a word about the matter.

"Two weeks ago, as you know, I was married to that same charming young lady, of course, and when I furnished this house, what better could I do than make a place for James, who was primarily the occasion of my happiness? Now, I want you to promise not to say a word about the matter, for if my wife was to know it—ah, er—Lucy, this is Mr. Blank; Mr. Blank, my wife."

Ah, well, I am only a newspaper reporter, sent about among scenes that both cheer and sadden, skilled by years of training to display no emotion, but somehow when I left the couple I felt that I would have willingly played newsboy for a year in order to have reaped the "profit" that the senator did.—N. Y. Times.

Last of the Fighters.

The last English king who fought on a battlefield was George II. At the battle of Dettingen, in Bavaria, 158 years ago, between the British, Hanoverian and Hessian troops (52,000 men) under George II. and the French (60,000 men) under Marshal Noailles, which resulted in a victory for the allies, his Britannic majesty continued the whole time in all the heat of the action. The conflict is said to have been fierce. George appeared in the same red coat he had worn at Oudenarde 35 years before. At one time he was nearly taken by the enemy, but was rescued by the Twenty-second regiment, the members of which, in remembrance of that day, wore a sprig of oak in their caps upon the anniversary of the battle for many years afterward.—N. Y. Press.

Teaching the Mosquito.

It is possible to accomplish not only more than one expects, but much more than one desires. "I understand Brown went to New Jersey last summer to study the mosquito," said one man to another, referring to a well-known entomologist. "So I heard," said the second man, "but when I met him the other day he said he felt that instead of studying entomology he'd been engaged in teaching anthropology most of the time!"—Youth's Companion.

Much Reading for Little Money.

The New York World has got the cost of printing down to a minimum. Its latest offer of its monthly newspaper magazine is interesting if from no other cause than that it shows the acme of "how much for how little."

The Monthly World is a 32 page magazine with colored cover. Its pages are about the size of the pages of the Ladies' Home Journal, and it is copiously illustrated in half tone. The illustrations are the result of the best artistic skill, aided by all the latest printing press appliances, making a magazine unrivalled in the quality of its contents and its appearance.

Each issue contains stories of romance, love, adventure, travel; stories of fiction and fact; stories of things quaint and curious, gathered together from all over the world; the results of scientific research, and editorial reviews. It numbers among its contributors the leading literary men and women of the day.

A feature each month is a full page portrait of the most famed man or woman of the moment in the public eye.

In collecting and preparing for publication the literary matter and art subjects for the Monthly World no expense is spared.

The New York World will send six numbers of this newspaper magazine on receipt of fifteen cents in stamps. Address The World, Pulitzer Building, New York.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Muscular rheumatism is sometimes produced by working in a garden, but never by playing baseball.

It is explained that the patriots who fought at Bunker Hill were heroes because they didn't know when they were licked. That peculiarity has lasted all through American history and still exists.

"I would give all my millions," said Mr. Carnegie to a caller, "if you could give me youth and health." Persons possessed of these treasures should make a note of their valuation by a man of varied experience.

A statistician comes forward with the news not generally known that our apple crop in the United States is worth more each year than the wheat crop. In 1900 the apple crop of the country was 215,000,000 barrels or 538,000,000 bushels, valued at $430,000,000.

Returning home from a protracted tour of the world, Robert J. Burdette says Americans can pray longer, swear louder and fight harder than any other people on earth. There may be some difference of opinion as to the remark, but the combination is a hard one to beat.

At last the indignation of mankind is aroused against the mosquito. A village improvement society in Connecticut has held a special meeting to devise ways and means to kill off this year's crop of the tuneful insect that carries a hypodermic apparatus for spreading disease.

The proverbial person whose face "would stop a clock" has found his match in Jean Beraud, the French conscript who was recently excused from his three years' service in the army on the round of homeliness. Jean's face was so tough that his comrades simply couldn't drill for laughing, and he was sent home rejoicing accordingly.

The board of ordnance has adopted a new magazine pistol which fires 116 shots per minute, as against 40 fired by the best Colt revolver, which has been up to the present time the standard weapon of the army. The new pistol is also said to fire more accurately than the Colt. It costs, however, $15 when bought in lots of 1,000.

A census bulletin says that Ohio has 102 people to the square mile; Illinois, 86; Indiana, 70; Kentucky, 53; Missouri, 45; Iowa, 40; Kansas, 18; Nebraska, 14; Wisconsin, 38; Michigan, 42; Minnesota, 22; Montana, less than 2; Utah, 3½; Nevada, one person to every 2½ square miles. Wyoming has less than one person to the square mile, and Texas has less than 12.

The annual report of the chief of the United States secret service shows that during the year ended June 30 the number of persons arrested for manufacturing or passing counterfeit money was 594, of whom 262 were convicted, 146 are awaiting the action of the courts, one is a fugitive from justice, one committed suicide while awaiting trial and 55 were acquitted. The figures show that counterfeiting Uncle Sam's money is not much safer than robbing his mails.

One feature of western civilization has made its first appearance in Japan, where a native woman has brought suit for breach of promise, hitherto an unknown procedure in the land of the chrysanthemum. The lady in question is a wise young widow who induced her well-to-do woer to sign an agreement that in case either party wished to back out he or she should forfeit 1,000 yen to the other. The prospective bridegroom broke the engagement and the widow seeks balm to the amount named.

Celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Dr. Gallaudet's work among deaf mutes recalls the fact that this class of deficients has realized in an extraordinary degree the humanity of science. Instruction has been so highly specialized for their benefit as to reduce to a minimum the limitations imposed by birth or subsequent misfortune. The sign alphabet which served excellently before lip reading came into use has been largely superseded by the latter, and there is hope that electricity will furnish aid in restoration of hearing.

The output of American shipyards for the past fiscal year was 401,285 tons—the largest tonnage built in any one year since 1854-55, when the era of wooden shipbuilding began to decline. As it is, the carrying capacity of the ships built last year exceeds that of the previous period because 207,000 tons of this year's building represents fast steel steamers, one of which will do more carrying in a year than a fleet of sailing vessels. Of the ships built 137,000 tons are designed for lake traffic—secured by law to American ships. Yankee enterprise is supreme.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, speaking of the Chicago proposal to muzzle cats, argues in this vein: "But if a cat is muzzled to prevent her from inflicting injury, why shouldn't her claws be muzzled as well as her jaws?" To which the Inter Ocean replies: "This comes from attempting to be serious in the silly season. The idea was not to muzzle cats to prevent them from biting, but to prevent them from singing, so that the pianos in the adjoining flats could be heard at least up to midnight. The cat-muzzling was to be in the interest of art."

QUIT THEIR WORK.

Strike of Union Laborers Against United States Steel Corporation Is Inaugurated.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 15.—The great strike of union labor against the United States Steel corporation has begun. The conference between the labor leaders and representatives of the corporations adjourned Saturday afternoon, admitting the impossibility of bringing about an agreement, and an hour later President Shaffer, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, sent out a telegram declaring the general strike. The message went to all the subordinate lodges of the Amalgamated Association in the mills of the American Sheet Steel company, the American Steel Hoop company and the American Tin Plate company, and said: "Notify your men that the mill is on a strike and will not work on Monday, July 15."

Forty-five thousand skilled workmen and 30,000 unskilled men are directly affected by this order. The entire membership of the Amalgamated association is understood to be about 60,000, but many outsiders sympathize with them and will cooperate, enforcing the closing of the mills and the shutting out of still other workmen. If this does not bring the United States Steel corporation to terms the strike will be extended before long to the mills of a number of others of its subordinate companies. The Federal Steel company, the National Steel company and the National Tube company will all have their union workmen ordered out. Practically the only company controlled by the United States corporation which will not be "struck" will be the Carnegie Steel company, in the mills of which the Amalgamated Association is not organized.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 16.—Reports received from all sources connected with the great strike of the steel workers indicate that the members of the Amalgamated association had matters well in hand and that the strike order was generally obeyed.

Fifty-four or 55 plants of the three steel companies against which the initial movement is directed were closed Monday.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 16.—The 4,500 employes of the National Tube company, at McKeesport, were notified Monday of an advance in wages of ten per cent. The men are not organized, but the Amalgamated association was making efforts to induce them to join the union. Several months ago the men demanded a ten per cent. advance, but were refused.

KILLED HIMSELF.

Judge Sellers, of Crawfordsville, Ind., Prominent Attorney and Politician, Commits Suicide.

Crawfordsville, Ind., July 15.—Judge James M. Sellers, one of the brightest and best-known attorneys in Indiana and a prominent figure in legal and political circles, was found dying in his office in this city Saturday morning. He had taken morphine with suicidal intent. At the table where the judge died was a letter that told the sad story. The letter said that his life was a failure and that his debts were large.

[Judge Sellers was born in the county in which he died in 1845, and was a close neighbor and intimate friend of the late Gov. Mount. He studied law with Daniel Voorhees, and his earliest efforts were those of cases in which the "Tall Sycamore" and ex-President Harrison figured. In politics he was an ardent democrat, and stood high in the councils of his party. In 1884 and again in 1888 he was county chairman. In 1892 he was elected joint senator, and served as a hold-over senator in 1894. He was the author of several measures that are now laws. In 1896 Judge Sellers was urged to enter the race for governor against his old neighbor, J. A. Mount, and went to the convention with good support of the district. It developed early, however, that Mr. Shively would be nominated, and Mr. Sellers' name was not presented.]

VOLCANO SPREADS DEATH.

Eruption on Island of Java Causes Loss of Nearly a Thousand Lives.

Tacoma, Wash., July 16.—Oriental advices give details of a terrible destruction of human life which occurred in northern Java last month by a sudden and terrific outburst of the volcano, Kloet. For 50 miles around all the coffee plantations and other estates were destroyed by showers of ashes and stones, together with great streams of lava and hot mud. Several hundred natives and a number of Europeans perished.

The lava also consumed the superintendent of the estate and about 25 coolies. Many coffee estates in the neighborhood were destroyed. The country around was strewn with corpses.

Welcome Rain Comes.

Kansas City, Mo., July 16.—A portion of the drought-stricken southwest has been relieved by rain during the past 24 hours. Great good has already resulted to crops, and as there are prospects of a further downfall, it is believed thousands upon thousands of dollars will be saved farmers on stock and crops. Nevertheless much greater quantities of rain must come before a lasting benefit is done. In the portions of central and western Missouri, western Kansas and the territories still untouched by rain conditions remain unchanged, the temperature ranging from 98 to 106, the latter at Hutchinson, Kan.

Aeronaut Falls.

Springfield, O., July 15.—Paul Hague, known as Prof. Zeno, an aeronaut, was fatally injured at Island park, falling 200 feet. The parachute failed to open, and he fell into a cornfield. Hague was married last Thursday to Mabel Brandon, also an aeronaut, who was seriously injured by falling from a balloon at the fair grounds in this city on June 22.

Steyn's Narrow Escape.

London, July 15.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated at Pretoria: "Broadwood's brigade surprised Reitz, capturing Steyn's brother and others. Steyn himself escaped in his shirtsleeves, with one other man only. The so-called 'Orange River government' and papers were captured."

CITIES SHOW GAINS.

According to the Recent Census Bulletin Urban Population Is More Than One-Third of Total.

Washington, July 12.—The census office issued a bulletin Thursday concerning the urban population of the country. It shows that 28,411,698 people in the United States live in cities and towns of over 4,000 population, a gain of almost five per cent. since the census of 1890, when the percentage was 32.9.

Compared with the returns of 1880 the report shows a gain in the urban population of the country of more than a third in percentage and of considerably more than double in actual numbers.

The population of the District of Columbia is regarded as urban. In the other states and territories the percentage of people living in cities and towns as compared with the entire population of the places ranges from 91.6 in Rhode Island to 2.5 in Indian territory.

The entire list is as follows:

Rhode Island	91.6	Louisiana	25.1
Massachusetts	86.9	Vermont	21.0
New York	71.2	Nebraska	20.8
New Jersey	67.5	Iowa	20.5
Connecticut	65.5	Kentucky	19.7
Pennsylvania	51.1	Kansas	19.2
Illinois	51.0	Florida	16.5
California	48.9	Virginia	16.5
Maryland	48.2	Texas	14.9
New Hampshire	46.7	Tennessee	14.1
Ohio	44.8	Georgia	13.9
Delaware	41.4	South Carolina	11.7
Colorado	41.2	West Virginia	11.6
Michigan	37.2	Arizona	10.6
Washington	36.4	Nevada	10.6
Maine	36.2	Alabama	10.0
Missouri	34.9	North Carolina	8.0
Wisconsin	34.5	South Dakota	7.2
Minnesota	31.0	Arkansas	6.9
Indiana	30.6	Idaho	6.2
Utah	29.4	New Mexico	6.1
Montana	28.9	North Dakota	5.4
Wyoming	28.8	Mississippi	5.3
Oregon	27.6	Oklahoma	5.0
Hawaii	25.5	Indian Territory	2.5

A NEW REVISION.

The American Episcopalians Present Latest Version of Bible—Their Work Outlined.

New York, July 15.—A committee of Biblical scholars, consisting of five bishops and five priests of the Protestant Episcopal church, has completed after six years of labor what is practically another revision of the Holy Scriptures. This committee is known as the joint commission on marginal readings in the Bible and was appointed at the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church in 1895 with instructions to report to the general convention in 1898. It did so, but limited its recommendations to the books of the New Testament. A resolution to continue the commission was adopted by the house of bishops and the house of deputies in the convention of 1898 in order that it might prepare a more complete report for the consideration of the convention of 1901, which meets in San Francisco in October. The commission consists of Bishops Dudley, of Kentucky, chairman; Gailor, of Tennessee; Hall, of Vermont; Niles, of New Hampshire; Whitehead, of Pittsburgh, and Revs. Carey, Binney, Body, Packard and Waterman. The commission has completed its report and sent copies of it, a printed pamphlet of upward of 300 pages, to the bishops of the country and to the clerical and lay delegates to the house of deputies. The report in part is as follows:

SPLITS THE PARTY.

Bryan Democrats of Ohio Will Probably Nominate a Ticket of Their Own.

Cleveland, O., July 15.—On July 31 Ohio democrats who believe in Bryan, the issues which he represents and that the recent democratic convention ignored, will assemble in Columbus and make up a state ticket. Ten men met Sunday morning in a downtown office building in this city and decided that a bolt should be made and that a new party should enter the field of Ohio politics. The attendance at the conference was larger and represented a greater area in the state than was expected by those who called the meeting. A formal statement of principles was submitted to the conference and was adopted. This will be printed and sent throughout the state to those who are known to be faithful to the Nebraskan. A convention was decided upon, to be held at the Great Southern hotel on the last day of July. To this convention may come all those who sign their names to the declaration of principles.

EDUCATORS ADJOURN.

The Convention at Detroit Adopts a Declaration of Principles—A Synopsis.

Detroit, Mich, July 13.—The National Educational association Friday night, at the last session of its fortieth annual convention, adopted a declaration of principles declaring that the problem of elementary education is the most important one with which the state must deal. The work of the bureau of education under Commissioner William T. Harris was indorsed, and the association declared that its powers should be extended so that it should have jurisdiction over educational matters in all of our new possessions. Compulsory educational laws and the consolidation of rural schools were indorsed and state support of institutions for the training of teachers is recommended.

Slain by a Maniac.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 15.—Raving under an insane spell, Ned Hartley Copeland shot and killed A. P. Rogers on Union Pacific train No. 6, eastbound, Friday night. The crime was committed near Wamsutta, this state, just before the train entered the station. Copeland is the defaulting teller of the National Bank of Omaha, and has been pursued by detectives since September, 1899. Rogers was a transportation agent for Swift & Co., and lived at St. Joseph, Mo. He was on his way home from San Francisco.

Made Auxiliary Bishop.

Chicago, July 13.—A papal bull signed by Leo XIII., accompanied by the recommendation of the Roman college of cardinals, on Friday made Rev. Peter J. Muldoon, of Chicago, auxiliary bishop of this diocese and tutelary bishop of Tamassensis. Bishop Muldoon is the rector of St. Charles church, Twelfth and Cypress streets, and in his new capacity will exercise all the high functions and duties of Archbishop Patrick A. Feehan, whose years require the aid of an able and youthful coadjutor.

VACANCY FILLED.

Alfred B. Kittredge Appointed United States Senator from South Dakota—His Career.

Pierre, S. D., July 12.—Gov. Herriod has appointed A. B. Kittredge, of Sioux Falls, United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Kyle.

[Alfred B. Kittredge is a native of New Hampshire, having been born in Cheshire county, March 26, 1861. His early education was obtained in the public schools, and when 17 years of age he entered Yale university. He was graduated from that institution in 1882 and at once commenced the study of law in the office of Judge Veasey at Rutland, Vt. In 1884 he entered the Yale law school and was graduated in 1885, being admitted to the bar by the supreme court of Connecticut in June of the same year. He removed to Sioux Falls, S. D., in 1885 and entered into a partnership with C. H. Winsor, one of the leading attorneys of that place. Mr. Kittredge early manifested an interest in state politics and for a long time was ex-Senator R. F. Pettigrew's trusted lieutenant. In 1896 the two parted upon the money question. Mr. Kittredge was the republican national committeeman from South Dakota in 1892 and 1896. He is a bachelor.]

GOES THROUGH A BRIDGE.

Many Persons Killed and Wounded in a Terrible Railroad Disaster at Springfield, Pa.

Cleveland, O., July 12.—A special to the Plain-Dealer from Conneaut, O., says: Just after ten o'clock Thursday three cars of the East end local freight went through the Nickel Plate bridge at Springfield, Pa. The train left Conneaut only a few minutes before the accident in charge of Engineer William Griffith, of Buffalo, and Conductor Phil A. Moore, of Buffalo. The bridge gang was at work on the bridge and the ten men injured are mostly workmen. A fill was being made at the bridge, and about 25 workmen were about the structure. The Conneaut wreck train, with local officials and doctors, left for the scene at 11 o'clock.

The horrible affair occurred just after passenger train No. 3 had pulled through. The local, after the passing of the passenger train, passed three cars heavily laden out onto the structure to unload stone for the masons working beneath on the large stone foundations. The work of unloading had hardly begun when, without any warning, the whole structure bearing the three laden cars filled with laborers fell with an awful crash into the valley. So sudden was the affair that only one man, a mason named George Smith, had a chance to leap in time to save himself from injury.

The list of dead includes: Conductor Phil A. Moore, Conneaut; J. Seaboss, workman, Cleveland; George Swartz, workman, Springfield; Homer Beckwith, foreman, Conneaut. Five Italians, names as yet unknown; Randall West, Springfield.

DEADLY THUNDERBOLT.

Lightning at Newcomerstown, O., Kills Three and Injures Two Other Persons.

Columbus, O., July 16.—A special to the Ohio State Journal from Newcomerstown, O., says: During a heavy storm Monday afternoon lightning struck a straw shed on the farm of Mrs. C. McMacklin, about one mile north of town, instantly killing Mrs. James Huff, her daughter, Mrs. Thornton, and the latter's four-year-old daughter. Mrs. Huff's daughter Myrtle, aged 16, and another child of Mrs. Thornton, aged about seven, were seriously injured. The party had been blackberrying and took shelter during the rain under the shed. The shed was knocked down by lightning and the entire party was buried under the chaff and straw for two hours or more, until some parties near by were attracted by calls for help from those who escaped death.

OUT ON PAROLE.

Gov. Savage, of Nebraska, Is Lenient to Ex-State Treasurer Bartley, Convicted of Embezzlement.

Lincoln, Neb., July 15.—Gov. Savage late Saturday night issued an order of parole to Joseph S. Bartley, former state treasurer of Nebraska, convicted of the embezzlement of nearly $500,000 and sentenced to the penitentiary for 20 years. Bartley was released from the prison at ten o'clock, his parole being made to his attorney, Charles P. Whedon. Only the governor, Mr. Whedon and Warden Davis were aware of the action. Bartley had only served 49 months of his term.

Goes Through Whirlpool Rapids.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 15.—About 3,000 persons saw Carlisle D. Graham make his fifth successful voyage through the whirlpool rapids in a barrel Sunday afternoon. The barrel is of locust wood, oval-shaped, except that it has a flat head; it is about five feet long, 19 inches in diameter at the foot and 26 inches at the head. With its 100 pounds of ballast it weighs 165 pounds. The start was made from the old Maid of the Mist landing below the falls. Graham was slightly bruised about the elbows and knees, but he was otherwise unhurt.

Victim of a Mob.

Montgomery, Ala., July 16.—A mob of negroes at Courtland on Monday hanged Alexander Herman, a negro who was charged with killing Sallie Swoope. When the officers took Herman to the train on their way to Tuscumbia to place him in jail for safe keeping the negroes held the train, took the prisoner off and hanged him, afterwards riddling his body with bullets. Herman made a confession.

The Trust Problem.

To a thoughtful mind, the trust problem is one of serious import. It must be firmly grappled with, for it creeps upon society before you are aware of its existence, in this respect much resembling the various disorders which attack the stomach, such as constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the one reliable remedy for all such ailments. Be sure to give it a trial.

One of Dinah's Surprises.

A Baltimore woman recently secured an old and typical southern cook named Dinah, whose unfamiliarity with city ways and her questions were a constant source of amusement to the family.

One morning shortly after she arrived the door bell rang and Dinah answered it as usual. In a minute she came back with a surprised expression. "Missus," she exclaimed, "der am a man dere what wants 24 cents for de Sun." Mrs. Justi gave her the money and she returned to the door.

After the man had gone Dinah asked: "Does you hab to pay for de sunshine here, missus? In Virginia we don't hab to pay for de sun. It's just as free as de air of hebben."—Baltimore Sun.

THE HAIR BRUSH.

Breeds Dandruff, Which Causes Falling Hair and Finally Baldness.

Prof. Unna, Hamburg, Germany, European authority on skin diseases, says that dandruff is as contagious as any other malevolent disease, and that one common source of the spread of dandruff is the use of the same hair brush by different persons. The way to avoid catching dandruff or any other disease from another's brush, is to insist on the use of Newbro's Herpicide. It not only kills the dandruff germ, but it is also an antiseptic that will prevent the catching of any disease whatever through contagion of another's brush.

An Emphatic Touch.

The man who lives in a flat and is often annoyed by the violent piano playing of his otherwise agreeable neighbor of the floor below remarked to his wife the other day:

"That Smith downstairs would make an elegant carpet beater."

"Why?" asked his wife.

"Oh, he has the regular carpet beater's touch," replied her husband.—N. Y. Times.

Supreme Court Sustains the Foot-Ease Trade-Mark.

Justice Laughlin, in the supreme court, Buffalo, has ordered a permanent injunction, with costs and a full accounting of sales, to issue against Paul B. Hudson, the manufacturer of the foot powder called "Dr. Clark's Foot Powder," and also against a retail dealer of Brooklyn, restraining them from making or selling the Dr. Clark's Foot Powder, which is declared, in the injunction of the court, an imitation and infringement of "Foot-Ease," the powder to shake into your shoes, now so largely advertised and sold over the country. Allen S. Olmsted, of Leroy, N. Y., is the owner of the trade-mark "Foot-Ease," and he is the first individual who ever advertised a foot powder extensively over the country. The decision in this case upholds his trade-mark and renders all parties liable who fraudulently attempt to profit by the extensive "Foot-Ease" advertising, in placing upon the market a spurious and similar appearing preparation, labeled and put up in envelopes and boxes like Foot-Ease. Similar suits will be brought against others who are now infringing on the Foot-Ease trademark and common law rights.

A Preferred Caller.

"It is always customary for the family to sit on the back porch when the daughter has a beau, but an Atchison girl has such a Good Thing calling on her that the family leave the premises and go and sit in a vacant lot across the alley."—Atchison Globe.

Cruel Girl.

"Your conversation, Mr. Hevviman," said Miss Peppery, suppressing a yawn, "reminds me of some champagne."

"Ah!" exclaimed Hevviman, much pleased, "so sparkling as that?"

"No, but it's extra dry."—Philadelphia Press.

The Bright Side.

"It is said that lobsters will be extinct in 25 years," remarked Hiland.

"Oh, well," replied Halket, who is very fond of lobster, "let us not worry about it. Let us look on the bright side. We may all die before that time."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

Very Airish.

"I would like to see some of the latest airs," said the customer in the music department.

"Then just step over to the dudish floorwalker," responded the saleslady. "He is just full of them."—Chicago Daily News.

The Charges.

NOTHING GAINED WITHOUT GRIT

There's nothing that's gained without grit—
Remember that always, my lad—
Ambition will solemnly sit,
And energy, mayhap, go mad.
Unless grit will push them along
To the goal where success reigns supreme,
Your life's but a somnolent song,
Your struggle a wearisome dream.
Ah, then, if the nail you would hit,
Be sure that you do it with grit;
For until you do,
You will find it quite true
That nothing is gained without grit,
My lad—
That nothing is gained without grit.

You struggle until you are old,
Then say, with a sigh: "Nothing won,
Oh, why didn't someone take hold
And drive me till something was done?"
Why didn't you know how to grasp
The value of each flitting day,
And not let old Idleness clasp
You tight in his meshes and say:
"Ah, lad, you can't win on your wit,
It takes lots of courage and grit—
You may conquer a place
Near the first in the race—
But nothing is gained without grit,
My lad—
No, nothing is gained without grit."

—Robert Gray, in Success.

At Hobson's Crossing

By Roland J. Dodd.

(From National Magazine. Reprinted by Permission.)

THE section boss, with a brown jug in his hand, was coming slowly down the track, stepping heavily from tie to tie, and pausing often to examine some fancied defect in rail or sleeper. Finally he arrived at the station, and, seating himself on the baggage truck beside the Man, drew his brown, corded arm across his face.

"'Tis a warm day we're havin'," he said.

The operator took his pipe from his mouth and spat contemptuously on the ground. "Warm!" he exclaimed, "You don't call this warm, do you?"

"It may not be warm sittin' here in the shade wid nothin' to do," answered the boss, "but just come out an' try yer hand at liftin' ties in the sun. Well, I must be filling me jug."

He arose and went slowly across the track and up the sandy road toward his house. The operator watched him until he disappeared within the door. Closing his eyes, the operator tried in vain to express to himself his utter contempt of Hobson's Crossing and of the $30 a month which he received for enduring its heat and the deadly loneliness of the long, silent days. Unconsciously he formed his thoughts into the words of a letter: "Dear Sir: I wish, if you can find nothing better for me than this situation, to tender you my resignation from the position of operator at Hobson's Crossing. I will remain here until you can send a man to relieve me."

On the bench inside the office, a sounder, ancient and dirt-encrusted, sputtered at periodical intervals. As the Man listened idly to its mutterings, he became aware of a conversation which was being carried on over the wire.

"Do you love me, Daisy, dear?" asked the sounder.

"Yes, George, you know I do. What makes you ask?"

"I just wanted to know, Daisy, dear."

It was the smart Western Union operator in Chicago who was making the crippled old sounder at Hobson's Crossing scratch and squeak with his clean-cut, rapid Morse. The Man at Hobson's became suddenly interested. He arose, and going into the little office, skillfully adjusted the screws and drew up the spring of the machine, so that the letters came in a clear and steady hum. This was the kind of stuff the Man loved to hear, for he himself was an adept with the key, and in his happier days had mastered the mysteries of the Associate Press code. Love passed in streaks and flashes over the wire. The Chicago operator's style was clear, sharp and beautiful. The girl up in Rochester strove to imitate it, but with indifferent success. Her style lacked the finish of the master hand. As the Man at Hobson's listened his fingers itched to take the key and once more make the sounder purr as in his happier days. Suddenly an inspiration came to him. He looked at the clock. It was 3:45, and the Chicago operator would go off duty at four o'clock.

"I'll do it!" exclaimed the Man, bringing down his fist on the bench.

The next quarter of an hour he spent in adjusting the screws of the heavy old brass key. He took out the lever, rubbed the dust off it with his handkerchief, and polished the platinum points till they shone. Then he put back the lever and carefully turned the screws until he could just see the light between the points of contact. At five minutes past four he opened the key and said, softly: "Hello, Daisy dear."

"Yes, George."

"Do you love me still?" whizzed the old brass key.

"Gracious, George!" said the girl. "Don't send so fast; you frighten me."

"I'm not sending fast," hummed the Man. "I couldn't send slower than this if I tried. I just wanted to tell you, Daisy, that I think you're just about the nicest girl that ever—"

"Why don't you ever come up to see me, then?" flashed the girl. "You've been saying such things as that for the last six months; you've agreed to come half a dozen times, but you never come. Now, George, you listen to me. If you don't come up next Sunday, as you agreed, I'll never speak another word to you on this wire. So, there!"

Leaning back in his chair, the Man looked at the pile of ties on the other side of the track and wondered if the operator in Chicago intended to go up to Rochester next Sunday. Probably not. Those city operators were impecunious chaps, and to the best of them four or five dollars car fare would be a good deal of an obstacle, even in the path of love. The Man at Hobson's Crossing thought hard. Here was a situation which required all his powers of diplomacy. This invitation must be accepted, or he would lose his chance of keeping in practice for the Associated Press job he had in view. It did not take the Man long to make up his mind.

"I'll come up next Sunday on the nine o'clock train," he told the girl, "but don't say anything about it on the wire. The boys here in the office would guy me if they knew."

Then he wired the superintendent:

"Please send me a pass to Rochester and return."

The church bells were ringing and the people were going to church as the Man stepped off the train at Rochester on the following Sunday morning. He had never been there before. The place was small, he noted, but it was a paradise when compared to the horrible sand hole he had lately left. The air was cool and sweet, and after the death-like stillness of Hobson's Crossing, the sound of the church bells was sweet music in his ears. The man promenaded jauntily up and down the platform. He was 24, tall and slim, and a very good-looking fellow when, as on this occasion, he was shaved and arrayed in his best. Soon he caught sight of a familiar object—a blue Western Union sign over a window in the station. Through this window he saw a girl reading. She had crinkly brown hair and a pretty face. Bashfulness not being one of the Man's failings, he brushed a few specks of dust from his clothes, gave his blonde mustache a final twirl, and presented himself at the window of the telegraph office.

He was about to say: "Hello, Daisy," but he did not say it. There was something about the girl that caused him instead to lift his hat and stammer: "Is Miss—" he stopped in confusion.

The girl laughed. "My name is Daisy," she said, "and yours is George, isn't it? I thought you never were coming."

The Man noticed that her hands were very small and white, and that she had big brown eyes.

At first they talked on telegraphic matters, chiefly. The girl asked him a great many questions concerning the big office in Chicago, all of which the Man answered unblushingly. He even ventured certain remarks about "that guy at Hobson's Crossing."

"It must be hard to work in such a busy place," said she.

"It is hard," replied the Man, "but then, we get used to it, you see."

Later, as they walked about the village, the girl pointed out to him the principal buildings of the place—the courthouse, the town hall, the public library.

"Do you know," she said: "You look just as I imagined you did. You're tall and slim, just as I knew you'd be. I like tall people. I suppose it's because I'm so small myself." The girl glanced up shyly into the face of the Man and continued: "I suppose you're disappointed with me?"

As the Man was boarding the train later in the afternoon, the girl handed him a photograph. "This is the picture I promised you so long ago," she said. "Good-by, George." She stood waving her handkerchief until the train passed out of sight.

The Man placed the photograph on the bench behind the old sounder at Hobson's Crossing. He lived in a kind of dream and looked often at the picture. It rested his eyes, weary with gazing across the track at the desolate waste of stumps beyond.

One day he sat on the baggage truck, holding in his hand a typewritten letter. As he read it for the fourth time he heard the sounder say: "Daisy dear."

"Yes, George."

"Do you love me still?"

"Yes, George, you know I do."

"Honestly?"

"Truly."

At this point the Man at Hobson's Crossing reached through the open window and pulled a small brass plug out of the little switchboard. The sounder was silent. When he reinserted the plug the Chicago operator was gone. The Man at Hobson's opened the key and said: "Daisy."

"What is it, George?"

"I've got something to tell you. Are you ready to hear it?"

"Yes."

"Daisy," said the Man, "I am going to leave this wire. I am going to work for the A. P." He paused.

"I've got something else to say, Daisy," he went on, after a moment, "but I guess I ought to say g. b. first. You won't speak to me after I've told you." He wiped the perspiration from his brow and continued deliberately: "I'm a fake, Daisy." Then he waited in suspense for her answer.

"What kind of a fake, George. There are different kinds, you know."

"Daisy," said the Man, "this is no time to joke. I say I'm a fake. You think I'm that fellow down in Chicago, don't you?"

"Of course."

"Well, I aint."

"Where are you, then?"

The Man passed his sleeve across his damp brow and sent the dread words: "Hobson's Crossing!"

For a moment the sounder was silent. Then it said: "Why, you stupid, did you think that would make any difference?"

The Man was sitting on the baggage truck in front of the telegraph office at Hobson's Crossing. Down the track, toward where the section gang was working, the heat rose in curling columns from the rails. The leaves withered, and the paint on the station blistered and swelled. A death-like stillness reigned over Hobson's Crossing. But neither the stillness nor the heat nor the flies could depress the Man's spirits, for beside him on the baggage truck were his leather dress-suit case and a canvas trunk. He took from his pocket the photograph of the girl at Rochester and gazed upon it until, away off down the track an engine whistled. Then he put a green flag in the iron socket beside the window of the telegraph office. The operator who had been sent to take the Man's place came out of the station to say farewell. The Man stood on the rear platform as the train went out and waved his hand to the newcomer, who was seated disconsolately on the truck.

"Poor devil," he muttered.

Age Does Not Improve.

Catawba, O., has fallen off in population from 272 to 231 in the last ten years. The Ohio variety of Catawba, remarks the Chicago Tribune, does not improve with age.

North Carolina Then and Now.

In 1790 North Carolina ranked third in population of all the states. Now she ranks fifteenth.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

State Fair.

The state fair directors have received a proposition for the establishment and maintenance upon the grounds of a postoffice during and immediately before fair week. The offer was accepted by the board, and in consequence it will be possible at the coming fair to mail letters, secure money orders, register letters and packages, buy stamps, and in short to have all the conveniences of a first-class postoffice.

One of the finest secondary attractions at the coming state fair will be the exhibit of Minnesota fish. This display will be made in the main or exposition building, and will occupy much of the east wing.

Plans for the work were presented at the meeting of the board of managers of the fair by S. P. Fullerton, of the state fish and game commission, who has been authorized to make the exhibit. According to Mr. Fullerton's outline of his ideas, there will be some 35 tanks of fish, which will show every prominent variety found in the waters of the state, and will show not only the grown fish, but the fry and yearlings of the same class.

A Big Contract.

As the result of a bet between two well known Minneapolis men, Charles Wintry otherwise "Feathers," will attempt to swim from Chapman's hotel in upper lake at Minnetonka to Excelsior and thence to Wyzata, without leaving the water or resting

The distance is 21 miles, the same covered by Cap. Webb in his long swim across the English channel, and it was a discussion of this feat that lead to the wager on Wintry's ability to make the long trip.

As a matter of fact there is no comparison between the two performances. Webb swam with the tide in salt water, whichi is of much greater density than fresh water. Wintry, if he fulfills his contract, will have to battle against dead water the whole distance, but he is confident of his ability to do the trick if unlimited as to time.

Gasoline Let Go.

A gasoline explosion is responsible for the very serious burns received by Miss Ridgway, daughter of J. A. Ridgway, at their summer home on Carman's bay, Minnetonka. Miss Ridgway was cleaning some material in one of the rooms, when the liquid she was using exploded. She rushed down stairs with her clothing on fire. Her sister picked up a large rug from the floor and succeeded in extinguishing the flames. The explosion was a terrific one, and blew off part of the roof. In a moment's time the room was ablaze, but the courage and pluck of the women in the family prevented a conflagration.

Many Matches Burned.

A carload of matches, said to contain 100,000,000 sticks, were ignited in some way, and the car and contents were totally destroyed, causing a loss of $3,500. The car was valued at $2,000, and belonged to the Milwaukee road. The car was standing near the freight house in St. Paul, and in a short time the shed would have been set on fire if the burning car had not been pulled down the yards by a switch engine.

Would Vaccinate.

Dr. W. H. Pratt, city physician of Stillwater, has some views on how best to prevent a repetition of smallpox in logging camps next winter. Dr. Pratt is of the opinion that every man sent to the woods next fall should be vaccinated before going to the camps, and will bring this question to the attention of the lumbermen's board of trade at its next meeting.

News in Brief.

Deputy Game Warden Stevens brought four nice moose calves to Thief River Falls and stayed with them till midnight. He locked the barn and went to bed. After that some villain broke in and killed three of the calves by cutting their throats, and made a gash in the other one's neck, but it will live.

Mrs. Henry Torgenson, living at Sunburg, died suddenly from the effects of eating canned peas.

While at play the 2-year-old daughter of E. C. Griffith, at St. Cloud, fell to the floor, her right hand and arm being thrust into a vessel of scalding water. Her injuries will not result fatally, but it is feared the growth of her arm will be stopped.

WONDERFUL CASE IN INDIANA.

Buck Creek, Ind., July 15th.—Mrs. Elizabeth Rorick, of this place, had Rheumatism. She says: "All the doctors told me they could do nothing for me." She was very, very bad, and the pain was so great that she could not sleep at night.

She used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and she is well and entirely free from pain or any symptom of the Rheumatism.

"Are you still using Dodd's Kidney Pills?" was asked.

"No, I stopped the use of the Pills some time ago, and have not had the slightest return of my old trouble. I am sure I am completely and permanently cured."

Many in Tippecanoe County, who have heard of Mrs. Rorick's case and her cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills, are using the Pills, and all report wonderful results.

Gazette and Commoner 1 year, $2.00.

—Monday was shipping day for Mr. Schneider, our local stock buyer.

—Men going west in search of work pass through town almost daily and nightly now.

—C. M. Conzet is handing out to his customers some international illustrated stock books.

—Rumor has it that another harness shop is to be set up in Delano. Nothing like competition in trade.

—Several tents have been pitched in yards about town. Anything to keep cool is the motto of most of our citizens now.

—On account of the unusually severe attacks of mosquitoes people have had to bring some of their stock in from pastures and stable them at night.

—The Delano Cemetery Association has had the grass mowed and raked up from the grounds. This was much needed and makes the cemetery look better.

—Delano needs some manufacturing establishments. Some men with money and business qualifications that will employ a lot of people who need the work and the pay for it.

—August Sieloff has dissolved connection with the Roban store and is establishing a business of his own, first door south of C. Conzet's hardware store on River street.

—A cement sidewalk is being laid on Oak Street along E. F. Ziebarth's lot. It is very nice but would be much nicer if it was true to grade. It should be continued to the mill for the convenience of many people.

—Tomorrow at 7 p. m. at the school house occurs the annual school election. Messrs Adam Horsch and M. A. O'Hair are the two members whose terms expire. If you want a good school attend the meeting and help elect good men on the Board of Education.

—Miss Gertrude Knights has received an appointment as a teacher in the Phillipines. The term of service is three years and the salary will be about a thousand dollars per year, and the transportation to and from the islands will be furnished in addition. Litchfield Independent.

—The Children's Home Society, of Minnesota was represented here by Rev. A. H. Tibbetts, of Minneapolis, on Sunday and Monday. This society has been in existence for about 11½ years and has found homes for more than 1660 children. The society is very careful to place its charges only in good homes where temptations will be least.

—During the tramp season the villages along the railroad lines should have two night watchmen. At least have a second one handy in case he is needed. It is asking most too much of one man to jail two or sometimes several strangers, often armed, and he don't know how desperate they may be. Two could be safer than one in rounding up those that need looking after.

—John Cunningham and his daughter Viola and her friend Miss Maguire met with quite a disappointment Tuesday morning about 4 o'clock. After rising early, and making a start for Minneapolis, and while crossing the railroad on Third street the buggy coupling broke. The trio returned home and had to give up their trip. It was lucky to break down before they had got further from home.

—A Quaker medicine vendor arrived in town Monday evening and by means of a glib tongue, and by the aid of some pictures and a negro minstrel succeeded in making a number of people buy a dollar's worth of medicine to heal their ails, and to cure them of tape worms, etc., etc. It is astonishing what people will buy if only asked in a funny way, and to note who the customers are.

—Strict orders should be given saloon keepers not to furnish "growlers", pails full of beer, one after another, for half a day or a day to a gang of men lying in the pasture or other places in the suburbs. Some such crowds get too much; then get into mischief, or are run over by the cars and left for the town to bury. The laws are good enough if the village authorities enforce them. Sober tramps are bad enough but drunken ones are worse.

—Last Saturday and Sunday were the hottest days known here for a number of years. The government thermometer, registering 98 degrees. A good many drove out to near by lakes Sunday to keep cool, and get where there was a breath of air stirring. South of us, in Missouri and Kansas, they had the hottest weather ever known there since the establishment of the weather bureau, and the corn crop is reported as almost entirely ruined by the excessive heat and drought.

—On Sunday morning at about 4 o'clock, in obedience to a telegram from Maple Plain, Marshal Merriman with the assistance of the night operator, stopped a couple of tourists near the depot and found they had a number of articles of clothing, a revolver and other things said to have been taken from the house of a Mr. Robinson east of Maple Plain. The two men were lodged in the jail until Monday morning when a constable from Independence took them back to Maple Plain for trial.

—Go to Borsch's for Mrs. Prices' canning compound.

—Delano's ball team went to Litchfield today to see which town has the best base ball team.

—The Nelson & Ecklund baseball team, of Minneapolis, that was here the Fourth, will play in Delano Sunday.

—The G. N. is running a bigger section crew than usual at this point. They are leveling and fixing up the track.

—A Young Lady from Kansas City, Mo., canvassed the village yesterday for advertisements. She succeeded in making some of our business men believe that it pays to advertise.

—Harvesting will be well done next week. It is coming on early. In order to save the crops from chinch bugs, hail storms, or other evils, people are inclined to begin earlier than usual to harvest. Many farmers will be gainers rather than loosers, by cutting about a week earlier than they have been in the habit of doing in the woods.

—Some people interested in the creamery business claim that they do not get so good tests as their neighbors whose cows and pastures are no better as they can see. It has leaked out that some of them allow the cream to rise on the nights milk, and that when the cream has once risen it cannot help the test any, but is of no more use in that direction than so many chips floating in the can. If you want high tests get your milk tested while the cream is a part of the milk, not after it has risen.

—On Thursday afternoon, July 18, the Delano Territorial Association, drove out to John Rader's and had a little surprise party. They had been invited to "come sometime" and had neglected to inform the host just when they would come. The usual enjoyable time was had, and after a splendid visit and a bountiful supper, a vote was taken to meet with Mrs. E. Mc Naughton, Thursday, August 15. The name of one new member, that of Mrs. Amanda Kerr, was added to the roll. Nobody has a better time than old settlers when they have a meeting.

Personal.

Oscar Erwig accompanied the base ball boys to Litchfield this morning to see what goes on, and how it is done.

Louey Brandser and his two brothers, Hans and Thor, of Winsted, left Tuesday for their claims near Sturgeon Falls.

Misses Blanche and Clara Mealey went on this morning's train to visit their country cousins near Howard Lake.

Mrs. M. Vaughn, of LeSueur county, was a guest of her brother Dr. O'Donnor and family here, the fore part of the week.

Dr. Guy E. Murphy, came up Saturday night from the City, where he is doing hospital work, for a short visit with relatives here.

Prof. Emery Cunningham left Monday afternoon for Spooner, Wis., where he will be in the berry business during school vacation.

Frank T. Hamilton, of Minneapolis, former editor of the Maple Lake Messenger, was in town Wednesday. He is working for the St. Paul Dispatch Co.

Misses Amanda and Minnie Erickson, and Anna Erwig, and Mrs. Alfred Johnson returned Wednesday from a week's visit in the City and at Lake Minnetonka.

Eb Brandon met Mrs. George Bradford, of Princeton, at the train Tuesday. Mrs. Brown of Chicago, and his granddaughter, Ennis Brandon's girl, and Miss Kelly, of Annandale, are also guests.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McKinnon, and Miss Rosa Haffner, of Morton, N. D., and Masters Edward and William Probst of Delano, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Haggerty on Sunday.—Annandale Advocate Post.

Miss Viola Cunningham accompanied her friend, Miss Julia Maguire, of Omaha, to Minneapolis Tuesday morning. Miss Maguire will leave in a couple days for her home, and Miss Cunningham will return to Delano.

Now the 4th is over, and we have some very nice Lap Dusters, Fly Nets, and Single Harness left, at special prices. Also some Factory Work Harness to look at! Call and see them. We will sell that class of goods cheap. But rather sell you good goods.

Saint Cloud Times: The strike of several bridge crews on the Great Northern at Osseo has resulted in the discharge of thirty employes of the road, most of whom live at St. Cloud. The men at Osseo refused to work unless the company would allow time and a half for over time. Sunday thirty men were sent to Osseo from St. Cloud, Sauk Centre and Minneapolis, the larger number from this city. They found upon their arrival there that instead of working Sunday and Monday that they were expected to accept the position permanently and to be moved from place to place without notice. In addition they found that they were to receive $1.50 per day instead of $2, as they had been receiving here. They balked, and balked hard, and Superintendent Bryan notified them by wire that if they did not accept the position there that they could quit and assured them that none would be taken back to their old crews. The men quit and most of them are now at home.

Corner Stone Laid.

The inclement weather of the Fourth prevented the corner stone of St. Ignatius church being laid on that day as announced. The ceremony would have been more imposing could it have taken place as announced. There were present to participate Chancellor Rev. Black, of Portland, Oregon, Revs Soumis, of Dayton, Pettigrew, of Stillwater, Coyle, of Corcoran and Mc Cabe of Darwin. The ceremony was impossible however and it was put off to Sunday. On that day high mass was celebrated at 10:30 a. m., in the town hall, and at the close the ceremony was held on the church grounds. A large audience was assembled and $67 was contributed by those who with a stroke of the mallet upon the granite block, signified their participation in laying the corner stone. A box of appropriate records was placed within the stone and sealed. The will and energy of Fr. Plante has made success a surety, and before snow flies the congregation will worship in their own edifice.—Annandale Advocate Post.

LeSueur Sentinel: Secretary Wilson wants the United States to produce tea, sugar, and all other articles that we now import. When that day comes, it will mark the decadence of business in this country. Those people who think that we are sufficient unto ourselves, and that if we could produce all that we need of all classes of products, we should be perfectly happy, do not understand the first principles of business. An interchange of commodities, between nation and nation, is just as essential to national commercial prosperity, as the individual exchange is to individual business. The point to be attained is to produce so much better and cheaper, that the balance of trade is always with you. That is what will make us prosperous and keeep us prosperous. We must encourage others to sell to us if we expect to sell to them. Reciprocity is the keynote to American greatness. What we want however, is to have the reciprocity come our way the biggest part of the time.

Fighting Joe Wheeler.

Mapleton Enterprise.

Those people and publications who are standing up for the army canteen, would do well to listen to the words of Fighting Joe Wheeler. Gen. Wheeler says: "Fully one half the young men who enlisted in the army during the last four years came from good homes, and had been brought up to let liquor alone." He considered it wrong for the government to take this class of young men and place them in the army where their only chance of recreation was in the presence of a bar. The army, he said, "should be managed on business principles. If it is wise for corporations and business men to require total abstinence from their employes, it is equally wise for the government to encourage total abstinence in the army." The general favored maintaining the anticanteen law, and securing more liberal appropriations from congress to support temperance canteens and reading rooms.

Saint Cloud Times: A New York telegram announces that Hon. D. B. Hill is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President. It can be safely assumed that Hill never said so. Would it not be well for Democrats to drop the discussion of candidates, and devote their time and energies towards getting together rather than "nominating" candidates three years ahead of time.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12, 1901

It seems to be difficult, if not impossible, for this administration to perform any official act that does not, directly or indirectly, open the way for a gang of thieves to profit at the expense of honest men. The ink was not dry on the proclamation for the opening to settlement of the Indian reservations in Oklahoma before the thieves had discovered a way to profit under the regulations provided for the opening and started the machinery for doing so. The machinery was ready before the proclamation, as it has been known for some time that honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines would be allowed to enter homesteads through an agent, while others could only do so in person, and the general land laws gives ex soldiers and sailors credit for the time they served in the army or navy in counting the time necessary for residence on a homestead claim in order to acquire title, while all others must reside thereon for five years. That was all the land pirates, who are plentiful in Washington wanted to know. They began hunting up the records of honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, with three or more years service to their credit, and to make deals with them to have homestead entries made in their names, and as soon as the proclamation was issued they began telegraphing the names of these bogus homesteaders to their agents in Oklahoma, who will file the applications. Those applications which draw desirable land in the lottery to be held next month the pirates will hold on to by purchasing the claim of the soldier or sailor in whose name it is registered. One citizen of Oklahoma—Mr. Thomas F. Black—who is now in Washington and who knows all about the scheme of the land pirates, said: "The applications of honorably discharged soldiers and sailors for land will be many times greater than that of any other class, but I would like to bet that there will not be a corporal's guard of them who will become settlers or even go the Territory."

The only applications for patent that will be delayed by the action of the Commissioner of Patents in suspending hearings before himself and the Assistant Commissioner during July and August are those in which appeals are taken from the 140 examiners, whose work has not been and will not be suspended, and C. A. Snow & Co. the successful patent lawyers, say they average scarcely more than one in each hundred of the applications filed.

The popular impression is that the Bank Examiners, whose business it is to keep watch on the doings and condition of the national banks, are chosen because of their expert knowledge of banking methods. Of course, they should be. But Capt. Andrew Jackson Duncan, a gentleman with a good old democratic name and a big republican pull, and who has been a special Indian agent for four years, has just demonstrated that the popular impressions is wrong by getting himself appointed Bank Examiner for the Canton Akron, Ohio, district, with no special qualifications for the place except that he is Mr. McKinley's brother in law, and desired the place. Senator "Billy" Mason ought to be able to make some use of this appointment, as it was made by Comptroller Dawes, the administration candidate for his seat in the Senate.

Strong efforts are being made by the big interests behind the publications, fake and otherwise, that are getting the benefit of the $30,000,000 a year the government loses by carrying at second class rates publications not entitled to be in that class, to frighten Postmaster General Smith into not issuing the announced order defining more strictly the requirements to be exacted of publications carried for one cent a pound. Mr. Smith says the order will be issued, and that it will accomplish its purpose, but it will be just as well to wait and see before giving him credit for possessing the courage to resist the influences which desire to go on profiting at the people's loss. If it be the real thing, the country will know it.

That branch of the steel trust which supplies the Navy Department with machinery forgings is overplaying its greed, and the result may be the biggest sort of a Congressional row, which may show up the responsibility for the clause in the contracts for new ships that makes the government a helpless victim in the clutches of these greedy concerns. The clause is that which forbids the use of any foreign material in the construction of new warships. Under that claim the Midvale Steel Company and the Bethlehem Iron Company have put their prices for machinery forgings at a ridiculously high price. To give an illustration of the manner in which the government is gouged, it is only necessary to mention one article—crank shafting—of which many thousand pounds are used. This government has to pay $2.25 a pound, while in England the same grade of crank shafting sells for 48 cents a pound. There is no doubt of where the instigation for that anti foreign clause in these contracts came from, and Congress should see to it, not only that it is struck out, but that individual responsibility for it should be placed. Let the country have the name or names of the creature or creatures of this greedy trust.

Maple Plain.

Is there a protective duty on flies, mosquitoes, and chinch bugs. If there is hope the chairman on committee of protection will set up the duty another notch or two. It seems the bugs have done a good deal of damage to the wheat crop already, and on account of the bugs our wheat harvest will come off a week earlier.

The wheat syndicates have been gambling on our wheat already, but they had better wait awhile and see what we will get.

Our rye and hay crop will be quite good this year.

The heft of the berry crop has now been picked.

If we have no wheat crop we have one thing to comfort us there will be no general election this fall; no state or national campaign. What a comfort But where will the office seeker and chief politician appear?.

"And in hell he lifted up his eyes being in torment."

The hot weather of last week was hard on man and beast and helped to cook the wheat.

Hope everybody will turn out to annual school meeting next Saturday evening. Come early and avoid the rush. It is hard for just a quorum to do business.

Many new buildings have been put up in our town since the early spring. They kept waiting for building material to come down but it did not seem to drop, so they had to build anyway. It was not so much prosperity that helped to do the building as some people imagine.

The New York World,
Thrice-a-Week Edition.
The Most Widely Read Newspaper in America.
Time has demonstrated that the Thrice a Week World stands alone in its class. Other papers have imitated its form but not its success. This is because it tells all the news all the time and tells it impartially, whether that news be political or otherwise.
It is in fact almost a daily at the price of a weekly and you cannot afford to be without it.
Republican and Democrat alike can read the Thrice a Week World with absolute confidence in its truth.
In addition to news, it publishes first class serial stories and other features suited to the home and fireside.
The Thrice a Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and GAZETTE together one year for $1.75.
The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2 00.

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

DON'T WORRY.

There are times when the clouds roll thick and fast
And the sky is black with distress;
But worry o'er trouble that's present or past
Never made the trouble the less.
There are times when everything's looking blue,
And everything's all in a flurry,
And nothing was ever made brighter for you
When you punished yourself by worry.

We'll assume that the outlook's ripe with despair,
And there's never a cheerful ray
Of light to dispel the clouds anywhere,
That deepen the sombre way;
But, assuming all this, there's naught to gain
By useless weeping and wailing;
You'll bring neither sunshine nor cooling rain
By storming, fretting and railing.

There's a better way when your trials roll thick—
When the world seems full of trouble—
Than letting the dart cut in to the quick
And making your trouble double;
For trouble despises a smiling face
And feeds on flurry and scurry—
Just bury your griefs for a little space
And look straight ahead—don't worry!
—Henry Edward Warner in Denver Times.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY has concluded to allow Porto Rico to do business with the balance of the United States on free trade principles.

THE Elks assembled at Milwaukee elected Charles E. Pickett, of Waterloo, Iowa, as Grand Exalted Ruler. Judge Nethaway, of Stillwater, was his competitor.

MRS. KRUGER, wife of Oom Paul, is dead, after a few days sickness. The president of the Transvaal is said to be even more than ever busy about the welfare of his country.

THE Younger boys are said to have engaged for $60 apiece per month, and expenses, to sell gravestones in the state of Minnesota. Do they want every cemetery to contain reminders of them?

It seems now as if there might be a terrible shaking up of the political parties of our country at the coming elections. In Ohio the goldbugs seem to have manipulated the conventions and left the democrats out. Those left out are working to put up a ticket of their own, and pay the goldbugs for their former actions. Populists have held back from participating in Democratic primaries, and consequently their views have been voted out in places. They are proposing to rejuvinate their party. Republicans are not a unit. Prohibitionists are working harder than ever to eradicate the curse of our land from among us. Other parties are not all dead. There seems to be parties enough and the best thing is to fight it out at the odd election and be prepared to unite on patriotic principles when the national election comes round again.

Hot Weather.

Last Saturday was claimed as the hottest day on record, in St. Paul, since records had been kept, 31 years. But Wednesday, the 24th, the thermometer registered 3 degrees higher, the thermometer going up to 104½ degrees. The hot wave seems to extend over most of the United States and to some other countries Several explanations of the causes of this great heat have been given, but none seem very satisfactory, so far. Some have made predictions that have been very unreliable. It looks as if people on this globe had not yet learned to know just what kind of a season we will have, nor even what will come next in the way of weather.

General Jackson's Platform.

One of our republican exchanges in trying to belittle Bryan, and spoil his chances for himself or his principles, enquires what kind of a platform General Jackson had when he ran for president.

If the R. e. editor will read Thomas H. Benton's Thirty Years in the U. S. Senate, he will find on page 111 vol 1.

"The election of General Jackson was a triumph of democratic principles, and an assertion of the people's right to govern themselves. That principle had been violated in the presidential election in the House of Representatives in the session of 1824 and '25; and the sanction or rebuke, of that violation was a leading question in the whole canvass. It was also a triumph over the high protective policy, and the federal internal improvement policy, and the latitudinous construction of the constitution; and of the democracy over the federalists, then called national republicans; and was the re-establishment of parties or principle, according to the landmarks of the early ages of the government."

From the above quotation of the views of the eminent Senator from Missouri on the election of 1828 it would appear that some of the very principles now at stake, principles for which Mr. Bryan has been so strenuously fighting for years are the same as those on which the people so pronouncedly expressed their convictions in the election of Andrew Jackson. "The people's right to govern themselves" decided then, is again a question. The high protective policy is, also, again falling into ill repute, and the people want a chance at it. The federal internal improvement policy, was akin to the present expensive government buildings and other costly affairs throughout the country to be paid for by the people. "The latitudinous construction of the constitution" seems now to have expanded until it calls for the earnest attention of every patriotic citizen of our country.

History indeed seems to be repeating itself in more ways than one, and it must be about time when the people shall again declare their rights as against such departures from the original, and established form of government. The next campaign should be fought entirely on principle. The candidates should be in accord with the principles, and the principles should be in accord with the constitution, and those that are not should be voted down by the people.

As for candidates, that matter can be easily settled when the time comes. Whoever is the best advocate and has the good will and confidence of his party should be placed at the head.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 19, 1901

Has New York a new democratic candidate for the presidential nomination? That question is being asked in Washington since a prominent New York democrat dropped a quiet hint that Col. Dan Lamont, who was Mr. Cleveland's private secretary during his first administration and secretary of war during his second, and who has since been associated with ex Secretary Whitney in various big business enterprises, might become democratic candidate for governor of New York, and if elected would become a candidate for the presidential nomination. Of course, there are some substantial "ifs" to be considered in connection with this matter, but the whole presidential question is one of "ifs" at this time. There are several reasons why Dan Lamont would make a strong candidate for any position he might aspire to. First and foremost is his personal popularity—a man who could spend eight years in Washington as prominently associated with administrations as he was with those of Cleveland without making an enemy, as Dan Lamont did, must necessarily be a remarkable sort of a man. The next reason in importance is that he would have the advice and active assistance of William C. Whitney, who has shown himself to be one of the shrewdest political managers the country has or has ever had This thing may be no more than the idle talk of a summer day, but if Dan Lamont becomes a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of New York, he will get it, and he would probably be elected, and that would naturally make him a presidential possibility.

There is little that is new in the exposure of the methods followed in the distribution of the patronage of the House, made this week by the National Civil Service Reform League, but it is none the less disgraceful to the republican majority of that body which allows the stealing, for that is the proper name for receiving money and giving no pretense of return for it. Men are carried on the House pay roll who never even come to Washington, but have checks for their salaries mailed to them, and others draw salaries for work which they have others to do, paying them only a small fraction of what they receive. The patronage of the House is not under the civil service law. It is controlled absolutely by the will of the majority, and that majority should be held responsible for the willful waste of the people's money and especially those members who have held up the officers of the House and demanded that salaries be provided for their favorites should be held up to the public contempt they so richly deserve. The weak spot in the long and detailed exposure is the careful avoidance of putting in the names of looting Congressmen. This avoidance is so palpable that it is clearly intentional. Names are given in plenty, but they are those of the little rascals. A proper exposure would have given the names of those who made the rascality possible, but perhaps the gentlemen who made the investigation for the C. S. R. L. were a little bit afraid to attack the Congressmen by name.

Probably if Commissioner Evans had made rulings that would have involved the paying out of the $5,468,505 89, unexpended balance of the $144,000,000 appropriated by Congress for pensions, which he has turned back to the Treasury, the ring of pension sharks would have been less persistent in their demands for a new Commissioner of Pensions.

The administration has at last found a place for Col. John S. Mosby as special agent of the General Land Office. It isn't a very big place, but it is understood that the necessities of Col. Mosby had become so pressing that he received the appointment with thanks.

Representative Hooker, of Miss., who passed through Washington this week, does not endorse the idea of dropping silver, and he strongly deprecates the fight that is being made on Mr. Bryan. He said: "Silver has been part of the world's money since the earliest dawn of recorded history, since Abraham paid 500 pieces of silver for the land in which to bury his wife Sarah. And why should there be this uproar against Mr. Bryan? He has not been forcing himself on the American people since the last election. It was his privilege to take up newspaper work. He had to do something to support himself and his family, and has been going about it in a dignified manner. I served in Congress with Mr. Bryan, and there I gained a high regard for his ability."

The long talked of order of the Postmaster General regulating second class mail was issued this week. It doesn't regulate anything, unless it be the consciences of the postal officials who have winked at evasions of the law governing second class mail. It merely provides for an enforcement of the law, which the Postmaster General and every one of his subordinates have all along been under oath to support. If this order is strictly enforced it will simply prove what has been as plain as the nose on your face that there was plenty of law to shut fake publications out of second class mail and only needed backbone on the part of officials to enforce it.

THE GREAT AFTERWHILE.

Ah me! the things that we mean to do,
In the great, great afterwhile;
When our ship comes in,
We're sure to begin,
And we'll keep right at it, too.

Yes, yes, my boys, I know it is true
That we mean just what we say,
But afterwhile is a mythical place
In the realms of an unborn day.

The railway of life is supposed to run
Through the land of this unborn day,
And the great afterwhile is a station there,
Where people do fine things, they say.

But thousands, my boys, are traveling this road,
Whose hands are as white as the snow,
Who meant to stop off at the great afterwhile
In the years of the long ago.

But somehow or other they never quite reached
The place with the high-sounding name,
So they traveled along with the rest of the crowd
Who hunted for fortune and fame.

Yet fortune or fame ne'er came to them, boys,
And, neither, will they come to you,
If you wait to begin, in the great afterwhile,
All the grand things you mean to do.

'Tis best, then, to begin right here,
In the land of the greater to-day,
And work while you wait,
For your ship might be late—
Then you'd miss half of life, I fear.
—S. W. Hendricks, in "Success."

MY DEAR OLD-FASHIONED WIFE.

She never rustled down the street
In silks and draperies fine,
She gave no champagne suppers
With claret, cakes and wine,
A dear home-loving creature,
A golden spot in life,
Who made life worth the living,
My dear, old-fashioned wife.

She wasn't up in classics,
In pomp, in pride or style,
But she always had a welcome,
With her sweet, old-fashioned smile,
And three great things she used to sing—
I'd give one-half my life
To hear the silvery voice of
My dear, old-fashioned wife.

In circles high and lofty,
She'd been quite out of place,
But in her own home circle
She reigned with queenly grace.
She made of home an Eden
Devoid of hate and strife,
And sowed the seeds of love to bloom,
My dear, old-fashioned wife.

Perhaps when down the stream I've sped
Till I reach that sunset shore,
And cross the great divide of life,
Where time shall be no more,
Then wandering 'long the river bank,
Where reigns eternal life,
I'll meet, if I have faithful been,
My dear, old-fashioned wife.
—F. Jay Gould, in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

Mr. WIREWEED'S PERSISTENCY

By Hattie Whitney.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

ACCORDING to her established custom, Miss Selina Snowbell went out upon her front porch to get a breath of air and see how things looked, before beginning her breakfast preparations.

It was a crystal morning in early June, and a brisk breeze, the trailed-off end of an over-night gale flapped Miss Selina's gingham gown, and would have tossed her tresses, had they not been wound up tightly in the shape of a good-sized biscuit, and spiked in place by several large hairpins. Though spare of flesh, Miss Selina was not bony; furthermore, she was erect as a maple, and as neat and bright as new calico.

"What a wind!" she protested, as her apron sailed up like a kite; "it must have showered in the night, too; everything's dripping—and if there ain't my sweet honeysuckle vine blown as flat as a flounder."

Miss Selina bunched up her skirt in one hand, and skipped nimbly down her front steps, mincing gingerly on the tips of her neat toes through the wet grass, to where the vine had been torn loose from its trellis, and lay trailing on the ground.

Nothing but a flimsy little picket fence separated Miss Selina's front yard from her neighbor's, and on the other side of it her neighbor was standing, basking in the sunshine that came tumbling over the wet world, making all the shrubs and grass tips where the rain beads hung look as if they had been powdered with little diamond stars.

Miss Selina half whirled about to-ward her steps, then spun back again, with an air of standing by her guns, let the worst come. If Miss Selina always felt an impulse to run, whenever she encountered her neighbor, Mr. Wirewood, she considered that she had just cause for so doing, for Mr. Wirewood obstinately and relentlessly persisted in besetting her to marry him, and in utterly refusing to understand what No meant.

"'TIS GETTING A LITTLE WARM."

The poor man was quite hard of hearing, and while this was one great barrier to a union of hearts and front yards, it was also an obstacle in the way of impressing the fact upon his understanding. Miss Selina had considered the matter very thoroughly.

"He ain't a bad man," she conceded, honestly, "as men go; he goes to church, and he isn't stingy, and he wouldn't kick the cat. He don't drink and ain't afraid of burglars. If I was going to marry any man, I would rather it would be him—only I'd have to spend my days shouting and screaming to make him hear. I haven't got the voice, if I had the patience. If I wanted him to get sugar, he'd think I said tacks, as likely as any way, and I'd split my throat and get soured. If his deafness was uniform, I might get used to it, but sometimes he seems to hear tolerably well, and others you couldn't make him understand anything if you shrieked your collar button out."

Mr. Wireweed, on this merry June morning, looked so brisk, blithe and cheery, and so pleased at seeing her, that Miss Selina's heart smote her somewhat for her obduracy. She might as well at least be civil, she admitted inwardly, and nodded him a pleasant "Good-morning."

"Must have been quite a storm," she called out in a clear, high voice.

"'Tis getting a little warm," replied Mr. Wireweed, placidly.

"Storm, I said," yelled Miss Snowbell, "it rained in the night."

"Oh," said Mr. Wireweed, sympathizingly, "yes, the storm—did it give you a fright? Now, that's too bad. But ladies have no business trying to get along by themselves without a masculine brute to take charge of 'em. Now, you'd better—"

"I'll have to run in," shrieked Miss Selina, "and get my breakfast over."

Mr. Wireweed smiled approvingly.

"That's right; think it over—think it over," he said, cheerfully; "I'm sure you'll come to the right conclusion by and by."

"Oh," groaned Miss Selina, as she ran into the house, "that man! If I stood there bawling until all the neighbors heard I couldn't make him understand. It's a great pity such a really nice man should be so obstinate—and so deaf."

Miss Snowbell felt vaguely upset and uncomfortable during breakfast, and when her aunt, who always washed up the dishes, began to clatter the breakfast things, she took down her sunbonnet and went and hunted up her garden hoe.

"I've got a fidgetty streak," she declared, starting briskly out to her little vegetable garden. "I'll go and hoe it off."

It was queer, but she soon discovered that Mr. Wireweed was hoeing in his vegetable garden.

"You're at it early, Miss Selina," he hailed, joyously.

"Yes," she answered, briefly.

"Did you think it over?" he asked, coming close to the dividing garden fence, where she was hoeing a beet.

"No," she yelled, "you shouldn't keep up that subject, Mr. Wireweed."

"Couldn't what?" he asked, with his hand to his ear.

"You must drop the matter," she shrieked, "I came out here to hoe."

Mr. Wireweed smiled delightedly.

"Of course you didn't say No, but you didn't say Yes, either, and—"

"I've said No 50 times," screamed Miss Selina, who was as red as a poppy. "I don't like to be rude, but I can't help it."

"Well, that's encouraging. I knew you liked me a little, and I'm glad you can't help it; but I want you to like me a great deal. Here's a board loose; I'm going to take it clear off and come through, and we can sit on that bench and talk it over comfortably."

"My stars," murmured Miss Selina, despairingly. "I believe in my heart I'll have to marry this man to get rid of him."

"Of course you will," said Mr. Wirewood, jollily, "and you'll never be sorry for it, I tell you."

Miss Snowbell gave a startled spring.

"Seems to me your hearing has improved mighty suddenly," said she. Mr. Wireweed laughed.

"'Old woman, old woman, shall we go a-shearing?
Speak a little louder, sir, I'm very hard of hearing.
Old woman, old woman, shall I kiss you dearly?
Thank you, kind sir, I hear very clearly,'" he chanted.

"John Augustus Wireweed," said Miss Selina, indignantly, "I believe you've been hearing a lot more than you pretended to."

"'Tis love," sang Mr. Wireweed; "love wouldn't let me hear discouraging things, but helped me to hear the right thing."

"Guess you can hear 'most as good as anybody," said Miss Selina, grimly.

"Not quite," said Mr. Wireweed, "there's a lot of variation in it; this happened to be one of my good days."

"And on your bad days I'll have to split my throat screeching," protested Miss Selina.

"No," said Mr. Wireweed, "you won't need to say anything, then. I'll know by intuition what you want to say—or ought to want to say."

"Oh! And you'll never hear anything you don't want to, I suppose."

"Of course not; but you won't, either, for you know I'll never say anything mean to you, Selina, dear."

He slid up close to Miss Selina and slipped his arm around her neat gingham waist, and she knew she was engaged to Mr. Wireweed.

Flummery at a British Trial.

It is some consolation to us poor "commoners" of America to know that we don't have to do some things which the titled aristocracy have to submit to, says the Buffalo Times. When Earl Russell appeared at the bar of the house of lords to answer to a charge of bigamy, he "made many obeisances" and upon reaching the bar "sank to his knees and remained there until the lord high chancellor told him to rise." Imagine an American citizen, no matter what his offense, humiliating himself in that manner!

Begs, Then Shines in Society.

A man named Jean Legoff, well known on the boulevards of Paris, was arrested the other day in the Rue Git Le Coeur under ludicrous circumstances. A police agent, seeing a man in rags begging, approached him, and recognized the frequenter of fashionable clubs and social gatherings. At the police station Legoff explained he made a comfortable income as a mendicant. His daily takings reached from 20 francs to 30 francs. Several hundred francs and a check book were found in his possession.

In sinking wells for petroleum in the Mojave desert the prospectors struck flowing streams of water. In such a country the water should be the greater bonanza of the two.

The government expert on precious stones at the New York custom house reports that during the past year the aggregate value of gems imported by Americans was $21,919,053, a larger total than ever before known.

A Brooklyn man the other day bought tickets to the Buffalo exposition for himself and wife and the 17 children of which they are the happy parents. None of the family are slighted in a holiday outing, and none seem to have got away on any other occasion.

A German paper, upon the authority of Mrs. Botha, says that Gen. French, of the British army, was captured by Gen. Botha, but French broke his parole and escaped, only to be retaken and saved from death by Kitchener exchanging 1,000 prisoners for him.

The newest automobile runs 100 miles at an average of ten miles an hour, can spurt at a speed of 25 miles an hour, has all the controlling mechanism concentrated in one lever, and is propelled by an endless screw that does away with all chains, gear and cogs, thus making it noiseless.

It is estimated that the waste from unintelligent cooking in the United States is over $1,000,000,000 a year. This figure has been indorsed by Prof. William Mathews as about correct. Prof. Marshal, the noted English economist, estimates that about half as much is wasted annually by the working people of Great Britain in a similar way.

A swindler in New York made this confession: "If the post office department would let me alone I would have to hire a cart to carry my money-laden mail. Let me promise 56 per cent. on a fake and I can get rich." And many persons who are anxious to be soon parted from their money are under great obligations to Uncle Sam. protective postal rules.

Cole Younger, one of the famous pair of Missouri bandits recently released from the Minnesota penitentiary, was librarian of that institution, and he spent most of his time in reading. When he entered the institution Younger was almost illiterate, but constant study and reading have made a well-posted man who can be cornered on few subjects.

A Massachusetts paper is disenchanted with the month of June. "The first half," it says, "was a damp, moist, unpleasant body of dreary days;" then the month leaped to the other extreme and "closed with a protracted attempt to scorch those whom it had not succeeded in freezing to death." The poets will keep shady about this June, dismissing it as a freak.

As heat, light, language and power can be conveyed by electricity, fame and fortune await the Morse, Edison, Bell or Marconi who will gather the cool ozone of seas and mountains and transmit it with or without wires to cities. Prediction that this is yet to be added to mechanical achievements is no wilder than were prophecies of telegraph and telephone before the demonstration of their feasibility.

The warden of the Kansas City prison is quoted as saying that life in prison is hard on the better class of women. He adds, reflectively: "Prison life is not what it is cracked up to be, especially to a young woman who has always borne a good reputation and gone in good society." Kansas society women who have had a leaning toward prison life because of the way it is "cracked up" should take warning by this.

Balloon-steering seems to be the unsolved problem of aeronautics. The latest experiment at Paris shows a motor balloon circling the Eiffel tower like a great fowl of mythology. But a wind arose and the gearing failed to answer the helm. The inventor of the newest flying machine saved himself by a speedy descent, and is certain that but for the wind he could have done wonders. Thus far there is a fatal "but" to every balloon designed to do more than rise and descend.

Prof. Starr, of the University of Chicago, has discovered that there are over 50 persons in Chicago who possess more than the usual and necessary number of fingers and toes. After the professor shall have discovered 450 other possessors of freak hands and feet in other parts of the country, so that the total shall be 500, he will begin a systematic study of the history and formation of each member and to make scientific deduction and formulate theories. We are making wonderful advancement in scientific research.

The Minnesota, once a celebrated American ship of war, has been stricken from the naval register. She was one of the great timber-built ships which encountered the ironclad Merrimac in Hampton roads and was saved from destruction with the others only by the timely arrival of the little Monitor which soon put the Merrimac out of the fight. The Minnesota thus survived the era of wooden warships, which were looked upon as invincible, as well as the later era of ironclad ships, which in their day were regarded as something marvelous.

Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture, has begun work on a model farm of 400 acres near Washington, and in a few years it will be one of the great sights at the nationalcapital. All the fruits and vegetables of the United States, and other countries which experiment shall prove can be grown in that climate, will be seen there, also model farm buildings, model fencing and model systems of drainage, irrigation and cultivation. To the agriculturists and horticulturists this institution will offer an opportunity for study in every branch of their science.

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

Reports Say Officials Have Decided to Reopen Steel Plant Under Guard—Labor Hosts Split.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 22.—Reports that the steel corporation officials have decided to reopen mills under guard are declared by President Shaffer to be "like the first gun fired on Fort Sumter." He said the men are ready for fight and employers cannot secure enough workers to resume.

The important event in the strike history of the day is the organization of the tube mill workers at McKeesport. The word from there is that after long and arduous work Assistant Secretary Tighe, of the Amalgamated association, succeeded in organizing 125 of the National Tube Works company. At the meeting 25 skilled men from each of the departments were initiated into the mysteries of the Amalgamated association, and Mr. Tighe claims that within 48 hours enough more of the workmen will be secured to keep the entire plant closed down, affecting 9,000 men.

The first week of the steel strike ended Saturday in this district with two big meetings, one indorsing nonunionism, the other condemning it. The first was held at Vandergrift Saturday afternoon, where the sentiment of the workers of the Vandergrift, Leechburg, Apollo and Saltsburg plants of the American Sheet Steel company was expressed in speeches and resolutions. More than 1,800 men attended the gathering. Speeches were made by prominent mill workers indorsing nonunionism and declaring loyalty to the company.

The meeting at McKeesport was diametrically opposite to the Vandergrift gathering in its object and action. It was held in White's opera house under the auspices of the Amalgamated association and was addressed by several of the prominent officials of the association, principal among whom was President Shaffer. The hall was crowded to the doors and much enthusiasm was evidenced.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 22.—The stationary firemen's strike has practically collapsed. At a conference here Sunday between the executive board of the United Mine Workers and the striking firemen, committees were appointed to wait on the coal companies, and if the strikers are taken back the strike will be declared off.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 23.—The strike of the stationary firemen was officially declared off Monday night at a joint meeting of the strikers and executive boards of United Mine Workers. The meeting was a stormy one.

HEAT RECORDS BROKEN.

Burning Winds Continue to Sweep the West—No Relief in Sight.

Chicago, July 22.—The heat wave extends from the gulf into the upper peninsula of Michigan, and almost every town in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and even as far west as Colorado, reports temperatures of over 100 degrees, accompanied by burning winds. Reports of ruined corn, burned up pastures, and blasted oat fields come from all parts of the central west, adding terror to the situation for the farmers. The drought in the central west has been almost unprecedented, and the reports say the corn crop has already been damaged to the extent of 50 per cent., and unless soaking rains come soon, this damage will be greater. Kansas City announces the most remarkable heated term in its history. For 31 days the temperature has risen above 90 degrees every afternoon, and for the last 12 days the mercury has gone above 100 regularly. Since April 5 there has been but one regular shower. The thermometers in the streets registered 112 degrees of heat Saturday.

Much suffering is reported among the farm laborers, and in many districts it is almost impossible to get the wheat crop harvested because men will not go into the harvest field during the hot weather. The railroads of the northwest are also experiencing much difficulty with laborers, the section gangs being unable to carry on their work. Several of the roads have put on relief gangs and given their forces shorter hours.

AGREE ON A PLAN.

Powers Finally Fix on Terms of Payment of the Indemnity by China.

Washington, July 23.—The state department received a dispatch Monday from Commissioner Rockhill at Peking announcing that a plan for the payment of the indemnity to the powers by the Chinese government finally has been adopted. The amortization of the bonds to be issued will begin in 1902, and the plan contemplates the entire liquidation of both principal and interest by 1940. It is expected that China will raise $23,000,000 annually. This sum is to be used to pay the interest on the bonds and to form a sinking fund for the ultimate liquidation of the principal.

Lynched in a Park.

Elkins, W. Va., July 23.—William Brooks (colored) was lynched in City park here Monday afternoon by a maddened mob of 500 half an hour after he had shot and fatally wounded Robert Lilly, chief of police. Brooks was creating a disturbance in the lower end of town and when Chief Lilly tried to arrest him the negro fled into a house. The officer followed and clinched with him. While they were rolling on the floor the officer's revolver dropped from his pocket and Brooks seized it and shot Lilly through the abdomen.

A Harsh Edict.

Constantinople, July 19.—Following the graduation of the first Turkish girl at the American Girls', college, the Turkish government has issued an edict prohibiting Turkish children from attending foreign schools, the employment of Christian teachers in Turkish households, or the appearance of Turkish ladies in public accompanied by Christian women companions. This edict deprives hundreds of foreign governesses of the means of subsistence. It is intended to prevent the dissemination of liberal ideas.

HIS HELPMATE GONE.

Death of Mrs. Kruger, Wife of Former President of Transvaal, Occurs at Pretoria.

Pretoria, July 22.—Mrs. Kruger, wife of Former President Kruger, died here Saturday of pneumonia, after an illness of three days. Mrs. Kruger's long separation from her husband, combined with the death of her favorite daughter, Mrs. Smith, last week, had completely broken her spirit. Mr. Eloff and many other members of the Kruger family were at her bedside when she passed away.

London, July 22.—All the morning papers publish kindly editorials concerning the death of Mrs. Kruger, and express sympathy with Mr. Kruger. The Times begins thus: "The English people will feel genuine sympathy with the aged ex-president of the Transvaal in the severe domestic bereavement which has befallen him." This is followed by a eulogy of Mrs. Kruger.

[The death of his wife will doubtless prove a severe blow to Paul Kruger, for they were devoted to each other, and it is said that the former Transvaal president followed the advice of his wife in preference to that of any of his associates. She was the ideal of a helpmate according to the philosophy of the Boers. She was highly accomplished in all the arts of domesticity, but she knew little or cared little for accomplishments that would shine in the salon. When Paul courted her he was plain Paulus Kruger and she Miss Du Plessis. She had in full the qualification of a Boer wife. She could bake, she could sew, she could sweep, she could scrub. But after her husband's rise to power she showed that she could also save, for it is said that the former president of the South African republic is worth about $25,000,000. Mme. Kruger did not care for show. With a fortune like that she could have lived in oriental splendor, but there is not a well-to-do burgher in the Transvaal who has not as pretentious a residence of Oom Paul and his wife. The president's salary was $35,000 a year, and yet madame superintended her own kitchen. Her dresses were simple in the extreme. A gown of plain black was the most gorgeous raiment she possessed. If Mme. Kruger was not the best housewife in all South Africa, she was certainly very near to that enviable distinction.]

PROVED A FAILURE.

Civil Government in Several Philippine Provinces Abolished and Military Control Resumed.

Manila, July 19.—The United States civil commission announced Thursday that after three months' trial of a provincial form of government in the islands of Cebu and Bohol and the province of Batangas, Luzon, control of those districts, owing to their incomplete pacification, has been returned to the military authorities, it having been proved that the communities indicated are backward and undeserving of civil administration. The provincial and civil officials of these designated districts will continue their functions, but are now under the authority of Gen. Chaffee, instead of that of Civil Gov. Taft, as heretofore. Gen. Chaffee has the power arbitrarily to remove from office any or all provincial or civil officials, and to abrogate any section of the laws promulgated in these three provinces. The residents of the island of Cebu have protested, but without success, against the return of that island to military control. Several towns in Cebu are still besieged by the insurgents. The insurrection on the island of Bohol has been renewed, and insurgent sentiment in the province of Batangas is strong. Gen. Chaffee has ordered a battalion of the Thirtieth infantry to begin the occupation of the island of Mindoro. The province of Batangas will be occupied by the entire Twentieth infantry.

FIVE DROWNED.

Only Two of a Yachting Party Succeed in Surviving Sinking of the Boat.

New Haven, Conn., July 20.—Five persons were drowned in the sound Thursday afternoon by the capsizing of the yawl-rigged yacht Venitzia, of Philadelphia, at a point five miles east of Sand's point, near the New York and Connecticut line.

Two only of those on board the yacht were rescued. The drowned are: Arthur C. Colburn, owner of the yacht, and his daughters, Ida and Annette Colburn, of Philadelphia. Capt. Flint, of Brooklyn, N. Y., master of the yacht, and a sailor, name unknown.

The others on board the ill-fated craft, Mrs. Walter J. Sprankle, of Philadelphia, and daughter of the owner of the yacht, and the steward, James Stanbridge, of New York, were rescued by the tug Gertrude, after clinging for two hours to the bottom of a capsized long boat.

Victims of Lightning.

Grove City, Pa., July 20.—A fierce electrical storm here Friday resulted in four deaths and the severe injury of three other persons. The dead are Luther Campbell, Howard Cornelius, Anton Darenska and Michael Zaccagia. Probably fatally injured: Lin Covert, Edward Hosack and Oscar Covert. A section crew on the Bessemer & Lake Erie railroad were returning home from work when the storm came up. They left the railroad track and hastened to a deserted house at the Pinchalong mine for shelter. Hardly had they reached the shelter of the place when the house was struck by lightning.

Triple Execution.

Nashville, Tenn., July 19.—The first triple execution ever held in this county took place here Thursday, when three negro murderers were suspended from the same scaffold in the jail yard. The condemned were Babe Battis, Duser Thompson and Abe Petway. The trap was sprung at 10:15 a. m., and the men were pronounced dead within 15 minutes.

Mrs. Nation Sent to Jail.

Topeka, Kan., July 23.—Mrs. Carrie Nation was on Monday fined $100 and given 30 days' jail sentence by Judge Hazen in the district court for disturbing the peace and dignity of the city by a Sunday joint raid last March. There is no appeal and Mrs. Nation must serve her time in prison.

Four Men Killed.

Lebanon, N. H., July 22.—A carriage containing James Goodwin, of Hinsdale, Mass.; William Thurston, of Percy, N. H.; Thomas Burns, of Winooski, Vt., and Eddie McCabe, of Lebanon, was struck by the Montreal express on the Boston & Maine railroad, and all four were instantly killed.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The Fifth International Convention Opened at San Francisco with Thousands in Attendance.

San Francisco, July 19.—The fifth international convention of the Epworth league was opened Thursday under the most auspicious conditions. The weather was ideal and the attendance equaled the most sanguine expectations.

Morning communion was served in three of the largest of the churches in the city, which, however, were entirely too small to accommodate the throng which sought admission. By noon the vast interior of the Mechanics' pavilion, capable of containing over 15,000 people, was filled with a mass of humanity.

Dr. Filben opened the convention at 2:30 p. m., after which Robert Husband led the song service. Secretary Rev. Joseph F. Berry read a number of congratulatory messages received from prominent men throughout the union, among them President McKinley and Vice President Roosevelt. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Gov. Gage, Mayor Phelan and others which were responded to by various ministers.

Thursday evening three meetings were held, at the main pavilion, at the Alhambra theater and at the Metropolitan temple. The principal theme at all these meetings was: "The Young People's Movement in the Twentieth Century," discussed by Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, of Minneapolis; Rev. Alonzo Monk, Nashville, and Rev. C. W. Willard, of Yonkers, N. Y., respectively.

San Francisco, July 20.—The delegates to the International Epworth league settled down to business Friday morning. The entire day was devoted to routine matters, the missionary feature of religious effort being dwelt upon at length by many of the speakers. Prayer services were held at sunrise in several churches, all of which were largely attended. All of the sessions were characterized by the earnest spirit of religious enthusiasm which has marked all the proceedings since the assembling of the convention.

San Francisco, July 22.—The religious enthusiasm aroused by the international convention of the Epworth League here had its culmination at the grand meeting held Sunday afternoon at the Mechanics' pavilion. About 10,000 persons were in attendance and not a seat was vacated until the conclusion of the sermon preached by Bishop Joyce, president of the league. His theme was "Faith in Christ," and no address more eloquent or fervent has been heard since the assembling of the convention. At its conclusion the bishop was tendered an impromptu reception, not being allowed to leave the platform until nearly all the members of the great congregation had grasped his hand. The influence of the league was not alone felt in the central meeting. All over the city, in churches of many denominations, services were held and every place the local pulpit was occupied by a visiting divine.

TRADE REVIEW.

Volume of Business Is Fair in Spite of Heat and Other Disturbing Influences.

New York, July 20.—Bradstreet's says: "Heat, drought and strikes have furnished their quota of disturbing influences this week, but despite these a fair volume of business goes forward, and nearly all markets have taken the developments of the week (all of which, by the way, have not been unfavorable) calmly and even cheerfully. While only scattered rains are reported in the worst afflicted sections of the corn belt and much more rain is needed if damage is to be repaired, the rest of the country reports a fair amount of moisture, and the south Atlantic, the central western and the northwestern states return more favorable advices than a week ago, both as regards the crop outlook and the business doing. The great steel strike, closely followed by the tie-up of hard coal miners by a few mine firemen, has resulted in the greatest suspension of labor reported for some years past, but it is to be borne in mind that this season is the natural one for vacations, and nothing like the maximum number of men reported on strike is thought to be out. Fair estimates place the number of men actually striking in the steel trade at less than 50,000, and the number of idle coal miners will not equal this amount. On the other hand, the machinists' strike has shown signs of disintegration, and is generally conceded to have been a failure.

"Iron and steel as a whole are unsettled by the strike, which is, however, confined to one locality, the central west, and again directly affects only the tin plate, the sheet and the hoop mills within that territory. The usual summer shutdown, which increases the number of those idle from other causes, has led to some apparent overestimates of the number on strike. The outlook is, with a continuance of the strike, for some weakness in the cruder forms of iron which will, of course, tend to accumulate and, on the other hand, induce some advance in the finished products affected directly by the strike."

"Failures for the week numbered 193 in the United States, against 231 last year, and 32 in Canada, against 27 last year."

COMPLETES ITS WORK.

Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress Adopts Resolutions and Adjourns.

Cripple Creek, Col., July 19. — The transmississippi commercial congress on Thursday completed the most important of its work, adopted resolutions covering a multitude of subjects of interest to the great west and selected the Twin cities—St. Paul and Minneapolis—as the next place of meeting. A resolution proposing the establishment of government departments of mining and commerce was adopted. Government aid in the reclamation of arid lands was strongly urged and the restoration of the mercantile marine was advocated in general terms. Harbor and river improvements were recommended, including a deep waterway connecting the great lakes with the Mississippi river.

Cripple Creek, Col., July 20. — The trans-Mississippi commercial congress Friday finished its business and adjourned to meet in St. Paul, Minn., at a time to be hereafter fixed by the executive committee. The attendance Friday was light.

Globe Circler Home Again.

Chicago, July 22.—Charles Cecil Fitzmorris, a 17-year-old Chicago boy, whose parents reside at 4623 Emerald avenue, reached Chicago at 6:55 a. m. Saturday after a flying trip around the world against time. He beat the record of George Francis Train and Nellie Bly. His time was 60 days 13 hours 29 minutes and 42 4-5 seconds. The total distance covered was 20,455 miles

In a life of Pasteur recently published in Paris attention is called to the fact that the man who was destined to revolutionize chemistry ranked fourteenth in the list of twenty-two candidates at his high school in Dijon, and was marked "weak" in chemistry.

A book on the ears as an index of character having been published by an English author, a learned reviewer mentions his own elaborate study of the ears of more than 40,000 people, including 800 criminals and 2,000 insane persons, besides those of 300 apes. He was forced to the conclusion that the ears gave no clew to personal traits.

It is not generally known that the remains of all the Czars of Russia since Peter the Great lie in a memorial chapel built on one of the islands of the Neva. All the cenotaphs are exactly alike, each being a block of white marble without any decoration whatever. The only distinction by which one can be told from its neighbor is the name of the deceased emperor whose remains it contains.

The first of the anti-tuberculosis dispensaries in Paris was inaugurated in the Rue Mercadet, in the Montmartre district, the other day. The object of the work is more preventive than curative. Poor people are examined free of charge. If tuberculosis is found, the proper initial treatment and advice are given to them. This institution is due principally to private initiative.

A plague as horrid in its way as any of those from which the ancient Egyptians suffered has assailed the south coast of England. Countless hordes of octopi, the devilfishes of Victor Hugo, have invaded the English channel and have swarmed along the shores of Devon and Cornwall in tremendous numbers. Traveling about in marauding armies, they have well-nigh destroyed the local lobster and crab fisheries by devouring these crustaceans wholesale.

JOHNSON AT WORK AGAIN.

Racine, Wis., July 22nd.—John Johnson, of No. 924 Hamilton Street, this city, is a happy man.

For years he has suffered with Kidney and Urinary trouble. He was so broken down that he was forced to quit work. Everything he tried failed, till a friend of his recommended a new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Johnson used them, and the result surprised him. He is well as ever he was, completely cured, and working away every day.

His case is regarded by those who knew how very bad he was, as almost a miracle, and Dodd's Kidney Pills are a much talked of medicine.

RAIN.

The patient rain at early summer dawn;
The long, lone autumn drip; the damp, sweet hush
Of springtime, when the glinting drops seem gone
Into the first notes of hidden thrush;
The solemn, dreary beat
Of winter rain and sleet;
The mad, sweet, passionate calling of the showers
To the unblossomed hours;
The driving, restless, midnight sweep of rain;
The fitful sobbing and the smile again
Of spring's childhood; the fierce, unpitying pour
Of low-hung, leaden clouds; the evermore
Prophetic beauty of the sunset storm,
Transfigured into color and to form
Across the sky; O wondrous changing rain!
Changeful and full of temper as man's life;
Impetuous, fierce, unpitying, kind again,
Prophetic, beauteous, soothing, full of strife;
Through all thy changing passions hear not we
Th' eternal note of the Unchanging Sea.

My Pardon.

By William Wendham.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

TUESDAY, Feb. 5.—It is all over, and I have been found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. The curious thing about it is that I do not feel so very gloomy about it. The suspense before the verdict was a great deal more harrowing than the certainty of the scaffold seems to be. Perhaps it is because I am stunned by the hopelessness of the situation and tired out by the long weeks of excitement and worry. Anyway, I know that to-night I do not fear the death that has been decreed.

Most certainly I do not regret the act which has brought me to this cell. I glory in it, and would do it again to-morrow under the same circumstances. I want to set that down here, so that all of my friends and any others who are curious enough to read this diary may know after I am gone that I did not consider myself a criminal.

My lawyer tells me that my friends are making strong efforts to have the governor intercede, and that he has promised to see me. But it will do no good. I killed Philip Sherry—there is no question about that. They proved it plainly enough at the trial, in spite of my lawyer's most skillful efforts. Even if they hadn't, it would have been none the less true. But none of them know why I did it—only one—and they never will know. Torture could not drag it from me. She knows, and I am content. No, I will tell nobody. I will not even tell the governor.

* * * *

Wednesday, Feb. 6.—Strange things have happened to-day. I saw the governor. I broke my promise to myself that I would not tell why I killed Philip Sherry, and the governor has pardoned me. They told me that he was a cheap politician who could not be reached except by boodle. But I know he is a most masterful man, who knows all the fountains and impulses of human action and passion, and that he has a heart that understands and beats in harmony with his fellow men.

He was not at all the sort of a looking man I expected to see. His face impressed me as being a type of the pioneers, the men who have felled the forests and reclaimed the wilderness. He does not look the scholar nor the orator, although he surely must be an impressive speaker, judging from his logical habits of thought and his masterful use of the English language. I think it was his eyes which made the greatest impression on me. They were the most peculiar eyes I ever saw. They seemed to turn inward and be communing with his inner consciousness most of the time. But every now and then he would give me a glance so sharp and penetrating that I felt he was looking into my very soul.

I entered the room sulky and unreconciled with my fate. The governor, sitting sprawled out in his chair, loose-jointed, looking more the backwoodsman than the statesman, his eyes dulled with that peculiar introspection. He asked me a number of commonplace questions, which I answered with a mixture of contempt and doggedness.

Suddenly straightening himself up and fixing on me a glance so sharp and penetrating, and at the same time so commanding as to make me involuntarily rise from my chair, he fired at me a volley of questions so pointed, so comprehensive, so searching, that it seemed to me he was scanning my innermost consciousness.

Before I realized it I was pouring out the most sacred secrets of my soul to this man who but a moment before had been an utter stranger to me, and whom I had been taught to regard only in the light of a coarse and selfish politician. Something he said stung my pride, and his personality won my confidence—all so artfully and so quickly that I involuntarily responded.

"Listen to me, sir," I cried, my fists clenching, while I felt the veins stand out on my neck, even as I had felt them stand out on that day when I killed Philip Sherry, "I am not a criminal, I am not a bad man. I do not believe my tendencies are vicious. God knows I have an awful temper. But upon the memory of my mother, I believe that temper has never been aroused, except upon just provocation or by some act of injustice or brutality.

"I remember well the first time I ever realized I had a temper. It was the same time also that I realized I was an independent personality. I was a peculiar boy, sensitive, lonely and self-conscious—shunning the other boys because their badgering ways played upon all my supersensitive nerves.

"My mother, God bless her, who would have gone to the rack or the stake to save me a moment's pain, unconsciously emphasized the terrors of my situation by keeping me in long curls and babyish attire long after the other boys of my age were habited like miniature men. You can imagine the humiliation to which I was subjected, even had I not been cursed with supersensitive nerves.

"But underneath all my bashfulness I had the temper of a demon. The first time I discovered it I was frightened nearly to death. It was still in the period of my long curls and girlish costumes.

"A big fellow who delighted in bullying, and who had made it his especial delight to torment me because of my effeminate appearance and bashful manner, brought his persecutions to a climax by leading a crowd of schoolmates to catch me, throw me down and pile on top of me. I was severely hurt, but my physical injuries were insignificant compared with the humiliation. And as I lay, ground into the earth under that wriggling mass of boys, the hot blood surged through my head, carrying with it a sense of courage, and a bitter hatred which I had never guessed I was capable of possessing.

"When they piled off of me and let me rise, limping and nearly smothered while they ran away laughing, I picked up a big jagged stone and followed them. I remember it was some hours before I succeeded in getting squarely in front of the big Peter Werner, who had led the assault, and who had by this time forgotten it. I let drive my stone with all the force I possessed, and I remember well the wild joy which possessed my soul when I saw the blood spurt from his head, and beheld him lying unconscious on the ground. In the days that followed while he lingered between life and death, I never could be brought to see wherein I had done wrong, although after the excitement had passed away, and my bashfulness had reasserted itself, I realized the terrific force of my passion.

"Only two or three times after that was it aroused, but those few times served to demonstrate more clearly my utter inability to restrain myself when injustice or abuse set loose the torrents of my temper. I went on through boyhood and youth with my sensitive, reserved and lonely nature. I had few pleasures and no companions after my mother died.

"The one bright ray that came into my life, was Alice Wilson. As a boy I worshiped her. As a youth I made her the goddess of my dreams, and builded her into air castles which can only come to persons who live the lonely and companionless life that I led. After I was well along into young manhood, and had made something of a success in my vocation—after contact with the world had brushed the gloss off my dreams and had blunted somewhat the edge of my shrinking sensitiveness, I plucked up courage to propose to her. She refused me, but it was with tenderness and with evident distress. She told me that she had never dreamed that I admired her, and was full of pity and regret. She was engaged to Philip Sherry, she told me, and loved him with all her heart.

"She married him, and I crawled back into myself again, and went on in my lonely life. Philip Sherry was a rake and a cur. He broke her heart, dissipated what little fortune she had and became involved in a notorious scandal so badly that he was dragged into court, in a divorce case brought by another man against his wife.

"I happened to be in the Metropolitan hotel one day, where I had been summoned to figure on some changes to be made in remodeling it, and I became the accidental and unseen witness of an interview between Sherry and his wife. It was in the public parlor, but they thought themselves quite alone. She was pleading with him to leave the country and save their children from further disgrace, surely to be entailed by his presence at the forthcoming suit. She was dry-eyed and calm, but I pray God will never let me see a face into which is written a broken heart so vividly as was in hers. He was somewhat in-liquor, brutal and sneering. She did not talk angrily, but very plainly. He became insolent, insulting and abusive. He said things that filled me with horror that they should be spoken to any woman, but most of all to her.

"And then, governor," and I walked directly in front of the governor, and looked him squarely in the eye, "he struck her. Yes, as God is my judge, he struck her, and reeled out of the room. With that blow I started forward from where I had stood transfixed during the brief interview. As she saw me she flushed deeply, and as she caught the expression on my face, cried out as I turned to leave the room:

"'Mr. Drummond, be careful; oh, be careful.'

"It was late that night when I found him. He was in the hotel lobby, laughing and joking with a party of friends. I struck him down with his own cane. The blow was mortal. I meant it to be. I was glad of it when I saw him dying there on the floor. I have been glad of it ever since. I am glad of it now. I would do it again this minute if all the fires of hell roared in front of me and awaited me. And if behind me were all the joys I ever hoped for."

The governor sat for some minutes with those introspective eyes turned inward, and I wondered if he had heard me. Then he arose, put out his hand for mine, placed his other hand on my shoulder and said:

"And I would pardon you with the same conditions facing me. You will be a free man before night."

Lord Salisbury's Soldier Son.

Lord Cecil, Lord Salisbury's soldier son, having obtained his brevet majority in May 1898, for his services in the Dongola expedition, and the D. S. O. for the expedition to Khartoom, has been promoted to a brevet lieutenant colonelcy—while still a captain in the Grenadier guards—as a reward for his good work at Mafeking, where he was Maj. Gen. Baden-Powell's right-hand man throughout the investment. Lord Edward is not yet 34.

The Common Failing.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Puzzle.

The state officials, the members of the state board of health and of the game and fish commission are agitated over the bullheads in the waters of Minnesota. It seems that Minnesotans will not eat bullheads, while in neighboring states their flesh is regarded as very palatable. It is white, fine grained and tender, but the residents of this commonwealth will have none of it. The state law will not allow bullheads to be shipped out of Minnesota. The sport attending their capture is moderate. A line is thrown out with a cork bob, the bullhead immediately swallows the bait and hook, and that is all there is of it. The only zest attending such fishing is occasioned by the desire of the bullhead to stab anyone who takes hold of him. The bullheads at Waterville are filling the lake and have become a pest. A. T. Ehlert of Waterville is trying to induce the officials to grant permission for the shipment of these fish to Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, South Dakota and other states, where there was a good market before the new law went into effect.

Pearls.

Maurice Brower of New York, an extensive buyer of pearls, was in Winona on his way down river and nearing the end of an extended pearl purchasing trip. He stated that the trip had been very successful, and that by the time it was ended he would have expended close to $50,000 for pearls and slugs. He secured several pearls in Winona, and reports leaving close to $1,800 there. The largest price paid for any one pearl was $350, to C. W. Davis, who for some time past has been hunting for clams on Crooked slough. This particular pearl Mr. Davis bought at Stoddard, Wis., a month ago, for $100. It is a perfectly formed pearl of rather silvery color, a good quarter of an inch in diameter.

Davis' Writings.

Senator Cushman K. Davis' work on international law has just been published. It comprises the late United States senator's speeches and writings on that subject. The work also includes the authors lectures on "American Diplomacy" and a copy of the treaty of Westphalia, which concluded the Thirty Years' War. It embraces Senator Davis' views as to the right of the United States to intervene on behalf of Cuba, and as to the annexation of Hawaii.

Log Scaling.

Surveyor General Robbins' crews were busy during June. They scaled 762,678 logs which measured 55,197,590 feet and brought the total of river logs for the year up to 155,480,810 feet. In addition to this there were 15,250,000 feet of logs brought in by rail during the month of June, and during the two previous months 4,750,000 were railed, making a total of 175,480,810 feet of logs that have come to the Minneapolis mills this year.

A Capitol Park.

Seabury Channing, a member of the state capitol commission, appeared before the St. Paul park board and submitted a plan for the conversion of two blocks adjoining the state capitol into a park. He said the state was powerless to act. The estimated cost would be about $50,000. If carried through, a driveway would be made from the new capitol grounds direct to Como. The plan is favorably viewed by the park board.

Summer School.

More than 900 devoted educators are now enrolled in the summer school at the state university. The attendance is about 100 less than last year, but this is attributed by Prof. D. L. Kiehle to the fact that the present term is six weeks, where but four weeks has heretofore been the time, shutting out many teachers who did not feel able to bear the expense of the longer term.

Hutter Contest.

Dairy Commissioner McConnell sent out a circular letter to the buttermakers of the state, notifying them that the next state contest will take place July 31, and that the next exhibit of butter at Buffalo will be scored on August 10.

The department's work during the five months ending June 1 shows forty-four convictions for violating dairy and food laws. Of these, sixteen were in Minneapolis, five in St. Paul and the remainder scattered throughout the state.

News in Brief.

The local quarrymen have notified the granite firms of the St. Cloud district that on and after Aug. 1, the scale of wages will be $2 per day of eight hours, and that the scale will be for one year from that date. The present scale is $2 per day of nine hours.

Crookston's telephone system is to be given an overhauling and the exchange will be moved into a new building now being erected by Christianson & Strauder.

Adjutant General Libby, of the national guard, has ordered new uniforms for the men of the First regiment. They are the brown kahki uniform worn by the troops in Cuba and other hot countries.

A fire engine ran down August Chemidlin at Wacouta and Seventh streets, St. Paul. Two wheels passed over his body. He was removed to the office of Dr. J. C. Nelson, where he died within twenty minutes.

After having lived to the ripe old age of 78 years, R. B. Hendershott, an inmate of the poor farm at Minneapolis, dropped dead.

The volume of business done by the Crookston land office during the year closing June 30th was the largest in its history and included 1,940 homestead entries, 843 final proofs, 456 cash entries, and 444 contests filed.

Albert Kromer was kicked to death by a broncho at Brainerd.

Willie Konzem, a bell boy, died of lockjaw at the city hospital in St. Paul. While celebrating during the Fourth his hand was badly larcerated by the explosion of a cannon cracker.

The state board of control will not name a successor to C. W. Knapp, steward and purchasing agent at the Rochester hospital, who has resigned. Purchasing agents at other institutions have also been dispensed with. The law specifies that all purchases shall be made by the board of control.

Andrew Carlson, the carpenter who fell from the third story of the new Chamber of Commerce building in Minneapolis, died without regaining consciousness.

Wm. Bansen, a farmer near Little Falls, was killed in a runaway.

Andrew Reinstadt, an employe of the Sweatt Manufacturing Company of Minneapolis, feel into a tank of boiling water and was scalded to death.

MADE BONIFACE A KNIGHT.

Singular Freak of a Bibulous Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the Last Century.

During the last century one of the dukes of Richmond was lord lieutenant of Ireland. He was a convivial spirit and during his term in office was wont to hold some notable orgies. With his boon companions it was his daily habit to go to a certain fashionable inn at Bray kept by one Michael Connolly. There much wine was consumed during his incumbency of the lord lieutenancy, and many and wild were the nights that the little inn at Bray witnessed, says a London paper. Connolly had a reputation as being the best cook in Ireland, and it was said his wine was the best to be found within the confines of the emerald isle. The duke of Richmond said so, and he ought to have known, as he had eaten tons of the one and imbibed tuns of the other. Connolly's cooking and Connolly's wine were popular themes of conversation with his lordship, and he was not niggardly in his praise, either. Wine is a great leveler of ranks, and so it fell out one night that the duke, carried away by his admiration for Connolly's talents in kitchen and taproom, committed an egregious, amusing mistake. The night in question had been an even more than usually wet one at the inn at Bray, and the duke, the inkeeper himself, and all of the duke's companions, were lost to all sense of either proportion or the eternal fitness of things.

Therefore no one thought it strange when the duke sent for mine host, and, after a short speech of praise of his viands, the way in which they were prepared, and especially of his wine cellar, bade him kneel. Then striking him across the shoulders, said: "Rise, Sir Michael Connolly!" and Sir Michael rose midst the rapturous applause of those present. It seemed quite the proper caper then, but the next morning, as it came back to still further jar the aching head of the duke, it bore a somewhat different aspect, and the principal question that agitated the ducal mind was how to get out of the scrape. Connolly was summoned, and, in the faint hope that the ceremony had made no impression, asked if he remembered aught that happened the night previous. Sir Michael did, and manifested a disquieting determination to hang on to his newly acquired title. But, as have lesser and greater before and since, he fell a willing victim to bribery, and finally agreed not to press his claim to knighthood. The price was heavy, but not too high to pay for the suppression of a tale that would make his grace of Richmond the laughing stock of London, and so the duke was turning satisfied with his morning's work when the late Sir Michael dashed his self-congratulations to the four winds.

"Yis, your grace, I'll keep quiet," he said, as he jingled the price of his title in his pocket, "but," thoughtfully, "but it will take more than the likes of me to keep my wife, Lady Michel Connolly, quiet about the matter." And it did. Michael was right. She was Lady Michael to her friends from that day on, and always laid claim to the title. The duke was the laughing stock of London, as he had feared, but a reformed man, for he dared no further risks.

UP-TO-DATE JAPAN.

It Knows All About the Tricks of Stock Watering and Company Flotation.

Economoic developments in Japan during the past few years have been very striking indeed. From a native source the Kobe Chronicle reproduces certain figures which show what an enormous expansion there has been in the capital invested in joint stock companies since the war. This has been specially noticeable, says the Pall Mall Gazette, in the banking and money lending groups, and among manufacturing companies engaged in cotton spinning, coal and the tobacco industries. Cotton spinning capital was 30,313,000 yen in 1899, the last year for which figures are available, and in 1895 only 18,658,000. Cotton weaving capital increased from 1,563,000 yen to 3,976,000. In coal mining 14,241,000 yen was employed against 1,013,000 in 1895. In tobacco 11,420,000 yen, against practically nothing in 1895. Other big increases were 4,757,000 yen to 7,909,000 yen in the electrical lighting industry, 2,019,000 yen in machinery manufactory, and 4,214,000 yen in ship building, the two last practically new industries. Sake brewing accounted for 6,133,000 yen, against 1,322,300.

Far and away the greatest increase is, however, in banking and money lending, now responsible for 275,432,000 yen, against 79,370,000 yen in 1895, and, if the figures are reliable, it is not surprising that the necessary competition for business has resulted in disaster. Taking the various groups of joint stock companies, we have the following comparisons: Agricultural companies, accounted for 2,287,685 yen in 1899, an increase of 765,000 yen over the 1895 figures, commercial and financial accounted for 335,503,000 yen, against 99,786,000 yen in 1895, an increase of 235,716,000 yen; manufacturing for 147,783,000 yen, an increase of 89,055,000 yen, and transport, sea and land, for 198,147,000 yen, an increase of 108,186,000 yen. It is estimated that the increase in the capital of joint stock companies in 1899, as compared with 1895, when the figures were roughly 249,998,000 yen, was 433,722,000 yen. Moreover, fully 15,234,000 yen represents the increase in debentures raised. In round numbers 450,000,000 yen represents the increase in the capital of joint stock companies in Japan since the war, or nearly 175 per cent.

A Balloon Ascensionist Killed.

A balloon ascensionist was recently killed while making one of his daring trips. Life is too valuable to trifle with in fool-hardy adventures. It is better to employ ourselves in peaceful pursuits, where we may be secure. Then if we take care of our health, we can live to a good old age. The best means of promoting health is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This medicine cures dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, flatulency and insomnia. Be sure and try it.

Both Had One.

An enthusiastic Louisiana fisherman had great luck while fishing on the Illinois river recently. During the day he wired his wife: "I've got one, weighs seven pounds and is a beauty." He was considerably surprised to receive the following reply from his wife: "So have I. Weighs ten pounds. He isn't a beauty. Looks like you."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

CAUSE OF FALLING HAIR.

Dandruff, Which Is a Germ Disease—Kill the Germ.

Falling hair is caused by dandruff, which is a germ disease. The germ, in burrowing in to the root of the hair, where it destroys the vitality of the hair, causing the hair to fall out, digs up the cuticle in little scales, called dandruff or scurf. You can't stop the falling hair without curing the dandruff, and you can't cure the dandruff without killing the dandruff germ. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Newbro's Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ. Herpicide is also a delightful hair dressing.

Men with Weak Intellects.

The captain on a Cunarder forced a "skin" gambler to give up his gains. The gambler, of course, regards it as an unjust discrimination, as a man who does not read the papers enough to keep away from steamboat poker is pretty sure to give his money to the first bunco man he meets after he goes ashore.—Washington Star.

A JUDGE'S WIFE CURED OF PELVIC CATARRH.

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless---Cured by Pe-ru-na.

MRS. JUDGE McALLISTER.

Mrs. Judge McAllister writes from 1217 West 33rd st., Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"I suffered for years with a pain in the small of my back and right side. It interfered often with my domestic and social duties and I never supposed that I would be cured, as the doctor's medicine did not seem to help me any.

"Fortunately a member of our Order advised me to try Peruna and gave it such high praise that I decided to try it. Although I started in with little faith, I felt so much better in a week that I felt encouraged.

"I took it faithfully for seven weeks and am happy indeed to be able to say that I am entirely cured. Words fail to express my gratitude. Perfect health once more is the best thing I could wish for, and thanks to Peruna I enjoy that now."—Minnie E. McAllister.

The great popularity of Peruna as a catarrh remedy has tempted many people to imitate Peruna. A great many so-called catarrh remedies and catarrhal tonics are to be found in many drug stores. These remedies can be procured by the druggist much cheaper than Peruna. Peruna can only be obtained at a uniform price, and no druggist can get it a cent cheaper.

Thus it is that druggists are tempted to substitute the cheap imitations of Peruna for Peruna. It is done every day without a doubt.

We would therefore caution all people against accepting these substitutes. Insist upon having Peruna. There is no other internal remedy for catarrh that will take the place of Peruna. Allow no one to persuade you to the contrary.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

—Dr. Niven at Waverly, July 26 and 27.

--One man was wearing an overcoat this morning.

—Emil Zierman lost one of his horses Monday. It died suddenly.

—Charley Johnson is laid up with a cut foot, accidently cut while cradling.

—Several binders found their way to the country from Delano this week.

—J. W. and F. Q. Lindsley are putting in a water meter at their place of business

—Miss Isa Kerr and the St. Cecilia Club had an entertainment at the Kerr residence last Tuesday evening.

—J. D. Young bought another black colt yesterday, and expects soon to have as fine a team of blacks as anybody in town.

--Extensive improvements are being made at the mill. A new boiler and engine house; city water and other conveniences

—The Catholic Calendar for 1902, being printed at the Eagle office, is a creditable piece of work, and quite a big job for any office.

—William Ziebarth lost a horse on the binder team Tuesday. This makes two this season. "Bill" must be becoming a bonanza farmer to afford it.

—Again we caution our farmer readers to get their crops cut, threshed and housed, and their hay all safely taken care of as soon as possible, before the fall rains set in.

—A number of Delanoites are camping on Lake Rebecca. They have a fine location, good bathing and fishing place, and are enjoying life as well as people can such hot weather.

—From the large number of large loads of empty beer kegs, of different sizes, and boxes, hauled to the depot Monday, it would seem that Delano must certainly be the greatest market for beer in the country.

—It is told of Gen. Washington that upon one occasion one of his officers asked "Why do you raise your hat to a negro"? The reply promptly came, "He raised his hat to me. Should I be less polite than a negro?"

– Last Saturday was the hottest day in Minnesota since the establishment of the weather bureau 31 years ago. The mercury touched 101 on the government thermometers. On Wednesday the record went up to 104 in St. Paul.

—People should exercise great care not to expose themselves or animals to too much exercise during the extremely hot weather. It is not to be wondered at that there have been deaths and sickness, but the wonder is that there hasn't been more fatalities.

—Ezra W. Ferrel, of Montrose, has been dealing in gravestones for years. If you want anything in that line he can be depended upon to do as he agrees. If you buy of him you will know where to find him if anything don't suit.

—The long wished for rain came Wednesday night. In the afternoon the atmosphere cooled down to the 80ies, and during the night rain came, a good soaking rain. Thursday morning the weather seemed more like what we have been used to in this country and at this season of the year. The rain did much towards rejuvinating the crops, as well as their owners.

—The annual school meeting was rather a quiet one, only 31 votes being cast; of these Adam Horsch and Fred Knoll received all but three which were cast for J. W. Lindsley. There was hardly more than a quorum at any time, and no vote was taken on the school book question. If an expression of the voters on that question was desired, it should have been arranged so that they could have balloted on it as they did for officers.

—The epizootic has begun to extend through New England. At New Haven 80 per cent of the horses are affected. The disease is believed to be spread by the watering troughs. To destroy the germs of the equine grippe all animal drinking places should be cleaned thoroughly at least twice a week. Thus far the west has escaped the malady, but its safety should not encourage indifference to simple preventatives.--St. Cloud Times.

—Our village authorities are accused of partiality towards transients. They prohibit the children from playing ball in the village railroad park and allowed the Nebraska Indian ball team to camp there over night; and almost daily from two to twenty travelers rest their weary limbs on the grass in the shade, unmolested, until the next train west whistles, when they scamper down the track while the engine takes water, to secure a place to ride towards the harvest fields of the Dakotas.

–O. L. Billings' funeral was held Sunday afternoon in the Odd Fellow's hall, conducted by Revs. Thompson, of Delano, and Davies, of Excelsior. Rev. Davies preached the sermon. The body was laid at rest in the Delano cemetery south of town. O. L. Billings was born in Portland, Maine, January 5, 1849 and died Saturday July 20, 1901. He came to Delano when a young man and had lived here ever since with the exception of three years residence in Minneapolis. He leaves a wife and four sons.

—W. D. Freeman met with a very fortunate fall on Friday evening. He piled up some boxes and was on them assisting a little martin to keep out of reach of the cats. He took a tumble; the bird was severely crippled and W. D. wrung its neck and threw it bodily away. On taking account of personal injuries he found he had nearly fainted, had barked a shin and bruised his hip, and his wife wasn't home to see the fun. It was fortunate that no bones were broken. He is convalescing and able to be about, on the ground.

—It takes all kinds of people to make a world is the only excuse we know, for the existance in nearly every community of a man or two and a woman or two, who do not speak to or even notice their neighbors. This man or two or woman or two may live happy this way, but they continually by such actions, remind others of a sheep stealing or a suck egg dog, going along the least frequented byways, knowing and feeling that they have been wrong doing. But possibly the least said by such people, or about them, the better for the community. But such actions on the part of people in trade, are not conducive to the expansion of business.

—The Quaker remedies advertisers and sellers, after disposing of what they could at $1.00 per head are said to have reduced the price to 50 cts per three months treatment on Friday evening and then left town. Of course those who paid one good big dollar feel that their stock on hand has depreciated 50 per cent on their hands. The lecturer offered to bet that twenty tape worms had been removed from Delanoites since his arrival, if the people would only own up. If there is twenty, or even one, who was fortunate enough to be relieved by his remedies, of a tape worm, and they will let us know we will advertise the fact. A remedy that will rid the human system in one and a half hours, as he claimed, of a tape worm, ought to be made known, if there are so many cases in the country as the vender intimated.

—The ball team went to Litchfield last Friday and were defeated by a score of 9 to 14, which is a very good showing against a team that claims the championship of the state. The first part of the game looked like a walk away for Litchfield, but in the 7th inning our boys braced up at bat and knocked Litchfield's left handed twirler out of the box, he being replaced by their pet and pride Mr. Cox. One score came in the eighth, and in the ninth there was a man on third and one on first, with a string of good batters coming up determined to win out the game, but the umpire came into action for Litchfield and called Justus out at second on a pretty steal, ending the game. The umpire also had a bad eye for strikes and balls.

They are expected to play a return game here sometime in the near future, and the boys are determined to go in to win, leaving out the siege of stage fright that extended over six innings when up the line. Litchfield will have to play ball and play hard to win.

Johnson did some fine work behind the bat and on throwing to second.

Score	1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Delano	0 0 0 0 0 0 8 1 0—9
Litchfield	0 3 2 0 8 1 2 0 3—14

Mrs. Orrison and Chester returned home from Armstrong Wednesday evening.

A Soshnik left this morning for Graceville, to help his old neighbor, John Bull, harvest.

H. A. Gilmer entertained his little grandson Packard, of Winsted, at his hotel this week.

J. C. McDonald and Mrs. Shrader and Beth returned last evening from Springfield, Minn.

Mrs. C. A. Connor and children, of St. Peter, visited Delano relatives and friends this week.

Sam Thompson and L. G. Perry, of Greenwood, were business visitors to Delano, Tuesday.

Miss Jennie Gibiin, of Waverly, visited at O'Hairs', Sunday, returning on the evening train.

Miss Blanche and Clara Mealey went to Howard Lake last Friday for a week's visit with their grandpa on the farm.

Earl Holsington visited Minneapolis and Wayzata during the week. Mrs. H. returned home with him from the latter town.

Misses May Mowatt, Merel Jones, and Flossie Davis came over Saturday from summer school at Buffalo, to spend Sunday at home.

Editor J. K. Keithley and family, of Weeping Water, Neb., who visited a few days with his cousins Dr. and Miss Mary Catlin, started on Tuesday morning for St. Peter, on their return home trip.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the many kind friends for kindness in the sickness and death of my beloved husband, O. L. Billings, and especially the lodge of Odd Fellows.

HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

County Cullings.

Waverly is looking forth to the biggest day in her history, on Saturday, Aug. 3, when the railroad people hold their annual outing, at that place. 4,000 people are expected. It might be a good time to take a census.

The Herald advertises the 33rd exhibit of the Wright County Agricultural Society, at Howard Lake, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Sept. 18, 19, and 20. Wright county ought to have as good a fair as any county in the state.

The meeting at Monticello of the Wright County Epworth League is highly spoken of by the Times. This was the first anniversary of the organization. It is hoped to make the meetings more interesting and beneficial each year.

The question of building a Wright county jail is again being discussed. It seems people are entitled to a jail within the county if they want it, and prisoners are entitled to live in the county until they are convicted and sent to Stillwater, or released. It doesn't look well to send people to neighboring cities to be exhibited as culprits from Wright county. A jail at home would be better.

Among Our Exchanges.

Duluth Herald: British grumbling over the prolonged inactivity and continued failures of Lord Kitchener to wind up the war in South Africa is increasing. Kitchener made a great reputation in the Soudan but he is in a fair way to lose it in South Africa.

Our school has received its batch of certificates from the State High School Board, the number being 78 from the spring examinations. The subjects covered by these certificates are 19. The number of certificates for the winter examinations was 52 this making the total number for the year 130. --Cokato Enterprise.

Duluth Herald: And now the story is published from New York that James J. Hill is much displeased with Mr. Morgan because he placed Mr. Harriman on the Northern Pacific board and proposes to throw overboard "the community of interest" plan and devote all his time to building up the Great Northern. There may be some truth in the story, but it is probably idle gossip.

It is probably not generally known that township supervisors, under a state law, have authority to compel farmers to free their lands of wild mustard. They should notify the farmer to pull his mustard within a stated number of days, and if not done at the expiration of that time the supervisors may cause the mustard to be pulled and assess the expense against the property in the taxes.--Valley Herald.

Cokato Enterprise: There is a growing suspicion in the minds of many people that the "strike" is a very clever system of raising prices. Just watch how nicely the iron workers strike will be settled, and prices rise. An increase of 10 per cent on a few thousand dollars of wages will be granted and then the same percent will be added to the millions of dollars of manufactures. And it will be called a victory of the masses over classes, but the former will pay the bills.

British are Worsted.

LONDON, July 23.—The British war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, July 22. "A train from Capetown with 113 details and stores was held up, captured, and burned at Schepers, eight miles north of Beaufort West on the morning of July 21. Our casualties were three killed and 18 wounded. An inquiry is proceeding."

"French reports that Crabbe with 300 men was attacked in the mountains near Craddock by Kritsinger at dawn, July 21.—The horses stampeded. An all day fight followed. Crabbe fell back on Mortimer. Our loss was slight.

Beecher's Farmers' Creed.

The great preacher, Henry Ward Beecher, took an intense interest in agriculture and was personally a successful gardener and fruit grower. He is said to have promulgated, over 60 years ago, the following agricultural creed which is not a bad one for today, barring the spinning wheel:

"We believe in small farms and thorough cultivation.

"We believe the soil loves to eat as well as its owner, and ought, therefore to be liberally fed.

"We believe in large crops which leave the land better than they found it-making the farmer and the farm both glad at once.

"We believe in going to the bottom of things, and therefore, in deep plowing, and enough of it. All the better with a subsoil plow.

"We believe that every farm should own a good farmer.

"We believe that the best fertilizer for any soil is a spirit of industry, enterprise, and intelligence. Without this, lime and gypsum, bones and green manure, marl and guano will be of little use.

"We believe in good fences, good barns, good farm houses, good stock, good orchards, and children enough to gather the fruit.

"We believe in a clean kitchen, a neat wife in it, a spinning wheel, a clean cupboard, a clean dairy and a clean conscience.

"We firmly disbelieve in farmers that will not improve; in farms that grow poorer every year; in starving cattle; in farmers' boys turning into clerks and merchants; in farmers' daughters unwilling to work, and in all farmers ashamed of their vocation, or who drink whiskey until honest people are ashamed of them."–Oregon Agriculturist.

Maple Plain.

Mr. Editor, inclosed, I send you a letter from a brother of mine, living in Missouri, telling of the long continued drouth, the condition of crops etc.

SEDALIA, MO., July 15, 1901.

BROTHER JOHN, We are all as well as usual. It has been very hot and dry. The heavens are as brass and the earth as iron and the sun beats down without mercy or stint, out of a cloudless sky, and the wind feels like the blast from a furnace and the crops are about all ruined, no oats, no hay, poor potatoes, no gardens, and the corn is about ruined. I doubt if my county will have 1,000 bushels of corn. We have had only two showers of rain since corn was planted; some farmers are hauling water four miles for stock. The mercury has ranged from 85 to 110; last Friday in my door yard it was 108 and for two hours stood at 104, and today is about ashes. Friday morning I took my son Glenn and went to the timber three miles away for wood, but the heat made me sick. It is so all over the state, even worse in some places than here, and what the people will do I cannot tell. If the Lord does not provide a way there will be great suffering. I have a little old corn yet but many have none, and it is worth seventyfive cents per bu in Sedalia. Pastures are dry and some burned over, while hay is 12 to 15 dollars a ton; potatoes $1.25 a bu; little green apples $1 per bu, and no prospect of relief. I am stating facts; I am not complaining; it would do no good if I did. It is thundering now but may not rain. I have corn that has never been plowed and ground that has never been broke. I prepared ground two months ago for millet, but never sowed the seed; some sowed and it died.

I will close for now, perhaps next time I will have a more cheerful subject.

Your Brother,
E. N. MCGARY.

We farmers can comfort ourselves that our condition is no worse here in Minnesota. The chinch bugs and hot weather has done some damage to part of the growing crops but we will not be left destitute.

Some of the farmers were harvesting their grain yesterday (Sunday). This is more righteous than to play ball on Sunday.

The hay crop is very good this year, also rye and oats are good, and many fields of wheat are damaged but little by the chinch bugs. Perhaps it is all right that we should have some of the Egyptian plagues.

We have the potato bug, the chinch bug and the gold bug. The last named is more destructive than them all. By a few strokes of the pen they can distress millions of people; they can get a corner on all the products of the world, while the potato and chinch bugs get a corner on only a few vegetables.

Everybody says last week was about the hottest weather they ever felt.

At our annual school meeting in Dist. 102 we had enough for a quorum and one over.

Patriotism does not come through books and the pen but through the sword and powder smoke. That is the theory of today.

Poverty comes through misfortune, loss of health, extravagence, and neglecting business for pleasure.

FARMER.

Stop Negro Exodus.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 23.--The exportation of 400 negro laborers to Chicago and other northwestern cities to work in steel mills was stopped here today by the arrest of two negro laborer agents on a misdemeanor charge. One furnished bail. The fires of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railway company were banked last night on account of the scarcity of negro labor. The negroes were to have left on a late train tonight, but when their leaders were arrested the ranks broke in great confusion. The negroes it is said, are some who went to take the places of strikers in the Pennsylvania mines.

AN ODE TO THE SMALL TOWN.

If there's one thing more'n another
Makes a man admit he's down,
It's to find himself laid over
In a little country town,
Where the through trains only whistle,
Never pausing in their flight,
And there's naught to take him onward
Till the local comes at night.

It may be a business errand
That has basely drawn him there,
Or a fishing expedition,
Or a change of scene and air,
But, whatever the attraction,
It can never hold him fast
When the through express comes onward
And without a pause goes past.

It is quiet in the woodland,
It is lonesome in the street,
And it's dusty in the distance
From the haze and from the heat.
But the thing that morn'n another
Makes a man think life a bore,
Is to soldier in the station
That the fast trains all ignore.

The New York World,
Thrice-a-Week Edition,

The Most Widely Read Newspaper in America.

Time has demonstrated that the Thrice a Week World stands alone in its class. Other papers have imitated its form but not its success. This is because it tells all the news all the time and tells it impartially, whether that news be political or otherwise.

It is in fact almost a daily at the price of a weekly and you cannot afford to be without it.

Republican and Democrat alike can read the Thrice a Week World with absolute confidence in its truth.

In addition to news, it publishes first class serial stories and other features suited to the home and fireside.

The Thrice a Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and GAZETTE together one year for $1.75.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00.

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

JUST SEE HIM!

See the toney city man
With his rod and reel,
Line 'twill reach a hundred span—
Outfit cost a deal!
See his best of canvas suits,
See his shining rubber boots
Note that eager eye that shoots
Glances keen as steel!

See those vari-colored flies
In his leather book;
Best that expert can devise
Clustered 'round each hook.
See him cast the costly bait
To the trout that lay in wait;
See his anxious breast dilate
With impatience! Look!

See the kid with freckled mug
And a crooked pole!
See him catch the vulgar bug
Near the fishing hole!
See him land each speckled prize
Right beneath the town man's eyes,
And the town man sadly sighs
In his troubled soul!

See him at the sun's decline
Cursing luck so tough!
Reeling in his silken line,
Fur'ling on a bluff!
See him talking to the lad,
Hear him say: "Goodby, my lad?"
Town man got the fish, begad!
Ranch boy got the stuff!

See him marching through the town
Prouder than a king!
Speckled beauties dangling down
In a tempting string!
Hear him scatter air quite hot
Of the treasures that he bou—(ahem!)
caught,
And his conscience chides him not—
Hasn't one, b'jing!

—James Barton Adams, in Denver Post.

It has at last been determined by somebody that racing on bicycles is more violent exercise than most athletics, hence the resulting bicycle heart.

That handful of Boers the English went to war with a few years ago, must have been an awfully big handful judging from the weekly reports of the number of Boers killed, wounded and captured to say nothing of the reconcentradoes. And still the war goes on.

Fears are expressed that this country will be visited with the plague. Dr. Bracken, Secretary of the State Board of Health thinks that if the health officers along the sea coast do their duty there is little fear of its coming to Minnesota, and if it does it is easier handled than smallpox.

The new board of control will now look after the state institutions, doing away with the trustees of the state hospitals for insane, board of managers of state prison, board of managers of state reformatory, managers of state training school for boys and girls, board of corrections and charities.

If Lord Kitchener and 70,000 Tommy Atkinses have been ordered to leave South Africa and report in India as is stated in telegrams, there must be some prospect of peace in the Boer republics; and as they have claimed that nothing but independence would do, it must be that they are to have it.

The Northfield News says it is beginning to leak out that Senator Clapp was misled in recommending young Hodgson to a place in the consular service. Further the News says: "The responsibility for this break will soon be fastened upon the proper persons and the matter will undoubtedly be given full publicity." Van Diver, of course!

Dr. Koch, of Berlin, is said to have advanced the idea that consumption in beef or in milk is not communicable to human beings, by being taken into the stomach. That the diseases are entirely different. There are those who without investigation dispute those assertions. It would seem that there must be some foundation for Doctor Koch's idea, or there would be more consumptives than there are.

It seems now that Oom Paul Kruger has accepted an invitation from a Chicago man to visit the United States. His presence in this country may serve to awaken some of the latent patriotism of our people, who uncle Paul claims are, by selling mules, horses, etc. to the English, helping kill off. One republic ought not help kill off the citizens of a sister republic unless she has cause; and there seems to be no cause in this case, except the greed for dollars of some individuals living in our land.

It is astonishing what reports are sent out concerning crops. In one place you can read that crops are fair; in another that the crops are short, there won't be half a crop. Again particular crops are mentioned, as "wheat is all right but corn is a failure". Again it is "corn will be a long ways the best crop we have this year." In our immediate vicinity it appears as if people would have enough to live. It is best to save enough for home consumption and seed, and sell the balance when prices are good, whether it is at once or after awhile.

Those New Yorkers are after money sure. If they can't get it one way they must another. The latest scheme was for George E. Phillips to write a confidential letter to small bankers throughout the country asking them for a contribution of $1,000 each to aid him in cornering the corn market for September, at the same time trying to lead them to believe that he was the noted George H. Phillips, of Chicago. The contributions were to be sent by Aug. 1. On inquiry of the real George H. Phillips some of the small bankers learned the scheme and it was exposed. It is bad enough to steal a man's money without trying to steal his reputation and good name.

Strikes seem to be prevalent over the country. The great steel strike at Pittsburg is said to have lost millions of money. The strike on the dock at San Francisco, interfering with shipping is extensive and felt over most of the country. The messenger boys in Chicago are striking for an increase of wages from $15 to $20 per month. According to a special to a New York paper the nailers and packers in the twenty four mill in Minneapolis are about to strike for higher wages. Striking is bad business and things ought to be adjusted in some way without a strike. People are getting to think the employers provoke a strike for their own gain in some cases.

Two Sides to the Question.

The recent great steel strike was to settle the question as to whether or not men have a right to run their business as they see fit, or as their employes see fit; whether a firm or corporation may hire such men as they please and where and when they please, or hire only such as belong to a union. The question then is shall, or shall not, labor unions dictate to the employers how they shall carry on their business.

There seems to be two sides to this question; and both sides claim to have gained points. If both sides continue long enough to gain points, possibly they will soon agree. Then there will be but one opinion, and the employer and the employe will agree, and get along better together than some of them have been doing.

If capitalists don't want the men to combine for their own protection they ought not to set them the example. If in union of capitalists there is strength; and if it is a good thing for capitalists to agree and unite, it leaves an excuse surely for the employe to do the same If both employer and employe would agree to keep out of unions perhaps it would be as well. But if one has a union it seems necessary for the other to have one also.

Money Trust.

"Some think that they can make peace with the money trust and then fight the other trusts, but it is a vain hope."—Commoner.

Mr. Bryan has the right idea. "The love of money is the root of all evil" and the money trust is no exception. It is for the love of money it exists, and it is from the same motive other trusts exist. It differs only in being bigger than any other, in embracing all other trusts, and monopolies, and combines, for money making purposes. When you interfere with any trust's power to accumulate wealth, you irritate the money trust. All electric wires of the trust system center in the money trust. When the head center is broken up then can something be done with the trusts. But cutting down the tariff on an article here and there and, to please the people, appearing to cripple an insignificant trust, is much like the shoemaker cutting off his dog's tail an inch at a time so it wouldn't hurt so much. He could steal as many sheep after he had lost the tail entirely.

The money trust is the one trust of all others to be feared by the American people. "The love of money is the root of all evil." And those having control of the money of the country can, as has time and again been proven, get men in all stations in life to assist them in maintaining and in strengthening that power. How few bankers oppose the money powers in any of their schemes. How few leading newspapers of the country oppose the banker's schemes. How few eloquent tongues talk against their forming a money trust likely to become more powerful than the government itself, and why? If these trusts are so bad that most everybody can see that one or more trusts are bad, and the money trust is father of them all why not unite in routing him as thoroughly as General Jackson did the bank of the United States? What's the use tinkering along with the little fellows everlastingly, while the big one grows and strengthens?

Late Literary News.

The Cosmopolitan for August is, as usual, rich in fiction, remarkable both for its vivid interest and its great variety. Irving Bacheller writes a refreshing story of the Canadian big timber region, and Hering's drawings catch the spirit of the scene perfectly. A. T. Quiller-Cauch's ("Q") pathetic little tale cannot fail to enlist our sympathies with the French exile who broke his parole for love. Richard Le Gallienne tells the most charming and least known of the quaint "Old French Romances"—the love of honest Squire Robin for the Fair Jehane. "The Temple of Fate," the late Grant Allen's clever satire on modern society—a subject with which she is thoroughly at home; while Phoebe Lyde and Egerton Castle handle strong subjects in a masterly manner.

I sit alone with my heart to-night
Where the gloom is dark and deep,
Across the portals the shadows fall,
And here with my grief I weep;
But over my sad heart's darkness
Steals a radiance rich and rare,
For long ago, when a child at play,
I hid a sunbeam there.

The harp is silent, the chords are dead
Whose music was all too fleet,
And I listen in vain for the silver strain
That made my life complete;
But long ago, when a care-free child,
With no thought of sadder things,
I nestled a song-bird to my breast,
And there it sings and sings.

The garlands are faded and old and sear,
And the laurels that came with the years
Have gone with the dreams and the perished hopes—
I buried them all with tears;
But out in the garden of my soul
The roses bloom so fair,
For long ago, when a little child,
I planted a rose tree there.

—Muriel Strode, in Chicago Evening Post.

The Robber's Cross

By David Ker.

"They call Spain the land of adventure," muttered Harry White, as he strolled before breakfast around the outskirts of a small Spanish town on the southern slope of the Sierra Morena; "and I've been in it three weeks, and not had one adventure yet. A man gets no show at all in traveling nowadays. Hello! here comes somebody in a hurry!"

Very much in a hurry, certainly, seemed the sturdy Spanish peasant who had just appeared on the top of the steep ridge above the boy's head, for he was leaping from crag to crag as recklessly as a wildcat, and at times even swinging himself over some deep cleft by the bough of a tree, as if in such haste that he had no time to think of such a trifle as the chance of a broken neck.

But in this case it was "most haste, worst speed," for all at once a large stone gave way beneath the Spaniard's feet, and he came tumbling headlong down into the road amid a whirlwind of dust.

Harry—whose sympathies were already enlisted in favor of a man capable of such feats of strength and daring—flew to the spot, feeling as if he had really met with something like an "adventure" at last. But when he reached the fallen man he stopped short in sheer amazement.

And well he might. The man whom he had seen bounding along the ridge had had long gray hair and beard; he was quite sure of that for he remembered wondering that an old man should be so active. The hair of the man before him was short, thick, and black as night, and he had no beard at all.

Meanwhile, the stranger had managed to sit up, and was wiping the blood from a bad cut on his forehead. In doing so, he discovered the loss of his false hair and beard, and met Harry's eyes fixed wonderingly upon him.

"Well," asked he, fiercely, answering the boy's glance with a defiant stare, "do you know me?"

"No, and I don't want to know you," said Harry, in broken Spanish, rather nettled at the man's imperious tone. "I suppose you're a smuggler by your disguising yourself that way."

"Yes, I am," replied the other, with a strange smile. "Are you going to give me up to the police?"

"Not I!" cried Harry. "It's not the style of us Americans to give away a man who can't stand up for himself."

"Ah, you're an American, then?" said the smuggler, looking curiously at him. "Well, if you are willing to help me, I'll tell you how you can do it. Give me your arm as far as the chapel of St. James, about half a mile down the road—for I find I've sprained my ankle too badly to walk alone—and then I'm all right."

"Come along, then," rejoined Harry, offering his arm.

And the strangely assorted pair set forth.

On the way our hero told his new friend, who seemed in too much pain to talk himself, that he was traveling through Spain with his father, that he had picked up in Mexico what little Spanish he knew; that his tour had hitherto been provokingly bare of adventures, and that the one thing in the world which he most desired was to fall in with a gang of real Spanish brigands.

At last they reached the chapel, and then, at a peculiar whistle from the smuggler, five wild looking horsemen, with long guns on their shoulders, started out of the encircling thickets, one of whom led by the bridle a fine black horse, on which they at once mounted the crippled Spaniard, not without casting more than one puzzled and suspicious look at the wondering boy.

"Take this for your good deed," said the tall smuggler, taking a small silver cross from his neck and giving it to Harry. "It may be of use to you if ever we meet again. And, as you seem anxious to meet with some Spanish brigands, it may please you to learn that you have seen half a dozen of them to-day."

So saying, he spurred his horse and vanished into the forest with his grim comrades, while Harry turned slowly back to the town, hardly knowing whether he was awake or only dreaming.

"Just like my luck! I've lost my way, sure enough! And this strikes me as the very place to fall in with that nice man, Pedro Gonsalvez, the brigand captain, who seems to be terrorizing the whole country at this time."

The speaker was no other than our friend, Harry White, now grown into a tall young man, and revisiting, after a five-years' absence beyond the Atlantic, his former haunts in southern Spain.

He had certainly good cause to feel uncomfortable just then. To lose one's way in a gloomy forest, among the Spanish mountains, with night at hand and a storm coming on, is not a pleasant experience in any case; but when to all this is added a very strong probability of falling in with a band of robbers, whose usual mode of demanding ransom for a captive is to mail his ears or nose to his anxious friends as a hint that "speedy payment is requested," he must indeed be a brave man who can face the situation without flinching.

What Harry feared came only too soon. A hoarse shout was suddenly heard among the bushes, and before he could draw his revolver he was surrounded by a gang of fierce-looking men, whose grim, ruffianly faces and scowling eyes boded him no good.

A smart stroke from the butt of Harry White's heavy whip felled the foremost man, but the rest at once dragged him from his horse, and, in spite of his furious struggles, bound him hand and foot.

"Let me kill the dog!" roared the injured robber, whose head was bleeding freely. "He shall never strike a Spaniard again!"

"Not so fast, Brother Juan," said another. "He looks like an Englishman, and the English are all rich. We'll make him pay a fat ransom."

"And if he don't pay it quickly," put in a third, with a significant whisk of his knife, close to the prisoner's ear, "his friends won't find him quite so handsome the next time they see him."

Harry shuddered at the horrible threat and the roar of brutal laughter that followed. He was not completely disenchanted, for the brilliant and chivalrous bandits of his boyish dreams were utterly different from these ragged, hangdog ruffians, who almost choked him with the stifling odor of garlic and bad tobacco.

Then his horror turned to rage at the thought of being plundered and insulted by these brutal rascals, and he inwardly vowed that when he did get free he would spend all the money he had in hunting them down. But, as we shall see, he never got the chance of doing so.

The robbers laid their prisoner on the horse and led him up a steep, zigzag path to a kind of rocky platform, walled in on three sides by unscalable cliffs, while on the fourth lay a precipice of several hundred feet.

Here about 20 more brigands were encamped; and Harry White, suddenly remembering his silver cross, looked eagerly to see if the man who had given it to him was one of the band; but he could see no one in the least like him.

"Has Capt. Gonsalvez come back yet?" asked one of his conductors.

"No," was the reply, "but we are expecting him every moment."

Just then a hasty step was heard below, and a tall, dark figure, springing up the rocks as nimbly as a mountain goat, came bounding on to the platform.

"Up with you, comrades!" shouted the newcomer, who was no other than the formidable Pedro Gonsalvez himself. "We have been betrayed, and all the soldiers from La Redonda are upon our trail. We must retreat at once. Ha! who is this—a prisoner?"

"We took him in the valley yonder, and have kept him for ransom," replied one of the bandits.

"There is no time to think of ransoms now, when our very lives are at stake," said the robber chief, sternly. "Take what money he has on him, and then fling him over the precipice."

Instantly a dozen eager hands were rifling Harry's pockets, and the brave youth, giving himself up for lost, prepared to die like a man. But, as his watch was dragged forth by the robbers, the silver cross that hung to its chain caught the eye of Gonsalvez, who sprang forward and asked, hurriedly:

"Where did you get that cross?"

"It was given to me five years ago by a smuggler of these parts, whom I helped to escape when he was crippled by a fall," replied Harry, looking fixedly at him.

"And I am the man who gave it," said Gonsalvez, grasping his hand warmly; "and for that good deed you shall depart free and unharmed. Comrades, give him back all that you have taken. Follow that path, Senor American, which will lead you to the village of San Tomas; and when you tell this story to your friends, tell them also that kindness is never thrown away, even upon a brigand."—Golden Days.

British Secret-Service Fund.

A secret service fund is voted yearly by parliament for the purpose of defeating conspiracies against the state. Last year £13,000 was paid to spies who were employed for this purpose. For a copy of a treaty between France and Russia, known as the treaty of Tilsit, Great Britain paid £10,000.

The leaders representing the employers and the employes in the great steel strike have failed to agree.

Reports say that the United States Treasury is the richest in gold of any in the world. Treasurer Roberts announces that he has charge of $504,354,297. The Treasury never had so much before and it is said no other nation has so much now.

Corn King Phillips has transferred his business to Mr. Reynolds & Co. for the present, claiming to have had so much business his clerks couldn't take care of it, one of the head clerks being sick. He hopes to have affairs in running order again soon.

Dr. Justus Ohage, of St. Paul, has been presented a beautiful loving cup as a token of appreciation in securing free baths for that city. The island on which the baths are, has been named Ohage island.

Towne Denies.

Hon. Chas A Towne has reached Chicago He tells the Record Herald that he has not been interviewed in three months on politics and brands as false all utterances about silver, Bryan and Hill that have been attributed to him. Charley seems to be a little tardy with his denials.—Duluth News Tribune.

It would keep Towne and Bryan both pretty busy to deny each and every mistatement made by the opposition about them. Bryan states his position quite clearley once a week and if Towne comes out with a general denial quarterly, the Tribune ought to be satisfied.

Emperor William has taken to playing the flute, and the German anarchists have taken to the woods.

In the matter of high prices broom corn and flaxseed are making the other products of this country look like an artesian well in the arid belt.

It is not probable that the horse will have to go on account of the automobile, but it is certain that he will have to move a little faster if he expects to keep up with the procession.

Heat, drought and strikes are hard to endure, and another burden has just been added in the announcement that Great Britain's tennis team will not be sent over this year for an international match.

A professor in the University of Kansas says he can cure negroes of blackness by pumping leucitis into them. Leucitis checks the deposit of dark pigmentary matter in the cuticle, if anyone should ask you.

A volcano under the sea at Hawaii is indicated by some recent phenomena at Healakekua. Large quantities of pumice stone suddenly appeared on the surface of the water, and they are supposed to have come from some subterranean discharge from the oleanic depths. The water for many miles was strewn with the stone.

A document issued by the bureau of information of the war department shows that the annual cost of the American soldier is $1,014.66; the German soldier, $201.23; the French, $197.65; the Austrian, $194.54; the Italian, $192.23; the Russian, $155.75. Because of the enormous cost of the Boer war the cost of the British soldier is not given.

The opponents of the death penalty may well be discouraged in view of the fact that Colorado, which abolished the death penalty in 1897, restored it last year, and that Iowa and Minnesota, which repealed it a few years ago, have since returned to it. Only four states do not have capital punishment: Maine, Rhode Island, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Gov. Aycock says that "lynching has got to stop in North Carolina," and to that end he will offer a reward of $400 for every conviction for participation in a lynching. The reward seems grotesquely small, but in justice to the governor it should be explained that $400 is the limit allowed by law. We fear the governor of North Carolina will have to report to the governor of South Carolina that it is a long time between convictions.

A recent issue of the Manila Times contains an account of the opening of the normal school in that city. It says that up to date 420 teachers had been enrolled from 25 different provinces and islands, and 126 applicants were waiting to be enrolled. As all of these were native Filipinos the figures indicate encouraging interest in education. All accounts agree that the natives are responding with alacrity to the efforts of the United States to educate them.

English as she is made spontaneously varies according to country. A British naval officer under arrest for forgery explained at the desk of a magistrate: "I would not have committed the crime had I not been down to it." The American would have explained it: "It was up to me to do it because I was hungry." Slang in each instance, but picturesque and intelligible. Thus poetry finds its way into common speech and in time makes literature which becomes classic.

A fine illustration of successive polygamy as practiced under the forms of law in this country was given in a Chicago court. A man who had contracted a bigamous marriage was divorced from his first wife and the indictment against him was quashed on condition that he would pay No. 1 certain alimony and remarry No. 2 without delay. Perhaps as a settlement of what appeared to be a bad job for all concerned this arrangement was the best that could have been made, but if bigamy is a crime can it be condoned by process of law?

A Washington special states that the surgeon general's office has completed its investigations to ascertain the number and history of the persons suffering from leprosy in the United States, and reports that there are nearly 900 cases in the nation. New Orleans has nearly 100, San Francisco has about an equal number, New York and Chicago have six each, and nearly all the states have one or more lepers. The majority in the southern states are Italians, and in the western states Swedes. Nearly all the lepers were foreign born.

The state department at Washington has issued more passports this season than ever before. Apparently this would show an increased number of American tourists traveling in Europe, but the fact that most of the European governments have adopted more stringent regulations for the identification of foreigners probably has something to do with it. The American accustomed to traveling in his own country looks upon the passport as a nuisance, and so it is. But it is nevertheless a good thing to have when one is a suspect without it.

DRAWING BEGINS.

Great Government Land Lottery Commences at El Reno, Okla.—Some Lucky Winners.

El Reno, Okla., July 30.—Oklahoma's great land lottery was begun here in earnest Monday, and when the commissioners appointed by the federal government adjourned the drawing for the day 1,000 of the choicest of the 13,000 160-acre claims in the Kiowa-Comanche country had been awarded. The first name drawn from the wheels was that of Stephen A. Holcomb, of Paul's Valley, I. T., for a homstead in the El Reno district, and the second Leonard Lamb, of Augusta, Okla. These two men selected the two choicest claims in this district.

The capital prize winners, however, proved to be James R. Wood, of Weatherford, Okla., whose name was the first to come from the Lawton district wheel, and Miss Mattie H. Beals, of Wichita, Kan., who drew the second number in that district. They will have the privilege of making the first filings in the Lawton district, and will undoubtedly choose the two quarter-sections adjoining that town. These are considered the two most valuable in the territory, and are, it is estimated, worth from $20,000 to $40,000 each.

The day was one of keen excitement, replete with interesting scenes. It is estimated that fully 25,000 persons witnessed the drawing.

The crowds fairly exhausted themselves, and when the close of the drawing for the day was announced at six o'clock, hundreds who had neither eaten nor drank during the day, sank to the ground where they stood from sheer fatigue or dragged themselves to better places of rest or to refreshment booths uptown. The day was remarkably free from quarrels, and general satisfaction with the government's method of disposing of the land was felt.

It has been found that many hundred applicants have "repeated," and that others have applications so illegible that they will be thrown out. Over this much discord has resulted, and the outcome may be an appeal to the courts.

DIVIDEND OF 1,000 PER CENT.

Enormous Profit of New York First National Bank on Its Capital Stock.

New York, July 30.—It became known in the financial district Monday that an enormous extra dividend, said to have been equal to 1,000 per cent., or $5,000,000, had been declared upon the $500,000 of old capital stock of the First national bank, which institution last week increased its capital to $10,000,000. The bank, which has been prominent in many of the important financial deals of the last three years, is known to have made heavy profits, and it is supposed that the extra dividend is declared in some way out of such old profits, and that partly by means of this big extra dividend the old stockholders of the bank, who numbered but 18, five of them holding the controlling interest, have paid for their share of the $9,500,000 of new capital stock. The taking over of the $1,500,000 of capital stock of the National Bank of the Republic by an exchange of two shares of Republic for one share of First national stock, has required $750,000 of the new First national stock, leaving $8,752,000 to be otherwise distributed—the old stockholders supposedly taking it. Dividends upon the old stock of the First national bank were at the yearly rate of 100 per cent. The bank is noted for carrying among its resources, under the heads of stocks and bonds other than government, a far greater total than any other institution.

A LAKE DISASTER.

Steamer and Whaleback Barge Collide on Lake Superior—Two of Latter's Crew Drowned.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 30.—The whaleback barge Sagamore was sunk in a collision with the Northern line steamer Northern Queen, near Point Iroquois, Monday. Of the crew of eight men two were drowned and one is missing. The dead are: Capt. E. Joiner, master of the Sagamore, lived in Henderson, N. Y.; Ira Ives, cook on the Sagamore, lived at Sacketts Harbor, N. Y. The missing man is Burley Smith, a seaman on the Sagamore, who lived at Woodville, N. Y. A dense fog covered the water at the time of the collision. The Sagamore was bound down in tow of the whaleback steamer Pathfinder, both being loaded with iron ore. The Northern Queen was bound up with a general cargo for Duluth. The Queen struck the barge on the starboard side near the after turret, breaking in the plates. The Sagamore filled rapidly and soon went down.

Death of a Noted Journalist.

Milwaukee, July 30.—George H. Yenowine, one of the best known newspaper men in the west, died suddenly Monday night. Mr. Yenowine, while able to be about up to two or three days ago, had been ailing for some time past. He was connected with the Evening Wisconsin in this city for many years, after which he launched Yenowine's News, a Sunday society paper. Mr. Yenowine disposed of his paper to accept a position as editor of the Sunday Louisville Courier-Journal, where he remained several years, returning to Milwaukee about a year ago.

Strike Ended.

Milwaukee, July 27.—The big machinists' strike in this city, which was inaugurated on May 20, is at an end. Business Agent A. W. Holmes, of the strikers, has admitted this much and says lack of funds makes a continuation of the struggle impossible. The demeanor of the strikers, he says, has been very satisfactory. The various plants will again soon be running to their fullest capacity.

Columbia Beats Constitution.

Bateman's Point, R. I., July 30.—The old cup defender, Columbia, won the $1,000 Astor cup Monday, leading the new aspirant for cup honors, the Constitution, at the finish by two minutes 14 seconds, short time. The race was sailed in a fine breeze from the north, the course being a triangular one of 38 miles.

DROUGHT IS BROKEN.

Nearly Half a Crop of Corn Is Predicted for Kansas—Fall Pastures Greatly Benefited.

Kansas City, Mo., July 30.—The drought has been broken in Kansas and Missouri by good rains that have fallen in heavy and frequent showers since Sunday morning. Col. George W. Veale, who has closely watched conditions in Kansas for a score of years, on Monday said that Kansas would raise nearly a half crop of corn. The late planted corn, he said, was already showing signs of life and vigor and all that had not tasseled out before the rains would make more than a half crop. He said the people would raise sufficient forage feed for all the cattle now on the range in Kansas. The rains will greatly benefit fall pastures. Already the brown prairies are changing to green and farmers and stockmen say the landscape will show a pleasing contrast within the next two weeks. It cannot be said that Saturday's rain broke the drought, as little good would have resulted if it had stopped there. It is the steady and persistent showers that have prevailed since Sunday morning that have brought the needed relief and improved the agricultural conditions. They have extended all over Kansas and the western half of Missouri, several points in those states reporting two inches and more of rainfall.

Topeka, Kan., July 30.—In the place of dry weather reports, ruined crops and hot winds in Kansas, now comes news of copious rains, unfordable streams and a restoration of confidence. Most of the rains have come to the eastern and central parts of the state, but late reports from the west show the rain has extended clear through to the Colorado line. There is hardly a point in the state that has not received rain during the past week. Corn will not be greatly helped, but enormous quantities of rough feed will be raised and the outlook for stock men is greatly improved. Abundance of water has been provided for stock where there was a great scarcity a week ago.

Chicago, July 30.—Reports of 1,500 experts to the Record-Herald are that the drought has cut the corn crop one-third, but that the wheat harvest will be the greatest in the nation's history.

THE WEATHER AND TRADE.

Effect of the Long Heated Term and the Industrial Troubles Felt in Commercial Circles.

New York, July 27.—Bradstreet's says: "Hot and dry weather in the great surplus grain producing regions west of the Mississippi river has furnished the leading topic of trade and speculative discussion this week. Cereal prices quickly responded to the flood of bad reports, and stocks were correspondingly weaker, but good rains in the spring wheat and northern corn belt later on caused reverse movements and the growth of a better feeling. Produce, particularly butter, vegetables and eggs, notes the effect of unfavorable crop and weather conditions, and is high and of poor quality, while canned goods are in active consumption and tend upward. Sugar is irregular in price for refined, while raws are firmer. The steel strike is apparently regarded as of less importance than it was a week ago, and the petering out of the coal mine firemen's and the machinists' strike have resulted in resumption of work in many lines. Building is active, and white pine lumber tends upward; boots and shoes are moving into consumption in large quantities, textiles are quite steady in tone, and the strength of foreign demand for our wheat makes it probable that exports of this cereal will go far to replace smaller shipments of other grains. Summer dullness and the strike dominate the entire iron trade, but demand for finished products, such as tin plates, iron and steel bars, hoops and sheets, is reducing jobbers' stocks rapidly and causing high premiums."

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "A fortnight of the steel strike has passed without materially altering the position of the contestants or adversely affecting the industry as a whole. Exceptional activity is noticed at the mills not affected by the strike and the movement of structural material for bridges, buildings and track elevation is still heavy. Steel bars for agricultural implement makers are firm in price and freely purchased. Railways seek freight cars, and rails are sold for delivery next January. Cotton ties, sheets and hoops are commanding a premium. Pig iron is accumulating, but producers offer no concessions.

Failures for the week numbered 198 in the United States, against 231 last year, and 28 in Canada, against 28 last year."

FOSBURGH IS NOT GUILTY.

Judge Orders Jury to Acquit Him of Charge of Murdering His Sister.

Pittsfield, Mass., July 27.—At the opening of court Friday in the Fosburgh trial Judge Stevens instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty, and this was done, ending the trial.

The jurymen did not leave their seats. The verdict was received with shouts of applause, which the court immediately suppressed.

Immediately after his discharge, young Robert Fosburgh, accompanied by the members of his family, went to the Wendell house, where a reception was held and where hundreds of people took advantage of the opportunity to shake hands with the young man.

New Maine Launched.

Philadelphia, July 29.—The battleship Maine, designed to be bigger, stronger and faster than her namesake, whose shapeless mass still lies in the harbor of Havana, was successfully launched from the yards of the William Cramp Ship and Engine Building company Saturday. One of the largest crowds that has ever seen a warship leave the ways at Cramps' yards was on hand and patriotism ran wild as the ship left her cradle.

Miners in a Riot.

Cambridge, O., July 29.—One man dead, one dying, another probably fatally shot and a fourth man with the back of his head crushed in. This, with the threatened lynching of a negro, is the result of a free-for-all fight at King's mines Sunday, a short distance from Black Top mine, where a riot between Hungarian and Slavish miners occurred Saturday.

Elks Adjourn.

Milwaukee, July 26.—The grand lodge Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks adjourned Thursday night to meet in Salt Lake City on the second Tuesday in August, 1902. While the convention transacted a great deal of business there was very little to be made public.

CHAPMAN IS REELECTED.

Chosen for the Eleventh Time as President of the Baptist Young People's Union.

Chicago, July, 26.—Four thousand delegates to the eleventh international convention of the Baptist Young People's Union of America assembled at the Coliseum, in Wabash avenue, near Sixteenth street, and joined the chorus of 1,000 voices at the opening session Thursday. The big building rang with the echoes of the music. The singing was followed by the opening address of President J. H. Chapman. Attorney Francis W. Parker followed with a stirring appeal for a Baptist Christian Citizenship league. If his ideas are indorsed the convention will be the means of putting the Baptist societies in the fight for clean politics, with a powerful national body, having lodges from Maine to Oregon.

Chicago, July 27.—John H. Chapman was reelected president of the Baptist Young People's union Friday at the convention in the Coliseum. Mr. Chapman, who is a Chicago man, has been president of the organization since its inception in 1890, and is known as the father of the movement. He is a member of the Tabernacle church and prominent as a lay worker. Mr. Chapman came from Canada, but he has been in business here for nearly 25 years.

Vice presidents elected are W. W. Gaines representing the south, W. W. Mann the north and W. W. Week from Canada. H. W. Reed succeeds himself as recording secretary, and H. R. Clissold was appointed treasurer after Frank Moody, the retiring treasurer, declined the office.

Chicago, July 29.—President William McKinley sent a message of congratulation Saturday to the Baptist Young People's convention at the Coliseum, in which he tendered his best wishes for a successful gathering. Rev. W. H. Geistweit read the dispatch, and one of the most enthusiastic scenes of the week followed.

To the state of Minnesota for the fifth consecutive time was presented the banner for the best work in literature course. A banner for the best all round work of any union was given to the Duffy street church, of Savannah, Ga.

With a consecration service full of the evangelistic spirit the Baptist young folks brought the convention of their society to a close in this city Sunday evening. In the Coliseum was gathered one of the largest audiences of the entire four days' gathering, and despite the heat the manifestations of devotion to the work of the society was marked. Rev. William H. Geistweit, acting editor of the Union, the official organ of the society, led the consecration services, having been preceded by Dr. James B. Cranfill, of Texas, who delivered the consecration address.

GIVEN FREE TRADE.

Proclamation Issued by the President Giving Porto Rico Unrestricted Trade with United States.

Washington, July 26.—The president issued his proclamation establishing free trade between Porto Rico and the United States and declaring the organization of a civil government for the island. The proclamation is purely formal and only in the body of the resolutions adopted by the Porto Rican legislature (heretofore published) does it appear that the island is set free commercially in commemoration of the anniversary of the planting of the American flag on the island. The proclamation is headed: "Cessation of tariff—Porto Rico."

It recites that the act of April 12, 1900 (otherwise known as the Foraker act), provided that whenever the Porto Rican legislature has enacted and put into operation a system of local taxation to meet the needs of the government and by resolution so notified the president, the latter shall issue a proclamation and all duties on goods passing between the United States and Porto Rico shall cease.

FIRE IN DAVENPORT.

The Iowa City Is Visited by a Blaze Which Causes a Loss Estimated at $700,000.

Davenport, Ia., July 26.—Fire in Davenport Thursday night destroyed $700,000 worth of property and rendered hundreds of persons homeless. An area equal to 20 city blocks was swept away by the flames. Boys smoking cigarettes are believed to have started the fire.

The flames broke out at 5:30 in large piles of kindling wood belonging to the Rock Island Fuel company, covering two acres on the levee.

At least a hundred families were rendered homeless by the flames, and homes and hotels were turned over to them for the night. Hundreds of others moved temporarily from their homes and vacant lots over a large portion of the town were filled with household furniture and the refugees from the burned district.

The loss on the Weyerhauser-Denkman mill is estimated at $400,000, and the loss on all other property destroyed $300,000.

Board of Inquiry Named.

Washington, July 26.—The board of inquiry, which is to investigate the controversial points in connection with Admiral Schley's conduct during the Spanish war, will be composed of Admiral Dewey, president of the court, and Rear Admirals Lewis A. Kimberly and Andrew E. K. Benham. The court will meet at the navy department in Washington September 12. Secretary Long announced these facts Thursday. It is said that owing to ill health Rear Admiral Kimberly will ask to be excused.

Breaks World's Record.

Cleveland, O., July 27.—Amid the enthusiastic cheers of nearly 10,000 people, Cresceus, the world's champion trotting stallion, again demonstrated that he is the peer of all trotters by trotting a mile Friday afternoon over the Glenville track in 2:02¾. This establishes a new world's record for trotting races for both sexes, replacing the former world's record of 2:03¼, held by The Abbott. He was driven by George Ketcham.

BACTERIA IN COFFEE.

Ohio Grocer Convicted of Violating the Pure Food Laws of the State.

Toledo, July 30.—The jury in Judge Meck's court in this city has found James White, a local grocer, guilty of selling adulterated coffee. The prosecution was based on a package of Arbuckles' Ariosa coffee.

The State of Ohio, through the Pure Food Commission, prosecuted White. The case was on trial for nearly a month and attracted national attention.

The manufacturers of Ariosa coffee conducted the defense for Grocer White. The best attorneys in the country were retained to defend him but, after a short consultation, a verdict of guilty was returned by the jury. The State of Ohio considers this a big victory. Pure Food Commissioner Blackburn has been waging a warfare on spurious food articles and the department has been very successful.

The complaint of the State of Ohio was that Ariosa coffee was coated with a substance which concealed defects in the coffee and made it appear better than it is. The State charged that this coating or glazing was a favorable medium for the propagation of bacteria.

Prof. G. A. Kirchmaier, of this city, a well-known chemist, was the principal witness for the State. He had made scientific examinations of samples of Ariosa purchased in the open market from Grocer White. He found that each Ariosa berry contained an average of 300 bacteria. Mr. Kirchmaier further testified that other coffees he examined contained few bacteria or none at all. He declared that the glazed coffee was not a wholesome food product.

Chemist Schmidt, of Cincinnati, corroborated the testimony of Prof. Kirchmaier. The State did not present further testimony.

The defense, through the Arbuckles, who prepare this glazed coffee, secured some of the most eminent chemists and scientists in the United States to give testimony in their behalf. Prof. H. W. Wiley, of the United States Agricultural Department; Prof. Vaughn, of Ann Arbor University; Profs. Bleile and Webber, of the Ohio State University, were called to defend Ariosa. Dr. Wiley had made a careful examination of the method of manufacturing Ariosa. He told of the 19,000,000 eggs used by the Arbuckles yearly in the preparation of this glazing. On this point in cross examination, the State's attorneys deftly drew from him the information that these eggs might be kept in cold storage by the Arbuckles for a year or two at a time.

The experts who heard Dr. Wiley's testimony were pleased to be able to "catch" so famous a chemist. The doctor at one point in his testimony explained very clearly how it is that the egg put into the coffee pot by the housewife settles the coffee. He said that the heat coagulates the egg, and as it sinks to the bottom of the pot it carries the fine particles of the coffee with it, and thus clarifies the drink. It is the act of coagulation in the coffee pot that does the work. Later on in his cross examination, he had to admit that when the egg was put on Ariosa coffee at the factory, it became coagulated, and as egg cannot be coagulated but once, that the coating on coffee was of practically no value as a "settler" when it reached the coffee pot.

Prof. Wiley acknowledged that the glazing might be a favorable medium for the propagation of bacteria, although he would not testify positively either way because he was not a bacteriologist.

Prof. Vaughn, of Ann Arbor University, also a witness for the Arbuckles, said he found bacteria on Ariosa coffee.

Prof. Bleile, another witness for the defense, found any number of lively bacteria on the Ariosa coffee he examined, and he agreed that glazed coffee surely was a more favorable medium for the propagation of bacteria than unglazed coffee.

The verdict of the jury in this case is of national importance because a great many other states have Pure Food Laws like that of Ohio, and it is natural to suppose that similar action will be taken by other Pure Food Commissioners to prevent the sale of glazed coffees.

Pure Food Commissioner Blackburn says: "The State is very much elated over its victory against this big corporation. We are now considering the advisability of informing every grocer in the State of Ohio that it is an infraction of the laws to sell Ariosa, and at the same time give warning to consumers that the coffee is an adulterated food article."

The Emperor Was Polite.

A woman who is of high social distinction in America was presented to the kaiser at some dinner that was not attended with royal state. She was talking to him when she was offered a famous German salad. It was handed on her right and the kaiser was on her left, which put her in a predicament. She did not dare turn her face from the emperor to help herself to the salad. The situation was too much for her. The emperor, seeing the condition at a glance, looked at her for an instant and laughed, as he said: "A kaiser can wait, but a salad cannot."—Chicago Chronicle.

The Doctor's Joke.

He was a horrid doctor, anyway, and no gentleman, or he would not have been so cruel to the fair young girl who sought his aid. But even doctors are human and like to joke.

"Doctor," she said, "I am afraid this climate is too severe for me. I have such a great trouble breathing with my lungs."

"You would have a great deal more trouble breathing without them," replied the cruel man, with a loud, hoarse laugh.

SIMPLE POWER PUMP.

No Steam Plant Is Needed in the System Here Described, Horses Being Sufficient.

A simple plan of pumping water by horse power is shown by the cuts. The wheel (a) in which the horse works is 20 feet in diameter, and the rim where the horse is hitched is hinged, that it may be opened. A bolt secures the opposite side. The upright (c) should be kept well oiled.

A belt runs on a pulley with a two-inch flange on each side at b, which runs the chain pump with galvanized sheet iron buckets (e f g). The pulley (h) is eight inches between the flanges, and is similar to pulleys on grain separator stackers. The pulley in the bottom of the well should be eight inches long and one foot in diameter and the flanges four inches. The weight of this pulley is, or ought to be, sufficient to hold the pump chains and itself in position. The buckets should be bolted to the chains at equal distances. A spout should be attached to the frame so it will catch the water brought up and run into the tank.

The second illustration shows a plan of running an ordinary pump by the same kind of power. A heavy balance wheel is placed at a to keep the motion regular. The wheel which runs as an eccentric (b) transmits motion to the walking beam piece (c), which in turn operates the pump piston (d).—W. A. Sharp, in Farm and Home.

MULES FOR FARM WORK.

What They Lack in Appearance They More Than Make Up in Actual Usefulness.

The question is so often asked by farmers who have never used mules on the farms, preferring horses, that we shall give a few of the merits possessed by our long-eared friend. The mule is an easy animal to raise. He doesn't eat much as compared with a horse. An energetic mule will make a trip quicker than a horse, though he may not go so fast—the secret of his speed is his uniform gait, steady and persistent. You hardly ever see a sick mule; he seems practically immune from the diseases which attack horses. A mule can endure more hardship than a horse, will pull more in proportion to his size, and will "stay with it" longer. A mule is easier broken or trained to work than a horse, and is more reliable after initiated. If a team of mules run away they look out for themselves, and though they may make some close turns and go through a needle's eye, so to speak, they usually come out unharmed. We would rather plow corn with a team of mules than with horses; they break down less corn and turn around quicker. Hot weather affects the mule less than the horse. A good, honest, business mule is worth, and will command, a good price any day in the week. The usefulness of a mule continues longer than that of a horse. The mule is not handsome, doesn't make a good roadster, isn't stylish, doesn't "do himself proud" if hitched to a fancy yellow wagon or cart, but what he lacks in appearance he makes up in actual usefulness on the farm. —Tennessee Farmer.

HELPFUL HORSE NOTES.

Rough usage and neglect will never make a hardy horse.

The colt must be kept growing thriftily from the start if you want a fine horse.

Use plenty of plaster around the stables to absorb the odors and ammonia.

Some say that "feed is above breed," but we say, the game is lost without a combination of the two.

Do not let the feet of the road or work horses get hard and dry during the dry weather. Avoid hoof lotions. Water is best and safest and is natural.

Examine the teeth of all the horses now, young and old. If the teeth are sharp have them floated. If you find a horse holding a wad of hay in the side of his mouth have his teeth attended to at once. It is a sure sign that they are sharp.—Farm Journal.

Schemes in Sheep Feeding.

The latest in sheep feeding is a moving pen. Two or three sheep are put in each pen, the pen being several feet above the ground, or about on a level with the top of the grass. Then the pen is moved over the field by electricity. The idea is to prevent the sheep from trampling down the high grass. Wouldn't it be just as cheap to have several hundred sheep stand in a line on a platform and pull the whole field under the platform? The sheep could nibble off the ends of the grass as the field slid under them. Just a suggestion, of course. Don't know how it could be done.—Butchers' Advocate.

KEEPING UP FERTILITY.

First Thing Necessary Is the Saving and Proper Application of All Sorts of Manure.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Journal of Agriculture writes that paper as follows:

The first thing in keeping up fertility is the saving and proper application of manure. Thousands of farmers are letting the manure waste in their barnyards, and are using commercial fertilizers. Fertility can be kept up in this way, but a lack of humus will soon follow. Soil deficient in humus will dry out in dry weather and a seeding of clover will be next to impossible. Do not flatter yourselves with the idea that you can keep up your fertility on commercial manures alone. You must save and use all your farm manure. Spread the manure on the higher portion of the field. Save everything. Do not let a thing go to waste, but put it on the land. It makes little difference when you put it on, only see that it goes on.

Plow under all the clover you can. Rye will do to plow under very well. Any green crop will answer. Do not let the ground lie bare during fall and winter. Sow your corn stubble to rye. This can be done at the last cultivation. It will not only save fertility by the roots taking up fertility and storing it in the plant, so as to be available for the next crop to follow, but it will make excellent pasture for your sheep and hogs during the fall and far into the winter.

Do not hesitate to draw the manure as fast as made during the winter, and spread as fast as drawn. If your land is too hilly this may not be the best plan provided you have a good way to save the manure at the barn. But as the manure is usually kept around barns, the loss from washing down the hills will be no greater than the loss around the barns. Manure drawn out in winter saves that much from the spring's work. Often in the spring the ground is soft, and I have seen ground injured as much by the trampling and cutting up by the wheels as the manure did good.

A wise rotation of crops is also necessary in keeping up fertility. No rotation should be longer than four years. Three years will be better. But a four-year rotation will do very well provided clover is given an important place.

STERILITY OF EGGS.

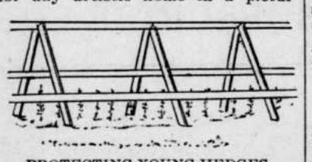
It Is Caused Quite Often by Feeding Too Great a Portion of Fat-Forming Foods.

The lack of fertility of eggs is frequently laid to the activity or inactivity of the males. Doubtless, it is frequently due to the females. From analogy, drawing the lesson from other animals, the feed has a great deal to do with the question of fertility. Science has not yet found out just how the elements in food, the potash, the phosphorus and the nitrogen affect the life germs, but we know they do affect them. With the present amount of light shining on the subject we would perhaps attach more importance to the presence and distribution of phosphorus than of any other element. It is as yet a subject shrouded in darkness. There is a difference, too, in the manner in which one hen disposes of her feed compared with another. Two hens may eat food containing phosphorus. One may distribute it throughout her system. The other may pass most of it with the droppings. We know that of two hens similarly fed and treated, one will produce fertile and the other unfertile eggs, the latter through no fault of the cock. This quality of producing non-fertile eggs is one that is transmitted, and can probably be largely eliminated by careful selection. The process would, however, be a long one, and is not likely to be taken up by any person, except one having a considerable capital; as it would mean the sequestering of each individual being watched. Sometimes perhaps a change of food will remove the sterility. We know that when a hen gets too fat she becomes sterile, and in that case the trouble is due to the feeding of too great a proportion of fat-forming foods.—Farmers' Review.

YOUNG HEDGE FENCES.

How to Protect Them Successfully Without in the Least Interfering with Their Growth.

A vigorous, full-grown hedge is a formidable barrier to either man or beast, and when properly pruned also beautiful—an ornament appropriate for any artistic home in a picturesque locality. When first set out, however, the shrubs are liable to injury from trampling. Some protection should therefore be given them, and none is more effective or easily built than that presented in the accompanying cut. Indeed, three light rails, with pickets for stakes, are all that is needed. Arranged in this manner not only are both sides of the hedge fully protected, but room is afforded for uninterrupted growth.—Frederick O. Sibley, in N. Y. Tribune.



PROTECTING YOUNG HEDGES.

Good Feeding Always Wins.

The would-be successful poultryman must be a good feeder. By good feeder we do not mean a heavy feeder, but correct feeder. No matter how good the breed may be or how pure, it will prove a failure without proper feeding. Now, perhaps someone will expect us to follow that remark with a set of rules for good feeding. But instead we wish to say that feeding is a science that has to be learned just like any other science. The inexperienced amateur cannot even carry out rules laid down by others, since their carrying out requires judgment, and correct judgment comes only with experience.—Farmers' Review.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A State Park.

Attorney General Douglas has arranged for the purchase of 250 acres of timber land on the east end of Lake Itasca for the state park. The purchase has been under consideration for a year. The purchase price is $2 per acre for the land and $5.55 per thousand for the timber. This makes the price of the land about $17,000. The land belongs to J. S. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis.

Attorney General Douglas also began condemnation proceedings on about 160 acres of other land within the park boundaries, near the outlet of the lake. About two-thirds of the proposed park is now in the possession of the state and the other third is held by individuals.

The attorney general is trying to secure the construction of a lodge near the southern boundary of the park. The house of the superintendent is near the northern boundary and in an out-of-the-way place. Mr. Douglas wants a good-sized lodge erected which will accommodate visitors. A force of men is at work in the park clearing out the brush and straightening out the roads for the increased travel.

History of a Trade Mark.

A trade mark to many may seem a small, trivial thing, and many a trade mark is a small thing. With the well known trade mark of the Northern Pacific railroad there is much history that is valuable and interesting. How many readers know that the origin of this trade mark dates back more than 3,000 years before the Christian era, and is one of the mysteries of ancient Chinese philosophy? Yet such is the fact. The idea first occurred to Mr. Chas. S. Fee, General Passenger agent of the Northern Pacific while attending the World's Fair in Chicago. The emblem on the Korean flag attracted his attention as a suitable foundation for a trade mark and it was adopted. Subsequent researches developed its antiquity. The Northern Pacific Railway has issued a booklet entitled "A History of a Trade Mark," a chapter of "Wonderland 1901," giving a full account of the adoption and origin of the symbol. It is handsomely illustrated in colors, rich in ancient research and exceedingly interesting. It is free to all for the postage, which is only 4 cents, and can be had upon application to Chas. S. Fee, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn.

Weather and Crop Bulletin.

The week ending July 24 was without rain except for a few widely scattered showers across southern Minnesota early in the week. In the southern half of the state the temperatures were 100 degrees or higher nearly daily, and on the 19th and 20th they were up to 105. In northern portions they were from 95 to 100 degrees. At Minneapolis and St. Paul the maximum of 102 degrees on the 20th has not been equaled in a 30 years' record. A number of deaths of both persons and animals is due to the excessive and continued heat. In many cases it was necessary to give up work in the fields during the most heated portion of the day.

In the Red River valley the weather has been favorable to small grains, and they are in a promising condition, except on the fields recently flooded.

In the southern half of the state considerable injury to wheat and late oats is reported as due to premature ripening, and in southeastern counties by chinch bugs as well.

Found the Watch.

Several days ago B. Nilsen, of Clarkfield, shipped a car of wheat to D. R. Wagner & Co., Minneapolis, personally assisting in loading the grain into the car. While doing so he missed his valuable watch, and as a search of the premises failed to disclose it, he wrote a letter to the firm, telling of his loss and suggesting that it might be buried in the wheat.

The car was duly received by Wagner & Co., and was rebilled to the La Grange Milling company, at Red Wing, who, in turn, were asked to look out for the timepiece.

A few days later the watch was received from the LaGrange company, together with an explanatory note that it had been found in the wheat when the car was being unloaded.

Cattle Display.

This year's display of Shorthorns, Herefords, and other strains of fine cattle at the state fair promises to be of incalculable value in introducing fine stock into the northwest. As a result of last year's exhibition of the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association at the fair, Secretary Randall says there are now thirty breeders of this stock, where a year ago there were three. The claim is made that this year's exhibition will be the largest cattle show in the world.

THE SIGN OF THE FOUR.

Ex-Treasury Official Tells How to Detect a Counterfeit Bill at First Glance.

"Talking about counterfeiters puts me in mind of one, a notorious rascal, who was caught not long ago in this city while at his nefarious trade," said an ex-treasury official recently, according to the New York Commercial Advertiser. "The paper money this man produced was absolutely perfect in every detail but one, and it seems strange that a man of his knowledge and experience of the art of counterfeiting should have overlooked it." Here the speaker took a one-dollar note from his pocket. It was new and crisp, and he pointed out a diminutive letter "C" on the right under the bill's number and another down in the other corner.

"Now," the ex-official continued, "I don't suppose there are 99 men out of a hundred, outside the treasury department, know what these seemingly unnecessary letters are on the United States bills. And even if they had noticed them I am willing to bet that not one of them could tell what they signify."

The ex-treasury man handed the reporter a United States note and requested that the reporter read to him the last four figures of its number, which were 5321. Then the ex-official said, almost instantly: "The letter on that bill is B." When the bill was examined the diminutive B was found on it in two places. Half a dozen other bills were produced, and when the treasury man was told the last four figures of their numbers, he was able to tell, with lightning-like rapidity, what letter would be found on each bill. In each case the letter was either A, B, C or D.

"The explanation is simple," said the ex-official. "If you take the last four figures of the number on any bill, no matter what its denomination, and divide them by four, you will, of course, have either a remainder of zero, 1, 2 or 3. If the remainder is zero, the letter on the bill will be A. If it is 1, the letter will be B; if it is 2, the letter will be C and if it is 3, the letter will be D.

"This is one of the many precautions taken by the government against counterfeiters. You can tell instantly whether a bill is bad or good by making that test. I wouldn't give a five-cent piece for a $1,000 bill, no matter how perfect it seemed, if its little letters did not correspond with the remainder obtained by dividing the last four figures of its number by four."

Can Animals Cry?

Lady Burton says she has seen horses in the Syrian desert cry from thirst, a mule cry from the pain of an injured foot, and camels shed tears in streams. A cow, sold by its mistress who had tended it from birth, wept bitterly. A young soko ape used to cry from vexation if Livingstone didn't nurse it in his arms when it asked him to. Wounded apes have died crying, and apes have wept over their young ones slain by hunters. A chimpanzee trained to carry water jugs broke one, and fell a-crying, which proved sorrow, though it wouldn't mend the jug. Rats, discovering a young one drowned, have been moved to tears of grief. A giraffe which a huntsman's rifle had injured began to cry. Sea lions weep for the loss of their young. Gordon Cumming observed tears trickling from the eyes of a dying elephant. And even an orang-outang, when deprived of its mango, was so vexed that it took to crying. There can be little doubt, therefore that animals do weep from grief, or pain, or annoyance.—Cassell's Little Folks.

SUNSTROKE

The summer's awful heat will kill those not fit to resist it—those whose bodies are full of poison because they have neglected their bowels.

The victims of sunstroke, or of any of the other terrible dangers of summer—diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera morbus—are always those who have been careless about keeping clean inside, and as a result have their blood full of rotten filth breeding disease germs and their bodies ready with weakness to succumb to the hot spell. Dizziness, heat headaches, sick stomachs, sticky oozing ill-smelling sweats, restless nights, terrible pains, gripes and cramps in the bowels, sudden death on the street, all result from this neglect.

Keep yourself clean, pure and healthy inside, disinfected as it were, with CASCARETS CANDY CATHARTIC, the greatest antiseptic bowel tonic ever discovered and you will find that every form of summer disease will be effectively

—T. B. Rader received quite an injury to his hand this morning, while handling machinery.

—Al Hitsman was among the first we heard of to thresh. His grain is said to be quite light.

—Wednesday was stock shipping day. Numerous calves, cattle, and other stock were marketed.

--S. S. Ball says the choke cherry crop is uncommonly good and the fruit is nice and fat. Sin knows.

—C. A. Ebert, of Minneapolis, is reported dead. He was known by many Delanoites as an able attorney.

—J. D. Young threshed on his Burdock Park Farm yesterday. He reports wheat pretty small and light.

--Undertaker Redmond has sent his hearse to Chaska to be repainted, and has to get along without one until it is finished.

--Threshing has begun in earnest; several whistles are easily heard from town. The weather is first class for the business.

—The State Fair was being advertised in town today. If the Fair is as large in proportion as its forruner is larger than average men, it will be a bouncer.

—No finer sheep grows anywhere we believe than some raised in Wright county this year. We wonder farmers don't pay more attention to sheep raising than they do.

—Cyrus Chapman, who recently sold his farm to Mr. Samsell, has purchased a smaller one, ten acres, near Charley Eppel's Jr., of Mrs. Anna Carleton, consideration $500.

—A. L. Jones moved into his new River street residence Wednesday. We understand George Goodrich will return from Minneapolis and occupy the house just vacated by Jones.

—Quite a number of places in the sidewalk need fixing. This should be done before it becomes necessary for the village to employ a lawyer to defend it in a suit for damages.

—Many of our neighboring farmers have about concluded not to raise any more wheat; but to rely on feed for animals, and depend on dairying, and hogs principally, for making money.

—Because the wheat kernels look small and dried up is no sign they won't make good flour. It may take a few more of them to fill a bushel, but the number of pounds of flour may be there.

—A trainload of horses from the west passed through town on its way to Minneapolis Tuesday. Somebody must have heard of the large number of deaths among horses in Minnesota during the hot spell.

--The remains of Eddie Peterson, the only child of S. M. Peterson, of Independence, who was drowned while bathing in a lake near Minneapolis were brought here today and buried in the Swedish Cemetery.

—A good number of Delano Woodmen in their new green suits, accompanied by a coffin looking box, said to contain the "goat" went to Rockford Tuesday night to help initiate eighteen new members. Of course they had a large time.

—A heavy rain fell here Sunday night. Considerable wind accompanied the storm. Lightning killed a cow in the barn yard on Richard Dunn's place, two miles east of town. The electric lights were interfered with in the village in some places.

—A good many of the best looking and most industrious of Delano's girls have been at work this week for the Eagle office, helping get out their handsome Catholic Calendars. It would have been a good time for the Eagle to take census of her force.

—Street Commissioner Ludescher placed some gravel in front of the Post Office this week. It was long and much needed. A few loads in some of the most frequented alleys would be a fine thing and add much to the appearance and convenience of the alleys.

—The new machinery, etc. for the Delano Roller Mills has arrived and is being rapidly put in place preparatory to grinding a share of the wheat marketable here. With the elevator and mill both buying Delano ought to be a good wheat market once again.

—John C. Arup celebrated his birthday Sunday. He says he has two more birthdays to come when he will have reached the three score and ten of scriptural mention. Johnny was out last week and helped some of his friends harvest. He gets about, and works, equal to many much younger men.

—The passenger train west last night had two engines and a load to correspond. Men by the hundreds are going west nearly every night. They seem to be out of a job. If they should read the Eagle's clipping from a Mankato paper and her comments on the same, they might stop right there. No use to hunt for a job when they are so plenty, as the Eagle says they are.

--Delano cow owners who pasture their animals near the railroad track have been disappointed that their milk was short several nights lately. It is claimed that the cows are milked in the pasture. An easy way to learn where their milk goes would be to have some one to watch for a day or so. It may not be transients that get the milk but regular boarders.

--It is again reported, apparently on good authority, that the G. N. track is to be raised between four and five feet through Delano; that the crossing at River street will be put under the track, and that the depot will be moved from Second street to the edge of town, either East or West. Surely something will be done soon; the depot is getting badly in need of repairs, at least.

—The Millers defeated a picked up nine from Minneapolis last Sunday by a score of 7 to 2. The game was not an overly exciting one and the attendance was light, the management running four dollars in the hole on the game. Day after tomorrow will be one of the hardest games of the season here. The famous Ganneymedes, of Minneapolis, will play and an exciting game is looked for.

—The first meeting of the new Board of Education will be held next Monday evening. It is hoped that the board will be careful to elect the men for officers who will attend meetings and who will be interested in the school. Also that the committees will be so constituted that the best results will be had. Nothing helps a town like a first class school, and upon the Board of Education much depends as to the kind of school had. Let us have the best in the country.

—This is a great year for weeds. Look down some of Delano's alleys and on vacant lots about town and see for yourself. Many villages and even cities are complaining. In St. Paul, Health Officer O'Hage has pronounced them a nuisance and is having them cut down. They are disease breeders. They make roosting places for mosquitoes and mosquitoes carry diseases. Our committee on streets and alleys and our Health department should enforce the law on the Delano weeds.

—On Tuesday morning Green & Co's team took a lively run away. While Oscar Ball was delivering goods he left a small boy, Arthur Davis, to hold the horses, in front of Stanley Day's house. They took fright and Arthur climbed out the rear end of the wagon, hurting his arm some. The horses ran up Bridge to Fourth street, strewing groceries, green corn, potatoes, kerosene oil, etc. etc. The wagon collided with a wood pile where it stopped, the horses proceeding down R. R. Ave. were finally caught on River street. Oscar never distributed a wagon load of goods so quick before.

—A young couple from Franklin had an interesting time and furnished fun for people in the neighborhood of Third street crossing in Delano Friday evening. They had a colt that was hitched up for the flirst time single, in a covered buggy. They had been riding, and had seen the town pretty thoroughly, things going all right. But just after crossing the railroad the horse began to kick. The shafts were broken, the dash board went out. The occupants were soon on the ground, not caring to risk being kicked. The couple were plucky and another pair of shafts were secured, and a rope to serve for a kicking strap. The horse was securely tied down and the couple climbed into the buggy and proceeded on their way rejoicing that things were as good as they were.

—Quite a discussion is going on at present as to whether or not sorghum will make sugar. Those who have raised sorghum for years and who know most about it from experience seem to agree that sugar can be made from it. One thing sure sorghum molasses rightly made is handy to have around the house We don't believe there is any healthier article of food a farmer can raise or buy than sorghum molasses. People who cannot eat the New Orleans molasses because of its giving them heartburn, like sorghum and grow fat on it. It is a wonder farmers don't raise "cane" more than they do. It is much nicer to handle than beets and we believe it will make much nicer and better sugar than beets. The molasses can be made at home and always meets with a ready sale.

Among Our Exchanges.

Associated Press dispatch.

LONDON, July 31.--How Boers in the field get news is explained by dispatches to the Daily Mail from Lorenzo Marquez and New Amsterdam, from which it appears that the Boers maintain a regular service of dispatch riders. Cables are received and filed at Lorenzo Marquez.

LONDON, Aug. 1.--"I am informed on good authority," says the Brussels correspondent of the Daily mail, "that Mr. Kruger's visit to the United States has been absolutely decided upon. It will take place probably about the middle of September and he will be accompanied by Messrs. Fischer, Wessels and Wolmarans."

Waseca Herald: Not a single reigning family in Europe belongs to the nation over which it rules. The Austrian royal family, the Hapsburgs, are Swiss, as are also the Hohenzollerns, Emperor William's family; Denmark's king is a German, the king of Belgium a Saxon; Alfonso of Spain is a Bourbon; Humbert of Italy is of a family from Savoy and George of Greece is a German.

Farm Stock and Home: More boys are preparing themselves for farm life in our various agricultural schools today than ever before, and the time may come in the next decade when more will be preparing themselves for farmers than for lawyers, and why not? Given a lawyer and a farmer both fresh from their graduation, with an equal amount of capital, which man stands the best chance of a good living and an old age competence? The odds favor the farmer, the undeveloped fields of our country are crying out for farmers capable of developing them for the best interests of the whole nation, but the country is not suffering for lack of lawyers.

No Middle Ground.

If any one thinks that plutocracy can be placated by an abandonment of silver, let him read the New York Sun. That paper has earned the right to be considered the chief exponent of the money worshiping element in American politics. Instead of thanking the Ohio democrats for ignoring the money question it warns them that anti trust legislation would be more dangerous to the country than free silver. It says:

"'We demand the suppression of all trusts.' There is a monstrous proposition. Were there any way of carrying it into effect industrial disaster more widespread and ruinous than has ever fallen upon the country would be the result. There would be a commercial cataclysm. The amount of capital and of labor dependent upon these combinations is so vast that to crush them would be to bring on unparalleled economic calamity compared with which the free coinage of silver would have been a fly bite."

So, we are to have a panic and all sorts of calamity if we destroy the trusts? Well, this is discouraging, but it only shows that there is running through all the republican policies, the same vicious principle and every policy is defended by the same brutal argument: "Accept our policies; submit to our demands, or we will bring on a panic!" Some think that they can make peace with the money trust and then fight the other trusts, but it is a vain hope. There is no middle ground. The democratic party must be with the people entirely or against them entirely. The moment it begins to compromise it looses more than it can possibly gain.—Commoner.

Bryan and Silver.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo., July 30--William J. Bryan, who lectured here tonight, was asked today as to the importance of the silver question in 1904, and replied:

"No man can say how important a part the money question will play in the next campaign. That will depend on conditions. But various phases of the money question are constantly presenting themselves and the Democratic party ought not to recede from its position on this question, although other questions may be of more importance for the time being. Those who are so much afraid of the Kansas City platform seem inclined to return to the methods employed when the financiers filled the platform with glittering generalities and then ran the administration in the interest of Wall street. As a rule, the men who are opposed to the Kansas City platform, have no positive or definite remedy for any evil."

Asked if he would be a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1904 Mr. Bryan said:

"I have said repeatedly that I am a candidate for no office. However, I would not enter into a bond never to become a candidate. It would be foolish in any man to announce his candidacy for such an office at such a time, and it strikes me as a foolish question to be continually put to me by the newspaper men."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26, 1901

Rear Admiral Schley fooled the naval clique, which has done such dirty work to try to discredit him in the eyes of the American people, when he called Secretary Long's bluff and demanded a court of inquiry into his conduct during the hunt in Cuban waters for the Spanish fleet. Admiral Schley would have made this demand long ago had his friends, who knew of the intention on the part of the clique which has controlled the Navy Department since the beginning of the McKinley administration to pack the court against him if he asked for it, not advised him to wait for a more propitious time. That time arrived when the clerk in the Brooklyn Navy Yard wrote under orders from the clique, language concerning Schley that would have disgraced the lowest gutter snipe publication in the country, and shamelessly labeled it "history" and sought to have it made a text book at the Naval Academy. The clique overshot the mark. Instead of injuring Schley, the publication aroused the country's sense of fairplay, and today the demand for an inquiry that shall be conducted by men of honor, not puppets of a clique, is ringing from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It is now up to Secretary Long. He can easily name a court of inquiry that will command the respect of the country and that will not base its inquiries on the charge that Schley is a democrat, but on an effort to get at the truth, the whole truth, of what was done in the West Indian naval campaign, regardless of who is hurt or helped. That much the country demands, and it will take no less. Secretary Long has promised that such a court shall be named, and if Mr. McKinley is as wise a politician as he is credited with being he will see that the promise is kept No political question is involved in this inquiry, but any failure to give Schley the justice which every brave officer under accusation is entitled to at the hands of the powers that be will make it a political question of the most dangerous sort.

Most persons have heard the story of the lawyer who told his client that it was impossible to imprison him on the charge against him, through the bars of the jail cell in which he was locked up. Although there is abundant knowledge, from those on the ground, that the land grabbers are speculating by wholesale in the certificates or numbers of those who have been registered as applicants for homesteads in the Oklahoma Indian reservations about to be opened to settlement, Secretary Hitchcock still insists that speculation in these certificates is impossible.

Mr. McKinley never neglects an opportunity to turn a financial trick, at public expense, for a friend. By postponing the acceptance of the resignation of Gov. Allen, of Porto Rico, and the appointment of Secretary Hunt as his successor, which has been definitely determined upon, until September, he enables his friend Allen to enjoy an extended vacation and continue to draw a big salary. Two presidential proclamations were issued this week-one announcing that Porto Rico had civil government, that might have been made many months ago, but was held back in order to prevent the Porto Rican legislature having the disposal of the revenue collected under the Foraker act, and the other proclaiming free trade with Porto Rico.

New York business men are again after Wilber F. Wakeman, the appraiser of merchandise at that port. They object to Wakeman's using his official patronage to provide for inexperienced hangers on of the American Protective Tariff League of which he is president, and which he successfully utilized to pull himself out of his last difficulty with the big merchants who have business with his office. A delegation from the New York Board of Trade and Transportation this week called on Secretary Gage and filed charges against Wakeman for having lessened the efficiency of his office by putting men without experience in the places of those thoroughly familiar with their work. Among the instances cited as proof of the charges was the case of Examiner Levy, an expert of thirty years service in the examination of mirrors, glass, leather, gloves etc, who was transferred to the docks to examine personal baggage, in order that his place might be given to a Mr. McDonald, a clerk in the office of the American Protective Tariff League, who had no experience whatever in the work he was given to do.

The committee called Mr. Gage's attention to the law governing the appointment of examiners, which says: "No person shall be appointed such examiner who is not at the time of his appointment practically and thoroughly acquainted with the character, quality and value of the articles in the examination and appraisement of which he is to be employed." Secretary Gage promised the committee that he would give his immediate attention to the charges, and Mr. Wakeman may have to turn his attention from trying to scare republican Congressmen who have declared for tariff revision to trying to hold onto his job.

THE PIN.

Only a pin, yet it calmly lay
On the tufted floor in the light of day;
And it shone serenely fair and bright,
Reflecting back the noonday light.

Only a boy, yet he saw that pin,
And his face assumed a fiendish grin:
He stooped for a while with look intent,
Till he and the pin alike were bent.

Only a chair but upon its seat
A well bent pin found safe retreat;
Nor had the keenest eye discerned
That heavenward its point was turned.

Only a man but he chanced to drop
Upon that chair, when fizz—bang—pop!
He leaped like a cork from out a bottle
And opened wide his valve de throttle.

Only a yell, but an honest one.
It lacked the element of fun:
And boy and man, and pin and chair,
In wild confusion mingled there.

Gazette $1.00 a year.

The New York World,
Thrice-a-Week Edition.
The Most Widely Read Newspaper in America.
Time has demonstrated that the Thrice a Week World stands alone in its class. Other papers have imitated its form but not its success. This is because it tells all the news all the time and tells it impartially, whether that news be political or otherwise.
It is in fact almost a daily at the price of a weekly and you cannot afford to be without it.
Republican and Democrat alike can read the Thrice a Week World with absolute confidence in its truth.
In addition to news, it publishes first class serial stories and other features suited to the home and fireside
The Thrice a Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and GAZETTE together one year for $1.75.
The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2 00.

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12 for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE DIFFERENCE.

A poor man steals a pair of shoes; the "upper" takes him in;
The good folks look with horror at such a flagrant sin.
And after all the lawyers and the judge have had their say,
The jury find, without dissent, it's thieving, plain as day.

That's right, of course, but next we see the man of business fall;
His brother owns the property, for there's the bill of sale.
The "creditors" can whistle—you say it is a steal;
Why, no, you guy! you're off your base; it's just "a business deal."

And then we see the gay cashier clean out the bank and skip;
He often goes to Canada it's such a pleasant trip—
You say you call that man a thief? It may seem rather queer;
But the papers have it written up: "absconding cashier."

And when the man of millions puts up a giant game
To rob the nation's treasury, he's on the road to fame.
You say he should be handled for the job he's engineering?
Nay, nay, my poor deluded friend—that's "modern financiering."

—Reformatory Prisoner.

St. Cloud, July 29, 1901.

ADMIRAL SAMPSON seems to be an adept in the use of the traditional Sampsonian weapon.

IT is claimed that Litchfield is disappointed because J. J. Hill's road refuses to run an extra train Sunday to carry them to the base ball game at Lexington Park. If Jim is trying to stop Sabbath breaking let all good people say, Amen!

Porto Rican Tariff.

Our little Porto Rican possession has at last been placed on an equal footing with the rest of the United States the tariff having been abolished by proclamation of the president. The fact that the tariff has so soon been withdrawn is gratifying to those who contended that it should never have been adopted.—Sherburne County Star News.

But where does Congressman Page Morris, he that argued that they would never know it if they did pay it, and it wouldn't hurt anybody, come in?

IT turns out from later advises that President Shaffer is not the illiterate ignoramus that some have tried to make out he is. He is a man of about 50 years, worked himself up, learning the trade in a steel rolling mill, attending Universits. He was a Methodist preacher for years, but was obliged for his health to return to manual labor. He is said to be well educated and a leader among men and one calculated to look after his fellow men's interests in an able and conscientious manner, keeping a cool head himself. It is to be hoped that some definite understanding may be arrived at between labor and capital without dishonor to either. There is no need of men forcing their fellow men into war about money matters. If things are properly managed it seems there is enough in this country to give everybody a living, and if some didn't try to get too many of the livings at the expense of others all could have enough.

Burning at the Stake.

Telegrams from Birmingham, Ala., say that near Enterprise, a negro was burned at the stake, in the presence of 500 enraged citizens of Coffee county. Black and white mingled in the horrible business. It seems as if in this, the twentieth century, some way ought to be hit upon to prevent these horrid occasions. Possibly the crimes are as prevalent in the North but the punishment surely is less demonstrative. Criminals ought to have their trials and receive their punishment punctually; but for people to have to take the law in their own hands, don't seem right. They are as apt sometimes, to be in too big a hurry as the law is to move too slowly, and it would be better to follow the law, but have it a little prompter in its actions than it often is.

Because a poor, ignorant black man, in a less refined manner accomplished what many white men have, is no reason that the black should be burned at the stake while the pale face goes free, and is lionized by so called "society." The crime should be promptly punished in the case of white or black. The punishment should be severe, but burning at the stake in presence of 500 men women and children is horrible to contemplate.

While such things are tolerated in the United States it looks like a hopeless job to try to christianize other nations. Let such work stop.

Providence vs Protection.

Man, in his self conceit, sometimes thinks he holds the world in his hands; that by laws made in his particular interest he can compel other men and other nations to submit to his will, to pay tribute to him. By protective tariffs he thinks he can compel others to keep their products at home while his immediate neighbors supply the home market. Sometimes for a season this appears to win. But in the long run he finds an overruling Providence, that respects no man, and no man's laws. This may be seen as concerns nations and countries, or it may be seen on a smaller scale nearer home.

Our nation has made a so called Chinese wall, of tariff about our country, which after having served the purpose of a few men, now is being met by other nations and which like a boomerang is reacting on us by keeping our products from countries we would gladly sell to, and will unless amended, soon be depriving us of what has almost become necessaries of life.

That tariffs, whether they be for a nations revenue, or screwed up to the highest notch by a greedy railroad corporation between neighboring parts of the country that demand an exchange of goods amounts to the same to the consumer, usually the majority of whom are least able to pay extra prices for what they must have.

Our farmers are obliged by these protective tariffs and transportation tariffs and others to diversify their business too much. Men who know there is not a very good spot on their land for raising potatoes, must plant and cultivate, and expect to raise enough for their own use, knowing that unless they do they must pay these cash additions to what they should get them for from neighbors who can raise potatoes better than anything else. The same thing applies to other products. Farmers and others pay more for their sugar in order that a few families may fight weeds over an acre or so of sugar beets, that could much better be raised in some other country, while our people cultivated cane, which is much nicer to handle, and makes much better sugar; or give their attention to dairying, or something for which their land and their situation is adapted.

Occasionally, contrary to the expectations of these get rich by raising the tariff fellows, they find that Providence has smiled on the other fellow, or at least frowned on their schemes, and that they are not so powerful as they once hoped they were. The fields yield beyond the expectation of everybody; people have enough of everything of their own, or in their immediate neighborhood to make them happy. Providence must always be taken into consideration when we figure for protective tariff, or for crops, or for happiness.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 26, 1901

If it took Secretary Root three years to make up his mind to take the first step toward putting a stop to an illegal practice on the part of army officers in the Philippines, who handle gov. money, how long will it take to stop the practice? That is the conundrum suggested by Secretary Root's request that the heads of bureaus in the War Department submit suggestions as to the best way of relieving the responsibility of officers who handle public money in the Philippines, and what ought to be done about those officers who have been and are violating army regulations and making themselves liable to court martial by depositing public funds in foreign banks, instead of taking the chance of keeping it in their possession. Three years ago the attention of the Secretary of War was called to this matter, and Congress had a dab at it, but did not improve the situation. It authorized the deposit of U. S. funds in banks in China and elsewhere, provided the banks so designated would deposit U. S. bonds with the Treasury Department to the value of the deposits. A number of banks were designated as depositories of public funds under that act, but every one refused to buy and deposit U. S. bonds. This left the officers of the Paymasters Department the choice between violating both law and army regulations and keeping the money near them and taking the chances of having it stolen. Most of them chose the first and a recent report from one officer shows that he has more than $200,000 in a Hong Kong bank. Another officer, who was among the few who chose the last, was recently robbed of $20,000, which he had in a small safe and of which no trace has since been found. Surely it was high time that the War Department took the matter up. It is true that nothing can be done to relieve the situation except through an act of Congress, but it is also true that the War Department should point out to Congress what ought to be done, in order that the failure of the last legislation on the subject shall not be repeated.

One by one the stories of the means by which fabulous wealth was to be obtained from the Philippines are being swept away as actual knowledge is gained. One of the most reasonable of these stories concerned the great forests of fine woods on the islands that American makers of fine furniture would gladly pay fortunes for. This is the way that story, with all its variations was punctured by a U. S government forestry expert-Capt. G. P. Ahern-who has just returned from the Philippines: "A mistaken idea prevails in the U. S. that most of the Philippine timber is of varieties very valuable for cabinet making. There are seven or eight varieties which take a fine finish, but apart from those none of the native woods are likely to find their way to the U. S."

Intelligent observers just from Cuba report business of the future. Merchants are afraid to invest any more capital until they know more about what the Cuban government is to be, and they are unusually careful in selling goods on credit. The worst part of the business is that there is no hope for any change for the better in the near future, as the shortest estimate of the time that will be required to establish a Cuban government is eight months from the date upon which Gen. Wood issues the orders for holding the two elections that will be necessary, and Gen. Wood is now in this country, or rather in the waters adjacent thereto on board a government vessel, which he is using as his private yacht, and the orders will not be issued until he returns to Havana, which he says will be in about three weeks.

Agents of Hawaiian sugar planters are in Washington trying to find out if they can legally import Filippinos or Chinese from the Philippines to work on their plantations. They attempted through third parties, to get an opinion from the Commissioner General of Immigration on the matter, but he declined to express one, saying that it was not his business to decide questions until they came before him officially. He did, however, incidentally express the opinion that if the Hawaiian sugar planters would pay sufficient wages they could get all the laborers they wanted, from the Southern States-laborers who would make ideal hands on sugar plantations. But that is just what these planters do not wish to do. Many of them have grown rich by importing coolie labor from Japan, a practice that had to be stopped when Hawaii was annexed to the U. S., and it is that class of labor they wish to get from the Philippines, because of its cheapness, both in wages and keep.

Rear Admiral Crowninshield, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, popularly known as the "Bureau of Fabrication" because of its method of attacking Admiral Schley, took advantage of his being acting Secretary of the Navy between the departure of Secretary Long and the arrival of Assistant Secretary Hackett to make a showing of animosity toward Schley which was as small as it was disgusting, by issuing an order forbidding employes of the Navy Department to assist Capt. Parker, assistant counsel for Schley, who is examining the records to prepare data in Schley's behalf, to be brought before the Court of Inquiry.

My Friend, the Doctor

By James T. Sullivan.

"HELLO, Frank," was Tom Acton's greeting, as he entered Atherton's apartments one evening. "I called to have that theater party of ours postponed for a few weeks."

"Can't do it," answered Atherton. "I've already invited the girls and we can't back out now."

"But you must," protested Tom. "Just read this," and he handed a telegram to Frank. It read:

"Tom Acton, Boston, Mass.: Everything all settled for marriage Monday. Want you for best man.

"Dr. Jordan."

"Well, I'll be blowed," said Frank. "So Dr. Jordan is going to get married. Why, I didn't know he even had a girl."

"He didn't," said Tom. "That is, it wasn't intentional on his part at first."

"Do you know who the fortunate one is?" asked Frank.

"Yes, I know her very well," answered Tom. "It's really the most amusing case I have ever heard of. You know when I went away last summer, Fred, the doctor's brother, was with me. 'From the very start he made a hit with the fair sex.

"One of the young women staying at a near-by hotel had the misfortune (or, to be more accurate, the good fortune, for so it proved eventually), to sprain her wrist, and word was sent over to our hotel asking if we had among our guests a physician. On the spur of the moment I said my friend was one, for I knew he understood a little about medicine.

"So we went together, and I introduced Fred as Dr. Jordan, of Boston. The young woman was very glad to see him, and Fred examined her wrist, finally declaring it was not very serious. He called for water and linen, and bathed her wrist for some time, much longer, in fact, than I thought necessary under the circumstances. Finally he bandaged the wrist, smilingly assuring her it would be a matter of but a few days when it would be as well as ever.

"The young woman was profuse in her thanks, and that he might send her a bill she gave him one of her cards. It read Miss Marion Fiske. When we returned to our hotel the other guests, hearing me call Fred "Doc" took it for granted he was a physician. One of the young women, in fact, recalled how she had met him at a reception, and asked him if he did not remember the occasion.

"As he and his brother, being twins, are nearly as much alike as two peas, and confuse their friends as to their identity at times, it was not strange that a nominal acquaintance should get them mixed.

FINALLY HE BANDAGED THE WRIST.

"The injured wrist, however, afforded Fred an excuse to make visits to the other hotel, and under his careful treatment it grew better wonderfully fast. This treatment included long walks, rowing, swinging for hours in a hammock, etc. It was delightful for both, apparently, but finally Fred had to go back to town.

"Just before the train pulled him out he fished in his pockets for a card, and having decided not to make a confession disclosing his true identity until Miss Fiske came to town, he handed her one of his brother's cards, on which was his address.

"Once he got back to town he had so much to do in order to make up for his absence that he forgot all about his flirtation for the time being. Then he decided one day to drop Miss Fiske a few lines for old times' sake, and when it was finished he simply signed it 'Sincerely, Doc.'

"Miss Fiske speedily answered it. So the next day Dr. Jordan found among his mail a dainty scented envelope. When he opened and read the letter he could not recall who 'Marion' was, nor any person in Jefferson whom he knew, and he tossed it on his desk.

"When Marion did not receive any answer to her missive that week she became a bit disconsolate, and at last made up her mind to spend Sunday in town. Her failure to reply had not worried Fred very much, as he was up to his eyes in work.

"Sunday afternoon Miss Fiske, having persuaded herself that her wrist was paining her somewhat, decided to visit her friend, and had no difficulty in finding the house, as it bore a sign with the doctor's name. 'He was probably very busy,' she mused as she rang the bell.

"A few minutes later Dr. Jordan entered, and Miss Fiske hastened across the parlor to meet him, exclaiming: 'Why, how do you do, doctor?'

"'Very well, thank you,' he answered. 'Won't you please be seated?'

"His distant manner disconcerted her, and she was at a loss what to say, but finally managed to ask: 'You got my letter, did you not?'

"'Your letter! What letter?' he asked, trying to recall if he had ever met his visitor before.

"'Why, the letter I wrote you from Jefferson,' she replied.

"'Jefferson? O, yes, I recall it now. It came a few days ago. I've got it right here,' and turning to his desk he picked up the missive.

"'Why didn't you answer it?' she asked.

"'Well, you see, the fact is you—er—forgot to sign your full name,' he answered.

"'She must be insane,' the doctor thought to himself, 'and I'll humor her,' while Miss Fiske concluded he was under the influence of some powerful opiate that destroyed his memory temporarily, and so she said: 'Why, yes. How stupid of me to send it that way!'

"Thinking to recall his mind to Jefferson, she extended her arm and said: 'My wrist does not bother me at all now, and I don't believe it ever will, do you?'

"'Your wrist! Wasn't it your head you had trouble with?' he said, doubtingly.

"'My head?'

"'O—er—I mean your hand. Why, looks as if it never was injured.'

"The interview was becoming embarrassing to both, so Miss Fiske cut it short and departed.

"'Well, of all the crazy women I've ever met, she takes the premium,' said the doctor, after she left. 'First she writes me a letter, then visits me and tries to convince me I know her. Some of her friends had better look after her.'

"Miss Fiske meanwhile was deeply thinking of the baneful influence of drugs. 'Why, if some one told me of such a thing I never would believe it,' she said to herself.

"That evening, after dinner, she started for church, and just as she was nearing the edifice she heard a familiar voice say: 'Why, Miss Fiske, is it really you?' Turning around, she beheld her friend, the 'doctor.'

"'You might have let me know you were coming to town,' he said.

"'I did let you know,' she answered, rather stiffly.

"'When?' he asked.

"'The other day when I answered your letter,' she replied.

"'Letter! Why, I got no letter,' said Fred.

"'How can you say that when this very afternoon you showed me the letter!' she retorted, rather angrily.

"'This afternoon? I was out of town this afternoon. I went up to Jefferson to see you, only to find you gone.'

"'Really!' she said, somewhat sarcastically, and then, suddenly remembering about the drug, thought to herself the remarkable similitude of this case to that of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

"They had reached the door of the church, and as services had begun, further conversation just then was impossible. Nevertheless, they did a great deal of thinking.

"Fred became very angry at Miss Fiske's apparent attempt to deceive him, and when they left the church he made no attempt to converse. She thought it was another of his strange moods, and when the door of her residence was reached, she quietly said 'Good-night,' which he answered somewhat gruffly.

"'I could never be happy with such a fellow,' she said to herself, while he wondered how he ever grew to like her. When he got home he was in a surly mood, and his brother inquired what the trouble was. 'Nothing much', Fred replied.

"'I'll bet a woman is in some way responsible for your present frame of mind,' said the doctor. 'Cheer up, my boy; it's good you are not married to some woman, especially to one similar to a caller I had to-day. She had an insane notion that I had treated her wrist for sprain not long ago.'

"'What's that?'

"'She tried to convince me that I knew her, and she wrote me this letter,' he went on, tossing the missive he had received from Miss Fiske to his brother. After one glance at it a light dawned on Fred, and he burst out into a hearty fit of laughter.

"'What's the matter now; are you going insane also?' asked the doctor.

"'Insane! No. This letter was intended for me. Why didn't you give it to me when it arrived?'

"'How long since you became an M. D.?'

"'Let me see; it's just two weeks ago since I received my degree,' said Fred, laughingly, 'and that young woman who called on you to-day was my first patient.' Then Fred told all about the affair at Jefferson.

"'It appears to me we both owe her an apology,' remarked the doctor.

"'Undoubtedly,' said Fred. 'Let us write one now explaining the case, and we will both sign it.'

"The following day, when Miss Fiske received the letter, and later, when the two brothers appeared at her home in person, she realized the mistake all had made, and she enjoyed it as heartily as the others."

"Then I suppose Fred proposed to her eventually and this is the result," said Frank.

"No," Tom answered. "In fact, the doctor being in town all the time, while Fred was away, saw more of her, and decided to marry her himself, and she agreed, or the marriage would not be taking place next week. It's lucky for him he is Fred's brother, or he might find himself in trouble."

"That's right, too," said Frank. "Well, under the circumstances, I guess we'll have to excuse you, and postpone the theater party."—Boston Globe.

Late Literary News.

The Cosmopolitan for August is, as usual, rich in fiction, remarkable both for its vivid interest and its great variety. Irving Bacheller writes a refreshing story of the Canadian big timber region, and Hering's drawings catch the spirit of the scene perfectly. A. T. Quiller-Cauch's ("Q.") pathetic little tale cannot fail to enlist our sympathies with the French exile who broke his parole for love. Richard Le Gallienne tells the most charming and least known of the quaint "Old French Romances"—the love of honest Squire Robin for the Fair Jehane. "The Temple of Fate," the late Grant Allen's clever satire on modern society is certain to not only entertain the reader, but also to set him thinking. Francis Willing Wharton writes a pretty story of fashionable Newport society—a subject with which she is thoroughly at home; while Phoebe Lyde and Egerton Castle handle strong subjects in a masterly manner.

The champion office holding family has been found. President Washington in May of 1793 named Robert W. Fox as the United States consul at Falmouth, England, and the office has been in the Fox family ever since. Upon the death of Richard Fox his son was appointed to the place, and now the grandson is holding it.

The suggestion to change the date of inaugurating the president has been revived, and the commissioners of the District of Columbia will try to enlist public interest in the matter. As usual, whenever a change has been advocated the date suggested is April 30, which was the date of George Washington's first inauguration in New York.

A marked feature of the times in the transportation world is the rapid increase of trolley roads. It is more noticeable in the east than in the west, and the more densely populated the country the more rapid the development of trolley roads. Just what effect it will have on steam railroads and on trade and social life remains to be seen, but it has evidently come to stay.

Some one has discovered that sunstroke is also the work of a microbe of peculiar shape and kind. It only remains now to find the germ which causes people to freeze to death in winter time. The germ which invades the physical anatomy that has been struck by lightning and the bacillus that plays havoc with persons who are run over by railway trains can be hunted up and identified later.

"Viscogen," the new compound used in adulterating milk, is composed of sugar, lime and water. The lime in the compound, turned by the lactic acid of the milk into a white, thick substance, aided by the sugar, gives the adulterated milk the appearance of great richness. If a milkman had used such a thing 50 years ago he would have been tarred and feathered and given 30 minutes to get out of town.

Volcanic eruptions in various parts of the earth show that the universal excessive heat has been due to the fact that Mother Nature has chosen this time to bake an unusually large baking in her subterranean oven. Whether it be a new island which has been launched somewhere on the sea or a new star now set out to cool in the heavens, the baking is doubtless completed and the oven will be permitted to cool off gradually.

There are dangers in being too young. A female employe in Hackensack, N. J., sued for wages. In court she testified to her age, and she put the figures so low that the case was thrown out of court because as a self-confessed infant she had no right to sue. Then her lawyer offered to prove that she was over age, but he was too late. A girl should be permitted to have two ages—one when she herself sues and one when she has a suitor. The seven ages of man justify two ages of woman.

The Porto Rican regiment, composed of natives of that island, commanded by American officers, has outlived all the other volunteer regiments, and by special permission is to be continued on the rolls of the army, it being very likely that the organization will ultimately be incorporated into the regular establishment. The regiment is in a high state of efficiency now, and the army officials are much pleased with the showing that has been made. Who thought of such a state of affairs as this a few years ago?

This is not the only country that has labor troubles. An elaborate report just published by the statistical bureau of France shows that during 1900 there were 902 strikes in that country, in which 222,714 workers took part, at a loss of 3,760,577 days' wages. The report also shows that 1,115,524 days' wages were sacrificed by 26,754 employes who wanted to work, but were compelled by those who organized the strikes to remain idle. Finally, the report shows that only 22 per cent. of all the strikes resulted in victory for the strikers.

The announcement that the apple crop in certain sections of New York and other states from which the bulk of the fruit is usually obtained is practically a failure has been received with comparative indifference by the same public that is lamenting the losses to the grain crops of the west. Probably this is due to the fact that few persons realize the value of the apple crop. The American apple crop in 1900 was worth fully $430,000,000, while the hay crop of 1899 was worth only about $412,000,000 and the wheat crop $319,000,000

DOWAGER EMPRESS DEAD.

Mother of Emperor William of Germany Passes Away—Was Princess Royal of Great Britain.

Cronberg, Aug. 6. — Dowager Empress Frederick died at 6:15 p. m. at Homburg castle. Her death was somewhat sudden, at four o'clock her physicians reporting no change in her condition. Emperor William and her majesty's other children were in the sick room most of the day.

Closely following the announcement of the death from the castle the church bells were tolling and the flags half-masted. It is said the cause of death was dropsy accompanying the cancer. The remarkable vitality of the dowager empress astonished her physicians. She retained consciousness to the end.

Empress Frederick was the princess royal of Great Britain and the eldest child of Queen Victoria. She was born November 21, 1840, and was married to Frederick William, crown prince of the German empire, January 25, 1858. To him she bore Prince William (the present emperor of Germany), born January 27, 1859; Princess Charlotte, born July 21, 1860; Prince Heinric, born August 14, 1862; Princess Victoria, born April 12, 1866; Princess Sophie, born June 17, 1870, and Princess Margaret, born April 22, 1872. During her whole life the empress lived with a simplicity which was the common topic of royalty in Europe. After her marriage with Frederick and her removal to Berlin she distinguished herself chiefly for love of retirement. She hated the fuss and the publicity of the Prussian court, and she loved above all else that freedom from which her lofty position almost totally excluded her. She was empress for 100 days, but the illness of Frederick saved her from the glare which had inevitably surrounded her had her husband lived to rule the great throne of Germany. Since the death of the emperor she had lived in the closest retirement at her castle.

FRANK COLLIER DEAD.

A Chicago Lawyer's Remarkable Career Ends in Pain and Poverty.

Chicago, Aug. 5. — Frank Howard Collier has bid adieu forever to courts, hospitals and asylums. The once famous lawyer expired Saturday night at 11:30 o'clock in the county hospital, to which place he had been taken July 26 last, a victim of paralysis of the legs. No relatives witnessed his passing, only a physician and the nurses of the institution being present when his earthly troubles ended.

[The career of Collier has been notable. Before the assault that changed a brilliant attorney into an extravagant and irresponsible person he was one of the most noteworthy figures at the bar of this city. He was counsel for the west park board, attorney for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, a member of the board of education and a member of many clubs, his practice was large and he had a fortune of over $100,000. He was selected as the American attorney for a London paper in the Piggott forgery case, and when he visited England was presented to Queen Victoria. During a heated political campaign in 1889 Collier was attacked by two unknown men and severely beaten. His skull was fractured and he was for many weeks between life and death. When he recovered from the physical injuries his mind was wrecked and he began to waste his property. He had what French experts call "circular" insanity. He was worse at a certain period each year than at other times. Later Collier was placed in custody as a demented person, and a remarkable series of trials to decide the question of his sanity followed. The once clever lawyer had not forgotten all his legal lore. He acted as his own attorney and regained his liberty time and again, only to break out in a short time and be once more placed in an asylum. He was in the Dunning and Kankakee asylums, but never for long periods. He had a trial by 12 men before Judge Kohlsaat in September, 1893, tha was one of the most extraordinary on record. Collier put such astonishing questions to the medical experts and placed them in such an unpleasant light that they were glad to escape his sarcasm. The jury found Collier sane and restored to him his property, valued at $70,000. Later this was partitioned between his wife and children, the house at 622 Jackson boulevard being retained by the lawyer. Here he lived alone, trying to build up a practice. He gradually became so poor that he would accept a police court case for any fee offered.]

New Reputation for Americans.

London, Aug. 3.—From interviews with agents of the various trans-Atlantic steamship lines, the Daily Mail draws the following conclusions: "Visitors from America this year are as numerous as ever before; but, apparently, as the American tourist increases in number, he increases also in thriftiness. Cabmen, porters and hotel servants are one in declaring that the Americans are the least remunerative of their clients. This establishes a new reputation for the American abroad."

Burned to Death.

Mancelona, Mich., Aug. 5.—Two little girls, aged three and two years, daughters of George Simmons, were burned to death Saturday night. They were left with two older boys in the house, which in some unknown manner caught fire. The boys escaped and gave the alarm, but assistance arrived too late to save the two youngest. The house and everything in it was burned.

A Shocking Bereavement.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 5. — Miss Carrie Jones, daughter of Ex-Gov. Thomas G. Jones, was crushed to death by a street car Monday morning. She was attempting to cross the street in front of the car. The accident occurred in front of the Jones residence and was witnessed by Mr. Jones. The girl's head was mashed to a pulp. She was 20 years old.

Day of Evacuation Fixed.

London, Aug. 3.—The under secretary of the foreign office, Lord Cranborne, in the house of commons announced that the official date fixed for the evacuation of Peking by the British troops was August 15, subject to a few days' extension if necessary. The evacuation of the other portions of China depended on circumstances.

FAIL TO AGREE.

Conferences Between Steel Magnates and Strike Leaders Come to Naught.

New York, Aug. 5.—The steel strike is to be a fight to a finish between labor and capital. Such was the decision of Saturday's conference and both sides have announced their determination to carry on the contest to the end with all the resources they can command. The executive board of the Amalgamated Steel, Iron and Tin Workers, after failing to get any concessions at a meeting here with J. Pierpont Morgan, Charles M. Schwab and other men interested in the affairs of the United States Steel corporation, announced that the strike would be continued and that orders would be given to the union men employed by the National Steel company, the Federal Steel company and the National Tube company to go on strike at once. On the other hand the mill owners will seek to open their mills as opportunity offers and keep them open without the assistance of the union. No fewer than 400,000 employes will be affected by the tying up of the steel corporation's plants, and other allied industries are certain to be injured.

The attitude of the board was far from conciliatory, even at the outset of the conference, and when subsequently the steel company officials refused to accede to the unionizing of the mills which have gone into the organization since the strike began all prospects of agreement disappeared. While it is true that the members of the board were disposed to give way to some extent on their demand that they should be permitted to organize lodges in nonunion mills, they stood out for the recognition of the union in those plants which, although hitherto independent, have since the strike was ordered become more or less affiliated with the association. The demand, they say, was refused point blank by Mr. Morgan and his colleagues. Secretary Williams, of the executive board, states that about 100,000 men are employed in the mills of the three combines to which an attempt will now be made to extend the strike.

DEATH TO MANY.

Awful Result of an Explosion in Philadelphia—Entire Block Is Demolished.

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—Death came to from 12 to 20 persons and injury to 50 more Monday night as the result of an explosion, supposed to have been caused by gasoline, which completely wrecked an entire block of buildings on Locust street above Tenth. Five structures were demolished and one was badly damaged. The number of persons in the buildings at the time of the disaster is estimated at 50, and until all are accounted for the loss of life cannot be accurately told.

The explosion occurred about 9:30 o'clock. What exploded and how it happened is not known at this time, but it is believed to have been a barrel of gasoline in one of three grocery stores. With the explosion the front walls of the buildings were blown outward into the street, while the floors and the roofs were blown upward and fell straight to the ground. Almost every building in a radius of two blocks had window panes shattered and were otherwise damaged. Every building on the opposite side of Locust street was more or less wrecked, but none of them fell.

A terrible cry went up from the ruins the moment the explosion occurred. women, children and men, occupants of the wrecked houses, could be seen crawling from the debris, while the agonizing cries of others were heard in the wreckage. From all the surrounding buildings injured people came running and fell into the street unconscious. To add to the horror, fire broke out in the debris the moment it settled to the ground, and in less than five minutes the great pile was burning fiercely from end to end. A general alarm was turned in for fire apparatus, and the blaze was soon extinguished.

Invaders Repulsed.

Caracas, Venezuela, Aug. 5.—The Venezuelan government announces that a force of invaders under Gen. Bangel Garbiras, including 22 battalions of the Colombian army, was repulsed by the government's troops and compelled to fall back across the frontier after 28 hours' fighting July 28 and July 29. It is officially asserted that the invaders lost 900 men, the government troops losing 300. The government has sent reenforcements to the frontier.

Island Disappears.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 2.—Steamboat island, one of the Apostle group, off Chequamegon bay, Lake Superior, has disappeared. Before the last storm, and for time immemorial, it was a small island of sand and rock overgrown with trees. Now it has gone, and a rocky reef several feet under water marks its place. It is now a danger to navigation, and a lighthouse would be required on the ledge if it were in the path of ships.

Boers Wreck a Train.

London, Aug. 5.—A letter from a soldier in South Africa, dated Nylstroom, Transvaal Colony, July 6, says the Boers wrecked a train near Noboomspruit July 4. One hundred and fifty Boers attacked the train guard and 82 Gordon Highlanders were killed, 18 wounded and ten captured. The conductor, engineer and firemen of the train were subsequently shot.

Three Towns Captured.

Manila, Aug. 5.—The towns of Calapan, Naujan and Polay, on the northeast coast of the island of Mindoro, were occupied by a battalion of the Thirteenth volunteer infantry and Macabebe scouts after a slight resistance. The insurgents, numbering 250, fled into the interior. Their commander, Howard, who is a deserter, is hiding in the mountains, and the Americans are in pursuit.

Dies in Electric Chair.

Ossining, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Benjamin Pugh, a negro, who murdered John Tiegen, a waiter in a restaurant in Brooklyn, on August 23 last, was put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison Monday. Three shocks were administered before he was pronounced dead.

Why She Was Pensive.

"You say," she murmured as she watched the moonlight on the sea, "that I am an angel?"

"Yes."

She was silent for a long time.

"Why so pensive?" he inquired sickishly.

"I was wondering whether, some day, when the thermometer was up in the vicinity of a hundred, and the ice man forgot us and the cream is sour, and you have a headache because you have been working hard—I was wondering whether you'd call me an angel then. Don't answer right away," she added in that cold business-like tone that women are learning to assume. "Take your time and think it over."—Washington Star.

Did Not Get What He Wanted.

The late Rev. R. S. Storrs was a very hard man to interview, for he resented the inquisitiveness of the press and was icy to its agents. One evening a reporter attended a reception at his house, and in the course of the evening touched his arm and whispered: "Doctor, I'm from the ——; I want the names of guests and all the particulars." "Yes," Dr. Storrs whispered in return, "this way, this way," and, taking the young man's arm, he escorted him to the front door and put him out.—Chicago Chronicle.

Progress Backward.

"I'm glad to observe that Mr. De Kanter has turned over a new leaf," remarked Mrs. Borden.

"How do you mean, ma'am?" inquired the observant chambermaid.

"He hasn't left his shoes on the hall rack these last few nights."

"No, ma'am, but you'd ought to see how muddy his sheets are."—Philadelphia Press.

Looked Like It.

"John, dear," said the bride, after they had got to keeping house, with a never-vacant "spare room," "I believe all our friends think we are perfectly miserable!"

"Why, my dear?" cried the astonished husband; "why?"

"Well, they seem to be carrying out the idea that 'misery loves company.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Very Likely.—Wife—"I somehow just feel in my bones that we will go to Europe this summer." Husband—"In which bone do you feel it most?" Wife—"Well, I don't exactly know, but I guess it's my wishbone."—Boston Traveller.

"Thomas!" cried Mr. Hussel, "call a messenger boy, quick!" "I'll do it, if you sez so," replied the smart office boy; "but I'll be an awful liar, 'cause I know 'em."—Philadelphia Record.

You have only to tell one person that a thing is free.—Atchison Globe.

A Fortune to Be Given Away.

A noted philanthropist has decided to give away his fortune to charities and no doubt much good will be accomplished. There is another agency that has also accomplished much good, namely, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the medicine with fifty years of cures back of it. It promotes appetite, insures digestion, cures dyspepsia, regulates the liver and keeps the bowels regular, also prevents belching, heartburn or flatulency. Don't fail to try it, but be sure you get the genuine.

A Happy Affliction.

"Mrs. Cleekie must feel dreadfully unhappy since she has become so deformed by meningitis."

"Well, she was until Dr. Sleeker diagnosed the case as 'golfer's spine,' and now she's quite proud of it."—San Francisco Bulletin.

A DOUBTING THOMAS.

Had His Failing Hair Stopped, and Dandruff Cured, Without Faith.

H. B. Fletcher, Butte, Mont., Oct. 20, 1899, says: "Like many other people, I have been troubled for years with dandruff, and within the last few months, my hair came out so badly that I was compelled to have what I had left clipped very close. A friend recommended Newbro's Herpicide. I confess that I doubted his story; but I gave Herpicide a trial; now my hair is as thick as ever, and entirely free from dandruff." "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." At druggists, $1.00. Herpicide is a delightful hair dressing for regular use.

Reasonable Objection.

Mistress—What was the policeman doing in the kitchen, Nora?

Nora—Courting me, mum.

"Then he'll have to stop. I'll not let you make a police court out of my kitchen."—Philadelphia Record.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Small Counterfeiting.

A gang of youthful counterfeiters has been at work for some time in South Minneapolis, where they have been engaged in making spurious 1-cent coins, bearing the date of 1889.

The police say the boys that are being detained are but tools of the real culprits, and the boys agreed to reveal the identity of the principals in order that they themselves may go clear. The government officials have been notified, and the case will eventually be placed in the hands of the federal authorities.

No attempt was made to pass the coins in the open market, but the boys have been feasting from the good things contained in the penny slot machines scattered about the streets and stores of Minneapolis, several of which machines were drained of salted peanuts, gum and candy.

Board of Appeals.

Gov. Van Sant has announced the members of the two boards of grain appeals. Three members will work in Minneapolis and the other three in Duluth. The members of the boards are as follows:

Minneapolis—Franklyn L. Greenleaf, reappointed; A. C. Ashby, Rock Dell, Olmstead county; John Gleason, Crookston.

Duluth—E. H. Pugh, Duluth; C. J. Stang, Alexandria; James K. Stone, East Granite Falls, reappointed.

Messrs. Stone and Gleason are democrats.

Duluth Boy Won.

Word has reached Duluth that Adolph Hartman, son of Emil Hartman of that city, recently won a duel with Lieut. Pachmann, of the German army. The lieutenant made some derogatory remarks concerning America, which Hartman resented with a slap on his face. It was a bloody encounter, and the Duluth boy escaped with but one serious wound, while Lieut. Pachmann was grievously wounded in three places, including the jugular vein and it is estimated that it will take three months to enable him to attend to military duty again.

A Freak College.

To the attractions of St. Paul will soon be added a freak medical college, if the intention of the promotor of the scheme are carried through. Dr. Matthew Rodermund, who brought himself into notorious publicity at Milwaukee a few months ago with his anti-smallpox agitation, proposes to establish a college in the Saintly City, to advance his theory of the non-contagiousness of the disease, and to combat the established doctors.

Murdered.

Two armed men got into a box car near Belle Plaine and held up two hoboes. One of the victims, not having any money, was taken by the neck and thrown from the car. The other man, named Ben Johnson, was shot dead and thrown from the car. Later a train came along and cut his head off. The two murderers escaped. The companion of the man who was murdered is detained

Wolf Bounties.

The state has paid out $4,226.65 in wolf bounties during the fiscal year just closing. There is no appropriation for the purpose for the next two years, and the counties will have to cease paying bounties. Polk was the leading wolf county this year, returning 122 scalps. Houston had 119; Olmsted, 85; Stearns, 83; Fillmore, 92; Mower, 77; Sherburne, 78; Douglas, 77. The total number of scalps redeemed was 1,468.

News in Brief.

John Bruske, of Renville county, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart, because a certain young woman would not marry him.

On the Benedict farm, near Sabin, in a gravel pit, were found two human skeletons. Apparently they had been there for at least 20 years.

The dead body of a fully developed girl baby was found near the Great Northern tracks at Crookston. The body is thought to have been thrown from a train.

Three boys, Stephen Lepinski, Joseph Werdick and Felix Kobas, were arrested at Winona on a charge of entering the residence of I. I. Lusk and stealing three valuable rings.

The Great Northern and Northern Pacific took between 1,500 and 2,000 harvest hands out of the twin cities for the western harvest fields in one day.

John Sutterman, a 12-year-old Minneapolis newsboy, was drowned in the Mississippi river near Red Rock.

The state grain department reported July receipts to the state auditor amounting to $13,000.

The state university sent a remittance to Auditor Dunn of $12,795.70, representing July collections, of which $10,426.25 was from the sale of so-called salt spring lands.

The model in butter of the new Minnesota capitol building is attracting general attention at the Buffalo exposition.

A St. Paul lady left her baby on the street cars in Minneapolis. It was finally returned, much to the relief of the mother.

The missing wife of Henry Remackers, of Chaska, was discovered in the insane asylum at Rochester.

Permits have been taken out for the erection of the university buildings. The physics building, three stories in heighth, will cost $75,000, and the mechanics arts will cost $60,000. The buildings are to be completed by December 31.

Arthur Dingel, of St. Paul, aged 17 years, was drowned in White Bear lake whele bathing.

Major Fred Brackett, of Minneapolis, has been appointed auditor and paymaster for the St. Louis exposition.

Lieut. Gov. Lyndon A. Smith, president of the senate, and Speaker M. J. Dowling, of the house of representatives, have joined in a call to the legislature to meet at the state fair grounds at 11 o'clock on the morning of Sept. 3, which will be the second day of the fair.

Congressman Fletcher, from Minneapolis, is sojourning in London.

Extremely hot weather has greatly damaged the potato crop of the southwestern states, and the chances are good for the Minnesota farmer realizing a good price on his potatoes this fall.

WORK OF MOBS.

Mother, Son and Daughter Lynched at Carrollton, Miss.—Young Tennesseean Strung Up.

Carrollton, Miss., Aug. 2.—A mother and her son and daughter, all negroes, were taken from the jail here Thursday evening and lynched. The victims were Betsy, Ida and Belfield McCray. They had been arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Taliaferro last Tuesday night. The action of the mob followed a confession made by Ida, the daughter, who admitted knowledge of the murder and said that her mother and brother helped to commit the crime. She implicated other negroes and it is possible that other lynchings may result from her disclosures. The mob was composed of about 500 men.

Smithville, Tenn., Aug. 3.—The first lynching in the annals of DeKalb county took place Friday morning when Charley Davis, who was charged with criminal assault on Miss Kate Hues, was taken from the courthouse by a mob of about 25 friends and relatives of the young lady and hanged about a quarter of a mile from town.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 3.—With a rope around his neck and death before him, Charley Bentley, a negro, confessed to the murder of Jim Vann, alias Williams, a white man, and was hanged by a mob in Leeds, St. Clair county, Ala., Friday. The murderer's body was riddled with bullets and left hanging to the limb of a tree. The coroner's jury has just returned a verdict fixing the responsibility of the murder on Bentley. Members of the mob learned of the verdict and a crowd quickly gathered around the prisoner, and, unheeding his pleas for mercy, hanged him to a tree.

New Orleans, Aug. 5. — The Picayune's Carrollton (Miss.) special says: Your correspondent has just learned that the armed mob which has been in the Taliaferro neighborhood for two days looking for Sallie Layton and others some time during Saturday night killed Will Price, the negro who worked for Mr. Taliaferro and lived within 200 yards of his residence. He was found dead in the road on Mr. Duke's place Sunday morning some distance from any trees or anything to which to hang anyone, with a rope around his neck and mutilated by gunshots.

IS MORE HOPEFUL.

Bettering of Conditions in Drought-Stricken States Gives Cheerful Tone to Trade.

New York, Aug. 3.—Bradstreet's says: "Copious rains throughout the western half of the country have had the expected effect of inducing a more cheerful tone and the feeling is decidedly more hopeful than it was a week or two ago. Rains practically insured a large spring wheat crop, although the damage already done appears to have been serious, judging from the strength of the corn market itself and the advices of heavily reduced yields which are reiterated from the sections affected. Bradstreet's advices point to the early corn crop as practically a failure in the leading surplus-producing states west of the Mississippi, but late corn undoubtedly has been saved, and as time elapses estimates of production are being raised. From the rest of the country trade advices are in the main quite cheerful, and despite the intense heat and drought of July an extraordinarily large business appears to have been done, which is reflected in the bank clearings for that month. Cotton crop conditions improved in the south as a result of the recent rains and trade advices are correspondingly more cheerful. Pacific coast crop advices are also better, although shipping activity is interfered with at San Francisco by a strike. The northwest will produce crops largely in excess of last year and a heavy fall trade is anticipated in that section. The poorest advices naturally come from the central west and southwest, but it is significant that points like Kansas City report that cancellations have stopped and that the outlook is much better.

"Prospects for the ending of the steel strike and the better tone of crop advices have made the iron and steel trade more cheerful. For the first time in some weeks special activity is noted in the cruder forms, due to the buying of 70,000 tons of Bessemer and basic pig iron by the largest single interest. Finished products are as active as ever at all leading markets. Bar mills are reported filled up with orders to the end of the year."

"Failures in July were 697 in number, against 793 last year, and $7,035,933 in amount of liabilities, against $9,771,775 in 1900."

Makes a New Record.

Columbus, O., Aug. 3.—Cresceus, champion of the trotting turf, added more laurels to his fame Friday, by trotting a mile in 2:02¾, reducing by half a second his week-old record of 2:02¾, made at Cleveland last Friday. The first half was trotted in 59¾, the first time that the distance has been covered in less than one minute by a trotter. The time by quarters was 29¾, 59¾, 1:30¼ and 2:02¼. Only a stiff wind blowing directly up the stretch kept him from stepping faster than 2:02. More than 12,000 people witnessed the performance.

A Real Tragedy.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 5. — The rehearsal of the lurid melodrama, "The Arizona Female Bandit," developed into a genuine tragedy Sunday afternoon and real wrongs were resented with actual powder and ball. Mrs. Millie Lighthawk, known on the stage as Minnie Allen, was shot and killed at the climax of the play by Thad Brookie, who followed the murder with suicide. Brookie was jealous of Bert Adams.

Burned to Death.

Milwaukee, Aug. 3.—A Sentinel special from Woodland, Wis., says: Two children of Mrs. Ryder, aged two and four years, were burned to death in a barn on a farm six miles from this city. The children are supposed to have started the fire while playing with matches. Mrs. Ryder is prostrated. She watched the fire while her children burned, but the blaze was too intense for her to render assistance.

To Continue War.

Manila, Aug. 6. — Miguel Malavar, who has been recognized as the successor of Aguinaldo by the Filipino junta at Hong-Kong, has issued a proclamation, dated July 16, copies of which arrived here Monday morning, giving assurances to the natives of the continuation of an active campaign and expressing hope for its successful issue.

Drought at St. Louis Broken.

St. Louis, Aug. 5.—Rain visited St. Louis Sunday for the first time since July 5. The fall was three-tenths of an inch. The expected drop in temperature arrived Sunday, the maximum being but 79 degrees, at three o'clock p. m.

WASHING FARM WAGONS.

A Simple Device Which Not Only Lessens Labor, But Does the Work More Thoroughly.

Anything tending to lessen labor and yet, withal, which will admit of its being performed just as well as or better than if done bodily, by brute force, should always be recommended and approved of. There are, indeed, many things to which this golden rule applies, not the least important and beneficial of which is the device shown in the accompanying illustration for washing farm wagons; in fact, it is an economizer of time.

As can be seen, it consists simply of a narrow watertight box, which is slipped into position under the wheel after it has been "jacked" up. A pail of water is then poured in and the wheel revolved. Are not the results apparent? Ah! the dirt can thus be removed speedily and by far more readily than when a pail is used to hold the water. Let anyone try it and see.—Frederick O. Sibley, in N. Y. Tribune.

LINSEED MEAL GRUEL.

It Is Declared to Be an Excellent and Nutritious Milk Substitute for Calves.

We are often asked for advice as to the best substitute to use when there is not a sufficiency of fresh new milk to be given to calves, says Dairy and Creamery. In our own experience we have not found anything better than a mucilage or soup made up of linseed meal or ground linseed cake, with the addition of a little flour and pea meal. An American breeder, in the course of a communication to one of our contemporaries, claims to have obtained excellent results from the use of a preparation made by slowly boiling one pound of fresh sweet hay in six quarts of water for about an hour, and straining the decoction so obtained into a bucket to cool. A handful of oil cake and a similar quantity of fine oatmeal is stirred into half a gallon of boiling water and allowed to simmer for the same length of time that the hay is stewing. At the end of that time this mixture is added to the hay tea, and the whole given to the calf along with a little milk. The "tea" should be given warm at first, but after awhile, when the calf becomes accustomed to it, it may be given quite cold without any injurious results. The allowance of oil cake may be increased as age progresses. The writer in question claims that calves so reared are in every way as good when four to five months of age as if they were getting whole milk right through.

NEAT WATERING PLACE.

An Ornament to a Roadside and a Convenience That Everybody Will Appreciate.

An old iron kettle, even if it has a hole in the bottom, can be utilized in the manner shown in the cut. A wall of rough stones is laid under it, using sand and cement mortar, and smoothly filling any break in the kettle with the cement. The water can be brought into the kettle in a pipe over the top or through a hole drilled in the side. Such a watering place is an ornament to a roadside, as well as a great convenience.—Orange Judd Farmer.

ARTISTIC WATER TROUGH.

The War Against Weeds.

How about the noxious and poisonous weeds? Are there any growing along the roadside or the fencings of the farm? If so, it will be time and labor well spent to see that they are mowed down closely about this time of year, or before they have time to go to seed. The last half of July and during the month of August, in this latitude, is the period during which one mowing of these enemies of the thrifty farmer will come nearer rendering them harmless for the year than any other. If you cannot afford to mow them down twice or more during the year, give them at least one good battle while the scorching sun and midsummer drought are your allies.—Chicago Sun.

Simple Lesson in Economy.

It costs just as much to regain the value of an animal or plant as to produce such. A pound of flesh lost must first be regained before the next pound can be produced. In the meantime there is a loss of labor and time. When weeds prevent the growth of plants there is waste of time in removing the weeds, which could have been destroyed when they were young. It is not only the loss of the articles which diminish the profit, but the waste of valuable time cannot be recovered, which keeps the farmer at a disadvantage.

SELF-IMPOSED TAXES.

Hills, Corners, Mud and Fences Cost the Farmers Hundreds of Millions Every Year.

Among the taxes which the farmers pay there are some that are unavoidable, and these it is useless to talk about. There are others which farmers impose upon themselves, which they hesitate to share with others, which they submit to without a protest, and even cling to when they are being removed. These taxes we cannot talk about too much. These are taxes, too, which bring no useful revenue, nor even support a tax gatherer; they are burdens as needless as the traditional stone which balanced the grist on the way to mill.

Through the failure of the government in the original surveys on the public lands to lay out a scientific system of roads, and divide the lands accordingly, farmers have been left to lay out the roads for themselves, and generally they have put them on farm lines, going over all the hills that come in their way. The result of this is the hill tax in hilly regions and what may be called the square corner tax on the prairies.

The amount of hill tax I have estimated in one county in New Jersey, and found that needless hills double all the cost of hauling in the county, making practically a money tax of $10,000 annually to the township. The people have paid this tax for 100 years, and yet they wonder why they are poor. In the prairie regions, for want of the diagonal roads which the government should have laid out, the farmer, to reach a point ten miles to the northwest, for instance, travels seven miles north and seven miles west, adding 40 per cent. to his distance, or, for the average of all travel, 20 per cent. This is the square corner tax.

The mud tax is probably about equal in total to the hill tax, and this, again, doubles the cost of all wagon transportation; yet many farmers are opposed to stone roads.

However, the farmers themselves are doing away in many places with the enormous burden of the fence tax, and with it will go the snowdrift tax and the waste land on the roadside. They are slowly abandoning narrow tires and tracking wheels. Moreover, many of them begin to realize the enormity and absurdity of the hill, mud and square corner taxes, and we may yet hope in time to see in this country, as we do in France, beautiful hard roads everywhere, winding through farms, with crops growing close to the wagon tracks and the roads serving perfectly every purpose of public use and private convenience.

You ask how all this can be accomplished without a burden of taxation which will neutralize its benefits. I answer that it is all being done to-day in a hundred places in the United States, and there are farmers who acknowledge that they are getting rich in these hard times solely by reason of the improved roads which have been forced upon them, and are paying with perfect ease any additional tax they impose. These improved roads are being built in many ways and in various forms of construction, and every year's experience reduces the cost and brings about an easier providing of the necessary means.

It would be a very long story to go into the details in this direction, and I would not be prepared to say which is the best of the many methods of construction and of payment. Both need to be greatly varied to meet the conditions in the various states, and a careful study of local legislation is necessary; but the vital question is for the farmers themselves to settle generally whether they want good roads, and whether they will accept the help of those who are willing and anxious to join in paying the cost of road improvement. If they will take up the subject in all their organizations and appoint active working committees to visit the nearest accessible localities where good roads prevail, and to urge such legislation as will make them attainable everywhere, the work will soon reach a point where its own momentum will carry it forward.

The estimate of your able secretary that $600,000,000 is wasted annually in this country through bad roads is supported by that of other statisticians, and from this it appears that the tax they impose takes one-quarter of the whole value of all farm products in the United States. To abolish this tax is a reform great enough to engage the best attention of this congress. It is a practical and practicable field for its energies. What the congress says on this subject will be listened to everywhere, while what it says on other subjects may fall on deaf ears.—Gen. Roy Stone, at Parkersburg, W. Va.

Growing of Forest Trees.

Those who desire to grow forest trees of any kind for shade or ornamental trees should remember that there is no better time to gather the seed than when it ripens upon the tree, and no better time for sowing it than that when it would be self sown by falling from the tree. That is, if the tree is a native of the place where it is to be grown. If from a warmer climate it may be necessary to start the seed under glass, and protect it in some way during a few of the first winters while it is small. At the Arnold Arboretum by this method they have acclimated and grown in this way some trees and shrubs that are not native here, and seldom found north of Mason and Dixon's line. The seeds from these plants are more hardy than those from southern plants and thus they can be made to endure our colder northern climate, and the northern limit of their growth is gradually being extended.—American Cultivator.

Prompt Action Is Needed.

Reports continue to come from England that butter merchants there are being prosecuted for retailing butter bought from America, said butter having in it a goodly percentage of fat not butter-fat. Does the United States government propose to stand still and see the same thing tried in our butter that made our cheese exports a failure? The manufacturers of adulterated butter for export are few, and while they are few is the time to suppress them altogether.—Farmers' Review.

IT PAYS TO READ NEWSPAPERS

Cox, Wis., Aug. 5.—Frank M. Russell, of this place, had Kidney Disease so badly that he could not walk. He tried Doctors' treatment and many different remedies, but was getting worse. He was very low.

He read in a newspaper how Dodd's Kidney Pills were curing cases of Kidney Trouble, Bright's Disease and Rheumatism, and thought he would try them. He took two boxes, and now he is quite well. He says:

"I can now work all day, and not feel tired. Before using Dodd's Kidney Pills I couldn't walk across the floor."

Mr. Russell's is the most wonderful case ever known in Chippewa county. This new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—is making some miraculous cures in Wisconsin.

MEMBER OF CONGRESS FROM SANDWICH ISLANDS

Cured of Catarrh of the Stomach by Pe-ru-na.

CONGRESSMAN R. W. WILCOX,
Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

Hon. Robert W. Wilcox, Delegate to Congress from Hawaii and the Sandwich Islands, in a recent letter from Washington, D. C., writes:

"I have used Peruna for dyspepsia and I cheerfully give you this testimonial. Am satisfied if it is used properly it will be of great benefit to our people. I can conscientiously recommend it to anyone who is suffering with stomach or catarrhal troubles."
—R. W. Wilcox.

All over this country are hundreds of people who are suffering from catarrh of the stomach who are wasting precious time, and enduring needless suffering. The remedies they try only temporarily palliate the distress, but never effect a cure. Remedies for dyspepsia have multiplied so rapidly that they are becoming as numerous as the leaves of the forest, and yet dyspepsia continues to flourish in spite of them all. This is due to the fact that the cause of dyspepsia is not recognized as catarrh.

If there is a remedy in the whole range of medicinal preparations that is in every particular adapted to dyspepsia, that remedy is Peruna. This remedy is well nigh invincible in these cases.

Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O., says:

"In my large practice and correspondence I have yet to learn of a single case of atonic dyspepsia which has not either been greatly benefited or cured by Peruna."

No one suffering with catarrh of the stomach or dyspepsia, however slight, can be well or happy. It is the cause of so many distressing symptoms that it is a most dreaded disease. Peruna acts immediately on the seat of the trouble, the inflamed mucous membranes lining the stomach and a lasting cure is effected.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

—The railroad clerks picnic at Waverly last Saturday was attended by several persons from here. All pronounce the occasion a grand success.

—George H Blackwell, formerly of this city has leased the News Letter at Central City, Iowa, and joined the ranks of country journalists.—Litchfield Independent.

—The G. N. has concluded to furnish a day helper at the depot. This, possibly, is during the steel strike, to keep George good natured until the possibility of a railroad strike is over.

—About twenty five young people, of the feminine gender, took a hay rack ride Wednesday evening. From all appearances, and the amount of laughter etc, they had a hilariously excellent time. Now boys, will you be good.

—The street commissioner has materially helped the looks of the village by cutting down weeds. There are still a few vacant lots that ought to be mowed. He also mended the street near the old Fred Brandes residence with a new culvert.

—A. P. Woodard, formerly a resident of Delano, has written friends here lately for affidavits to aid him in securing a pension from Uncle Sam. It seems strange that he hasn't had one these many years. He wrote from Benton, Arkansas.

—At the meeting of the Delano Board of Education the old officers were reelected as follows: President A. L. Mealey; Secretary, Adam Horsch; Treasurer, J. E. Borsch. Other members of the board are O. A. Burnes, I. Gutzwiller and F. A. Knoll.

—In another column will be found an interesting letter from El Reno, Indian Territory, giving an idea of the late land lottery. The letter is especially interesting to Delano people as it was written by a former Delano girl, a niece of our fellow townsman N. K. Coffin.

—Len Diedrich, Sen., was navigating Crow River below town a few days ago. He thought he could get along if there was a wire fence across the river, but in straddling the wire he of course got caught on the barbs, and has about twenty scars to show, a torn pair of breeches and several other souveniers of the occasion. The blamed old boat wouldn't stand still.

—The Star News gives an account of the shooting of Gustave Moritz, a prominent farmer near Elk River last Friday by a tramp he had hired in town. They were on their way home when the tramp demanded the money Mr. M. had received for a load of potatoes. He is badly wounded. Gov. Van Sant has offered $300 for the arrest of the tramp.

—A trip to Buffalo this week confirms the belief that Wright county will not starve out this season. Such fields of wheat would be a pride to any country. Farmers were busy, some stacking, but most of them following the GAZETTE'S advice, threshing out of the shock, and saving their grain before the fall rains come. We were told a Mr Gilbert near Buffalo threshed 714 bushels of wheat from 22 acres, over 32 bushels to the acre.

—The Delano Millers were defeated Sunday in a hotly contested ball game with the Ganneymedes, of Minneapolis, by a score of 7 to 8. The game was close and exciting all the way through and both teams played good ball, but the City team seemed to have luck on its side especially in the last half of the 9th when Delano was at bat, but there is no use kicking. The Flour City team will play here next Sunday. A hard game is certain.

—A petition to the village council to hold a special election for the purpose of electing a Justice of the Peace to fill the unexpired term of O. L. Billings, deceased, and to vote on raising bonds to purchase a park has been numerously signed. A meeting of the citizens should have been called and some agreement come to as to what park they want, the price to pay etc. Some favor the triangular piece of land between River and Third streets near Maxfield's residence. Some favor the Lohmiller korje, the old picnic ground on the West Side. Some think a boulevard to Lake Houghey and a park on its banks preferable.

—On Friday, at 6 p. m. the fire alarm was sounded. People hurried out from their supper to learn that the residence of William Lewis was on fire. The lawn hose of Mr. Lewis, and of his neighbor, J. E. Borsch, were soon pouring water onto the roof of the summer kitchen and by the time the fire company arrived with their apparatus, had the fire extinguished. The cause of the fire was some irregularity about the oilstove which Mrs. Lewis had just lighted preparatory to getting the evening meal. Had it not been for the prompt application of water the house would have been much more damaged. A few shingles will make the loss good.

—We have on our table a souvenir bale of cotton. Thanks to George P. Schaffer, who brought it home with him from Vicksburg, Miss., after his recent visit there with relatives. The bale is a diminutive fac simile of what is put up for market, and is a beauty. Especially so when George tells us that people are getting 10 cts per pound for their cotton and growing wealthy at it. Each bale contains about 500 pounds and the raiser has to pay $1.00 per bale for taxes to help keep the river wharves in repair. The raise in price is probably due to some extent to the fact that freight is saved by having the factories in the South instead of in New England as before.

Personal.

Dr. T. J. Catlin made a business trip to Buffalo Tuesday.

I. Gutawiller returned home from Minneapolis last evening.

Carl Hildebrandt has returned home from his claim near Minot.

Mrs. J. D. Young is spending a few weeks with relatives in Minneapolis.

Otto Marr has for guests this week his daughter Mrs. Polly Glossi and two children.

Dr. Guy Murphy is now located at Waverly for the practice of Medicine and Surgery.

Joe Boller wheeled up from Minneapolis Saturday. He returned Monday morning.

Messers John and George Jennings and Joe Quinn, of Waverly, spent Sunday in Delano.

Misses Maggie Steffes and Hina Plattner are in attendance at the Pan American Exposition this week.

Mrs. Lucinda Young, of Ashland, Wis., attended the funeral of her sister, Mrs. Kerr, Thursday.

Dr. J. S. Shrader came home from Springfield after his family. He expects to move there Monday.

William M. Kespohl, of Duluth, and wife, of Arlington, Minn., were among the arrivals Wednesday night.

John Borrill and sons Ray and George went to Herman last week. They intend making that place their home.

Bernard Wandersee has rented Mrs. C. R. Carleton's house on Second street. They expect to move in next week.

Councilman Lindsley is making an extended visit with friends in the East and incidentally at the Buffalo Exposition.

Uncle Joe Bland, of Marysville, has been quite sick. His many friends are pleased to hear that he is getting better.

John Walker and family, of Minneapolis, and Charles Wright and family of Waverly, were in attendance at the funeral of Mrs. Kerr.

L. G. Perry with a handsome team and covered carriage filled with handsome ladies drove over from Greenwood Wednesday to see the village.

Mrs. C. H. Halgren, and daughter Mrs. E. E. Shrader, and Misses Nellie Cunningham and Josa Halgren drove over from Watertown, Monday for a visit with Delano relatives and friends.

Misses Nellie Cunningham and Josa Halgren, and Mr. Warner Halgren, of Minneapolis, came up Friday evening en route to Watertown to visit relatives. Miss Nellie Cunningham visited in Delano Monday, returning to the City, Tuesday morning.

Farm for Sale.

Two miles south of Delano. 72 acres of fine farm land, with good house, barn, etc. For further particulars enquire of John Cunningham, Delano, Minn.

County Cullings.

Yesterday morning a young child of Edward Wenzel, living at Sugar Lake, near Annandale, was discovered hanging by the neck in a buggy wheel. It was dead when found. -St. Cloud Times.

It is rumored that the Buffalo Gazette, of Delano, is to change hands and be removed to the county seat the place of its birth.--Maple Lake Messenger.

That is a pretty good item, but we don't know where brother Nary got it. The new proprietor hasn't made himself acquainted at this office. We hope he will at least let us know before he moves the paper. Possibly the Messenger editor could introduce him to us. There seems to be an opening for a good paper at the county seat, and the GAZETTE is a good paper.

A sad shooting occurred at Monticello on last Friday. Ernest Elzemeyer, of St. Louis, who with his brother and mother were visiting in Monticello, shot and wounded Gerald Bailey so that he died eight and a half hours after. Ernest had, in a pet, told Gerald "If you don't give me that nife I'll blow your brains out." and it it is claimed that in less than a minute the gun which Ernest held went off and the killing was done. Ernest was arrested on complaint of Mr. Bailey. County Attorney Oakley claims to have made a thorough investigation of the case and determined that the shooting was purely accidental. Boys should learn by this not to make such threats and to be more careful in handling firearms.

Trip to the County Seat.

On Tuesday we drove to Buffalo by way of the school house in Dist. 48, which we learn is to have a new belfrey and bell, and the same teacher that taught last year, Miss Lord, of Buffalo. The road to Buffalo is shorter and smoother this way than any other, and when a few more little crooks are straightened out will be quite a pleasant drive Choke cherries are plenty and uncommonly fine. A few plums are to be seen along the road. Crops are mostly harvested and look well, especially near Buffalo where they are threshing is this the case.

At Buffalo things seem a trifle quiet. The village extends over more country than Delano does, but is not so compactly built. The modern improvements to be seen at home, electric lights, water works, street sprinkler, are notably absent at the county seat. Their lawns are not so nice and green, their streets are dusty, and their lights more trouble and less use to them. still Buffalo is the making of a fine town. With two flowing wells in town it looks as if they might have water, and that good for drinking too, with little trouble. A sprinkler would help the looks of the place, and keep the dirt out of people's eyes so they could see the town.

There seems to be an unusual number of churches in Buffalo. It will take a tall to eclipse Howard Lake in this respect, and still they seem to be more prosperous than some of the churches in neighboring villages. The improvement society might see what could be done towards reaping the harvest of rushes that are growing in the center of the lake. It seems as if some plan could be devised for cutting them off at the water level at least, or below, and very much improving the appearance of the lake.

Summer school was closing; a few remaining another day for examinations for first grade certificates. Superintendent Zech reports a well attended term.

Among Our Exchanges.

Duluth Herald: The newspapers that are shuddering at the idea of free trade with Canada should remember that we now have free trade with Porto Rico and yet the prosperity of this country has not been injuriously affected.

Le Sueur Sentinel: Our American protectionists, should read and study carefully the new German tariff schedule. The day is past when we can offer Germany a look at our impregnable stone wall, and expect her to permit us to trade with her freely. It has come to what Blaine forsaw would be the result and the nation that expects to trade with another, must offer that nation some inducement. How long our producers will submit to be excluded from the markets of the world by the one sided foolish policy of our ultra protectionists, remains to be seen.

Maple Plain.

We are getting dry again; corn and pastures are needing rain. Farmers are busy stacking grain and will finish up this week should the weather keep fine. Oats and hay will be very good this year but on account of hot weather and the chinch bugs the wheat crop will be short

We have the potato bug, the chinch bug, and we have the gold bug. The two first named are purely vegitarians but the last named will devour everything. He would swallow the earth and the fulness thereof if his corporeal body had capacity enough to contain it. He does not eat our wheat while it is growing, same as the chinch bug but he gambles on it from the time it gets through the ground until the crop is all sold, and the farmer has no controll over the products of his soil; but Mr. Editor, this subject is of too great a magnitude for an open discussion in a country newspaper; but wheat at 60 cents a bushel will not pay for the wear and tear of a man's constitution, The harvest is past; the summer is ended, and the gold bug is still at it.

Maple Plain has on her rural free delivery route a regular free delivery wagon labelled "Maple Plain Rural Free Delivery". We in this part of the country believe in expansion (to a certain extent). We believe in carrying the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth, making the solitary places glad and the desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose.

Little Freddy Barker, while riding his wheel one day last week fractured his right arm between wrist and elbow. Last account he was doing well.

Rev. Kennison, of Monticello, preached at Armstrong A. C. church last Wednesday evening.

The little three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gust Eckwall was drowned in an open well last Friday afternoon. Buried at Lewis cemetery, Armstrong on Sunday. Funeral sermon by Rev. James Martin, of Howard Lake.

Mr. Editor, everybody is busy and my stock of news is low. The bottom has fallen out of politics and news is scarce, but when Congress meets and the Philippine war is ended, then we will have plenty of news, and cattle upon a thousand hills.

Will Fuse In Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Neb. Aug. 7. -At a meeting held this evening by the Democratic, Populist, and Silver Republican state central committees fusion of the three parties was practically agreed upon, the state conventions of all being fixed for Sept. 17, at Lincoln. W. J. Bryan addressed the Democratic and Populist committees and declared himself strongly for fusion.

WHEN FATHER RODE THE GOAT.

The house is full of arnica
And mystery profound;
We do not dare to run about
Or make the slightest sound;
We leave the big piano shut
And do not strike a note;
The doctor's been here seven times
Since father rode the goat.

He joined the lodge a week ago—
Got in at 4 a. m.,
And sixteen brethren brought him home,
Though he says he brought them.
His wrist was sprained, and one big rip
Had rent his Sunday coat—
There must have been a lively time
When father rode the goat.

He's resting on the couch today
And practicing his slang—
The building sign, working grip,
And other monkey shines;
He mutters passwords 'neath his breath,
And other things he'll quote—
They surely had an evening's work
When father rode the goat.

He has a gorgeous uniform,
All gold and red and blue,
A hat with plumes and yellow braid,
And golden badges, too.
But, somehow, when we mention it,
He wears a look so grim,
We wonder if he rode the goat
Or if the goat road him.

A Letter from El Reno.

The following is a letter from El Reno, O. T, to the Pioneer, Ida Grove Iowa, by Miss M. Jo Coffin, who was a former resident of Delano and has many acquaintances here. She went to El Reno to draw a homestead:

EL RENO, O. T., July 23, 1901.

To THE PIONEER FORCE: Will you send me a copy of our great family journal in an envelope to box 112. That is the only possible way to get mail here. I haven't had a thing from the postoffice yet. There are four lines about a block long each taking their turn at the post office window to secure a letter or paper from home. I stood in the line about half an hour the other evening, but the window closed at 6 o'clock before I even got inside of the postoffice door.

There are "millions in it" just at the present time. No one can have any adequate conception of the crowd unless they have seen it. I saw a long train come in yesterday a. m. crowded to suffocation and the tops of the cars just covered with people--hanging on any place or anyhow--just so as to get there. The trains are coming in thicker and faster and all loaded just that very way. Without exaggeration this town of about 5,000 is at present swelled to 50,000. There is a square here reserved for the court house that has tents set up just touching sides, so thick are they. Then down in another part of town there are wagons and tents that contain more people I believe than all of Ida Grove. I didn't know there was so much canvas in existance. It fairly makes you stand dumb with wonderment and just wonder where they all came from.

An epidemic of typhoid fever or disease is inevitable here unless immediate and energetic steps are taken to better the sanitary conditions. Booths stand side by side just at the edge of the sidewalks and of course filth accumulates. Sunday the mayor ordered all booths into the middle of the streets and a little cleaning was done, but they say that they can't get the help and unless they get volunteers something will happen. Water is on the street corners and is comparatively good, I guess.

Big tents are put up and filled with cots which rent for from 25 to 50 cents for sleeping purposes. I saw one tent that held about one hundred cots. Vacant buildings are filled, but still the crowd isn't accomodated, as you see men asleep in front of the stores and laying everyplace. I even saw a woman sit down in front of a store and take a snooze the other morning.

They say there are 500 New York girls coming here. If they do they will probably have to stand up and sleep, that's all. I know of a man who is staying at the Kerfoot hotel that pays $3.50 per day, has his room shared by a cot or two and has to give the dining room boy fifty cents per day for something to eat. There are hundreds of stands, yes thousands, where the mob can get stuff to eat such as it is, and some places just to see them would save you paying table board for a week, anyway. It's a caution! I saw a negro cleaning chickens and frying them on the streets. He did it at about the rate of one a minute. Tell Minnie B. her spring chickens are safe. I never want to see another.

There are about a million different gambling devices here, but everybody is remarking about the good naturedness of the crowd. There are some awful looking men here. I've seen some that would make your hair curl to look at them, but they are peaceable. Hattie and I go out all over town, that is we don't get too far away from home and I'm never afraid. There has only been one man murdered so far as I know of.

The town is full of the "flying lady" "double headed giants," "little horses," etc

The report was last night—Monday—that 126,000 had registered. The crowds from now on until Friday will be something terrible. I expect there will be 175,000 registrations, but I hold my head up and know that not a man among them has one bit better chance than I. It is a mammoth lottery scheme. The person who gets No. 1 is worth at least $50,000 the next minute, and up to No. 1,000 they say it is worth $1,000 to $5,000.

They have a booth here especially for the women to register in. We all registered without any difficulty or long standing You have no idea how exceedingly courteous the officials are to the ladies. They acted like they were getting paid about $50 a head for waiting on us.

Well, just wait until after the drawing comes off and I'm made (or busted) and I'll come home and make it an event to be remembered. But I wouldn't give what I've seen here for a year of my life. Well, again, so long. I think of our great nefarious sheet every day and get lonesome, so please send as I said

MISS M JO COFFIN.

N. B. The slang expression every one is yelling here is, "Well, I guess you'll have to hurry, hurry, hurry."

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

DR. F. E. BISSELL, of Litchfield, is to succeed Dr. O. S. Pine as Surgeon of the Soldier's Home at Minnehaha, on Sept. 1. Another change is L. F. McCusic, Stillwater, to succeed Frank Mead, as adjutant.

JOHN LIND is pictured by some of the city dailies as looking with wistful eyes upon the Republican field of votes. They insinuate at least that he would like to be a Republican. If he wants to he surely has a right to.

HON L. A. ROSING has been mentioned as a possible candidate for Governor at the next election. Mr. Rosing has the qualifications of a first class chief executive officer and we believe he would make as good a run as any man the Democrats could nominate, and would be a good governor when elected.

GOV. Van Sant has tied another stone around his neck. He has re-appointed a Democrat as a member of the grain inspection board, J. K. Stone, of Granite Falls. And how the died-in-the-wool organs are howling themselves hoarse. They don't seem to like the Governor anyway, he can't suit them.

IF labor and capital are to settle the questions between them they should go at it right. Each side should agree upon what is right for itself and what is right for the other side and then get together with those holding opposite views and proceed to agree upon something that will be right for all. So long as employers can't agree and employees can't agree among themselves it is hard to come together.

IT is reported that Judge Edward W. Harney, of Butte, Mont. who has been charged with corruption in the decision of the famous Minnie Healey mine case, has declared that he was offered a bribe of $250,000 if he would decide the case in favor of the Amalgamated Copper Company. Possibly the country will hear more on this subject later. They surely should. If anyone has the gaul to approach a Judge and offer to bribe him the Judge should surely give the name of the criminal to the public and proceed to punish him according to his crime.

SOME of the British reports of captures of horses from the Boers read rather strange. Reports at first were that there was but a handfull of Boers, it would not require long to settle them. Now after years of fighting, numerous battles, reports of thousands killed, wounded and captured, and surrendered, this week General French reports for one week 5,580 horses captured besides the casualties to the Boers. According to reports, that ought to be about a horse for every Boer, to say nothing of what have been captured before and are still in their hands. What can the English want of so many horses? They are still spending millions for American animals. Their war stories don't read straight, along by a good deal.

Sunday Base Ball.

Sunday base ball never was in favor with Christian people, but it has grown to such proportions lately as to threaten the breaking up of religious meetings on Sunday. Last Sunday about 10,000 people from all over the state paid railroad fare to the Lexington grounds in St. Paul to witness a game between the amateur clubs of Waseca and Litchfield. People left their church services to care for themselves while they went to see the fun.

A good clean game of base ball between boys of different villages furnishes fun for most people on week days, but when the games are played on Sunday they depopulate the Sunday Schools and even the churches to a large extent. The audience screams and makes so much noise that people run to see what is up. It is annoying to say the least, to people who have been raised to respect Sunday and the laws of God and of the government under which we live.

We overheard a base ball enthusiast who was returning home last Sunday evening from the Lexington game relate what he saw. He said there was nearly 10,000 tickets to the grounds sold; that four negroes in the Waseca team played most of the game for that club; that Litchfield also had a negro player, and that all the negroes of the twin cities were out to the ball game. This is where the game has got to. We have been told that it is a very healthy game, it develops our boys. But when it comes to spending Sunday journeying about watching hired teams develop their muscles for money while the crowd develops its lungs and vocal organs, and bets on the game, we think it is largely at the expense of the morals of our country. It is a wonder that Gov. Van Sant don't step in and command that the state laws be observed and Sabbath desecration stopped.

The Steel Strike

The newspapers, as a rule, are saying about as little as possible about the steel strike. They report gains on both sides. They claim that a few more men have quit work, and at the same time another mill or two has been started up.

The amalgamated association seems to have the sympathy of all laborers and many others. But it is a hard thing to strike and fail, and many men are slow to strike for that reason.

The issue over which the strike is made, as near as we can learn from newspaper articles is: "Shall laboring men in America have the right to organize unions and extend them, or shall they not."

This is an important question. It strikes at points dear to every American citizen. It at once invites all patriotic people to take sides.

The capitalists all over the country join together and form firms, corporations and trusts and control the price of labor, the price of raw materials and the price of the manufactured product. It don't look right to the average American citizen that this should be so while the laborer and the consumer are denied the privilege of forming unions, of joining together to resist the capitalist when he gets too greedy, when he cuts the laborer's prices, and lengthens his hours of labor, while he pays the minimum prices for raw products and sells the finished articles at the maximum figures.

If the laws of our land are are powerless to stop capitalists from their high handed raids on the people's purse, they are equally as powerless to stop the laborers from forming unions and extending them. If our Constitution grants men who have money more than they know what to do with, the privilege of combining to place upon laborers the yoke of slavery, it also grants to the people who earn their daily bread according to the Scriptural injunction the right to unite for their protection from the galling yoke. Whether he be rich or not; whether he be employer or employee our laws place every man on an equality. If the laborer has no right to combine, certainly the hirer has no right to combine.

President Gompers, of the Federation of Labor, says he has looked into the grievances of the Amalgamated Association, that he finds they are right, and promises the support, morally and financially of the Federation of Labor. He says: "The Amalgamated Association will not be crushed, she will not be conquered; she must not even be defeated."

Bishop Ireland speaking on the question, though councilling peace and deploring strikes, is quoted as saying: "Whatever the interests at stake, that of the personal freedom of the individual outranks them all, and this must be sustained even if those are to be sacrificed. Neither state nor fellow citizen may interfere with my personal liberty. This is the very core of Americanism. This is the teaching, positive and clear, of natural and of Christian ethics."

In this country people are supposed to be free and not bound. They are supposed to decide for themselves who they will work for, what they will work at, and when they want to and can find a better job they have the privilege of doing so. At the same time if a man or a company of men hire men to work for them they have the privilege of hiring who they please, keeping them as long as they can agree, and turning them off whenever they please.

Let us have "Equal rights for all men and special privileges for none."

Late Literary News.

The sale of thousands of copies of a ten cent magazine at one dollar apiece was a very curious happening at the time of the Chicago World's Fair. The Cosmopolitan prepared a World's Fair number, contributed to by many famous writers, and so thoroughly illustrated that it surpassed even the most expensive book which had up to that time been issued. In those days the magazine was printed from two sets of plates only, and when these were worn out it was impossible, without a great loss of time, to put further editions on the press. The newsdealers, taking advantage of this condition, raised the price of The Cosmopolitan's World's Fair number to one dollar a copy. A few sales were even made toward the close at the phenomenal figure of five dollars. Undoubtedly this happening is unique in the history of magazine literature. The Cosmopolitan will endeavor to repeat its past success, with a Pan-American Exposition Number, which will be even more attractive, if possible, than its World's Fair predecessor.

The most famous writers of the country have been invited to take part in the preparation of this issue. After many days' careful study of all the wonderful scenes of the Exposition, more than a hundred photographs have been prepared, which, taken as a whole, give a thorough conception of the marvels of this Exposition.

It is doubtful if any book, selling at forty times the price of the magazine, will give any description of the Fair which will approach in interest and artistic value the September Cosmopolitan.

Those who visit the Fair will preserve this number as a delightful reference book in the years to come, and those who are unable to go there will secure such a comprehensive view of its main attractions as will be well worthy of preservation.

THE STATE FAIR

MINNESOTA'S EXPOSITION THIS YEAR WILL ECLIPSE ALL PREVIOUS DISPLAYS.

Many Evidences of Growth Apparent in New Buildings and Other Improvements—September 2 to 7, Inclusive, the Dates for the Big Event.

Most characteristic of all the advance news about the Minnesota State Fair are those items which go to show the wonderful growth of the institution. The Minnesota fair has, in fact, outgrown its position as a "state" fair. It is now a Northwestern exposition and a national live stock exhibit. In this character it is not surprising that it needs more room in every department and that the reports of managers' meetings are filled with the endeavors of the officials to find space for the would-be exhibitors and to provide accommodations for the great crowds which will undoubtedly be present.

Last year's fair was a "record-breaker" in every department; this year's fair promises to so far eclipse that of 1900 as to make it seem a trifling occasion. The management has secured attractions of the highest character and as part of the exhibits will have such a display of live stock as to fairly set in the shade the grand live stock exhibit made in Chicago last winter.

Roosevelt to Be There.

The fair managers made their first hit by inviting Vice President Theodore Roosevelt to open the fair. The invitation went first, informally, through Thomas H. Shevlin of Minneapolis, vice president of the fair, and after the formal invitation of the board, Mr. Roosevelt accepted in an autograph letter. He is to address the crowd from the grand stand on Monday morning, Sept. 2, at 11 o'clock, formally opening the fair, and he will later hold an informal reception and be the guest of the officers of the fair and various notables at luncheon. In the afternoon he will review the exhibits.

A National Live Stock Exhibit.

National exhibitions by the American Shorthorn Breeders' association and the American Hereford Breeders' association in addition to the usual large exhibit of cattle of all breeds will draw to the Minnesota State Fair of 1901 a collection of live stock which will form the largest exhibit of its class ever made, even eclipsing the Chicago exhibit of last year. It will be the event of the year for farmers, breeders and all people interested in the diversification of Western farm industries.

The fair management has joined with the breeders' association in offering increased premiums in both these classes of live stock and the premiums have been enlarged in other departments wherever possible.

Auction Sales of Blooded Cattle.

On certain days of the fair there will be auctions without reserve of many head of fine Shorthorns and Herefords. This will give farmers and breeders an excellent opportunity to improve their herds.

Making Room for the Show.

Every department of the fair is feeling the influence of the live stock exhibitions and the other great drawing cards which the managers have arranged. To accommodate a very persistent demand for space for exhibiting a process of expansion is going on this summer on the grounds.

Most conspicuous among the new buildings is the Agricultural Hall, which was erected with an appropriation of $25,000 made by the state legislature last winter. This building is 260x240 feet in size and of very fine architectural appearance. It is designed by C. R. Aldrich, the architect of many of the university and college of agriculture buildings. It is now the most prominent building on the grounds and the one which will be naturally entered first by visitors. It will contain the exhibits of the horticultural and agricultural departments.

Other Evidences of Growth.

The old Horticultural building will be used this year to accommodate the carriage department and the old carriage building will be given up to farm implement exhibitors. Several new buildings will be erected by farm machinery manufacturers and some may have to be housed in tents. Another temporary stock barn has been built to take care of the overflow caused by the presence of the big national cattle shows. The grand stand is enlarged by the addition of 2,000 bleacher seats. A new toilet building of generous dimensions and modern accommodations will be an appreciated feature. Several of the concessionaries will have attractive new buildings and the Minneapolis Journal will erect a substantial and handsome structure. The government of the United States will establish a postoffice on the grounds and for its use the fair will supply a building of suitable size.

Prizes and Premiums.

Early in the season the fair officers revised the premium list, making extensive additions and increasing the amounts in many cases. These liberal offers have been supplemented in many instances by offers from individuals or firms interested in the success of the fair. In the cattle department, especially in Shorthorns, Herefords and Aberdeen-Angus cattle, the combined offers of the fairs and the breeders' associations make the premiums worth the utmost endeavors of the exhibitors.

In all some $40,000 in prizes and premiums are offered by the fair management.

The Amusement Side of the Fair.

People go to the state fair to be amused as well as to study. One of the chief means of amusement at a fair is found in the race track. At the Minnesota fair the races are under the best conditions—they are simply trials of speed without any objectionable features. As the purses are large and the reputation of the fair the best, the list of entries is found to excel last year's fine line of horses.

It should be remembered that there are fast races on every day of the fair—Monday and Saturday included—and that none of the races is for less than $1,000, while the big trot on Minneapolis day and the pace on St. Paul day are each for $5,000.

Pool selling is prohibited at the fair grounds. The races are clean; and the track is one of the fastest in the country.

Evening Entertainments.

Besides the races there are specialty entertainments in front of the grand stand every afternoon of fair week. These specialties, with variations, will be shown each evening under electric light. So it will be possible for a visitor to enter the grounds early in the forenoon and stay till the evening performance is over. The evening amusements will include racing by electric light, hurdle races, chariot races, standing races, women's races, monkey races, riderless horse races, exhibitions on the rolling sphere by the famous equilibrist, Lional Legare, aerial exhibitions by the renowned Pickett family—and lastly, a magnificent spectacular pyrotechnic drama, put on by the famed fireworks makers, the Pains, of Chicago.

State Fish Exhibit.

With the co-operation of the state game and fish commission and the fair management, an exhibit of the fish of Minnesota will be made. Every known variety of native fish will be shown in capacious tanks. Not only will the full grown specimens be displayed, but the fry and the yearlings will be shown so that visitors may study the development of the fish.

Attractions Galore.

The foregoing are but a few of the attractions of the fair. The exhibits in the main exposition building are to be greatly improved in character this year. The dairy building was overflowing—all space assigned—before Aug. 1. The poultry department will have a larger and better display than ever. The woman's building is one of the most attractive on the grounds. Liberal premiums are offered, and the best specimens of textile and fine art work will be on exhibition. The state federation of woman's clubs will maintain headquarters upon the grounds during the fair. The rooms will be kept open for use of women, whether members or not, and all are cordially invited to make the place headquarters while visiting the state fair. Special exercises will be held daily during the week, at which topics of general interest will be considered.

It is believed that the farm implement and machinery exhibit will be the largest and most complete ever seen at any state fair.

Best in the Union.

"But few human undertakings better deserve the title 'ideal' than has this great agricultural exposition during late years," says "Farm, Stock and Home." "It is acknowledged to be 'the best in the union,' which is equivalent to saying that it has no superior any where, and to be superior comes most pleasingly near being 'ideal.' The high character of this exposition is yet unknown to too many citizens of Minnesota and sister states, and this is written that many more may know it; and when they realize what it is they will surely let no ordinary barrier keep them from seeing with their own eyes and understanding with their own judgment what a state fair par excellence looks like and is."

Canada Eclipsed Too.

Not only does the Minnesota fair lead in the states, but it has gone ahead of the great Canadian fair, which has always been held up as a model of what a fair should be. Up to 1900 the great Canadian fair at Toronto was the largest fair in America. Last year the Canucks were rather surprised to find that the Minnesota fair had exceeded their largest gate receipts and was putting up a better exhibition in many ways.

Visitors Well Cared For.

Minneapolis and St. Paul are cities full of people adept in entertaining. They will look well to the interests of the people who visit the state fair during the first week in September. At the fair grounds the managers are ever alert to see that people are taken care of. Many conveniences are being added this year for the comfort of visitors—telephones, postoffice, drinking fountains, park benches on the grounds, etc. The grounds are well policed and sanitation is carefully looked after.

Exhibitors have the best of treatment. The Minnesota fair is noted for paying its premiums promptly. The judges are men of the highest standing. Every thing is done "decently and in order."

Half-Fare Rates on the Railroads.

Every railroad running into Minneapolis has joined in making a rate of one fare for the round trip for the week of Sept. 2-7. These rates apply from all points within 200 miles of the Twin Cities, but are extended to 300 west, so as to include almost all of North and South Dakota.

Lightning Saves Life.

LARNED, Kan., Aug. 13.—The five year old daughter of Samuel McPrease of Hanston, twenty miles from Larned, apparently died Sunday morning. Funeral services were held yesterday. On the way to the graveyard a bolt of lightning struck the metallic coffin and opened it, whereon the child sat up and called for her mother. The horses were knocked down, but no other damage was done. The little girl is in a fair way to recovery. It is believed she was in a cataleptic state, from which the lightning shock aroused her.—Globe.

The Maine is the eleventh of the new first-class battleships in the American navy. Her sister, the Missouri, is nearly ready, and five more are under construction. These 17 huge ships will be first-class peace persuaders.

"Droughts follow the destruction of forests," says the St. Paul Pioneer Press, "as naturally as retribution follows sin." The lesson will be learned in the hard school of experience, if no better method is embraced.

The recent land drawing in Oklahoma will add about 10,000 160-acre farms to the 75,000 or more homestead entries which already constitute that flourishing territory. It is suggested that when admitted to the union it shall be known as the "Homestead state."

When Andre sailed away toward the Arctic, in July of 1898, he fixed three years as the time limit in which he would return. That time limit has expired, and no news has been heard from him since the day he left. His death will ever be one of the many secrets of the frozen north.

A Mr. Lonegrove, of New Egypt, N. J., has invented a squirtgun for military use that will throw a burning liquid ten miles with absolute accuracy and murderous effect. The Chinese government is negotiating for it, and may be expected to stiffen up on the indemnity question in the near future.

There is now a doctor to every 600 people in the United States and the Journal of the American Medical Association is of the opinion that there is a surplus. The medical colleges are turning out 6,000 graduates a year, and as their requirements are growing less and less the number is bound to increase.

The chief of police of Pittsfield, Mass., now confesses that he "never really expected" to fasten the crime of murder on Robert Fosburgh, but kept him under torture for a year "for the purpose of showing that Pittsfield was not the home of burglars." And the law gives the victim no redress for such cruelty.

Locomotive Engineer Hinman, of the Lehigh railway, stuck to his post in spite of a broken arm that he might get his train in "on time." He exhibited the quality of courage that has made this nation what it is—the courage that does its duty regardless of circumstances or personal suffering. And so long as that sort of courage abounds in the average American citizen the republic will endure.

A new paper has been started in Berlin called "Columbia." Its editor is a German-American who was formerly connected with the Staats-Zeitung of Chicago, and the avowed object of the paper is to bring about a better commercial understanding between the two countries. The undertaking seems to be commendable, and the name of the paper is sufficient evidence of its friendliness for the United States.

The federal court in Brooklyn, N. Y., has notified all applicants for naturalization that they must be prepared to answer intelligently a long list of questions relating to the government of the United States, such as the election of president, representatives to congress, senators, etc., which would puzzle many native-born citizens. It is an encouraging indication that both federal and state judges in New York are no longer making citizens by the score without asking a question.

George Kennan, the famous American author and lecturer who recently had the bravery to once more face the Russian bear and go to St. Petersburg only to be met with a demand that he leave the country inside of 24 hours, never to return, first came into prominence in 1885, when he wrote a series of magazine articles descriptive of two years spent in Siberia that startled the world. Christendom knew of the horrors of Siberia before, but never thoroughly appreciated how terrible they were until Kennan spoke. It is no wonder that Russia exiles him.

Gen. Wood, who arrived home from Cuba on a visit, says that the island is practically undeveloped and that it has a wonderful future before it. In another year yellow fever will cease to be epidemic there, and the 3,600 schools established there by the Americans will begin to make a showing. Two years ago the Americans established 100 orphan asylums for the care of destitute children, but 60 of them have now been closed, and Gen. Wood says the remainder will be before the United States retires from the management of Cuban affairs.

The latest mail advices concerning the famine in the province of Shansi, China, reveal a most fearful condition of affairs. To many persons this will seem like a punishment visited upon the Chinese for their treacherous attacks upon the foreigners a year ago, but the worst of it is that the sufferers from the famine are mainly the innocent. The men who were primarily responsible for the antiforeign uprising have not only escaped the severe punishment visited upon some of the dupes, but they are at present living in luxury while the poor are starving.

NO SYMPATHETIC STRIKE.

Steel Mill Employes in West Refuse to Go Out—The General Situation.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers employed in the western mills of the United States Steel corporation have refused to obey the sympathetic strike order. All of the men employed by the Federal Steel company, one of the three branches of the trust which President Shaffer attempted to tie up, will remain at work. At South Chicago, Milwaukee and Joliet the steel workers voted Sunday to disobey the strike order.

Pittsburg, Aug. 12.—The managers of the big steel mills are claiming victory, and declare that within 48 hours the backbone of the strike will be broken. The refusal of the men at South Chicago, Joliet and Bay View to obey the order of President Shaffer has given the managers great satisfaction and has correspondingly disappointed the strike leaders. Not only have the western men refused to strike, but operations have been maintained in several other mills.

According to a conservative estimate it is believed that the refusal of the steel workers at Chicago, Joliet and Milwaukee to obey President Shaffer's general strike order will reduce the number of new strikers to about 8,000.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 13.—The struggle for mastery between manufacturers and men in the steel industry is now fairly launched, and on the first show of strength advantage is with the former. The general strike order issued by President Shaffer, of the Amalgamated association, has so far been obeyed by only about 14,000 men, according to the best figures obtainable here. The first two preliminary calls were answered by about 45,000 men, so that the total number now outside is in the neighborhood of 60,000.

Washington, Aug. 13. — President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, said Monday night that his organization would use every peaceable means in its power to assist the Amalgamated association in its strike. Personally, he hoped that an amicable adjustment of the trouble might be arranged, and expressed his willingness to cooperate in any effort to bring about a settlement of the conflict.

THREE DROWNED.

A Yacht, Her Owner and His Guests Are Lost in the Galoup Rapids.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Charles White, James Whitney and Edgar Lane were drowned in the Galoup rapids Monday afternoon by the sinking of the private yacht Rhea. Whitney, who was the owner of the yacht, had as guests on board the boat Lane and White, Hugh Raney, the Misses Whitney and the Misses McPherson. The four ladies and Mr. Raney got out at the head of the lock to walk to the foot of the rapids. The other three men remained on board the yacht which, after passing the first swell of the rapids, entered what is known as "the cellar" and disappeared, carrying the three men down with her. All of the parties resided at Prescott.

EVANS REPRIMANDED.

The Rear Admiral Disciplined for Criticism of Former Secretary of Navy Chandler.

Washington, Aug. 12.—The navy department has reprimanded Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, acting upon the complaint made by former Secretary of the Navy Chandler, for criticisms of the latter in Admiral Evans' book, "A Sailor's Log." The letter of reprimand was sent to the rear admiral Friday. It refers to his act as reprehensible and censures Admiral Evans for "this breach of the obligation imposed upon you as an officer of the navy of the United States."

Senator Chandler has been furnished a copy of the reprimand.

SUES FOR DIVORCE.

David Nation, Husband of Mrs. Carrie Nation of Kansas Fame, Seeks Legal Separation.

Medicine Lodge, an., Aug. 10.—David Nation, through his attorney, Friday brought suit for a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Carrie Nation, the temperance crusader. Mr. Nation, who is now visiting in Iberia, O., alleges that his wife held him up to public ridicule, neglected her family duties and abandoned his home.

Gomez Declines.

Havana, Aug. 13.—Gen. Maximo Gomez has addressed a letter to the local committee of the national party in Havana who had chosen him as a candidate for the presidency of Cuba and Senor Estrada Palma as a candidate for the vice presidency. He declines to be a candidate, but indorses the candidacy of Palma and Maso as the best selections that could be made for the presidency and vice presidency. It is said Senor Maso declines to accept the vice presidency, relying upon the negro vote to elect him president.

Alfalfa Crop Good.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 13.—Reports received here from 23 points in the territory all state the largest alfalfa crop ever known is now being gathered. The crop is the second one of the year and will be of extraordinary value at this time when the hay crops of the central western states are burned out.

Government Defeated.

London, Aug. 13.—The government was defeated in the house of commons Monday night in the course of the debate on the factory bill. The house supported by 163 to 141 a proposal, opposed by the government, that textile factories should close at noon, instead of one o'clock p. m., as now.

Three Girls Drown.

CRISPI IS DEAD.

The Famous Italian Statesman Succumbs to his Recent Attack.

Naples, Aug. 12.—Signor Crispi died at 7:45 p. m. Sunday. He was surrounded by the members of his family and several intimate friends. The news was immediately telegraphed to King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helen. The body will be conveyed by steamer to Palermo, where the municipality will arrange for a great public funeral. It is rumored that Signor Crispi's will authorizes a prominent Italian politician to examine his papers and to publish his memoirs.

SIGNOR CRISPI.

WINS RACE WITH DEATH.

Sinking Steamer with 250 Passengers, Goes Down After Safely Landing All.

Boston, Aug. 13.—A race with death that was all but lost kept 250 passengers, mostly women and children, on board the Plant line steamer Halifax, in a state bordering on panic for nearly an hour Monday. The steamer, which was coming in from Halifax with returning tourists, struck a rock off Minot's light near the entrance to Boston harbor and stove a great hole in her bottom. With the water rushing into her hold at a terrific rate and her passengers momentarily expecting to be cast into the sea, she steamed with all possible speed for the nearest land. Just as the vesel reached the beach, after a run of 53 minutes, her bow went down and under. Had she then been in deep water many lives must have been lost. Capt. Pye and his officers and crew showed the utmost coolness, and to them is due the fact that a panic did not occur, as the alarm of all the passengers was intense.

IN ASHES.

Best Part of City of Rantoul, Ill., Burned—The Loss Will Exceed $400,000.

Champaign, Ill., Aug. 10.—The entire business portion of Rantoul was destroyed by fire Friday afternoon. The Martin house is the only building in the business section that escaped the flames. The fire originated in the grain elevator, and soon spread to adjacent buildings. A steamer was telegraphed for from this city, and in 45 minutes it was operating against fire. Five blocks were burned out, many of the buildings destroyed having been erected since the fire two years ago. Thirty-six firms were burned out. Among the buildings destroyed were the post office, depot, Masonic temple. New hotel and opera house. Both newspaper offices were burned. While much of the contents of the stores was saved, the loss will exceed $400,000. The insurance will fall far short of that.

AGREED TO AT LAST.

Draft of Final Protocol Meets the Approval of All of the Ministers at Peking.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The state department has received a cablegram from Mr. Rockhill, at Peking, reporting that the draft of the final protocol has been agreed upon. A tariff of five per cent. ad valorem, effective, will be put in force two months after the signing of the final protocol excepting on goods shipped within ten days after signing and will continue until the conversion to specific rates has been effected by the expert commission. The Chinese free list will include rice, foreign cereals and flour, gold and silver bullion and coin. This inclusion of flour in the free list is of much importance particularly to Pacific coast shippers.

Gold Bullion Recovered.

San Francisco, Aug. 12.—The gold bars, amounting to $280,000, stolen from the strong room of the Selby smelting works during Monday night last, have been located and most of it taken from its hiding place. The detectives worked on the suspect Jack Winters all Friday afternoon and the greater part of the night with the result that he confessed his crime and at an early hour Saturday morning took the detectives to the spot where he hid the gold. The spot chosen by him was a poor one for the secreting of so much treasure, it being at the end of the railroad wharf, but a short distance from the company's plant, and but a few feet of water covered its hiding place.

Negro Burned at the Stake.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 12.—The negro assailant of Mrs. J. J. Clark was captured at Liberty City Friday by R. L. Young, a section master of the Seaboard air line. Friday night he was taks to Ways Station and identified by Mrs. Clark positively. While being removed from Ways to Bryan county jail the prisoner was taken away from his captors by a mob and burned at the stake.

Wages Cut.

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 13.—The Manufacturers' association voted to reduce the price of weaving from 19.8 to 17 cents per cut, which is practically a cut down in wages of 14 per cent. The vote taken on the matter was unanimous. The cut goes into effect September 3.

One Hundred Lives Lost.

London, Aug. 12.—According to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from St. Petersburg, in the recent conflagration at Witebsk 1,000 houses were destroyed and 100 lives lost. The prison there was burned and many prisoners perished.

WARNING TO BOERS.

Proclamation by Lord Kitchener Says They Must Lay Down Their Arms by September 15.

London, Aug. 10.—A parliamentary paper has been issued containing the proclamation issued by Lord Kitchener August 7, in accordance with instructions from the imperial government, the governments of Cape Colony and Natal concurring. The proclamation says:

"All commandants, field cornets and leaders of armed bands, being burghers of the late republics and still engaged in resisting his majesty's forces, whether in the Orange Colony, the Transvaal or other portions of his majesty's South African dominions, and all members of the late governments of the Orange Free State and Transvaal shall, unless they surrender before September 15, be permanently banished from South Africa. The cost of the maintenance of the families of all burghers in the field who have not surrendered by September 15 shall be recoverable from such burghers and shall be a charge upon their property, removable and immovable, in the two colonies."

The afternoon newspapers comment approvingly upon the proclamation of Lord Kitchener. Even the Westminster Gazette says there is no fault to find with it, nor is there any objection to make on the score of justice. It thinks, however, that it is extremely doubtful if it will have any effect in shortening the war. Most of the fighting Boers are already completely ruined and nothing distrains them, owing to the devastation of the country.

London, Aug. 9.—Lord Kitchener, in a dispatch from Pretoria, Thursday, announces that a post of 25 men, belonging to Steinacker's horse, on the Sabi river, has been surprised and captured by the Boers.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

According to Bradstreet's Commercial Agency the Situation Is Generally Hopeful.

New York, Aug. 10.—Bradstreet's says: "Despite some irregularity, due to the recurrence of corn damage reports from the eastern surplus-producing states and the formal launching of the much heralded general steel workers' strike, the aggregate business the country over seems to be of a good, and in most sections unprecedented, volume for this season of the year. Changes where noted for the week have been rather of tone than of actual demand, and it is in this matter of tone or sentiment that the favorable developments have arisen. All available measures of supply, demand and movement point to the business done in July having exceeded anything transacted in any similar midsummer month. This, too, despite the exceptionally hot weather, drought, strike talk and similar conditions unfavorable to business extension. Cereal prices have been rather irregular, but the main tendency has been upward, partly because of renewed crop damage reports as to corn "frosts" having already begun to be sighted by nervous crop estimators. The main strength of wheat, however, lies in the continued heavy export business. The clearances this week were enormous and far in excess of any previous week on record, and the rather smaller volume of receipts of winter wheat. Hog products weakened early in the week in sympathy with the corn market, but steadied later without, however, regaining the early loss. The world's statistical position of lard is a very strong one. New features are scarce in the iron and steel trade. The strike is still the great central feature, around which revolve high premium prices for plates, bars and sheets and tinned plates. Black sheets will be imported and tinned here. Structural material, not affected as yet by the strike, is in very heavy demand, and producers are being hard pressed to meet orders."

"Failures for the week were 173 in the United States, against 177 last year, and 31 in Canada, against 23 last year."

LESS WOMEN THAN MEN.

Michigan Shown to Have 76,828 More Males Than Females by the Government Census.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The census bureau Friday issued a bulletin on the sex, general nativity and color of the population of Michigan, Minnesota and Mississippi. They show for Michigan, 1,248,905 males and 1,172,077 females; 1,879,329 native born people and 541,613 foreign born; 2,398,563 white, of whom 1,858,367 are native born. Minnesota has 932,490 males and 818,904 females; 1,246,076 native born and 505,318 foreign born; total white, 1,737,036, including 1,232,101 native born. Mississippi statistics show 781,451 males and 769,819 females; 1,543,289 native born and 7,981 foreign born; total white, 642,900, including 635,275 native white. In Mississippi almost 59 per cent. of the population are colored, while in the other states the colored element represents less than one per cent.

A FIVE HOURS' FIGHT.

Americans Repulse Large Force of Filipino Insurgents—Two of Our Men Killed.

Manila, Aug. 9.—Capt. Brown, of the First United States cavalry, with troops L and M, of that regiment, and a company of the Twenty-first infantry, had a five hours' fight in Batangas province Wednesday with an insurgent force commanded by Malvar. Two cavalrymen were killed. The insurgents escaped. The insurgents were in considerable force, and allowed the advance guard to pass. Before attacking, Capt. Brown ordered the cavalry to dismount. The troop drove the enemy from several positions and burned a number of quarters. The report says the enemy is believed to have lost several men, but no dead were found.

Seven Lives Lost.

Queenstown, Aug. 9.—The White Star line steamer Oceanic, Capt. Cameron, which sailed from Liverpool Wednesday for New York, via Queenstown, arrived here Thursday morning and reported having been in collision Wednesday night, in the Irish channel, with the steamer Kincora, of Waterford, Ireland. The Kincora sank. Seven persons were drowned.

Says Bribe Was Offered.

Rock Island, Ill., Aug. 12.—Judge Harney, of Montana, when seen here Monday, was asked for an explanation of the stories regarding his recent actions, especially in the famous Minnie Healy mine case. He says he was threatened that he would be ruined if he did not grant a new trial in the case. He was offered a bribe of a quarter of a million dollars for his decision.

Condition of Corn Serious.

Washington, Aug. 10. — Secretary Wilson, who heretofore had held that reports of drought damage were exaggerated, reports, after a personal investigation in western states, that the condition of corn is serious.

Still More Counterfeiting.

The Secret Service has unearthed another band of counterfeiters and secured a large quantity of bogus bills, which are so cleverly executed that the average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected for imitation, notably Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators but no equals for disorders like indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and general debility. Always go to reliable druggists who have the reputation of giving what you ask for.

He Couldn't.

"Oh, Mr. Spooneigh, pray rise. It is not right that you should kneel at my feet. Rise, I beg of you!" implored the fair lady.

But he didn't rise. His Irish did, though, and he replied, solemnly:

"I'm afraid—er—Miss Grace—I'm afraid I'm kneeling on your—er—that is, you dropped your chewing gum, and, oh, Miss Grace, I'm stuck on you!"—Denver Times.

WHAT CAUSES DANDRUFF.

Greatest European Authority on Skin Diseases, Says It's a Germ.

The old idea was that dandruff is scales of skin thrown off, through a feverish condition of the scalp. Prof. Unna, Hamburg, Germany, European authority on skin diseases, says dandruff is a germ disease. The germ burrows under the scalp, throwing up little scales of cuticle, and sapping the vitality of the hair at the root. The only hair preparation that kills dandruff germs is Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Not only cures dandruff, but stops falling hair and causes a luxuriant growth. Delightful hair dressing.

Summary Retribution.

"Behead the brass band!" shouted the Chinese emperor.

The court favorite looked questioningly at the empress dowager.

"Certainly," said she. "If it will amuse him, behead the entire band."

"But what reason shall I give?"

"Simply call attention to its lack of delicacy. As we were entering the Forbidden City it played: 'The Old Home Ain't What It Used to Be.'"—Washington Star.

COMFORT FOR CHICKS.

Coop and Run Which Enables Them to Get Plenty of Exercise and Fresh Food.

I have a coop and covered run which is used both for the setting hens and for the hens with chicks. The coops are about four feet square, and are made very much like portable hen houses, only smaller. They are made so tight that nothing can get in them to disturb the chicks when they are closed. With each coop I have a covered run made by taking some boards about 12 feet long and 12 inches wide and nailing them together in the form of a box 12 by 4 feet, without top or bottom. A piece of wire netting is nailed over the top, and the covered run is completed, except some openings in the sides through which to put feed and water, and to make a passage from the run to the coop. A small slide door is made on one side of the coop, and the run is placed so the opening in the side comes opposite this door. At night the chicks can be shut in the coop by closing the slide door, and this makes it easy to move them to fresh ground frequently. When the chicks are thus inclosed they are safe from all animals or whatever could harm them. Last year I had a brood of 30, all brooded by one hen, in such a coop and run, and did not lose one of them, while formerly I always lost some of them by the hawks, rats, cats or other animals. I was not bothered with chicks running over the lawn or garden.

COOP AND RUN FOR CHICKS.

The same coop and run were used for setting hens. I used small portable boxes for nests, and when I have a setting hen I move her at night to one of these coops and set her on some old eggs, and when I get three or four hens in a coop setting on old eggs I am ready to put my good eggs under them and at the same time fill the incubator with eggs. They all hatch about the same time, and all the chicks are given to the hens, as one hen can brood from 25 to 30 chicks, if the weather is not too cold. When you set a hen in such a coop, with run attached, she can go out in the run and get her food and water and dust herself. She cannot get away, and there is but little danger of her leaving her eggs. For making the coops I buy large boxes at the stores, and the cost of a coop and run has only been about two dollars when they were made by a carpenter. The wire netting will not cost over 50 cents, and if one does the carpenter work the expense will be small. I would especially recommend this plan of raising chickens to people living in villages.—W. H. Jenkins, in N. Y. Tribune.

THE AMERICAN BREEDS.

Many Promising Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes Are Positively Spoiled by Overweight.

Farm-Poultry, an influential Boston publication, has of late been inviting opinions concerning the proper weight of the American breeds of chickens, among which are the Plymouth Rocks and the Wyandottes. We should say that fully two-thirds of the breeders who have expressed themselves on the subject take the position that the standard weight is too high. It is claimed that the medium-sized birds of these families are almost invariably better layers than those which meet the demands of the standard in regard to weight. One well-known poultry judge, in his contribution to the discussion, says that not more than one Plymouth Rock in 12 which pass through his hands at the shows is up to standard weight. If the men who patronize the shows meet with difficulty in getting their birds up to standard weight, how much more of a task it must be for farmers who, as a rule, can give but a fraction of their time to the study of the problems of the poultry yard? And if this heavy weight is obtained at the sacrifice of the laying qualities why not cut it down? Some advertisers take great pains to have it known that their birds are fully up to standard weight. Farmers should know that they can easily pay more money for that kind of Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes than they are worth.

Some Housework Figures.

A Vermont man, with a fondness for figures, has produced the following: "We have often heard of women dishwashing their lives away, but did anyone ever think of the number of times, reduced to actual figures, the table has been spread, cleared of dishes washed and put away during 30 years? A black walnut dining table has been in use in my family for 30 years. In that period this table has been spread 32,850 times, and as many times cleared and the dishes washed. My family averaged five during that time, making 164,250 meals eaten from that table. At the low price of 15 cents per meal these would amount to $24,637.50. These figures are small compared with 60 years of continuous service which sometimes happens, but they show how women cheerfully do their duties from the cradle to the grave."

A Disinfectant Whitewash.

To make a disinfectant whitewash that will thoroughly purify your hen coops and kill every mite proceed as follows: Mix one pound blue vitriol, one pound copperas with ten gallons of water (according to Farmer), boil and let cool; add one pint sulphuric acid, and then add six gallons more of water. Be careful of explosion and of getting the mixture on your hands or clothing. It is a seething caldron. I want to say this mixture will clean up everything in sight, for it is a thorough disinfectant.—R. H. Callaghan, in Ohio Farmer.

RHEUMATISM IN PIGS.

How to Combat This Dangerous Disease Which Is Common Among Young Animals.

This is a very common disease among pigs, especially young ones. It is impossible to say what causes rheumatism in the pig, as it is found under all conditions, where the pigs are well kept, or where they are not. Symptoms: There is lameness in one or more legs, which is more or less noticeable according to the severity of the case. The joints often swell at the fetlocks. When the muscles are affected it may assume the form of inflammatory rheumatism and will cause an elevation of temperature and sickness. In such case the animal will be very stiff and refuse its food, its breathing will be fast and short, and its snout dry, and if the animal is made to move, it may squeal with pain. When the legs are the parts affected, it may shift rfom one leg to the other, but if the joints swell it will likely remain stationary until relieved. Treatment: Keep the animal in a comfortable place, and if it is in good flesh give it a dose of Epsom salts, one to two ounces, or two to three drops of Croton oil in a spoonful of sweet oil, or it may be dropped in the mouth. Croton oil seems to be a useful medicine in rheumatism. Follow this by giving ten to fifteen drops of oil of gaultheria to the adult pig three times a day in a little sweet oil. For pigs two to three months old give half this quantity. I have given iodide and the bicarbonate of potassium in ten-grain doses two or three times a day in a little water with good results; but I have excellent results by giving the oil of gaultheria. Rub the sore, swollen joints with equal parts of oil of turpentine and sweet oil. In cases of inflammatory rheumatism, after giving the physic, give from three to five drops of the tincture of aconite every two hours for the first two days, then give the oil of gaultheria as directed. Young and old pigs are liable to sprains of the ligament at the top of the hoof and fetlock joint, which may be mistaken for rheumatism, as the symptoms resemble it; but as the treatment for rheumatism of the joints will answer the purpose for sprains, it will make no difference if a mistake is made.—Dr. McIntosh, V. S., in Swineherd.

FEEDING THE PIGS.

An Arrangement That Will Be Found of Much Value and an Aid to Cleanliness.

Pigs, being voracious animals, are hogs in every sense of the term, and while it may be a pleasure to administer to their wants when they are small, the feeding of them upon their having attained a good growth is not always so agreeable. Especially is this true if the animals cannot be kept out of the troughs until they are filled.

Hence it is that the arrangement presented in the picture will be found of much value and great convenience. Before pouring in the swill the front end of the pen, in the form of a swinging door suspended from the top, is placed in the position indicated on the right. The trough is then filled and the door allowed to assume its former position, as shown at the left. King Porker thus can easily be held in check until his table is set, and neither he nor his owner be caused any harm thereby.—Frederick O. Sibley, in N. Y. Tribune.

Goats to Protect Sheep.

The old idea that the goats are all bad and the sheep all good will have to be modified, if the goat proves himself as useful as a southern farmer says he is. After trying in vain to protect his sheep against sheep-killing curs by shooting an occasional cur that presented a good mark, Mr. J. A. Morris, of Atlanta, bought some Angora goats. He found that these animals, while friendly with sheep, fought the stray dogs to a finish. Not only so, but their pugilistic spirit spread to the rams, which had formerly been afraid of the dogs, and so the flock was doubly protected. If this faculty of the Angora goat is general it will be worth many thousands of dollars to the farmers of the southwest, who have in many cases abandoned sheep raising because of the depredations of the worthless, wandering cur. — Rural World.

Cottonseed Meal for Pigs.

We fed cotton seed meal to one lot of hogs that had not done well in another experiment, and they were ready for market, well finished, in 22 days. Cotton seed meal fed in large quantities or for long periods is death to hogs. Fed for a short time in small quantities, it is valuable to put hogs in good condition that are not doing well. We begin by feeding one-fourth pound of cotton seed a day per 1,000 pounds live weight of hogs, and increase each day to ten days, when we feed per day three pounds per 1,000 pounds live weight of hogs, mixing the meal with the other grain. This quantity of cotton seed can be profitably fed three to four weeks.—Kansas Experiment Station Bulletin.

Care in Dressing Poultry.

Poorly dressed poultry is not wanted on the markets of any city. It will, indeed, sell—always sell, but it brings no profit. There are in the cities two classes of buyers—the buyers of first-class goods and the buyers of the poor and cheap. The latter class is the one that takes the poorly dressed poultry. Most of the buyers of this poor stock make a business of it. They stand around waiting till the commission men are anxious to get rid of the poor stuff left and then buy. The result is they always get concessions. Our readers can see that the profits on this kind of business are small. Such birds should be eaten at home or disposed of locally.—Farmers' Review.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Hessian Fly.

Professor E. B. Forbes, acting state entomologist, is about to issue a bulletin on the Hessian fly, which he considers is the next pest that Minnesota farmers will have to fight. The fly caused some damage to the crops in 1895 and 1899, but the operations were small compared with what they are likely to be unless the farmers take measures to head it off. Reports of damage from over the state are meager, owing to the ignorance of the farmers concerning the fly.

The system of summer fallowing is held responsible for the increase in these insects. It permits them to hatch their eggs and escape. The rotation of crops is considered one of the surest means of doing away with the pest. The fly must be fought systematically.

Live Stock at the Fair

In 1900 the Minnesota State Fair secured the national exhibit of the American Hereford Breeders' Association, and with other animals shown set forth the largest live stock display ever made. In Chicago last fall, the Minnesota exhibit was eclipsed, but the Minnesota men have now secured a joint exhibition by the Ameican Short-Horn Breeder's Association and the Hereford people, with large accessions from many other classes of breeders. The result will be such a gathering together of four footed beasts as was never seen on the face of the earth.

It will be a great occasion for farmers who wish to study breeds, and for everyone who likes to see a fine animal, or who may be interested in bettering the condition of the farming districts.

Shot and Killed.

Gerald Bailey, aged 13, son of Gibson Bailey, Monticello, was shot and killed by a young playmate. The shooting was done by Ernest Elzemeier, a boy about 16 years old, who is visiting in Monticello. It is thought to have been accidental, although the boys had some words about the possession of a knife, and Elzemeier is reported to have said to Bailey that if he did not give him the knife he would blow his head off. This was stated by young Bailey before he died. Almost immediately after this threat the shotgun in the possession of Elzemeier was discharged, the load striking Bailey in the right side. He died about six hours afterward. The boys were only six feet apart when the shot was fired.

Divides the Money.

The state board of control approved of an estimate of $2,080.80 in favor of O'Neil & Son for the construction of the new south wing of the state school for feeble-minded at Faribault. The money will be paid from a legislative appropriation. Allowances were also made for other state institutions, as follows: The three state hospitals at Fergus Falls, St. Peter and Rochester, the state reformatory at St. Cloud and the prison at Stillwater, $300 each; Faribault school for feeble-minded, $200; Anoka and Hastings insane asylums, $250 each; Faribault school for the blind and deaf, Owatonna school and Red Wing training school, $100 each.

Capitol Park.

The first steps towards creating a park about the new state capitol were taken by the St. Paul park board, when a resolution was passed instructing the city engineer to prepare maps and plats of the proposed improvements. The ground to be converted into a park is triangular in shape, facing the capitol grounds on the west, and extending to St. Peter street.

News in Brief.

The postoffice at New Paynesville has been advanced to the third class, bringing it into the presidential grade.

Gov. Van Sant received a letter from acting Adjt. Gen. Thomas Ward, of the United States army, stating that a field battery would be stationed at Fort Snelling in accordance with the governor's request.

Geo. R. Lawrence will take a bird's-eye view of Minneapolis and St. Paul. His camera, the largest ever manufactured, will be attached to a balloon.

Andrew Fergustad seriously injured his brother Ben with a beer glass while they were discussing family troubles in a Minneapolis saloon. Andrew was arrested.

Peter Nordliff, an emplope of the Milwaukee shops in Minneapolis, fell dead in a street car.

Gov. Van Sant issued a proclamation offering a reward of $300 for the arrest and conviction of the man who held up and shot August Mortz, Aug. 2, on the highway two miles out of Elk River. The search for the perpetrator is being vigorously pushed.

Bids will be received Sept. 24 for the mechanical equipment and power-house at the new state capitol, including the power-house, building and tunnel, boiler and mechanical appliances, an electric generator, electric plant, plumbing, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, etc.

The next annual sangerfest of the Western division of the American Union of Swedish Singers will be held in Minneapolis in 1903.

At the Crookston land office, during the month of July, 131 first homestead proofs were made, 187 timber culture entries and 68 cash entries, the total receipts aggregating $12,312.22.

W. E. Lee, of the state board of control, had his pocket picked at Wildwood. He lost $30 and some mileage books. Later the wallet was returned to him by mail, minus the money.

The 3-year-old child of James Daggett, of Akeley, was burned to death and the family residence destroyed.

The North-Western railroad has decided to build the projected line between Marshall and Evan.

John Wagoner, a boy 17 years old, is under arrest at Cass Lake for robbing the postoffice at Blackduck. It is said that he was caught by the village constable in the act of climbing out of the postoffice window with some stolen money in his pocket.

Dairy Commissioner McConnell has decided that hereafter, instead of the small money prizes given in the state butter contests, diplomas will be awarded the winners each month. All contestants who average over 93 per cent during the year will be given a diploma.

LESS than DEALERS Pay

This is a sample of our Furniture prices. Here is a couch which the factory sells to your dealer at about $8.00. Your dealer's price to you is not less than $10.00 or $12.00 for a couch of equal grade.

Our Price to You is $7.25

Order No. R113
Price, $7.25
State color of plush preferred. We supply Dark Green, Dark Red, Dark Blue or Brown. Dark Green is most popular and will be sent unless otherwise ordered.

An unusually large, luxurious couch, made of selected oak, or, if preferred, in mahogany finish, handsomely carved throughout, and supported by massive carved claw feet. It has six rows of deep hand-made tufts, fastened with the celebrated steel tufting buttons which cannot pull off or pull through the cover.

It is well filled and contains the best grade of steel springs turned from special high-carbon wire, over which is placed heavy duck canvas instead of the burlap commonly used, the best grade of figured velour plush in all the staple colors being used for upholstering.

From a sanitary point of view the open bottom presents a special feature. It allows good ventilation and a free circulation of air, which is disastrous to moths and germs.

The frame is massive and substantial, the workmanship first-class, the appearance neat and artistic; a good, serviceable couch at the lowest price ever offered. Size 30 inches wide, 78 inches long. Weight, 100 pounds.

We do not care to ship goods unless freight charges are guaranteed. If you do not wish to send the full amount, $7.25, send us $1.00 to show good faith, and we will do the rest. If you really think that you ought not to take even this risk, write us and say that you prefer to have the couch sent C. O. D. and that you will pay the full amount upon arrival and examination.

We want to be reasonable from every point of view. It may be returned at our expense if not satisfactory. Send us your order now; do not wait. Order Number R113.

Our large Furniture Catalogue, illustrating and describing eighteen different styles of couches as well as four hundred other articles of furniture, will be sent on request, absolutely free. The above is only a specimen of the marvelously low prices quoted in this book. Your local dealer cannot buy the goods at lower figures than our prices to you.

Our General Catalogue lists over 70,000 articles which we sell direct to customers at wholesale prices, including nearly everything that you use, wear or eat. It contains over 1,000 pages, 17,000 pictures, and 70,000 of the lowest prices ever quoted. It weighs almost four pounds, and the postage alone costs 30 cents We will send you this catalogue by mail or express prepaid on receipt of 15 cents. It will save an ordinary family at least $100 per year, and may save that on one purchase. If you are not satisfied with it we will return your 15 cents.

Ours is the largest mail order house in the world. Established 1872. We have 52 acres of floor space covered with merchandise; 2,000 employes, and two million customers. We quote lower prices, for values given, than any other house in existence.

FOR WOMEN'S TROUBLES TOO.

New Baden, Ill., August 12th:—Mrs. Anton Griesbaum, Jr., has been very ill. Female weakness had run her down so low that she could not do her housework. She had tried many things, but got no relief.

Dodd's Kidney Pills, a new remedy, which is better known here as a cure for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, and Rheumatism, worked like a charm in Mrs. Griesbaum's case. She used three boxes and is now a new woman, able to do her work as well as ever she was. Her general health is much improved, and she has not a single symptom of Female Trouble left.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are making a wonderful reputation for themselves in this part of the state.

—Considerable old wheat has been marketed here this week.

—Bartlett Bros have discharged their miller, Mr. Henvit, and have secured a new man.

—Willie Mowatt has supplied a number of our citizens with straw. Willie is quite a farmer for a town boy.

—The Eagle company has a new "Octopus" press. It is big enough for any job they are likely to have.

—John Brandser has had a new well made on his property this week. He is painting and fixing up his tailor shop for fall trade.

—Yesterday was observed as Ascension Thursday by the Catholic church. Services were held. A large number of people were in town.

—Vernon wilder is to leave Monday for Anoka, to take charge of the telephone exchange at that place. His brother Roy will supersede him here.

—Wes. Doran called on Delano friends Tuesday a few moments while his train waited. He says his father is highly pleased with his new Washington home.

—It is claimed that the through trains on the Soo run so irregularly now that many people wanting to go to Minneapolis drive over and take the Great Northern.

—C. G. Roosen evidently thinks he will be prepared for next years harvest in time. He has received a car load of Standard binding twine, and stored it in the old "Roosen's Opera House."

--Schools are to begin early in September. Those having children to attend should see to their being on hand promptly the first day of the term and, that they do not miss a day during the term.

--Miss Stella Davis, while going from the depot yesterday, met with a painful accident. She is laid up with a sprained ankle. Jim Hill had better fix his depot approaches or he may have to foot the bills.

—Walter Mara says there is a probability of a railroad being built by his farm to Nashville, about twelve miles away. He is anxious to be on hand if the deal goes through to furnish some of the ties from his land.

—An old man named Cebula, who has been a charge on the town of Franklin for several years, was found dead Monday morning in a little house where he lived alone. He was buried in the Catholic cemetery.

—Dr. Shrader tired awaiting the actions of railroad officials in getting him a car to move his things in to Springfield, and left Thursday morning for his new home. His wife will await the coming of the car.

—Old man Shudrop, of Rockford, has been putting in one of his periodical visits to Delano. It is claimed that he prevailed upon one of Delano's money loaners, who was not acquainted with him to furnish funds for one day.

—Eddie Weidlee met with quite an accident on Monday, while playing with a bicycle on a rack at Mealey's store he got a wheel going pretty fast and undertook to stop it, catching a finger under the chain and loosing the end of it.

—St. Paul seems to have a mad dog scare nearly every week. It would be well for our citizens to be careful of stray dogs. Even their own should be especially watched when mad dogs are running at large as they are said to be at the capital.

—A man from below Rockford had a fine, six year old, black cow, weighing 1450 pounds, for sale, last Fair Day, in Delano. We understand one of his near neighbors bought her and her calf for about $50. She was a fine looking animal.

—John Czock with a crew of men has been making quite a fill near Long Lake. John expects soon to leave the railroad and become a farmer. His parents will live in a new house near the road on the farm, while John occupies the old residence.

—From the racket made at the Woodman's meeting Wednesday evening, one might think that the goat was unusually frisky, or had eaten too many of Dr. Ball's choke cherries. There were many loud and unusual noises eminating from the building at any rate.

—Our souvenir cotton bale furnishes considerable fun Some of the oldest people in the country, one old gentleman of nearly 80 years from the county seat, fail to name it. Most investigators say "tobacco" and let it go at that; but when it is suggested to them that General Jackson knew what such things were, they begin to "catch on".

--The Delano pioneers met at the home of Mrs. E. McNaughton, yesterday afternoon. They had the usual good visit and supper. A committee was appointed to draft and publish resolutions on the death of Mrs. Amanda Kerr, the first member of the society to die. It was voted to hold the next meeting the third Thursday in October, at the residence of President Holsington. In the meantime when all are ready an invitation by George B. Wright, of Montrose, to visit him is to be accepted.

—A. F. McCoy, a railroad surveyor, had a narrow escape yesterday morning. He got off the train to hand some dispatches to Agent Bolton; the train started, and in running to get aboard he stumbled over the mail pouches which had been dumped closer than they should have been to the train. Bystanders held their breath, ladies covered their eyes, and it was expected he would be killed or crippled. But he succeeded in hanging on to the car rod and righting himself. The train stopped, but he was all right. Agent Bolton says he will take to see that the mailpouches are not left quite so near the cars in future.

—The Millers defeated the Flour City team, of Minneapolis, last Sunday by a decisive score of 7 to 0, thus getting revenge for a defeat earlier in the season. The Delano boys played a clean fast game and walked away from the City lads who only twice had a man on third base. There were a number of sensational plays made; by a pretty throw Erickson caught a man at the plate, thus cutting off the only chance the City team had of scoring. The only errors made were on base throwing.

Flour City	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0
Delano	2 0 1 0 0 0 4 0 x—7

The Millers will play at Watertown, Sunday.

—We are informed that on Sunday, Robert Dixon, of Greenwood, got into trouble with a bull; that he prodded him with a pitchfork for awhile. The bull finally determined to charge, and Robert failing to play matador, to perfection, was caught under the belt by the bull's horns, which he firmly grasped, thereby saving himself from being gored. After a short ride Robert was thrown a considerable distance. He lit on his back near a wire fence which he lost no time in rolling himself under, again escaping the bulls' charge. It was a narrow escape and as it was Robert was pretty well bruised up. Since the event the bull's horns have been sawed off.

--The Great Northern repair shops were in Delano Tuesday afternoon for a few hours. That is an engine on a long freight train, bent an eccentric bar so badly that it could not pull the train. After telegraphing a long time it was finally decided to take the bar to the blacksmith shop and have it straightened, what any ten year old farmer boy about here would have done hours before. But red tape is red tape on the railroad. Louey Plotnik and George Kittock who used to work in the shops at Great Falls, soon had the big bar heated and straightened, Henry Diek doing the pounding; and the freight crew who had seen the town as long as they cared to, gladly pulled out.

Personal.

Miller Henvit went West this morning on the G, N.

Mrs. W. Rader went to Waverly this morning on a visit.

Mrs. Litfin returned home from Minneapolis last evening.

Miss Sadie Orison returned home from a visit to Minneapolis, Saturday evening.

Walter Mara came home from Nashville, Tenn., Saturday, to attend his brother's funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Putnam, of Buffalo, visited at C. M. Conzet's the fore part of the week.

Dr. C. I. Johnson, of Minneapolis, with a crew of men spent Sunday and Monday in town, professional.

John Kuchenmeister and family, of Waverly, visited, Sunday with Mrs. John Mayer and family, of this place.

Dr. Guy Murphy, of Waverly, passed through town Tuesday evening on his way home from Watertown.

Mr. Allin, of Buffalo, visited Delano on Monday. He is working in the interest of the Sunday School Union in Wright county.

Frank P. Schaffer, Fred Invie, Joe Merriman, Len Dedrick and John Swadner took the trip to Duluth, Cass Lake, and other Northern Minnesota points of interest.

Prof. Ed Freeman who has been spending the summer in Le Sueur county, arrived home last evening. His mother who had gone to Minneapolis to meet him, returned with him.

Joe Niestroy had one of his schoolmates at Faribault, home with him for a few days lately. The two though unable to see even daylight, traveled on the sidewalks, crossed streets, and apparently went where they pleased, nearly as fast as anyone would, and were guided only by Joe's cane.

Maple Plain.

MAPLE PLAIN, Minn. Aug. 13, 1901.
BUFFALO GAZETTE,

Mr. Editor: We farmers of the North Star state are not looking for glory and emoluments of office, neither are we looking for a big price for our farm products, for everything is cornered from the hen roost to the granaries of the world. War expenses are making heavy drainage upon the resources of the country, and the producer and man of all work is paying the freight.

A number of manufacturers can go into the little state of New Jersey (one of the original states of the Union) form a trust and do business in all the states to the detriment of the consumer, and all this has its stimulus from the high protective tariff and this they call legitimate business. And you who have the right of franchise and live in a free country let the leading politician and the daily press do your thinking will soon come to where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. I have before me a copy of the American Economist, a twelve page paper 9 by 12 inches published in New York and devoted entirely to tariff and high protection. It is misleading in many statements and calculated to deceive the people and draw the biased mind farther away from the truth. All the papers of this class seem to go at W. J. Bryan with hammer and tongs. They have no use for a man who is not a tool and does his own thinking. He must also wear the administration collar, favor expansion by the sword and believe gold to be the only money of redemption.

The Economist in a braggadacio way tells of the enormous amount of machinery this country is shipping to European countries where they buy this same machinery as cheap if not cheaper than we do at home. So we have to at home compete with this same machinery and pauper labor in raising wheat etc. This my farmer friend, with trusts, combinations and an army of wheat gamblers is the reasom we are selling wheat at 65 cents per bushel. Do we intend to keep on letting them not only take the carcas but hide and tallow also? If we do not wish to get into the alms house it is about time to call a halt. But they claim these things are according to the Republican decalogue and it must go.

The economist says we are invading the markets of the world, and there is where the shoe pinches. He says our egg exports alone in 1900 amounted to over $984,000. Now Mr. Economist must think all the people are fools or else he does not know what he is talking about. It costs this country more for eggs than it does for bread and we do not produce near enough for home consumption, and yet there is a tariff duty on eggs from three to five cents a dozen. Now this fellow is misleading in his statements and wants to make the people believe our exports are conclusive evidence of great national prosperity and this is all right when our people at home have all they can consume. If the farmer is out of debt and his granary well filled, his house well furnished with provisions and furniture, then it shows that he is in a prosperous condition. Just so with a nation. Knute Nelson advanced this same argument at Buffalo last fall, week before election.

This tariff question has been bobbing up nearly every Congress since the days of 1789, and there is nothing so calculated to fool and misslead the people as the tariff question, and Congress should pass a law that would put a limitation upon the tariff issue, that it should not be changed during a term of years It is a club in the hands of the shrewd politician to wield against his adversary for political preferment. The daily press and the 3 x 5½ stump orator are all the while telling the farmer and producer of their good fortune, and what a snap they have grabling with mother earth in raising the products of the country, they being the chief apostles of the nation. What are we paying for all kinds of building material, lumber, nails, glass, in fact everything that goes into a building. What are we paying for fence wire, sugar, tea, coffee, all under a high protective tariff? And the people call it glorious. Our taxes and insurance rates keep up, and will any sane man say we do not need retrenchment and reform? Our fathers who fought the battles of the Revolution on the other side of Jordon had a different view of things from what many of our people have today. They gave to us laws, a constitution, and an independent government, and these principals stand good today.

I have before me a clipping taken from Minneapolis Times telling of the meeting of the Banker's association at Duluth, July 24, 1901; the afternoon session being opened with prayer by the Rev. D. R. Cleland. Now the query with me is, who did the kind hearted minister offer prayer to and what was his petition according to the banker's creed and profession of faith. He must have asked for a higher rate of interest, all obligations redeemable in gold and that the mortgage debt of the country might be increased etc. The old proverb says "Love covers a multitude of faults or sins" and so does money. The association has jumped into membership since Jan. 1, 1900 from 160 to 341. From the Daily Times we quote: "Stock in the Treasury largest on record. Washington, July 30. The stock of gold in the treasury today is the largest in the history of the government and is accumulating at the rate of $4,500,000 to $5,000,000 a month. Today's figures are $504,354,297. of which $248,658,698, is free gold, but including the $150,000,000 gold reserve. Since July 1st 1900, the stock of gold on hand has increased about $81,000,000. To many this may look all right on paper but why not have this money in circulation. It is being withdrawn from the channels of business and hoarded up for the gold and bond speculator If the government would issue greenbacks redeemable in coin (not gold) we could soon pay our national debt and have all this money in circulation. In early oriental times we had gold worshippers. King Nebuchadnezzar being the chief worshipper of gold he made a large image of gold which he and his followers worshipped in the province of Babylon. Are we falling into the ways of monarchial government and the foolishness and frivolity of the Roman government? It looks much like it. FARMER.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 16, 1901

Teddy Roosevelt's Presidential boom arrived in Washington this week. It was brought by republican members of the Kansas Congressional delegation, who declared that the Kansas republicans were for him and intended to do everything they could to get him nominated. When it is considered that the administration is dead opposed to Rooseyelt and that those Congressmen were in Washington asking administration favors, it will be seen that they had their nerve along with them. It is true that none of the big guns of the administration were in town, and that the small fry, such as assistant secretaries, were afraid to tell those Congressmen that they were treading on forbidden ground, but the telegraph lines were in good working order and some of them found it out before they left, and they will probably hear more about it before their applications for administration favors are acted upon. Long before 1904, it will be a sure way for a republican to get on the administration blacklist to declare himself in favor of Roosevelt's nomination. There is no longer any doubt that there is a Roosevelt machine andthat it is working for strength in the West and South, ignoring New York, where the Platt machine makes it impossible for Roosevelt to hope to control the delegation. Roosevelt's friends are pointing out that Cleveland was nominated in 1892, although the New York delegation was pledged to Hill

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans—"Fighting Bob"—was this week furnished by the Navy Department with copies of the two letters written by exSenator and exSecretary Chandler, complaining of the manner in which he and his administration of the Navy Department are treated in Admiral Evans' book, "A Sailor's Log", and he has gone out of town for a few days, during which he will decide whether he will ask for a Court of Inquiry, or let Chandler go ahead and try to force the Navy Department to order a court martial. Before leaving Washington Admiral Evans said: "I have no idea of falling into Mr. Chandler's trap, by entering upon a newspaper discussion of his letters. I will only say that the only relations between Mr. Chandler and myself are those of private citizens. He is not my superior, and I would not take any orders from him. If he has charged me with conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, well—". As Admiral Evans abruptly ended and turned on his heel there was an expression on his face that was anything but loving. Admiral Evans but touched upon the dirty politics of Chandler's rule over the Navy Department, only referring to his personal experience, in his book, when there is material enough of the same sort, and worse, easily accessible, to fill several books. Chandler's whole political life has been that of an unscrupulous partisan who never forgot his own interests. Consequently he is a rich man, but he is likely also to be a sorry man before "Bob" Evans and his friends get through with him.

Comment is being made on the marked discrepancy between the number of Filipinos who have been captured or have surrendered and the number of rifles. In an official document issued by the War Department this week the total number of Filipinos captured and surrendered is given as 41,029, while the total number of rifles surrendered and captured is only 1,212. It cannot be that 41,029 Filipinos were fighting with only 1,212 rifles. And if the surrendered Filipinos have secreted their rifles it indicates that they expect to have use for them again.

It is now said in Washington that Senator McLaurin's reward for trying to organize a white man's republican party in South Carolina, in addition to the control of the Federal patronage of the State, is to be a seat on the Federal bench for himself, after his term in the Senate ends.

If the stories alleging that Mr. McKinley has been convinced by the popularity of Admiral Schley that he has been greatly maligned by the Sampson clique in the Navy Department, and that it was by his express orders that officers who could be depended upon to give Admiral Schley fair play were selected for members of the Court of Inquiry, be true, there is one thing more that he should do in the interest of fairplay, and that is to get a new Secretary of the Navy. Secretary Long has been notoriously anti Schley from the beginning of the trouble, and it is an open secret that he will leave no official stone unturned to convict Schley of having disobeyed orders, as a failure to secure such conviction will be practically a verdict of marked unfairness against himself. Howison, the new member of the court, has been a Sampson partisan, if he is not now

Senator Stewart, who has been on all sides of every question and who just now calls himself a republican, was in Washington this week, whooping things up for Senator Hanna, whom he declared to be the logical republican candidate in 1904 If he and the other Hanna shouters can only swell Hanna's head sufficiently to make him grab the nomination for himself, instead of putting up a figurehead who will be under his control, they will do the democrats a great favor. With Hanna for the republican candidate the democrats could elect anybody on any platform, or on no platform except opposition to Hannaism and all it stands for.

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

OH RICH MAN, DO YOU THINK?

O Rich Man, as you sit upon
The porch that overlooks the sea
And fan yourself and sip cool drinks
And wipe your forehead wearily,
Do you think of, do you care,
For the gasping ones back there
In the hovels, packed together, where there's poison in the air?
Have you given, have you done
Aught to save some little one
In the overcrowded city, scorching 'neath the cruel sun?

O Rich Man, as you lie at ease
Where mountain brooks are cool and clear
And gaze across your wooded hills
And hear them laugh that you hold dear,
Do you think of them at all
Who, by hundreds, gasping fall,
Where the dust they breath is poison and the sun beats on the wall?
Is there one who but for you
Might be lying stricken, too,
Might be dying in some hovel that no
sweet wind passes through?

O Rich Man, as you walk the deck
Where you are king and host, and go
Toll-free across the sea in search
Of climes where cool, sweet breezes blow,
Do you think of them that sigh
And must toil on till they die,
Where the children in the shadows of the hovels, gasping, lie?
Can you to your conscience say:
"I have driven Death away—
There are children and their mothers who are blessing me today?"
—S E Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

WE are pleased to see among the names of promotions in the army, that of our old seat mate, at the public schools in St. Peter, now Major John A. Lundeen. John was always a good boy, and well merits his promotion. He is a West Point graduate.

THE Islander with 108 people on board struck a hidden iceberg in the night, on its way home from Skaguav, Aug. 14. Sixty seven are known to be lost. Several had with them large amounts of gold, the accumulations of years. Some left their wealth and saved themselves; one man is reported to have hung to his gold and gone down with it.

IOWA Democrats in convention assembled on Wednesday, re-affirmed the principles of the Kansas City platform of 1900, and decided that at the present time state issues are paramount to all others they favor local option on liquor question; equalization of taxation. The ticket is headed by Thomas J. Phillips, of Otumwa, for Governor.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS, of Indiana, and Bob Evans, of Minneapolis, had "a very narrow escape" a few days ago in the latter city. The team became frightened, and they jumped from the carriage. But that didn't create a quintilionth of the enthusiasm for "Presidential aspirations" that the speech at the State Fair on Labor Day by Vice President Roosevelt will.

THE United States of Columbia is having a revolution. The insurgents are receiving help from neighbors. Several war vessels of different nations are hovering about the Isthmus of Panama, looking after the interests of their respective governments. The United States has three war vessels there, or on the way; and the North Atlantic fleet has been ordered to Hampton Roads so that it will be handy if needed. Foreign countries are accusing the United States with designing to possess the Isthmus when peace is again declared.

LYNCHING negroes seems to be the favorite pastime for people in a few comunities in the United States. In Missouri the mob is said to have even burned a man seventy five years old, in his house. And innocent negroes along with others are driven from home and their houses and all they have of worldly goods burned. These things are wrong. Laws should be observed not only by the blacks but by the whites. In Mississippi, it is reported that militia under orders from the governor protected a negro from mob violence. This is said to be the first time such protection has been successful since the war. Possibly Mississippi has started a precedent that may lead to more respect for law. Let us so hope.

INSURANCE Commissioner Dearth has given it out as his opinion that a law should be made prohibiting the establishment of any more assessment insurance societies, especially with sick benefits. He claims there are now some at work in the state that would be unable to pay a death loss if they had a year's assessments on hand. When insuring it is well to be careful that you are in a good company. For what use will it be to you or to your family for you to labor and save for fifteen or twenty years and skimp things at home and be tied down from doing business in order to pay premiums on heavy insurace policies only to see the time when the companies go into bankruptcy, or break up entirely? It is also foolish to carry so much insurance as to make it a burden to pay up the premiums, only to find when you are old and can't work, that you must give them up, let them lapse, and loose the whole thing. Sometimes, where a a risk is in a company where only first class risks are accepted, a reliable company that pays its death losses, a family may be benefited some when the insurer dies. The laws should be such as to protect those who insure and think their families will receive a benefit when they are dead.

THE tendency of the times is for monied concerns to combine and concentrate their forces to control the capital, and the labor of the country; to dictate to others how their business must be conducted; and the profits they are to make; even to the price per day or month the laborer is to have. Great firms and corporations in like branches of business have united and formed a trust. For years we have had trusts, but in comparison to those of the present day, and those being formed, the old ones were but small affairs. But, when it comes to the trusts of different kinds uniting into one gigantic money trust, to govern the manufacturing and regulate the sales, and to run the whole country they certainly have reconed without their hosts.

When the American Ship Building Company, the Steel Corporation, and the railroads and other concerns of wealth and large incomes unite in demanding of labor what it must do; when they undertake to dictate to the people of America how they must live, and what wages they must receive, and even how they must vote, they are overstepping the bounds of Americanism. Of course the laborers and their friends and patriotic citizens all over this country will stand by the constitution and by the teachings of years, and will uphold the principles of American independence, of individual right and the freedom of our people.

WHEN Grover Cleveland was president and there was a strike among the laborers the newspapers gave the particulars, very minutely, and with great headlines to call attention to the fact that the Democrats couldn't govern the country. Now, when one of the greatest strikes the country ever had, is in progress, the news seems to be suppressed. The head lines sometimes say the Steel Trust is getting the best of the strikers. But when you read the short telegrams, or news items, you are led to believe the headlines were misleading. President Shaffer don't appear to be the kind of a leader to give up beaten until he has been worsted. The strike appears to be managed in a way that the strikers loose no friends. They keep peace and abide by the laws. So long as they don't interfere with others rights they will have sympathy and aid. If any class of laborers favor strike as a means of righting their grieyances against employers it is hard to see why they don't all assist when a question involving the rights of every American laborer comes up; the right to belong to a union if they want to.

If the monied men are so sure that laborers have no right to organize and protect themselves let the monied men set the example, and dissolve their trusts, and do away with their monopolies. Let them deal justly with their men, paying them fair wages for fair hours labor, not depriving them of the right to quit work when things become too hard for them.

If the principle for which the Amalgamated Association is contending is dear to the hearts of their members, it must be equally so to all who work for a living; to all who love their country and its institutions. Why, then, hesitate to express sympathy when sympathy is needed and may be of use in deciding for years, or for ever, the question of equal rights for all?

Of course some corporations for the time being are using their employees very nicely in order to keep them good natured until the Amalgamated Association has been defeated in their contention. Then, how long will it be before those who have been pampered for a few weeks will begin to see the difference? Begin to find themselves back in the old ruts of a few weeks ago? Then how they will long for another chance to get things evened up. If laborers expect to succeed in getting their rights they must hang together when their cause is a just one and succeed. After the present question is settled, unless it is successful, who could try again soon? A pull all together is what counts.

Kidnapping Strikers.

At Tampa, Florida, a few weeks ago, reports said, that the business men's committee had "kidnapped" and sent off on a ship 13 of the leaders of the strike among cigar makers. Now it is claimed that the same committee notified, about two weeks ago, 17 new leaders, to leave within twelve hours. If 13 leaders of trusts were kidnapped and 17 new leaders ordered to leave the country, what would happen? Wouldn't there be a roar though? And yet have leaders who try to rule labor, any more rights than leaders who try to protect labor, in this country.

Minneapolis Y. M. C. A. Received Nine Awards for Its Work.

The Minneapolis Y. M. C. A. has received nine awards for its educational exhibit at the international jubilee convention held at Boston in June. The certificates cover the subjects of elementary and advanced mechanical drawing, English, stenography, bookkeeping, arithmetic and general class work. This places the local association in the front rank of the associations of the country.

Active preparations are in progress for the fall work. The work for boys and the educational department will be made more comprehensive than ever. -Times.

MOTHER'S LAST JOURNEY.

Yes, all is ready. Open wide the door
This last sad time, and bear her gently forth,
Out through the hall, where oft she greeted us
With gentle welcome and a tender kiss;
Out through the flower garden, where she spent
Many a happy hour, tending her flowers.
We cannot speak because we love her so!
Sadly we follow, silently and slow,
And then the door is closed, that nevermore
Will open to admit that dearest form.

Bright shines the sun, to mock us in our grief,
Our hearts so near to breaking, while the pain
Of parting presses on us—and we moan—
"Mother, O mother! must we part to-day?
Never again on this sad earth to meet?
Never to hear your voice, or feel the touch
Of your dear hand? Alas, how can we stay,
Knowing thou'rt gone!" But One was near to us,
Whose form we could not see, but who did speak
Softly to us of Peace and Hope, and say:
"O mourning hearts, rejoice! your mother lives!
This day is she with me in Paradise!
Could you but hear her now, as glad she sings
That sweet new song; could you but see her face,
From which all pain is gone; could you but look
Once more in those dear, loving eyes, from which
All tears are wiped away—you would rejoice
For her, and thankful say: "Mother's at rest!"
Then, as we listened to that still, small voice,
'Twas given us to see the Shining Ones
Who welcomed her upon that Happy Shore,
And the dear Saviour she had loved so long
Received her in His arms, and comfort came.
As lone we turned back to our empty house.
For new we know her sorrows all are past—
The journey's ended! Mother's Home at last!

PROMISE

By Eden Philpotts.

IN this most ancient orchard, the old trees stand disposed irregularly, and where veterans have passed away, their places are filled by young, supple plants, whose youthful bearing, trim uprightness and aspiring attitude contrast with the gnarled patriarchs around them and with those intermediate bearers, now grown to full vigor of life and splendor of fruition. Here the aged and adult mingle with the young, as in human colonies; and from my post upon a dead stump I mark the pageant of awakening displayed amongst them, and breathe new life from the abundance around me; new hope from all this promise; new heart from the music and the color, from the gleam of a million petals, the glow of the sun lances, the song of the birds, and the undersong of those little glimmering myriads busy in every open flower about the vital matter of honey and bee-bread.

May is resigning her scepter, and presently it will be June; but May departs gloriously, and makes a noble end in music and such happiness as only wild things know. She passes with a swan song of promise; and here alone I seek it.

Beneath the orchard spreads a wonderful carpet woven of lush greens, sunlight and spring blossoms. The cuckoo flower and the daisy, the buttercup, the blue speedwell and the budding seedheads of many grasses are rippling to my feet, while where the orchard slopes towards a hazel hedge great snow-white umbel-bearers rise above lesser things, and the dock and the burdock prosper, and the swords of the yellow iris shine soft blue-green above running water. The nettles, in vigorous communities, look gray amid so much young verdure, and the last of the bluebells hang their heads where the first silver braids of the lady fern uncurl beside them. Huge cool shadows, almost purple, fall upon this carpet, and, growing deeper with distance, they make a sort of soft gloom through the regiments of the tree stems, where these spring upwards at all angles, of all shapes, inscribed with every fantastic lichen word that the Mother writes on ancient barks. In tones of ripe, mossy green, of silver-brown, and of silver-gray, the trunks arise, and in wild, perfect confusion they thrust forth their boughs and main branches from the parent stems. They strike out abruptly; they start oblique; they spring aloft, then droop; they droop, then rise; they turn upon themselves and twist lovingly back to the parent stem. Their feast of form is partly hidden at this hour, and the wonderful harmonies of curve, droop, line and reticulation of feathering boughs, are almost draped in vernal garments.

I think lichens love the rose folk, for here, as on the blackthorn and the whitethorn, they frill and tucker the baby tree as freely as they cling like a sere pall to the venerable ancient. To the very ends of antique boughs they push and climb, and now the crimson and snow of the flowers peep from among their encrustations, even as in autumn the ripening harvest will gleam there.

The apple blossom under direct sunshine is alive with pure light and wonderful blue shades, for petal shadow thrown on petal strikes a cool soft blue, by contrast against the gold and deep crimson of sunlit flower and ruby bud. The pageant passes from wealth of jewelly detail into dim splendor seen afar. A little way and the air comes between and touches the leaf and bough and blossom mass, and brings all together and sweeps every line and curve with the sleepy, milky summer air. Against this curtain gleam the bees; the fitful wind moves a lazy leaf to let the sunbeam through; the blackbird—who always seems to put imagination into his song—flutes it unseen; the chaffinch—cheerful, busy optimist amongst songsters—utters his little assurance that all is well with his world as need be, and hops to the gray home, like a ball of lichens, in an apple-fork. From the unfolding foam of hoary dwarfs and upright adults alike comes promise. Early fruit is already setting, while later trees still hold their buds tight clenched, as though half a hundred springs have taught them fear of the green month. But if May tempts, June commands; the first may be resisted; but the second brings mandate from the Mother, and, before it, even the tardiest bud must open to fulfill destiny.

The sun makes a splendor of every grass blade, and in such clear seeing I can watch the very heart-beat of spring until blade and bud and open blossom are stripped away, and I go under the brown and the gray, beneath the rind and the bark and the polished golden green young growths, to the core of them. And there I see their sweet, sugary blood coursing; I mark how it throbs pure quintessence of life from the Mother's fountains to each dim uncurling leaf, to every knot of buds, to the least vague, scarce defined green calyx that hides a coming flower. So witnessed, a sort of personality awakens, and I share every tree life and stretch hands to them; while they approach me also; and, each coming a little from our sequestered way, touch here in common temples of the young spring. I enter into the portals of their being; they sympathize with the nature hid in me.

Then at this moment came a girl to me—a girl with gray eyes and red lips and budding shape. Her sunbonnet was pale as the petals that clustered above it; her light form scarcely bruised the grass as she tripped among the trees, and the sun flashed upon her white apron. This small daughter of the spring approached me where I sat, and bid me welcome, and laughed pleasantly to see me awaken as from the deepest abstractions at her voice. Her laugh was very dulcet and so low that it mingled musically with the hum of the bees above us.

Braave blooth," she said; "I love this time best, for 'tis all life an' no death—all promise of a gude crop come autumn."

Thus was the thought of promise in her mind also. A caterpillar on a glimmering thread swayed between us; I saw death in his strange shape, and knew of the battle under every leaf, the legions in the egg waiting to burst forth that they might devour the foliage, burrow in the fruit and gain their purpose by defeating man's. But of these things to this maid I had no heart to speak.

"HER SUNBONNET WAS PALE AS THE PETALS ABOVE IT."

"Us shall get a gert, wonnerful crop this year—so father hopes. I'll pick 'e a dinky piece for your buttonhole if you mind to."

Now this was an offer made because we were old friends.

"Take it to one who would value it more," I said; and she understood very well, and nodded and picked a spray unfolding, and pinned it to her own breast until it should adorn another's.

"'Tis lovely, come to think of it," she said, looking at the opening buds, whose golden anthers peeped from each pure chalice. Then she lifted the spray to her face and kissed it—an action delicious to behold.

Presently she bid me farewell and went upon her way, with a little purring laugh. Youth, simplicity, beauty passed with her; in her voice was unconscious praise of the hour; in her love of the blossom, unconscious worship of its Creator.

So, fittingly into an orchard planted of men, humanity thus came upon my musings in fair shape; and from thought of wood-fairies, I returned to the men and women whose hopes centered here, to the fruit whose prosperity would lighten and whose failure would cloud their human hearts. And then, as warm light touched the glory of all this unmeasured blossom; as the day—mellow from beholding so much beauty—slowly waned, I rose and went into the world again; yet not without one prayer lifted to Pomona than she would be pleased presently to bless those ancient glades and in their boughs make true the golden prophecy of the sunset.—London Black and White.

Banks to Give Bonds to State for Private Deposits.

Mr. Editor:-Since all private treasurers, or public, for that matter, are compelled to give bonds for all the money handled, why are not banks compelled to give bonds to the state issuing their charter, for a sum large enough to cover all certificates of deposits?

The wage earning class, if they would save money, must deposit it in banks, but the government offers them absolutely no protection. The Republican party, the protection party, the party which claims to have done so much for the laboring man, has no record of having tried to protect the wage earner's all, his private deposits, by making the banks give bonds to the state for individual deposits.

It is not long ago that our own state treasurer gave bonds to the state for the money he would handle and for convenience he was obliged to deposit the money in State Chartered Banks with absolutely no security to himself, his family, or to his duped bondsmen. Sir, you say, there is no law for the banks. Then is it not about time to enact one? The Democratic party needs a new platform, and here is a better plank than was chipped out at Kansas City.

But, the Democrats are hopelessly divided.

While Western Democrats have no notion of nominating Bryan for president again soon, they love him just the same, and will not take kindly to the East or eastern men, for jibeing him.

Bryan is the greatest Democrat living today and Roosevelt the greatest Republican.

But, let us have a law that will protect the laboring man's deposited dollar and stop chartering banks above the law, above the people.

Banks are but creatures of the law at most. Then let the people attack our banking system and not cease until they purge it of the rot that money has woven in it.

H E. CRANDALL.

St. Cloud Times: Mr. Flagler's divorce is likely to hold the American record in that line for a long time to come. As insanity was not a ground for the severance of the marriage relation in any American state, Mr. Flagler procured the passage of a law by the legislature of Florida which would permit him to secure a legal release from his demented wife. The necessary proceedings in court have been had and he is now free. When the general assemblies of American states can be used to relieve men of such impediments as sick or insane wives it would be difficult to suggest a greater degradation of their so called sovereignty.

The new battleship Maine is nearly twice as large as the old and much more than twice as powerful.

Forty-two hundred of the 6,000 farms of Arizona are irrigated, and this work has been accomplished within ten years. At this rate the arid region will be the first to free itself from drought.

The new census shows that in Maine substantially all the population is white, the colored element representing but three-tenths of one per cent. of the entire population. And there is no prohibitory law against colored immigration, either.

Woman's right to vote and her right to drink go hand in hand out in Colorado. A recently enacted law in that state forbidding the sale of liquor in saloons to women has been declared unconstitutional, because under the equal suffrage law of that state no act restricting the personal liberty of a woman, where a man's freedom is guaranteed, can be justified.

Following the example of Mississippi, Louisiana has abandoned the practice of leasing her convicts and is now employing them in manufacturing, in farming and in the building of country roads. The state has purchased 8,000 acres of land on the Mississippi river, and it will there give employment to several hundred convicts on a big cotton plantation.

There is nothing sensational in the prediction that the bubonic plague will spread in this country now that it has appeared on both sides of the continent. On the contrary, the prediction is strictly in harmony with science and experience. No intelligent physician will doubt that the disease, once introduced, as it has been, will spread, unless prompt and drastic steps are taken to prevent it.

Dispatches from Europe announce that the promoters of an attempted commercial alliance against the United States have announced themselves that their undertaking is hopeless and that they will drop it. They will not cease, however, to hate us and to say evil things of us, because those who lose trade, whether individuals or nations, will be jealous of those who have taken it from them.

The wayfaring man would do well to heed the signs as he runs along, says the Indianapolis News. They are plain enough. They tell him that in good times he should prepare for worse. These are the fat years. It is certain that they will be followed by lean. Hold on to your earnings until you are sure that you have an investment that is legitimate and that will give you some return. Then if the panic comes it will not hurt you.

In 1867 Dexter won a national name by trotting a mile in 2:17¼. In 1879 St. Julian cut the time to 2:12¾, and in 1885 Maud S. further reduced it to 2:08¾. The next wonderful time was made in 1894 by Alix—2:03¾. In 1900 The Abbot reduced the time half a second. Recently Cresceus reduced it to 2:02¼. Having taken seven years to knock off a few seconds, it seems that a long time may be required to train a horse to trot a mile in two minutes.

A curious and at the same time pathetic story originates in Missouri. A bride of six weeks fell ill. A letter fell into her husband's hands. She then confessed that she loved—had always loved—another. Now, what did he do? What would you do? Kill them both? He did not. He helped her secure her freedom, told her to go marry her lover, and said he would forgive and try to forget. Whatever may be thought of this story as a whole, we should say that that man is of the stuff of which heroes and martyrs are made.

Not many years ago the victim of consumption was urged in many cases by physicians to stimulate freely. Some cures were said to have resulted from the liberal use of whisky. Now alcoholism is recognized as one of the chief causes of increased mortality in consumption and declarations to that effect at the recent tuberculosis congress in Great Britain excited no controversy. The temptation to use stimulants in wasting diseases is very great, but it may be doubted if whisky ever permanently benefited any real sufferer from consumption.

Uncle Sam is rich enough still to give us all a farm. Those who failed to draw anything in the Oklahoma field will be able to have a wide range of choice of government lands elsewhere. Most of the western states have large stretches of excellent land that is still unoccupied. The land hunger which is talked about occasionally can easily be appeased by the hundreds of millions of acres which are still available, but apparently all the homeseekers are not aware that so much good soil can still be had for a nominal price or under the homestead law.

It is said that "anti-disestablishmentarianism" (28 letters) is the longest legitimate English word. As to the longest word in any language, a writer thinks the following word bears the palm, namely: "Lianfairpwllgwyngyllogerchwyrndrobwiltysiliogogoch." It is the name of a village in north Wales. But the Greek word for hash is "Lepadotemachoselachodaleokraniolelpsanodrimupoprimmaposilphioparavabomelipokapakechumenokichlepikossuphophattoperisteralektruonoptokephalliokigklopeleiolagooseirarabophtraganopterugon."

The men have been taking the blame for the general increase in the use of tobacco in the United States, but a writer in the last number of Zeal publishes some startling statistics showing that women are becoming much devoted to the tobacco habit. In New York city no less than 100,000 women smoke, and one dealer testifies that were it not for the trade of the fair sex he would have to close his shop as a nonpaying venture. San Francisco has just as many women smokers, and Chicago, Cincinnati and all the large cities are not very far behind.

MANY FATALITIES.

Two Steamers Go Down with Scores of People on Board.

One Capsizes on River Near Paducah, Ky., and the Other Collides with an Iceberg—Numerous Other Disasters.

Paducah, Ky., Aug. 20.—The steamer City of Golconda, plying between this city and Elizabethtown, Ill., was struck by a squall during a storm about seven o'clock Monday night as she was en route to Paducah, and turned over in ten feet of water, six miles above the city, as she was going into Crowell's landing. Sixteen persons are reported drowned. The disaster occurred as supper was served, and many of the 75 passengers were in the cabin. The wind struck the boat without warning and there was no time for those on the inside to escape.

Some of the Victims.

Among those believed to be lost are:

Miss Lucy Barnett, of Smithland.
Miss Lizzie Graham and Miss Trixie Adams, of Greenville.
Mrs. David Adams, of Smithland.
Messrs. Watts Havis, a prominent farmer of Livingston county, and Clarence Slayton, of Lola, Ky.
Three colored deckhands.

The boat was valued at about $2,500, and had been in the trade for several years, being owned by Capt. Otto Bauer, of Golconda, Ill. There is no way to determine the number of names of the dead until the boat's books are found. Capt. Peck places the number at 16.

COLLIDES WITH ICEBERG.

Steamer Queen Sinks and Nearly Seventy of Her Passengers Drowned.

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 20.—The steamer Queen has just arrived from the north, bringing further news of one of the most appalling marine disasters on the Pacific coast. The steamer Islander, sailing from Skaguay on August 14, when nearing the southwest end of Douglass island at two a. m., August 15, and running at full speed, struck a floating iceberg, and in less than 20 minutes went to the bottom of the deep channel, carrying 67 men, women and children to watery graves.

The Islander had 108 passengers, and all of them were in bed when the vessel struck. The shock was so severe that many were thrown from their berths and the wildest excitement prevailed. Word was soon passed that the vessel was doomed, and a general scramble for the lifeboats ensued, many jumping overboard and attempting to swim to the shore, the distance being short. In the scramble to get into the boats many were hurled headlong into the chilly water, which, according to passengers arriving from the scene, seemed alive with human beings. Before all the passengers had left the vessel she gave a lunge and went down, bow first. It is known that 67 lives were lost. It will be some time before their names can be definitely learned, as the purser lost his passenger list.

COLLISION AT SEA.

Steamship Alene Runs Down a Pilot Boat—Four Lives Lost.

New York, Aug. 19.—A collision between the steamship Alene of the Hamburg-American line and the pilot boat James Gordon Bennett Saturday afternoon resulted in the sinking of the Bennett and the drowning of four men who were aboard. The accident occurred about three o'clock near the Scotland lightship, which is stationed six miles off Sandy Hook. All that is known is that Alene struck the Bennett amidships, cutting the pilot boat in two.

FLOOD IN THE ORIENT.

Details of Disaster in Yangtse-Kiang Valley—Loss, 20,000 Lives.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 19.—Oriental advices give further details of terrible floods in the Yangtse-Kiang valley during July. It is estimated that not less than 20,000 people were drowned in the provinces of Kiangsi, Hupeh, Hunan and Anhui, while tens of thousands have been rendered homeless. The provinces of Kiangsi and Hunan suffered most severely, fully 15,000 persons having perished in Kiangsi alone. Rains fell continuously for 40 days.

TROLLEY CAR RUNS AWAY.

Crashes Into Passenger Train at Chicago—Four Killed—Many Hurt.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Four persons instantly killed and 13 injured, some of them fatally, was the result of a street car wreck at the Forty-seventh street crossing of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago railroad at 7:45 o'clock Saturday night. A west-bound trolley car, running wild, broke through the guard gates at the crossing and ran directly into the Pittsburg flyer, striking the passenger train between the first and second coaches. The impact was terrific. The train was driving ahead at the rate of 25 miles an hour, and the electric car was thrown clear of the rails and smashed to splinters.

HORROR AT YOUNGSTOWN, O.

Molten Metal Explodes in a Blast Furnace, Killing Three.

Youngstown, O., Aug. 19.—An explosion of ten tons of molten metal in the blast furnace department at the Ohio plant of the National Steel company Sunday resulted in the death of three workingmen and in the injury of 11 others. The dead are: Richard Richards, Joseph Bugos and John Crinkshank. Two of the injured are in a dying condition and at least six others are not expected to survive. The accident was the result of machinery which controlled the ladle containing the molten mass breaking and letting the metal drop into a vat containing water.

Soldier's Head Blown Off.

Junction City, Kan., Aug. 20.—One man was killed outright and 16 others injured, some perhaps fatally, while at target practice a half mile north of here Monday by the premature explosion of a projectile being loaded into a seven-inch gun. The men were stationed at Fort Riley, near here. Private Henry C. Waters is the name of the dead soldier. His head and shoulders were blown off.

MORE MEN GO OUT.

Tie-Up at McKeesport, Pa., Now Complete—Steel Workers at Joliet Decide to Strike.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 17.—Two hundred men employed in the National galvanizing works of the National tube works at McKeesport struck Friday. They were the last remaining workmen in the affected trades in that city, and the tie-up is now as complete as possible there.

The recent gains here and at Joliet will bring the total number of men brought out by the third and final call of President Shaffer up to about 30,000, and press the grand total to something over 70,000. Thousands of the men out have found other work, and the exact number now idle is unknown.

Referring to the status of the men in the western lodges who have refused to strike, President Shaffer declared himself Friday as follows:

"The men of the Chicago lodges of the Amalgamated association who refused to obey the strike order will be placed without the pale of the organization. Notices will be sent to all the lodges to receive no communication from them and to send none to them and to accept no working cards from them. Such notification will be given at once. A date will be set at which the intercourse must cease, the date to cover the recent defection of the men in the trust plants of the west."

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 16. — The four lodges of Amalgamated members employed in the Joliet plant of the Illinois Steel company, after a lengthy session, decided to strike Thursday. There was some division, but the sentiment was in favor of a strike, and a motion to take this step went through without a dissenting vote. This will close the entire steel mills, throwing out of employment nearly 3,000 men.

Milwaukee, Aug. 19.—Following the example of their brothers in Joliet, the members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, about 200 in number, Saturday night voted to go out in a body and as a result a strike which will probably last an indefinite period has been inaugurated. The arguments of Assistant Secretary Michael F. Tighe, of Pittsburg, and Vice President Davis, of South Chicago, proved too potent for the majority of the union, and when the vote was counted it was found that 157 were in favor of breaking the contract with the Illinois Steel company to 38 against it. It was then decided to make the vote unanimous and the meeting closed with a congratulatory address by Vice President W. C. Davis, whose lodge in South Chicago has voted to continue at work.

Milwaukee, Aug. 20.—The Illinois Steel company Monday posted a notice at the Bay View plant reading as follows:

"Owing to deliberate action of the Amalgamated association in violating their contract, these mills will be closed indefinitely. Employes are invited to call at the office and receive the wages due them."

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Goaded by the taunts of South Chicago union men and the execrations of many labor organizations, influenced by the strike action of their fellow Amalgamated men of Joliet and Bay View, and inspired by the expressions and active example of Vice President William C. Davis, a dozen or more of the highly-skilled men in the rail mills left the works at the end of their turns Monday, saying that they would not come back. A great many others of a less courageous nature stayed away from the mills altogether on a plea of sickness.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 20.—The United States Steel corporation made a series of gains Monday in the restoration of properties crippled by the strike of the Amalgamated association and its sympathizers. The steel mills at Monessen, after a long period of inactivity, were partly put in motion by strike breakers gathered in some of the southern states. Two more mills in the Painter plant were also started up, and another large mill at the Clark property was also operated for the first time. There was some disorder in the streets of Monessen during the day, but the local police never lost control of the demonstrative crowds, and there was no serious trouble.

DYNAMITE EXPLODES.

Five Men Are Killed During the Burning of a Roundhouse at Herkimer, N. Y.

Little Falls, N. Y., Aug. 20.—The Mohawk & Malone roundhouse at Herkimer was discovered to be on fire at 10:30 Monday night, Watchman Gilbert and John Deck, an engine tender, assisted by residents of the vicinity and members of the bridge building gang, attempted to extinguish the flames. While they were battling with the fire a large quantity of dynamite stored in the building exploded with terrific force, killing Gilbert and Deck and four others. The bodies of the four last mentioned are unrecognizable. The roundhouse was wrecked and burned. It is feared there are other bodies in the ruins. The roundhouse is owned by the New York Central & Hudson River railroad.

DIE IN BLAZING OIL.

Lightning Explodes Benzine Tanks at Philadelphia, Scattering Death and Destruction.

Philadelphia, Aug. 20.—Out of the sky Monday afternoon there shot a bolt of lightning that fell on the northern shore of the Schuylkill river at Twenty-ninth street and Passyunk avenue, where are situated 15 mammoth tanks containing millions of gallons of oil, naphtha and benzine. It struck directly upon the roof of an enormous tank of benzine. The iron roof curled like paper and out of the tank a tremendous flame burst with a roar. A segregated group of tanks some distance away from where the main fire had been next exploded. This cost four men their lives. Many more firemen were injured.

Gen. MacArthur Arrives.

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—The transport Sheridan arrived Sunday from Manila with Gen. MacArthur and staff and the Fourteenth infantry, under command of Col. Quinton, composing her passenger list.

Gen. MacArthur says that whole districts in the Philippines have been laid waste by war, but expects the reign of law and order within a few months.

BIG STORM OVER.

But Death and Damage Left in Its Track Along Gulf Coast—Situation at Mobile.

New Orleans, Aug. 17.—The storm which has been sweeping the gulf coast has passed and seems to have done no great damage anywhere except along the river below the city, six fatalities occurring near the river's mouth. In the city the only injury was to the lakeside resorts and to the section flooded by the break in a canal bank, which was closed before morning. Rice and orange farms on the lower coast were severely injured. The inhabitants there believe that they were struck by a tidal wave combined with a cyclone. The lives lost were half a mile above Quarantine. A large house was overturned with 15 people in it, and Mrs. Rosa Walker, her ten-year-old daughter, Ida Walker, Miss Birdie Cobden and Miss Ella Cobden were drowned. The crew of the tugboat Biloxi sought refuge a few hundred yards away, and two of the sailors, Blaine Davidson and Peter Yea, were drowned and the boat lost.

Mobile, Ala., Aug. 17. — The gulf storm, which began with wind and rain Wednesday, reached its severest force about five o'clock Thursday, the maximum wind velocity being 62 miles an hour. Considerable damage was done in Mobile in the way of uprooting trees, unroofing houses, and toppling chimneys. The flood water was backed by the southeast gale over the cotton wharf, and Front, Commerce, Water and a part of Royal streets for several blocks north of St. Anthony were covered. The water was 18 inches deep in the cotton exchange, and both the Western Union and Postal offices were flooded. The power houses of the electric railway were flooded and electric car service was shut down after three o'clock. All business in the wholesale district was suspended.

KING SAYS FAREWELL.

Parliament Is Prorogued for the First Time in the Reign of Edward.

London, Aug. 19.—Parliament wound up its business Saturday and was prorogued. Black Rod (Gen. Sir Michael Biddulph) summoned the commons to the house of lords at four o'clock to hear the king's speech. The royal commissioners on this occasion were the lord chancellor, Earl Halsbury; the duke of Marlborough, Lord Ashbourne, the earl of Kintore and Earl Waldegrave. They were all attired in their peers' robes. On the arrival of the commons the speech was read. It says:

"My Lords and Gentlemen: It is satisfactory to be able to close the first parliament of my reign with the assurance that the cordiality of the relation of Great Britain with the other powers remains undiminished."

A reference to China is merely congratulatory on the attainment of an agreement in regard to the indemnity, security for its payment and the punishment of the most guilty offenders.

In regard to South Africa the speech says: "The progress of my forces in the conquest of the two republics by which my South African colonies have been invaded has been steady and continuous. But, owing to the difficulty and extent of the country to be traversed, the length of the military operations has been protracted."

The rest of the speech merely records the king's satisfaction with the liberal provisions made for the naval and military services, the arrangements made for the maintenance of the honor and dignity of the crown, "especially those which affect the state and comfort of my royal consort," and the authorization to change the royal title.

Returning to the house of commons, the members filed past the speaker, shaking hands with him, and the first parliament of King Edward VII. was ended.

PROMISES WELL.

Fall Trade Opens Actively and the Outlook Is Especially Satisfactory.

New York, Aug. 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "The distribution of merchandise has proceeded this week on a steady and satisfactory scale throughout the east, and in the west and southwest the relief from the long drought and heat is beginning to be reflected in a larger retail trade, so that for the quarter, promise is held out of a larger business than last year. Crop conditions in the territory most affected by the recent drought are improving, and the weather has been highly favorable in nearly all districts east of the Missouri river, though rains have interrupted the spring wheat harvest.

"The steel strike has affected prices extensively, particularly on sales for immediate delivery. In tin plates the advance has been greatest, while hoops, sheet, skelp and billets are sold at premiums. Quotations are too erratic for accurate record, and in many cases sales are at private terms. Confidence is steadily shown by placing of distant deliveries at regular prices. Consumption has undoubtedly been further curtailed this month, but a revival of exports tends to prevent accumulation.

"Failures for the week numbered 168 in the United States, against 161 last year, and 19 in Canada, against 24 last year."

Lynched.

Pierce City, Mo., Aug. 20.—Will Godley, a negro, was lynched by a mob composed of 1,000 armed citizens shortly after dark Monday night for the murder of Miss Caselle Wild, whose dead body was found Monday in the woods near here. The mob went to the jail about nine o'clock and battered down the doors and threw ropes around the necks of Godley and Jean Carter, another suspect. Godley was hanged in front of the Lawrence hotel and his body riddled with bullets. Carter's guilt was not clearly established and he was taken back to jail, but was taken out by the mob, riddled with bullets and left dying in the street.

Elected Judge.

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 20.—Theodore N. Green, son of the late Judge N. W. Green, of Pekin, was elected to the circuit judgeship, to fill out the unexpired term of the late Thomas M. Shaw, of Lacon, over Franklin L. Velde, of Pekin, the republican candidate, by a majority of over 800. The election passed off quietly and the result was a surprise, it being generally conceded that Velde would be elected by a small majority.

Composer Audran Dead.

Paris, Aug. 19.—Edmond Audran, the French composer, is dead. He was born April 11, 1842. He composed many overtures, marches, masses and motets, but achieved his greatest fame as a composer of light operas. His best as well as best known works are "Olivet," "The Mascot" and "Gillette de Narbonne."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Minnesota's Population.

Minnesota, with a population of 1,751,394, has 932,490 males and 818,904 females within her borders, according to a census bulletin issued recently. Divided by color, there are 1,737,036 whites and only 14,358 persons classed as colored, which includes negroes, Chinese, Japanese and Indians, taxed and untaxed. Divided by nativity, 1,246,076 of Minnesota's population are native born and 505,118 foreign born. Of total white population, 1,232,101 are natives. Of native whites, 425,780 were born of native parents and 806,321 of foreign parents. Of native born inhabitants, 644,722 are males and 601,354 females; of foreign born, 287,768 are males and 217,550 females, and of total whites 924,851 are males and 812,185 females. Of foreign whites 287,473 are males and 217,462 females. The colored population is divided into 2,836 negro males and 2,123 females; 161 male and 5 female Chinese; 50 male and 1 female Japanese; 4,592 male and 4,599 female Indians.

Lace-Making by Insane.

Lace-making as an occupation for the women patients at the Rochester insane asylum is now an established industry, according to Dr. A. F. Kilbourn, superintendent of the institution. The doctor says that in the little time in which the patients have been employed along this line the most excellent result have been obtained, and it is his intention to extend the idea and enlarge the industry as rapidly as possible. Occupation is essential to the people in the insane hospitals, and while farm work has been sufficient for the men, there has always been difficulty in providing the women with work. This problem is now solved. The lace produced is disposed of readily to asylum visitors. Beside furnishing occupation, in several cases it is believed it will furnish a means of gaining a livelihood when the patients are discharged.

Street Car Ditched.

A St. Paul bull, infuriated at the sight of a Como Interurban street car headlight, made a stand in the middle of the tracks between Lake Como and the state fair grounds one evening, and for three hours a wrecking crew labored to replace the car on the track. The offending headlight was dashed into a thousand pieces; the bull was caught by the fender, thrown a considerable distance and instantly killed. The car was thrown from the track and plowed through the street for a distance of a hundred feet before it was stopped.

We Drink Milk.

According to Dairy Commissioner McConnell, Minneapolis uses 15,000 gallons of milk and 1,500 gallons of cream every day; St. Paul, 13,000 gallons of milk and 1,200 gallons of cream; Duluth 11,000 gallons of milk and 225 gallons of cream.

One-fourth of the Minneapolis milk supply is brought in by train, and one-fifth of St. Paul's; some of it a distance of 75 miles. Milk trains run from a distance of 155 miles into Duluth, and carry one-third of its supply.

The daily milk bill is about $100,000.

Discuss Smallpox.

Health officials, state and county, from Minnesota, northern Michigan and Wisconsin, and representatives of lumber industries, met at Duluth to discuss methods of battling with smallpox, which was prevalent in this section of the country last winter. Resolutions were drawn up. There were 6,300 cases in this state alone last fall, with but 29 deaths.

News in Brief.

The state railroad commission elected A. C. Clausen, ex-state grain inspector, to the position of secretary of the commission. He will assume charge of the office on Sept. 1. Henry Feig, of Raymond, was made superintendent of country elevators, and D. W. Watson, of Duluth, inspector of licenses of commission men.

Michael Griffin, a prisoner in the jail at Farmington, committed suicide by hanging himself with his suspenders to the door of his cell. He was found dead next morning. He had been arrested for alleged indecent exposure.

Emil Herman, employed on a steam sand pump on a barge in the river at St. Paul, was caught in the machinery and killed. His left arm and left leg were torn from the trunk. The arm was severed at the shoulder and the leg at the hip. He was 23 years of age and unmarried.

Game Warden Murphy arrested three men near Muskoda for illegal shooting and confiscated two rods and two guns.

Lieutenant General Miles will make a tour of the western states in September. He will visit Fort Snelling on his trip, and he is anxious of having one company of field artillery stationed there.

Redwood county farmers are receiving letters from residents of Iowa inquiring into the advisability of stacking straw so that it can be baled and shipped to that state.

Joseph Hering was struck on the head with a ball while playing on Praire Island, near Winona, and rendered unconscious. He was removed to the hospital, where he died.

By a wreck on the Duluth & Iron Range railway at McKinley, one locomotive was damaged and seven cars smashed. No one was injured.

Harvey Scott, an eccentric farmer east of Faribault, died at the age of 81. He was quite wealthy and left a will making a few small bequests, and directing that after his funeral expenses were paid, all his money, amounting to about $45,000, should be burned.

The general store of Andrew Larson at Mora burned, causing a loss of $4,000.

A movement is on foot to increase the liquor license at Duluth from $1000 to $2000.

The sugar beet industry has proved a success in Minnesota. According to an estimate, over 50,000 tons of beets will be harvested before Sept. 16. In other years the crop has averaged only 22,000 tons.

Burglars entered the store of Charles C. Bennett, in Minneapolis, and carried away furs to the value of $1,000.

Efforts are being made at Duluth to organize the wholesale grocers at the head of the lakes into a national combine.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

The British national memorial to the late Miss Mary Kingsley has taken the shape of an African society to propagate the study of native law and customs.

Mayor Johnson has added to his unpopularity among certain of his Cleveland townsmen by inducing the assessors to raise the valuation of his Euclid avenue property from $300 to $500 per foot. Then he demanded that other residents on that swell thoroughfare be similarly treated.

Hans Jensen, a Dane, was in court at Garnett, Kan., seeking to be naturalized. He was asked if he was satisfied with the general condition of the country and whether the government suited him. "Yes," said Hans, "but I vould like more rain." The judge swore him in, saying: "You already have the Kansas idea."

A curious case is that of George Wattis, of New York, who has never permitted the removal of a bullet which was fired into him during the civil war. It entered his neck, but has since moved down his body so that it has now reached the groin. It will probably cause his death, but Mr. Wattis prefers death with that bullet to life without it.

The young Egyptian khedive is said to possess the most costly set of harness in the world. It is made of black leather, with chased gold buckles and collars ornamented with the same costly material. The padcloths are also embroidered with gold, and the set is said to have cost £2,000. It is for four horses, and is used on all state occasions.

In the codicil to his will Admiral Sir John Edmund Commerell, V. C., who died in England on May 21 last, added: "Having had fatal experience of the iniquity of the law in certain cases, when decisions have been given against common sense and justice, I entreat the parties interested in my will not to appeal to the law if any difficulty may arise, but to arbitrate. Having been swindled myself by every lawyer that I ever had anything to do with makes me offer this advice to my heirs, executors and assigns."

PAN-AMERICAN PEOPLE.

A Visiting Englishman's Description of Men and Women He Saw at Buffalo.

Two things will probably impress every observant foreigner who comes here. One is the external refinement of the American women whom he will meet (all or nearly all of them, as he would say, provincial.) A large proportion are pretty, a few are beautiful, and nine-tenths of them are well dressed without being over-dressed, says a Buffalo Letter to London Chronicle. The next thing which will strike the stranger is the surprising sturdiness of the men, their air of alertness, their self-reliance, and also their lamentable lack of polish. We are apt to imagine that all Americans are of the strenuous, wan, excitable, nerve-worn type so commonly met with in Europe. But, as they say, "there are others," millions of others, scattered about the far west and the great middle west, who are not only singularly wide-awake, but also healthy. These, and not the Wall street speculators, or the grasping and "chin-bearded" farmers, are the men who are building up this country, earning the fortunes which go into the pockets of the multi-millionaires, and threatening Europe with the most formidable of trade rivalries. Taken in the mass, they seem poorly educated—far more poorly than the women. Their manners, to a sensitive Frenchman or a cultured Englishman, are the reverse of prepossessing. They are raw, they are ungraceful, they are often awkward. But they are good-tempered, without affectation, and in most practical matters they are unmistakably intelligent.

Women and men alike, whether they be well or ill dressed, poor or prosperous, talk too loudly and in shrill or rasping tones, eloquent of the disdain with which all evidently regard the privacy so dear to English folk. If you were to address any one of them in the conventional phraseology of London "society" it is "dollars to doughnuts" that the answer you would get would be a quick and rather irritating: "What's that?" (equivalent to our "Beg pardon?"), or an even more exasperating nasal, long-drawn-out, and wondering "How?" In the eyes of the women there is a rude curiosity, but no speculation. In the eyes of the men there are self-concentration, eagerness and the suggestion of that scheming turn which, in exceptional instances, produce great organizers like Mr. Carnegie, and in the multitude makes business "hustlers."

Infantile Curiosity.

Katherine is 2½ years old. Her father came home the other afternoon after working three days and nights under high pressure, with no sleep to speak of, and lay down with the feeling that he might not wake up for a week. Within five minutes the battle of Manila bay would not have aroused him.

Three-quarters of an hour later from the depths of his dreams, he heard a clear, small voice: "Father—father—father—father!" The sleeper stirred and sank deeper. "Father—father!" He stirred again and moaned. "Father — father — father!" He struggled and resisted and floundered, and finally raised his eyelids like a man lifting giant weights. When sight came to him he saw Katherine, smiling divinely behind his couch. "Father—father!"

"Wha-at is it, daughter?"

"Father, are you having a nice nap?"—N. Y. Sun.

Fatal Sunburn.

It is contended by physicians that if two-thirds of the body be burned badly the sufferer will die from the effects. The skin which has been severely burned is unable to throw off perspiration. The pores are, temporarily at least, closed, and the impurities of the body which should escape in this way are confined in the body. It is believed that if two-thirds of the pores be closed this poison will prove fatal. The disease is known as auto-toxication or self-poisoning.—N. Y. World.

A CHECK ON BULLS.

Improvement on an American Device Suggested by South Australian Experimenters.

The Australian Leader suggests this improvement on a device to prevent bulls from breaking fences which was published years ago in the Country Gentleman—devised by the South Australian department of agriculture. It is described as follows:

"A block of wood is screwed on to each horn, and a wire stretched from block to block and also to the nose ring, as shown. So long as there is no pressure on the wires between the ring and the horns, the nose ring is simply held upwards without any discomfort to the animal. Should the bull rush any other animal, or attempt to get through any fence, the pressure pulls the nose ring upwards, causing considerable pain. It requires very few experiences to teach the animal that any misbehavior on his part is attended by suffering to himself. One prominent breeder says even the fiercest of bulls is quickly tamed by this device. In place of the blocks on the horns, the latter are sometimes bored through near the point and the wires secured. The blocks may also be put on in different ways, the object being to bring the wires from the horns to the nose away from the head and face."

KOCH ON TUBERCULOSIS.

Recent Statements of the German Pathologist Should Be Taken with a Grain of Salt.

London dispatches state that Prof. Koch, the German pathologist, who is attending the British congress called to consider means for the prevention of consumption, in the course of an interview with a newspaper reporter authorized the statement that he has demonstrated that the meat and milk of cattle infected with tuberculosis may be consumed with impunity. To the newspaper correspondent he is reported to have said: "You may say substantially that I have reached the conclusion that mankind's fear of contact with tuberculosis-infected flesh and fluid is unnecessary and unfounded. I arrived at the discovery through what I consider practically indisputable tests. These experiments lead me to believe that human tuberculosis and bovine tuberculosis are two entirely distinct species. I have found the human tuberculon incapable of inoculation into the animal system. Proceeding from that premise, I am prepared to show that humanity's far-reaching precautions against infected cattle may once for all be abandoned."

The results which Dr. Koch is credited with securing are not in accord with those which have been the product of similar tests made by many pathologists of this country and Europe, and before accepting these statements at their face value we shall await further particulars.—Farmers' Review.

A Comfortable Possibility.

Never hesitating to slur the plain farmer, some of the big city dailies are cartooning the proposition advanced in a western state to establish steam laundries and bakeries in well-populated neighborhoods. Whether feasible or not, the inspiration is a good one. The hard-working farmer's wife has never been able to share very much in the labor-saving machinery and implements employed on the farm, and her position has been one of hand to hand contact with the pressing work which must be accomplished 365 days in the year. Not impossibly these enterprises could be successfully run by farmers on the cooperative plan, affording needed relief to the overworked helpmate who does so much toward the permanent success of the farmer's business and toward his comfort.—Farm and Home.

The Cows in Fly Time.

Here is something that should be preserved by every reader that owns cows, especially, and good for other cattle also in fly time. The Country Gentleman gives it from its veterinary editor, who says it is a cheap, reliable remedy used on his cows for years, and found to be lasting in results, easily used and such a comfort to the animals that they could stand and be milked in the field, if necessary. Pine tar, one pound; lard, six pounds. Melt the lard and stir in the pine tar. Keep an old sponge in the pail, and smear a little on the back of the cow's head, along the spine and on brisket twice a week, or when necessary.

Girls as Butter Makers.

Every farmer's wife ought to teach her daughters to make good butter. No matter what the girls intend to do for a living, it is an honor to them to be able to say that they know just how butter is made; and the time will surely come when they will rise up and call their mothers blessed if they have taught them the noble art of making butter. Especially will this be true if by any chance they should become the wives of farmers.—Farm Journal.

UNPROFITABLE TREES.

Some Reasons Why the Fruit Crop of Many Orchards Is Not What It Should Be.

In some cases it will be found that old fruit trees, though profitless at present, consist of good salable kinds, and the question is: By what means can such trees be brought into fruitful or profitable condition? A fruit tree of this kind need not necessarily be unprofitable because it is old, though if it is old and has been neglected it must be. We find that many of this class of tree are what they are through neglect. The heads have for years been allowed to become a tangled mass of growth. The head wood has become crowded, so that too many fruits set, and in the end do not come to a salable size, neither do they color up as they should do. In such cases the remedy is simple. The old, dead growth must be cut out thoroughly. The moss-covered boughs must be cleaned. All branches that cross and rub against each other must be regulated by removal, and generally the pruning out process must be carried out in such a way that when finished the heads of the trees will be open and airy, which will insure a free crop of the best fruits. If anyone will look into the matters with which we deal they will find that the majority of the profitless fruit trees we refer to are planted in grass land. The fact is instructive, and it justifies in the most emphatic manner the denunciations that we have launched against the system for years. It is utterly impossible to grow the best apples and pears in grass land—there can be no doubt about that. If we pay a visit in the fruiting season to the fruit trees set in grass we shall be struck with the small size of the fruits the trees usually bear. There may be plenty of apples or pears, but there will be few good-sized fruits to be seen among them. Tillage is of the utmost importance to fruit trees, but this important operation cannot be carried out when the trees are surrounded with grass. Aeration, so necessary in the production of large-sized fruits, becomes impossible, and the fine surface tilth that is so needful under good culture cannot be produced unless the land is open and uncropped by grass or any crops growing right up to the stems of the trees.—London Globe.

CHEAP GARDEN ROLLER.

Can Be Made at a Trifling Cost and Is as Useful as a More Expensive Article.

Procure a ten-gallon oil or carbide can, cut out the top and bottom smoothly. Next make a square box of inch boards. This box makes center of roller. Stay this in can by means of long nails. Set the can and box on a wide board and fill the space with one part Portland cement and three parts sand, put in enough water to make it thin enough to pour, being careful to keep can round. After drying out well center ends and bore holes size of rod or broomstick and mount in a frame as shown in the illustration, made of one-inch boards four inches wide, braced well. The diameter of the box regulates the weight of roller. If not heavy enough weights can be put on the frame in a shallow box. All this costs but little. The one I made cost not to exceed 50 cents.—J. O. Peeks, in Agricultural Epitomist.

LAWN GARDEN ROLLER.

The Largest Peach Tree.

The largest peach tree in the United States, if not in the world, stands in an orchard in Kent county, Maryland. It is about the size of an ordinary kerosene barrel, measuring 78 inches around at the base, or nearly 26 inches through. One foot from the ground it is 58 inches around, and at two feet it is 56 inches. The crotch is 56 inches, while the four primary limbs are from 25 to 32 inches in circumferences. There is also one secondary limb as large as a ten-year-old tree. This mammoth specimen is 28 years od, and has never missed a crop. It frequently overbears, and then the wood breaks badly, for it is very brittle. The big tree is one of the survivors of a large orchard planted at the same time, some trees of which measure four or five feet in circumference.

Soil for a Peach Orchard.

J. H. Hale says: The soil for a peach orchard is a warm, loamy soil, yet any soil except a strong clay will give good results. I used to apply commercial fertilizers freely, but have learned that they are not necessary in many instances, providing sufficient culture is given to the orchard. I am reclaiming abandoned farms; clearing up tracts of land covered with brush and other rubbish, and am planting them to peach orchards, clearing up the rocks, etc., at considerable expense. It will pay to use a subsoil plow before planting peach trees except where lands have sandy or gravelly subsoil. Do not plant the trees until your land is well subdued.

Wide Tires Are a Success.

At the Missouri Agricultural college they found by actual test that on blue grass sward the same draft that pulled 2,000 pounds on a wagon with 1½-inch tires would pull a load of 3,248 pounds on a wagon with three-inch tires. The narrow tires cut ruts that could be seen all the season, and if running down a hill might be well adapted to start a gully or ditch in which the fertility of the surface soil would wash away, while the three-inch tire with the heavier load made no marked impression on the sward land.

Arms and the Lady.

"Isn't it marvelous!" said the young man as they stood looking at the armless wonder. "He can feed himself without hands; he can write his name; he can thread a needle; he can paint a picture, and he can whittle."

The girl drew a long sigh and said:

"Yes, it is astonishing!"

"See, he is going to play the piano with his toes. Why, that man doesn't need arms. Of what use would they be to him if he had them?"

"Well," she said, rather low, so that the crowd couldn't hear, "they might come in handy if he were out calling, and it was along about nine or ten oclock, and the lights were turned down, and—and—"

But the master of ceremonies called out: "Now, ladies and gentlemen, if you will just step this way," and there was a rush in which she and her companion were swept down to where the man with the rubber skin was beginning his interesting and instructive performance.—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Diagnosis Was Correct.

An amusing instance of unconscious soliloquy during a tete-a-tete with a lady was told of the famous physician, Dr. Friend. It was in the old convivial days, and the doctor was summoned one evening from a rather too festive board to the bedside of a lady patient. He felt her pulse "secundem artem," but for the life of him could not count its beats. "Drunk by Jove!" he soliloquized, and pulled himself together sufficiently to order some harmless mixture. His delight may be imagined when the next morning, instead of an indignant dismissal from further attendance, he received from his patient a confession that he had diagnosed her complaint quite correctly.—Chicago Chronicle.

Begone, Dull Care!

A Droitwich barber was just finishing lathering a customer and was talking volubly, as usual.

"Yes, sir," he said, "there's no carelessness allowed by our employer. Every time we cut a customer's face we are fined a sixpence, and if we make an ugly gash it costs us a shilling."

Then, picking up and brandishing his razor, he added: "But I don't care a rap to-day. I've just won a sovereign."—London Answers.

Friendship's Tribute.

The man at whose funeral they were assembled hadn't drawn a sober breath during the last 15 years of his life, and had been noted for always being in trouble with his neighbors. "Well," said one of his old acquaintances, turning sadly away after the services were over, "he was a man of mighty reg'lar habits."—Chicago Tribune.

World to End This Year.

This is the recent decision of one of the prominent societies of the world, but the exact day has not yet been fixed upon, and while there are very few people who believe this prediction, there are thousands of others who not only believe, but know that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the best medicine to cure dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness or liver and kidney troubles. A fair trial will certainly convince you of its value.

The Wrong Effect.

"Do you think De Squealer is helping the cause with his temperance songs?"

"I'm sure he isn't. When he sang last night four men who never drank in all their lives before went out and got on a spree!"—San Francisco Bulletin.

BOSTON'S BARBER REGULATIONS.

Board of Health Orders Sterilization of All That Barbers Use on Customers.

A special dispatch from Boston, May 5, 1900, to the N. Y. Sun gives as new regulations of the Boston Board of Health as to barber shops: "Mugs, shaving brushes and razors shall be sterilized after each separate use thereof. A separate, clean towel shall be used for each person. Material to stop the flow of blood shall be used only in powdered form, and applied on a towel. Powder puffs are prohibited." Wherever Newbro's "Herpicide" is used on face or scalp after shaving or hair cutting, there is no danger as it is antiseptic, and kills the dandruff germ.

MADE STRONG AND WELL.

A Prominent Lady Raised From a Sick Bed by Pe-ru-na---Entirely Cured in Two Weeks.

MRS. E. A. CROZIER.

Mrs. E. A. Crozier, Senior Vice President of the James Morgan Post, W. R. C., the largest corps in Minnesota, writes from "The Landour," 9th and Nicollet, Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"Please accept hearty thanks on behalf of Peruna, that wonderful medicine which raised me from a sick bed and made a strong and well woman of me in two weeks. I suffered with bearing-down pains, backache and continual headache, and found no relief until I tried Peruna. It cured me completely, and I feel as young and well as when 18. I wish every woman knew the merits of the medicine, and no home would be without it."—Mrs. E. A. Crozier.

Mrs. William Henderson, Bordulac, N. C., writes:

"I was troubled with very serious female weakness; had spells of flowing that exhausted me so that I feared I would lose my mind. I suffered untold agony with my back, the pain extending down my left leg. My pain was so severe that I would have welcomed death at any moment—so no one need wonder that I recommend Peruna so highly, for it cured me entirely of that. Not a sign of pain has returned, and that will soon be two years now.

"I am glad that there is a way I can speak, trusting that many a sufferer will read my testimonial, and not only read but believe."—Mrs. Wm. Henderson.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

Free Treatment During Hot Weather by Dr. Hartman.

By the assistance of an experienced staff of physicians, Dr. Hartman proposes to direct the treatment of several thousand women, who, for one reason or another, are ailing.

Each patient sends name, symptoms, and a short description of previous treatment, and are entered in the doctor's books as regular patients.

The treatment is directed from time to time as may be found necessary by the doctor, without charge. Every letter and name is held strictly confidential, and in no case will any one be published except by the express wish of the patient herself.

These cases are treated with the same care and fidelity as the private patients of a regular family physician. During the past year a large number of cases have been cured. Every item of the treatment is directed for which no charge whatever is made.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio, for free treatment.

How He Loved Her.

A negro man went into Mr. E——'s office for the purpose of instituting a divorce suit against his wife. Mr. E—— proceeded to question him as to his grounds for complaint. Mr. E—— looked up from his papers, and saw that big tears were running down over the cheeks of the applicant for divorce.

"Why," said the lawyer, "you seem to care a great deal for your wife? Did you love her?"

"Love her, sir? I jest analyzed her!!"

This was more than professional dignity could withstand, and Mr. E—— laughed until the negro, offended, carried his case elsewhere.—Short Stories.

The Modern Hotel.

"Mr. Dash," said the waiter, "a man just lifted a silver spoon from the table."

"Call the police!" roared the clerk. "The man is a thief."

"But he is one of our regular guests."

"Ah, then he is doubtless a kleptomaniac. You needn't mention it, George."

"And he pays $5 per day on the American plan."

"He does? Why, the gentleman is a souvenir collector. How dare you cast reflections on his character?"—Chicago News.

Millions of Mothers

USE CUTICURA SOAP, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin of infants and children, for rashes, itchings, and chafings, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Millions of Women use Cuticura Soap in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and excoriations, for too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used these great skin purifiers and beautifiers to use any others, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. Cuticura Soap combines delicate emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odours. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

—Young's box factory, at Rockford, burned last night.

—W. D. Freeman is repainting the sign on the Delano High School.

—Dr. R. M. Walter sold his young bay horse to Minneapolis parties for $250.

—John Sherry, this week marketed wheat that he had kept for two years. He says that now he is done farming.

—The village council at their meeting Monday night ordered 100 feet of new hose for the fire company. It cost 70 cents per foot.

—W. D. Freeman deposited with us on Tuesday as fine a mess of roasting ears as we ever saw. They were of the evergreen variety of sweet corn, and large, perfect ears.

—Pianoes are not prized very highly in Delano; that is some pianoes. Marshal Merriman sold one at auction on Monday for $150, and it was bid in by the original owner at that.

—Several land hunters have been in town lately looking for cheap lands. Prices about here are held up pretty well. Fifty dollars an acre is what some ask for their improved farms.

—Yesterday morning's east bound early train was laid over at this place for several hours, on account of the wreck of a freight train, at the soft spot in the road near Long Lake.

—Councilman Conzet picked five bushels of fine transcendents Monday evening. He arrived home in time to treat the balance of the board and others present at the council meeting.

—Prof. E M. Cunningham has resigned the professorship of a school in the Northern part of the state, and accepted a position as Professor of Science and Mathematics at the Hutchinson High School. Hutchinson has one of the largest High Schools in the state.

—It was astonishing how the old wheat came in to market last week. Talk about a famine. It don't look as if anybody about here would have had to starve for want of bread if there had been no wheat raised this year. But now that the new is safe the old is disposed of.

—The council received a petition from L. E. Probst and others asking for a sidewalk from Babb's lot to St. Peter street, on Second street. The petition was granted. This will add much to appearances in that part of town: besides being a convenience to many people who travel that way.

—The school house is being cleaned and aired preparatory to the fall term. Under the circumstances it should be thoroughly fumigated. It might prevent another outbreak of smallpox to have that done. "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure" in a case of that kind.

—The friends of Fred Barber, a former Delano boy, will be pleased to learn that he has been granted a patent on a flat iron; that the bank at Hutchinson, where he now lives is giving him financial backing and that he is going into manufacturing irons at that place, with a prospect of becoming well to do.

—"There is No Place Like My Own Fair Minnesota", the new and popular song written by Rev. Dr. Driver, of Mankato, has been received by us. The Dr. had already established a reputation before producing this lively song. Price postpaid 30 cts., published by Driver & Co., Mankato, Minn.

—The streets were nicely cleaned Saturday. It seems as if it would be as well to have a stock yard outside of the village streets for the selling and buying of stock, leaving the streets more free to the people on Fair Days. The streets would not then need so much cleaning, and the stock market would be helped rather than hindered by having a good safe, comfortable place in which to do business outside of the streets of the village.

—The St. Paul Trade Journal annual number arrived last Saturday. H. P. Hall is president of the publishing Co. and manager of the Journal, which is synonomous to saying it is neatly gotten up and a good one. Our former fellow townsman, George W. Rodgers, Grand Page of the United Commercial Travelers of America, has his picture which doesn't flatter him any, and splendid writeup in the number.

—Len Dedrick planted, last spring, two and a half acres of white navy beans, and wishes now, that he had planted four acres more to beans instead of wheat. He has been helping pull them this week, and says the crop is fine and worth $3.40 per bushel with prospects of a rise. If our farmers would give attention to a few more articles they can raise better than wheat they would find they would often have much more ready cash. Many farmers don't even raise beans for their own family use. There is lots of nutriment in beans, and properly prepared they make a food that most people like as well as do the Bostonians.

—The ball team went to Watertown Sunday to play off the third of a series with the team collected together in that place. Seven full innings were played with the score 7 to 6 in favor of Delano. In the 8th Watertown commenced a big kick which resulted in ending the game.

Watertown made all of their scores in the first inning and after that stood no show whatever of scoring, and it didn't look as though they would score if the two teams played a straight week, while Delano was getting onto the left handed twirler from Arlington in a way that made him want to quit, and he seized the first opportunity of doing so. The dispute started over a three base hit by Ball, the first man up in the 8th inning. Everyone, including the umpire, was watching the ball out in left field, and when it got back into the diamond the runner was safe on 3rd, and so declared by the Umpire. Thereupon Watertown's first baseman entered a protest, stating that Ball had forgot to touch 1st base while making the circuit. Watertown started a big kick and refused to play, so the game ended 7 to 6 for Delano.

After this, the Forrester teams from the two towns played. Delano also won this by a score of 13 to 16.

—A special election is called for Monday, Aug. 26, at the City Hall, to elect a Justice of the Peace. A man who has some interests in the village, and who can read a law book if necessary, has good judgement, is fearless and honest, and has good common sense should be chosen. There are matters coming before a Justice occasionally that demand for the safety of the public all these qualifications. It is apt to be the case that two little attention is given to who fills this important office, and the village and county are loosers. Bonds to buy a park are also to be voted on. Had arrangements been made to vote on bonds to pay a fixed price for a certain piece of land for a park there would, no doubt, have been a park forthcoming. But when it comes to voting bonds of the village for $1,500 to place in the hands of a couple of men to buy a park, without even knowing definitely that they can get one within a couple of miles of town that will suit half the people, it is hardly to be expected that bonds will carry. A mass meeting should have been called and people should have had an opportunity to discuss the advisability of having a park and of deciding which one they preferred, and had a little something to say about where the $1,500 they are to pay taxes to raise goes to.

Eye: Dr. Walman, the Eye Specialist and Optician makes his regular visit to Delano Aug. 29, at Dr. O'Connor's office.

Personal.

Dr. Murphy, of Waverly, called on Delano friends Sunday.

Miss Della Briley, of Minneapolis, is visiting friends in Delano.

I. Gutzwiller and Mrs. Mary Bentz visited Duluth this week.

W. D. Douglas, of Montrose, drove down Wednesday on business.

Miss Maud Price went to Minneapolis on a visit Wednesday evening.

Mrs. J. A. Brasie, of Monticello, visited Delano friends this week.

D. D. Ames, of Rockford, made Delano a short visit Wednesday.

Mr. Perry, of Minneapolis, was a business visitor to Delano yesterday.

Attorney W. H. Cutting, of Buffalo, was a GAZETTE caller this morning.

C. W. Kerrick and wife, of Minneapolis, visited Delano friends Sunday.

Mrs. Mowatt and son William, drove to the City Tuesday for several days visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Jacobs, of Hennepin county drove over on business, Wednesday.

Robert E. Sturman left Wednesday for Oberon, N. Dak., to work in the carpenter crew, building depots.

Miss Grace Frutch, who has been visiting relatives here the past week, returned home to Minneapolis, this morning.

Eddie and Willie Probst who have been on a visit to their grandmother Haffners at Moreton, N. D., returned home Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Dr. J. S. Shrader and Beth, accompanied by her father J. C. McDonald, left Sunday morning for Springfield to join the Dr. in their new home.

Miss Elsie Belden, of Montrose, came down Wednesday for a visit at her Uncle Fred's. She expects to attend Hamline University this winter.

Hon. C. G. Haigren came home from the cities Wednesday evening. His wife and his sister, Mrs. Charlotte Metzger, drove over from Watertown to meet him.

Jerry Brothers, of Columbia, South Carolina, visited his grandmother, Mrs. J. P. Lyle, here this week. He left left last evening for Williston, N. D, for a two week's visit Felex Longley and wife, of St. Bonifacius, visited Delano relatives Wednesday. He says he is a free man now, having turned the post office over to his successor this week.

Mrs. M. A. Chance returned home Tuesday evening from Rovalton, Little Falls, and other places where she visited relatives and friends. She says "There is no place like home".

O'Hair's camping party returned Saturday from Lake Independence. Among those who visited there were Stella Davis, Merel Jones, Stella Moody, and a number from the City.

Peter Mayer, of Minneapolis, is taking a two week's visit vacation with Delano friends. He says he is going to quit railroading. He has a good offer in the wholesale grocery business.

Prof. Emery Cunningham and wife returned home Wednesday from Hutchinson where they visited friends. His father, and sister Viola and Miss Stella Moody met them at Mayer station.

County Cullings.

A Sunday School convention is to be held at Buffalo, September 26, 27, and 28. Every Sunday School in the county is invited. Each school is to have four representatives. Ernest Allin, a Hamline student is in charge.

Barney McKelg, of Maple Lake, on Monday tried to kill his son's wife with an ax. He then went to the barn and sprinkled paris green over the feed for the animals. Next he placed paris green in water and drank some, resulting in his death in about three hours. He was about 60 years of age.

Four Weary Willies were put off the east bound passenger train last Tuesday. The men were beating their way back from the harvest fields of the Dakotas, not having been able to secure work; at least that was their story.—Cokato Enterprise.

You should have sent them to the Eagle office, Bro. Carlson, The Eagle says: "No man that wants work need be out of a job." All those who are obliged to tramp back from the west should stop at the Delano Eagle office and register. Of course the Old Bird will kindly publish the list.

A sad accident is reported from Mike Burgoine's place over in Wright county involving the loss of both feet to Mr. Burgoine's 4 year old son. It appears that the little tot was riding with his father on the mower and was lifted of into the swath to rest while the father drove around once. While left alone the boy in a spirit of play crept into the tall grass to hide. The father not seeing him, drove on, with the result that the sickle bar caught the little fellow's legs, cutting off both feet above the ankles. Mr. Burgoine, who immediately jumped off to rescue the boy, had one of his feet badly lacerated. The little fellow was taken to Elk River for surgical aid and is reported to be doing well.—Anoka Free Press

Public Incensed.

There was a disturbance in New York not long ago. A starved, tired, sick horse was dragging a truck loaded with coping stones along Brodway. Its strength gave out and it dropped. The driver belabored the wretched animal with a heavy whip, jerked with all his strength upon the reins and finally pulled the horse up to its knees. Then he renewed his beating.

This performance caused a crowd to gather, and it was not long before the temper of that crowd became warmer than even the high temperature of an August day would warrant. The driver was warned to stop, and threatening gestures were made in his direction, but he was a stubborn sort of person, and the more the crowd talked the more fiercely he thrashed the horse. He finally succeeded in driving away, but at the pace he was able to go the crowd could easily keep up with him and did. When he began to beat the horse once more the crowd closed in on him, and a policeman of the Broadway squad arrived on the scene. Then the crowd began to tell the policeman what to do. One well dressed man said, "Arrest him, officer, and I'll make a complaint." The driver, his temper now up as high as that of the crowd, declined to get off his seat, and there was a general cry of "Pull him off that truck!"

It did not take long to do it. A dozen people hustled the man off his seat, and some more unhitched the horse, and an elderly man gave the prisoner a cordial blow on the side of the face. He did not need to follow the Biblical injunction to turn the other cheek, for there were people on the other side of him ready to attend to that cheek, and two or three chorus girls hit him over the head with their umbrellas. Altogether, he spent the next few minutes being hustled about and thrashed, while the horse rested and looked on, and it is to be hoped that the animal enjoyed it. As soon as the policeman could get through the crowd he marched his prisoner off to jail.

Of course, it is not to be argued that it is always best for the public to take the law into its own hands, but there are times when it seems to be unavoidable. If the man had been maltreating a woman or a small boy of Broadway at that time of day, or at any time when there was a crowd about, he would probably have been made to suffer quite as severely, and the spectators would not have waited for the police. The kind of rascal who is given to pounding those who are manifestly unable to defend themselves against him knows perfectly well that the public will not stand any doings of the sort in public. He therefore confines that sort of brutality to the privacy of his own home. He has quite enough intelligence and self control to do that. There is no reason why he should not be made to feel the same need of self restraint in the case of a horse or any other dumb animal. The trouble has been hitherto that the public conscience was not sufficiently awake to notice whenever a big, rough bully thrashed a horse. It should be thus awakened. It is just as proper for a crowd to stop that sort of proceeding as for the passers by to interfere to stop any other sort of misdemeanor until the police arrive. One cannot feel sorry for the individual who figures in this case. He was big, strong and healthy, and he suffered for a few minutes a modified form of the misery he had inflicted on a wretched, sick, half starved animal whose life he had made a perpetual calvary.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 16, 1901

The adage about birds that can sing and won't sing should be equally applicable to public officials. At least that is the unanimous verdict of a joint committee from the American Anti-Trust League and the Knights of Labor, and most unprejudiced men are likely to vote aye. These gentlemen know that the Attorney General of the U. S. can do his duty, by proceeding against the big steel trust for having violated the Sherman anti trust law, and they are determined to make him do it or know the reason why. They are proceeding in a businesslike way; have employed two lawyers—ex Attorney General Monett, of Ohio, and Mr. A. A. Lipscomb, of Washington,—to collect evidence of the violation of the Sherman anti trust law and submit it to to the Attorney General with a demand that he begin legal proceeding in the name of the U. S. against the trust. Speaking of their intentions, Mr. H. B. Martin, Chairman of the joint committee, said: "In the event of the complaint being blocked in the Attorney General's office, or if he does not consider it advisable to act in the matter, we have decided to lay the papers in the case before the president of the U. S. In fact, we are prepared to take steps for a mandamus proceeding if we are pushed to extremes, but it is doubtful if either of the last two named actions will be necessary, and we are proceeding with the idea that there will be no hitches of any description." They are also preparing to bring legal actions against the steel trust und the laws of the States in which it carries on its business. The action of the committee is receiving endorsements from every direction and some of them have been accompanied by the strongest evidence of genuineness—cash contributions to aid in paying the necessary expenses.

Strong pull is being brought to bear on Secretary Root to save Capt. J. C. Read, a son of a rich iron manufacturer of Pittsburg, who was convicted by a court martial of complicity in the comissary frauds at Manila and sentenced to three years in the military prison, at that place, to be dishonorably discharged from the army. Read's lawyers have secured a promise from Secretary Root to review the case. One of the claims of the lawyers is that the court martial was irregular because nine of its members were officers of the regular army; that Read being a volunteer officer was entitled to trial by a court composed exclusively of volunteer officers. But the strongest claim in Read's behalf is that represented by his daddies dollars.

If the story that Sampson might not appear before the Schley Court of Inquiry was put out as a feeler by the anti-Schley gang in the Navy Department to ascertain how the public would take some sort of official juggling that would enable Sampson to avoid the trial which his cross examination by "Jerry" Wilson, Schley's chief counsel, is certain to be, as many suspect, they must be thoroughly convinced by the howl it raised that the public will not stand for any such business as that. It was Sampson who was Schley's first accuser and who was mainly instrumental in the formation of the naval clique which has so persistently sought to ruin Schley, and it is Sampson who must either clear himself or forever condemn himself. Although the clique pretends to talk as though Sampson had no more interest in the court than any other officer who happens to be a witness, every mother's son of them knows that as soon as that court gets started it will be plain to all the world that it is Sampson, and not Schley, who is on trial, and it is a great deal more likely that the report and recommendations of the court will be against Sampson than against Schley. In view of these things it is absurd for anybody to talk about Sampson not appearing before the Court.

Senator Tillman, of S. C., passed through Washington this week. In reply to questions he expressed the opinion that Senator McLaurin was losing, instead of gaining strength; that if the primary election were to be held at this time he could not get more than 10,000 of the 95,000 votes of the state, and that he has absolutely no chance of being named for Senator at the primary election to be held next year.

Senator Cullom, of Ill. will not figure in history as a great statesman, but when it comes to political dickering he can hold his own with the slickest of them. He has as good as landed the nice position of Comptroller of Currency for his son in law, W. B. Ridgeley, and the way he did it was as pretty a bit of political dickering as any politician could have done. When Mr. Dawes, who is after Senator "Billy" Mason's seat with the backing of the administration, resigned the comptrollership, to take effect Oct. 1 he got Mr. McKinley's promise that an Illinois man should have the place. Then Cullom got Dawes to endorse his son in law, and afterwards got Mason's endorsement, thus combining the heads of the two factions among Illinois republicans, and practically assuring the appointment.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

BOER leaders are paying little attention to Lord Kitchner's proclamation more than to protest against it, and to announce that they have no intention of stopping the fight until their independence has been acknowledged.

SINGULAR! So far as we have heard, Mr. Bryan is to speak nowhere this year.—Eagle.

This rather hard on the Kansas City people who are expecting him Labor Day. Or, is it one on the Old Bird that isn't up on Mr. Bryan's dates?

ANOTHER charivari row is reported from North St. Paul. A bridegroom thought he had furnished beer money enough and objected to having the charvari boys repeat on him. A fight ensued; several were bruised and one man severely injured in the head.

MINNEAPOLIS was visited by one of the worst storms it has had for years, on Sunday last. The G. N. elevator was partly blown down; Mendenhall's greenhouse had many panes of glass broken by hnil, and large numbers of fine plants and flowers ruined. The storm extended into the suburbs, and out towards Brooklyn Centre much damage is reported.

RECENT statistical reports place the number of physicians in this country as greatly on the increase. It is claimed for Minnesota that there is a doctor for every 1200 people in the state. Where a few years ago, people had to go ten or twenty or more miles for a doctor now they can find one in many places by going less than five miles. And where the country doctor a few years ago needed several horses, and often had to travel twenty miles or more, now he is treading on some neighbor's field when he gets three or four miles from home, and one horse can easily make the short trips necessary.

IT is reported that several mills in Southern Minnesota have organized a society to protect their own interests. That in order to get railroad facilities equal to larger mills they have found it necessary to combine. Of course they did not forget to raise the price of flour at home.

It is claimed that other organizations will soon be formed in other lines of business. It seems lately that in order to do business in any line it is necessary to belong to the organization, or to many organizations. This is fast becoming an organized nation. "Equal rights for all and special privileges for none" would be good enough.

Not many years ago a boy or some neighbor would take the nearest path through the woods to town for medical help, expecting to ride back with the doctor. Now the farmers, many of them, have a better buggy and as fast a horse as the physician and surgeon, and either takes him home with them, or brings the patient to town for treatment.

Doctors are not the only people who have become numerous. Most country towns have several lawyers who are obliged to get a part of their living by collateral branches of industry. Ministers abound in numbers; school teachers are in plenty. The professions all seem filled. Even editors are fequently met with. People seem less dependent upon tnemselves. Where they used to wait on themselves they now go to an expert or a specialist; thus more business is made for many more people than was the case when it was a harder matter to get someone to do for them.

The young man often finds it a hard matter to find a location suitable to his acquirements and to his taste. The man that would succed must bend his energies in one direction. He must concentrate his forces and keep abreast of the times. In a very short time, unless care is taken, the professional man finds he is behind the times. People want the latest fads; they are willing to suffer many inconveniences and much cost to try them. And the successful man must be able to accomodate all comers.

THE State Fair is to be opened Monday by Vice President Roosevelt's speech, at 10:30 a. m. The Roosevelt marching club is to escort him from the gate to the speaker's stand. He is not to march in the Labor Day parade. In the afternoon he is to review the old 13th Minnesota Regiment in front of the grand stand. He is to ride the best horse in Minnesota.

Pet Animals.

It has sometimes been argued that the keeping of pet animals is one way to develop the humane instincts of people in general. Like other practices, however, this one is good only when it is not abused, as it frequently is. When one considers the number of miserable little beasts yearly trapped, captured, and bred in cages for the amusement of mankind, it seems as if some better method of amusement might be devised.

Of course, there are people who make friends and companions of their pets, and although nobody can be absolutely certain about animal psychology, it may be that the dog, horse or bird derives an amount of pleasure from contact with the superior mind which more than repays the loss of freedom. In the case of a highly bred dog or saddle horse it is almost certain that this is so But these are in the minority when the whole number of domesticated animals is considered.

In the first place, it is certainly cruelty to take a wild creature out of its natural environment and place it in a cage where it can have little exercise, no natural companionship and often no suitable food. It is entirely possible for people living in a country town or small village to tame squirrels, birds, and other wild things without in the least interfering with their freedom, if they choose to use a little patience. Most wild animals will come where they are not afraid of being hurt. The red squirrel can be coaxed to come from his hole and eat corn from the hand of a human being and birds of all kinds are easily tamed in the same way. One who has once enjoyed the deligh of winning the confidence of the wood folk will never again wish to keep any of them in a cage.

The animal which is bred for the purpose of domestication, like the lap dog, the Persian cat, the white mouse or the canary, is usually inferior in intelligence to the wild animal, for the very good reason that it does not need as much brains to be fed, petted and put to sleep as to get one's living in the midst of a throng of enemies. There are two ways, however, in which the keeping of these animals can be made really beneficial to children and adults; one is by making companions of them, developing all the intelligence they have, and the other is by choosing pets of a sort whose intelligence is already considerable. Children should be encouraged to be kind to their pets and to make friends with them, and this cannot be done unless there is intelligence on the other side. If the comfort and well being of the animal is studied it will be good for the master as well as the pet, for altruism generally works in that way, but candor will compel most people to admit that nothing of the kind is usually done.

List of Patents.

Granted to Minnesota Inventors this week, Reported by C. A. Snow & Co. Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, Opp. U. S. Patent Office.

J. Caldwell, Minneapolis, leather stretching device. F. H. George, Minneapolis, frame for stretching leather. S. Hoergner, Faribault, wheel axle. E. S. Houghton, Brainerd, jeweler's heat lamp. P. Thomas, Minneapolis, cone friction clutch. C. A. P. Turner, Minneapolis, crystalizer. W. W. Ward, Fairmount, signaling device for cars.

For copy of any patent send 10 cents in postage stamps with date of this paper to C. A. Snow & Co. Washington, D. C.

BRAINERD is having quite a sensation. A short time ago it is reported that W. S. Cox, editor of the Brainerd Arena, recently published an article without names, which Hon. F. A. Ferris took upon himself to correct him for. He attempted to kill the editor, it is claimed, but failed. So on Wednesday night it is now claimed, three men called the editor out, kidnapped him drove a mile away and gave him a coat of tar. The editor claims to know at least one of the party, and further developments are expected.

A PLAN is said to be on foot in Minnesota to pattern after Kansas in the creamery business. Topeka has a large creamery which does the work of a hundred smaller ones, thus doing away with the hundred expensive buttermakers, bosses, engineers and other employes. It is claimed that farmers would get more for cream. But how long woule they get more? Wouldn't the manufacturers want all the profits? Would the consumer or the farmer, who is also consumer notice any difference in the price of butter on account of the change, unless it be a raise?

Do U. S. Government Bonds Draw 10 per cent interest?

It is my opinion that all those sold to National Banks do. It is plain enough that when a National Bank buys $100,000 in government bonds drawing 4 per cent interest and is granted the right to issue $90,000 in paper money, which they can loan to the people at from 6 to 10 per cent according to time of loan; that the people, though in two different payments, are yet paying 10 per cent on the money that the U. S. government bonds were sold for, or 4 per cent on the government bonds and 6 per cent on the money issued by the National Bank.

This is the foundation that The National Bank is built on, and it is then a matter of history that the National Bank is the first trust formed in the United States. A National Bank is a trust because the man who can collect $100,000 in gold is guaranteed 10 per cent interest on his investment in U. S. government bonds by the general government of the U. S.

I, for one, am in favor of the U. S. issuing their own paper money. But if they have got to sell bonds, let them be sold in the open market and to the highest bidder, and not form a government trust to rob its people of ten per cent guaranteed interest money. The large amount of gold in the U. S. treasury has all been deposited there by National Banks and the people are paying 10 per cent interest on every dollar of it. Because it represents U. S. bonds sold, on which the U. S. government has guaranteed that the people will pay 10 per cent interest.

In the twentieth century do we need such a government trust? Is not 10 per cent oppression of the people? How many farms in the United States are paying ten per cent on the investment?

And while we love our country and all are thrilled at her strides of greatness, we do not want to pay a tax of 10 per cent for the privilege.

We love our country because it is right. In this lies the strength of the nation Then it is for the people to know the right and do it.

General Fred D. Grant, who is a republican and a high tariff republican at that, has found occasion to voice indignant criticism of tariff "as she is worked." The other day the minions of the custom house at New York went through his luggage even as a Kansas cyclone goes thorugh a blackberry patch. Thereat he waxed exceeding wroth. "In all the time that I have been away," my baggage has never been examined. Not that I objected to that so much as the fact that, after making me declare every thing I had bought and swear to the truth of my statement, they should immediately search my trunks to see wether I am a liar and smuggler, which this government presumes me to be." Those who go abroad are, as a rule, best able to bear the burden of high tariff taxation, but even they will occasionally smuggle who servants of the government seem to take them for smugglers and liars. Some of them are, no doubt, but that makes it all the more embarrassing and and is no argument for high protection. As General Grant stood ready to pay $33 in tariff taxes on $63 worth of goods, his wrath was excusable—aye even right as Minneapolis Times

THE WHISTLER.

You'd oughter to hear him whistle once,
That long-legged boy o' mine;
He was the ornarest galoot
Of the whole kit of nine.
His mother had it in for him
To be a preacher chap,
Because he hadn't sense enough
To earn his daily pap.

But one night when we sat around
An' all was kinder still
An' peaceful, an' the harvest moon
Was climbin' o'er the hill,
There come a straggler up the road
Among the moonbeams white
A-whistlin' every tune on earth
With all his main an' might.

He did a stunt of rag-time tunes,
Then patriotic airs,
Like "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground"
Or "How a Soldier Fares."
And then, to show what he could do,
He'd jump to old "Ben Bolt,"
An' when he'd whistled that all through,
On "Belle Mahone" took hold.

Next "Listen to the Mockin' Bird,"
That was the sweetest toot;
'Twas just as ef each note was drawn
From out a silver flute.
But when he struck "Through Georgia"
I knew the whistlin' limb
Purtendin' to be some one else
Was our old triflin' Jim.

An' now he doesn't do a thing,
But earn his daily wage
By dressin' up in fancy clothes
A-whistlin' on a stage!
But how he learned it unbeknown
To mother and to me
Shows what it is to have a genius in the family.

A Rejected Lover Avenged

By Margaret Blount.

"OH, GEORGINA! wait one moment. I have something strange to tell you."

Georgina Gray, a beauty and a belle, halted on the marble step of her home in Fifth avenue, to hear the news which Louise Palmer, her next-door neighbor and most intimate friend, was bringing.

"Be quick, Louise," she said. "I am to meet George in the park at three, and I shall be late if I don't mind."

"My news is about George Howard," was the significant reply, as Louise joined her.

"Indeed!"

"Yes. You know that rich old Uncle Stephen of his?"

"Of course I do. He is to leave George a large fortune when he dies."

"He is dead, Georgina."

"Are you sure?"

"Perfectly. And he has not left George one single penny."

"Why, how can you know that?" asked the beauty, pouting.

"It is in the paper this morning The notice of the death and the contents of the will."

"What a shame!"

"Isn't it? Poor George! I wonder what he will do? And what shall you do, Georgina?"

"Oh, I don't know, I'm sure," said the heiress, turning to ascend her own steps again.

Louise stared.

"I thought you were going to the park, Georgina?" she said.

Georgina only smiled and waved her hand as she disappeared. But when she was alone in her own room, she tore off her walking things and threw herself on the bed, to weep the little bitter tears of rage and regret, for the loss of a lover who had been very dear to her.

"Such a shame of that old wretch to treat him so!" she sobbed. "But I can't marry a poor man. I can't descend to the level of a poor man's wife. I must give him up, and take that disagreeable old Burton, with his money bags and his snuff. And poor George is so graceful and so handsome! Oh, dear! This world is a very hard and sad one to live in after all. I'm tired of it all."

The next afternoon, when George Howard called at the Fifth avenue mansion to inquire why he had not been blessed with the sight of his ladylove in the park on the previous day, he noticed a bent and insignificant-looking man, badly dressed, who shambled down the steps and entered the handsome brougham in waiting.

"There goes old Burton. He is worth six millions, if he is worth a penny," said a passer-by to a lady leaning on his arm.

George turned a wondering glance in the direction of the fast receding brougham. What could "Old Burton" want at the house of his Georgina?

Alas! he knew only too well when he was shown into the familiar drawing-room, and saw Georgina there, in a ravishing Parisian toilet, more beautiful than ever, but with no welcoming smile for him.

A magnificent solitaire diamond shone upon her hand. The flashing gem was scarcely brighter or colder than the brilliant blue eyes that met his own.

"Mr. Howard," she said, coldly, "I did not expect to see you here."

"Not expect me! What can you mean, Georgina?" he stammered. "And why did you not come to the park yesterday, as you promised?"

"I was more agreeably engaged," she replied. "Mr. Burton, who is an old friend of my father's, spent the evening here."

"And he has but just left you," said George, glancing at the diamond.

She smiled and looked down at the gem in her turn.

"What am I to understand by all this?" cried the young man. "You know as well as I do how we parted when we met last. Why do you meet me in this cold way, now Georgina?"

She frowned.

"My note will explain all, Mr. Howard. I sent it to your hotel over an hour ago, by a servant. I am quite sure you will find it there now."

The hint was so direct and so merciless that George Howard lost his patience.

"You have thrown me over for a richer man. You have sold yourself, Georgina, for the money bags of that old man. And this is the girl I loved—the girl whom I believed so true that she would be all the fonder when reverses came!"

"It is useless to talk like that," said Miss Gray, in an icy tone. "I have not been trained or educated to become a poor man's wife. Luxury is essential to my happiness. If I should be foolish enough to marry you in your present circumstances, we should both be wretched in a month. Nothing will induce me to so sacrifice myself."

"Oh!" said Howard, drawing nearer, "you have heard of my uncle's will."

"I have."

"When—how—who told you the news?" he asked.

"Louise Palmer told me yesterday afternoon."

"As you were going to the park to meet me," he said, quietly.

She did not deny it.

"And has she said nothing more to you since?"

"I have not seen her since. I have seen no one."

"Except Mr. Burton," said Howard, laughing. "Well, he is a happy man. He has no uncle to disinherit him. Farewell, Miss Gray. Before long I shall feel even more grateful to you than I do now; for I am old-fashioned enough to wish to marry a wife who will love me, and not my bank account."

He bowed low and left her.

As the door closed behind him she realized for one brief moment what she was losing.

"Come back to me, George!" she said, faintly.

But he did not hear it.

And as he went down the street she consoled herself by a dream of the future, seen in the depths of her brilliant engagement ring.

Six months after, Mrs. Burton sat in her private box at the opera, with her aged husband by her side. She was glorious with jewels, and her dress was an exact copy of one which a famous French beauty had worn on a similar occasion not long before.

Yet people whispered among themselves that, in spite of carriages, horses, opera boxes, French toilettes and jewels, the bride of the millionaire looked worn, and restless, and unhappy, and that the beauty which had won "Old Burton" from his lifelong bachelorhood was speedily vanishing beneath that look of care.

"I DID NOT EXPECT TO SEE YOU HERE."

Suddenly the door of an opposite box opened; a tall, handsome young man entered, leading a lovely creature, dressed in bridal white. Her golden hair was drawn away from her fair, low brow and oval face, caught by a circlet of pearls, and left to ripple over her shoulders in a profusion of large, soft curls. Her large, blue eyes were always shyly seeking the face of her husband to droop before his fond, admiring gaze. The pair were so young, so happy, so evidently and honestly in love with each other that every glass in the house was turned that way—the women envying the bride, the men the bridegroom, and some, indeed, among the latter, not scrupling to say so openly.

Mrs. Burton looked also, and the iron entered her soul at the sight of her old lover, so fully enraptured with the beauty of his young wife that he did not even know, or care, that she was in the house.

Old Burton looked, too, and sighed as he marked the shy yet clinging affection betrayed by the lovely bride. Not in that way had his beautiful wife ever looked on him since the day when she promised to be his!

"So romantic, isn't it?" said Garrison Palmer, who had accompanied the ill-matched couple to the opera. "He was disinherited by his Uncle Stephen, and all the money left to that girl, who was a distant relative of both. And George Howard went east on business, saw her, fell in love with her, and married her, and never knew that she was the heiress of his lost fortune till a month after the wedding day. It is like the things one reads in a novel. But you don't expect to see those things in real life, do you, dear Georgina?"

Mrs. Burton shook her head. She could not have spoken. In that one moment of supreme emotion her rejected lover—had he cared to know it—was most bitterly avenged!—N. Y. Weekly.

An Incorrigible.

"If there ever was a terrible child in this world," remarked the worried mother, "he's one."

"What's his particular fault?"

"Do what I will, I can't break him of the habit of telling the truth right out when we have company."—Philadelphia Times.

U. S. Senator Stone.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 26.—Former Governor William J. Stone, vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, who has been seriously ill, appeared at his office to-day for the first time in five weeks.

In an interview the governor declared himself a candidate for the United States senate to succeed the Hon. G. G. Vest, and said he still believed that silver should be coined into standard money.

"Bimetallism," he said, is still an issue, but the United States is better off than other countries to-day with the gold standard."

Speaking of the proposed reorganization of the Democratic party the governor said none was necessary. He declared W. J. Bryan to be the most powerful man in the Democratic party to day.—Pioner Press.

Gen. Lawton's name will be perpetuated by one of the most thriving towns of Oklahoma. That town probably will be a candidate for capital honors when the territory becomes a state. The Dowager Empress Frederick, who died recently, was the oldest daughter of the late Queen Victoria, and was born in November, 1840. She married the late Emperor Frederick III of Germany in 1858, and had seven children by him, the eldest of whom is now emperor of Germany. Hers was one of the few matches made by royalty in which the feature of love played any part, and she and her husband lived most happily.

A man has been found with two hearts, but it is not stated whether his heartfelt sympathy is two-fold or whether his sentimental emotions are divided. It would interest the public to know of his domestic affairs. Instances are not wanting where a man with a single heart has found room for divers so-called affections of that organ. Science will not be fully satisfied until this double-heart development is given a more critical examination along emotional lines.

A Berlin paper publishes an article giving some interesting information about the private mail received by the sovereigns of the world. The pope receives no less than 22,000 letters a day, King Edward is next in order with the comparatively small number of 1,000, while the czar and the German emperor receive about 600 or 700 a day. The pope employs no fewer than 35 secretaries and does not personally inspect one letter in 10,000 addressed to him. The stamping "personal and confidential" is not recognized by royalty.

Medical journals are puzzling over the problem of finding patients for the thousands of fledgling doctors who are now graduated year after year. The professions of law and of medicine are already overcrowded. Of course there is room at the top, but the lower rungs of the ladder are beset by a throng of young men who are trampling upon each other in their eagerness to get a foothold. In American towns and villages the office signs of physicians are overplentiful already, and attorneys are also multitudinous.

Several New Yorkers have planned to spend from $75,000 to $250,000 each on stables. It is argued from this that the automobile is a passing sensation. There is room, though, for both means of locomotion, and the country must have horses to run races and put on style with. These are times of fortunes so large that the owners of them do not know what to do with them. Human experience has taught that the best way to get rid of an accumulated and accumulating surplus is to run a "string of horses" or to manage a minstrel show.

The story that an editor in Michigan was robbed of a large sum of money on a street car may be true, and we have no desire to raise the question of veracity, but we challenge any one to find an editor who would ride on a street car with a satchel full of money. He could not do it, because of considerations not worth mentioning. But granting for the sake of argument that he did have the money, in a grip and on a street car, he would have it on his lap and hang on to it as though it were a life preserver in midocean.

R. G. EVANS IS DEAD.

Death Comes Without Warning to the Eminent Lawyer.

While Surrounded by His Children at His Home He is Succumbs to an Attack of Heart Disease. Foremost in Law and Politics

Minneapolis, Aug. 26.—Robert G. Evans, United States district attorney, died suddenly yesterday morning on the balcony of his residence, 2036 Queen avenue south, Kenwood. Heart disease was the cause of death. Mr. Evans was 47 years old.

The circumstances attending the death of Mr. Evans were unusual, not to say dramatic.

About 7:45 o'clock in the morning Mr. Evans went to his daughter's bedroom. Grasping the footboard of her bed he shook it to awaken her, as he seemed unable to speak. Just as she awoke Mr. Evans staggered from the room and made his way back through his own room and out onto the balcony over the porch.

There he seized the railing, threw back his head and gasped for air. Then he sank to the floor, dead.

His daughter, Margaret, reached the balcony a moment later. So did Mrs. Edward S. Pattee, who resides directly opposite the Evans home. Mrs. Pattee, who was seated on her porch, witnessed the death of Mr. Evans.

She saw him come out onto the balcony and clutch the railing. She saw him throw back his head, gasp for breath and fall. She ran across the street and into the house, reaching the balcony almost as soon as did Miss Evans. Mr. Evans was dead before his daughter arrived at his side.

W. H. Levings, who lives next door, was aroused, and he at once summoned Dr. J. E. Moore. Dr. Moore arrived five minutes later, but nothing could be done except to carry the body into the house.

Robert Grenap Evans was born at Troy, Ind., March 18, 1854. He was the son of Joseph S. Evans and was of Welsh and English descent.

Mr. Evans attended the public schools of Rockport, Ind., until his eighteenth year, when he entered the sophomore class of the University of Indiana at Bloomington and completed his junior year in that institution.

His inclinations were toward law as a profession and in 1875 he entered the law office of Charles L. Wedding, of Rockport, and began his legal education, at the same time practicing before the justice courts of Spencer county. In 1876 he was admitted to the bar.

He left Rockport soon after and settled at Vincennes, where he formed a law partnership with Judge F. W. Viehe, which continued until 1884, when Mr. Evans came to Minneapolis.

In July of that year he formed a law partnership with Judge Daniel Fish, which continued until November, 1887, when it was terminated by the retirement of Judge Fish from general practice.

Mr. Evans then formed a business connection with A. M. Keith, Charles T. Thompson and E. K. Fairchild, under the firm name of Keith, Evans, Thompson & Fairchild, a partnership which existed up to the time of Mr. Evans' death. He was local attorney for the Omaha road from 1884 to 1895.

In 1877 he married Miss Mary Graham, of Evansville, Ind. Mrs. Evans died April 13 of this year, after a lingering illness.

He leaves three children, a daughter, Margaret, and two sons, Stanley and Graham.

He was a member of the Union league, which formerly was an important republican club, and was president of the organization in 1885 and 1886.

President McKinley honored him with the appointment of United States district attorney for Minnesota, which position he held at the time of his death.

Mr. Evans was a man of rare geniality and was courteous to all. His qualities of good fellowship and reputation for square dealing in politics were responsible for the friendly familiarity which has caused him to be known everywhere as "Bob" Evans.

Mr. Evans is survived by seven brothers and two sisters. C. C. Evans and family reside in Minneapolis and Charles Evans lives in Duluth.

WIND, RAIN, HAIL.

A Severe Storm Passes Over Minneapolis, Doing Considerable Damage.

Minneapolis, Aug. 26.—Havoc was caused to property interests by the terrific wind, hail, rain and electrical storm that swept over the city last night. There were no accidents or loss of life, however.

The Great Northern elevators, situated on the St. Louis tracks at Lyndale avenue, received the full fury of the storm. Elevator No. 2, which was burned a little over five years ago, came in for the major share of the damage. The structure, above what is known as the bin floor, is a total wreck, and Manager Hiddleston said that at a rough estimate the damage to that building alone would be in the neighborhood of $50,000.

The 166-foot brick smokestack situated directly between the two elevators, passed through the storm uninjured.

Losses to greenhouse stocks reached, perhaps, $25,000.

Losses to trees, shrubbery, gardens, etc., belonging to private residents, fences, buildings, etc., reached nearly $10,000.

The total loss is anywhere from $175,000 to $200,000.

The handsome colored glass windows in Westminster, Plymouth, Wesley, the First Unitarian and in St. Paul's churches were riddled with hailstones, causing losses of many hundreds of dollars.

The damage to the greenhouses is about $12,000, but the owners' losses amounted to far more than that. There were 20,000 carnation plants in the field, and of these not one is left. Saturday they were worth $5,000. The storm caused a direct loss of from $8,000 to $10,000.

AMERICAN TRADE.

The United States averages exports of 750,000 tons of coal per month.

Every week $20,000 worth of United States typewriters go to England.

Large quantities of California fruit are now being marketed in England.

It has become the fashion among wealthy Germans to ride nothing but American-made bicycles.

Russians are importing large quantities of first-class American cotton seed to build up cotton growing there and in Central Asia.

Coal companies in eastern Tennessee and Kentucky have contracted to mine 100,000 tons of coal for export to Italy during the next year.

American machine tools are so far ahead of German tools that competition is declared by American tool exporters to be out of the question in Germany.

The English bought $360,000 worth of American shoes in 1898 and increased their purchases last year to $1,150,000. English shoe firms are trying to save themselves by putting in American machinery.

STORM'S WILD WORK.

Wind and Flood Cause Great Damage to Property in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

New York, Aug. 26.—The country from above Tarrytown to the center of New Jersey and from eastern Connecticut to Mauch Chunk, Pa., was deluged with a cloudburst whipped with high winds and cut and torn with rushing rivers and cataracts of water from leaden clouds which obscured the whole sky.

The rain fell in torrents, with only two brief intervals when the clouds seemed to pause to refresh themselves. Every street car and railroad line in this whole district was hampered, and in some places traffic was entirely suspended for the night.

Thousands of dollars of damage was done to property. Trees and buildings in Jersey City and Hoboken were blown down. Houses were undermined by water, and only remarkable good fortune prevented great loss of life.

Philadelphia, Aug. 26.—Reports received in this city state that the heavy rains which have fallen almost incessantly during the last week throughout the state have resulted in the most disastrous flood experienced in many years. At Mauch Chunk the storm was attended by four fatalities.

At Wilkesbarre a landslide occurred along the Lehigh Valley railroad at the eastern approach of the Vosburg tunnel and traffic was suspended for several hours. A washout on the Sunbury branch of the Pennsylvania railroad delayed traffic several hours.

In Shamokin, Tamaqua, Pittston and other mining towns many collieries have been flooded and work has been suspended.

El Reno, Okla., Aug. 23.—The latest news from Anadarko in a special to the American states that only two persons, W. T. Tevis, of Weatherford, Tex., and Felix Antone, of Lamar county, Texas, were killed in the storm Wednesday evening. Dana Warren, of Stark county, was badly bruised about the back and abdomen, but will recover. The damage to property is $4,000. About 20 biuldings were almost completely wrecked, and hundreds of tents and great quantities of merchandise were strewn over the prairie.

Reports Thursday indicate that the storm was severe in the country districts. Several people are reported killed and injured and many buildings are reported destroyed, but as the points are off the railroad, nothing definite has been learned. One report says that four persons were killed at a farmhouse a few miles out from Anadarko. It is believed that the damage to crops and live stock will be heavy.

Chickaska, south of El Reno and east of Anadarko in the Indian territory country, was also in the path of the storm. The damage done there, however, appears to have been slight, and no one is reported injured.

Smugglers Arrested.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Probably the most important arrests ever made in connection with the smuggling of Chinese across the Mexican border into the United States were made Friday in Arizona when William M. Hoey, collector of customs at Nogales; B. F. Jossey, an immigrant inspector; Frank How, a Chinaman living in Nogales, and another Chinaman living at Clifton, Mexico, just across the border from Nogales, were taken into custody by special agents of the treasury and secret service operatives. Other arrests are expected to follow within a day or two.

Kills Assailant.

Eureka Springs, Ark., Aug. 26.—James Kizer, ex-policeman, was shot to death at night by Dr. L. D. Fuller, a resident physician. While Dr. Fuller was drawing water from Calef fountain, on Main street, he was assaulted by Kizer, who felled him by a blow from behind, and then, using his heel, Kizer mangled the face of the prostrate man in a horrible manner. The latter regained his feet, and shot and killed Kizer. Dr. Fuller is perhaps fatally hurt. Dr. Fuller had refused Kizer's claim for $2.50 for services as special policeman, and Kizer had sworn revenge.

Filibustering Expedition.

New York, Aug. 27.—Information has been obtained by agents of the Colombian government that a vessel now at a New Jersey port had been engaged by the insurgents for a filibustering expedition. This ship, it is said, is to carry a part of the consignment of 5,000 rifles, ammunition and men for which Gen. Uribe-Uribe telegraphed recently to Dr. A. J. Restrepo, his representative in this city.

Elect Officers.

Denver, Col., Aug. 24.—The American Bar association concluded the business of the main organization at Friday's session. The educational branch held a meeting in the afternoon and the annual dinner occurred at the Brown Palace hotel at night. The following officers were elected: President, U. M. Rose, Little Rock; secretary, John Hinkley, Baltimore; treasurer, Francis Rawle, Philadelphia.

Horse Wrecks a Train.

Barnesville, O., Aug. 27.—A special train on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad carrying Pennsylvania Knights Templar en route to Louisville struck a horse on the Barnesville hill Monday morning and the entire train was ditched. Engineer Milo Francis, of Zanesville, was killed and Fireman Walter Boston, of Newark, was fatally injured. So far as known the passengers escaped with slight bruises.

Terribly Crushed.

Jonesboro, Ill., Aug. 27.—Mrs. Mary J. Seaver and her nine-year-old son were killed in the southwest part of the country by a falling tree. Both were terribly crushed, and a strange feature of the accident was that the woman's heart was picked up 30 feet away, where the violence of the blow had expelled it from the body.

Records Broken.

Philadelphia, Aug. 26.—All previous speed records between Pittsburg, Harrisburg and Philadelphia were smashed when a special train on the Pennsylvania railroad covered the distance of 355 miles from Pittsburg to this city in seven hours and five minutes.

WILL CONTINUE FIGHTING.

Boer Leaders Say They Will Not Heed Kitchener's Proclamation—Surrenders Increasing

London, Aug. 27.—A dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated from Pretoria, Monday, says:

"Three officers and 65 men who were sent north of Ladybrand (Orange River Colony), on the right of Elliot's columns, were surrounded on unfavorable ground and captured by a superior force August 22. One man was killed and four were wounded. The prisoners were released. Am holding an inquiry.

"Have received a long letter from Steyn containing an argumentative statement of the Boer case, and saying he will continue to fight; also a short letter from DeWet to the same effect.

"Botha writes acknowledging the receipt of my proclamation, and protesting against it, and stating that the Boers intend to go on fighting. On the other hand, the surrenders lately have increased considerably."

Another dispatch from Lord Kitchener says:

"Since August 19 22 Boers have been killed, 129 have been made prisoners and 185 have surrendered, including Kruger, a nephew of the ex-president."

FOUR MEN KILLED.

Girders of a New Bridge Fall at Columbia, S. C., and Crush Out Lives of Victims.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 27.—An accident at the new bridge which the Southern railway is constructing across the Congaree river caused the death of four men. One other was fatally and two more seriously injured. The accident was caused by the falling of two steel girders about seven feet long, weighing 14 tons each. The two girders were hoisted about midway of the river above the bridge. The rains of the night previous probably had caused the ropes holding them in place to slip.

The crash came without the slightest warning. There were 75 people on the bridge, spectators and workmen. Three of the men were pinned to the bridge and killed instantly, four more were knocked into the river, two of whom were rescued by a government tug which came up from the Congaree locks a quarter of a mile away.

CLOUDBURST IN GEORGIA.

Great Damage Done at Collinsville by a Big Storm—Railroad Washouts Reported.

Rome, Ga., Aug. 24.—Advices from Collinsville, Ala., state that the town was visited by a cloudburst late Thursday afternoon and greatly damaged. Several stores are reported to have been completely inundated and many residences washed out from their foundations and the Collinsville Clipper office was dismantled. The Alabama Great Southern railroad in that vicinity is washed out in several places and trains are many hours overdue.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 24.—A special to the Constitution from Filijay, Ga., says: Every bridge on Cartecay river, five in all, including the Atlanta, Knoxville & Northern railroad bridge, was washed away Thursday. Many mills are gone and others are damaged. Cartecay river was higher than for 52 years.

Defends Prisoner with Bullets.

Ashville, Ala., Aug. 23.—One man was killed and another probably fatally wounded in a battle here Thursday to save the negro Jim Brown from the vengeance of a mob after he had been tried and sentenced to be hanged on September 20 for rape. The man killed is Walter Blankenship. Arthur Blankenship was probably fatally wounded, and a small boy, the son of James Hanley, was slightly wounded. The Blankenships were brothers, and it is said have been in town since Monday trying to stir up the trouble. Walter died within two hours after being shot and Arthur is in a precarious condition.

Lynchers Foiled.

Lebanon, Ky., Aug. 24.—An unsuccessful attempt was made early Friday morning to lynch Dan Hotten and Charles Shipp, who are confined in the Marion county jail charged with murder. The mob called at the house of Jailer Jackson Clayton, but his wife refused them the keys to the jail. They then went to the jail and began to batter the doors when Officer Brent, who was secreted in a coalshed near by, opened fire upon them. The mob returned the fire but no one was hit. They then dispersed.

Engine Jumps the Rails.

Janesville, Wis., Aug. 26.—A Northwestern road engine and box car plunged through the Janesville canning factory. The building was of brick, just finished at a cost of $150,000. It is now in ruins. The engine struck the big water tank and it fell lengthwise of the building and crushed it. Thirty million tin cans were smashed, and all the costly special machinery, engine and boilers were crushed. The loss will reach $100,000.

Bank Closes Its Doors.

Marietta, O., Aug. 27.—The bank of New Metamoras, Washington county, a private bank, closed its doors Monday. The bank had deposited $50,000 with Superior Street Savings and Banking company, Cleveland, which went to the wall last Friday. Failing to withdraw these deposits it was compelled to close its doors. The owners are able to pay the loss, but the bank will hardly resume.

Sweeping Injunction.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 26.—Judge Baker, of the federal court in this city, has issued an injunction, said to be the most sweeping ever issued in the west, restraining 80 former employes of the W. B. Conkey company at Hammond from interfering with other employes or the business of the concern.

"Divine Healer" in Jail.

New York, Aug. 26.—Francis Schlatter, the "divine healer," who came to this city several months ago from the west, has been committed to the workhouse for three months by Magistrate Zeller in the Harlem police court, for having been "drunk and disorderly."

To Fight Unions.

New York, Aug. 26.—A circular has been issued by the National Association of Brewers making the announcement of the commencement of war to the knife on the National Union of Brewery Workmen commencing September 1.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Bradstreet Says Indications Point to Enlarged Business at Better Prices.

New York, Aug. 31.—Bradstreet's says: "Evidence multiplies that the tide of trade has turned, and that it is now setting strongly in the direction of an enlarged business at steady or higher prices. Crop improvement, particularly in the central west and the Mississippi valley, has been the mainspring of the more cheerful tone of advices and enlarged fall trade operations at such cities as Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City. Even from the so-called drought-stricken corn belt some advices of a quite satisfactory business, in some instances reports being of a larger jobbing trade than in the corresponding period a year ago.

"Prices, except for some irregularity in the cereals, have been generally quite steady. Wheat was weak early on increased supplies afloat, enlarged receipts at the northwest and technical market conditions favoring a decline, but strengthened later on continued poor crop reports from abroad, fairly large clearances, although not equal to last week and general care in present or better prices being maintained. Corn has sympathized largely with wheat, though weakening on its own account on better crop advices from the states east of the Mississippi, where timely rains have fallen. Net changes for the week are slight. Some hog products, particularly lard, have sympathized with the strength of corn."

R. G. Dun & Co., in their Weekly Review of Trade, say:

"Though there are some drawbacks, notably the labor troubles in the iron and steel industry, business is of well-sustained volume, to which fact payments through the country's clearing houses, railroad earnings and the strength of prices of staple and partly manufactured merchandise offer ample testimony. The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Plate Workers succeeded in enlisting the sympathy of other workmen with the result that the output of merchant bar and wire rods is curtailed to the extent of about 40,000 tons monthly. Beyond this defection, wage earners in allied branches of the steel industry have refused to break their contracts. Many idle mills resumed during the past week, and even in the tin plate region there is a moderate output. Plates have begun to arrive from abroad, and prices in the London market sharply advanced. Hoop and sheet mills increase production daily, and there is no loss in the rail division, but some anxiety is felt regarding supplies of cotton ties as the picking season has begun in many states. Decreased consumption tends to weaken pig iron, and tin is similarly affected.

"Failures for the week number 205 in the United States, against 171 last year, and 35 in Canada, against 19 last year."

STRUCK BY CYCLONE.

Buildings Wrecked and Peach Orchards Destroyed by a Tornado in Illinois—Loss Heavy.

Centralia, Ill., Aug. 27.—A cyclonic windstorm and cloudburst did thousands of dollars of damage in Centralia Sunday night. The Colored Baptist church was wrecked, peach orchards were destroyed and 15,000 bushels of peaches are lying on the ground near town. In the city the telephone and electric light systems were seriously damaged and the streets are blocked by hundreds of fallen trees. Many residences were damaged by falling trees. The rainfall was one inch and a quarter.

Iowa Populists.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 24.—Middle-of-the-road populists assembled in state convention here Friday and nominated the following ticket: For governor, L. H. Weller, Nashua; lieutenant governor, Perry Engle, Newton; supreme judge, J. R. McDonald, Des Moines; railway commissioner, Luke McDowell, Shelby county; state superintendent of public instruction, J. C. Harland, Woodbury county. All the nominations were by acclamation. The resolutions adopted indorse the Omaha national platform, denounce trusts and political rings, and demand the cessation of grants of public franchises to private corporations, extend sympathy to the Boers, indorse direct legislation, demand equal taxation, and favor state printing and binding under state supervision.

A Daring Capture.

Manila, Aug. 27.—Pitchers' first dispatch from Mindoro tells how Lieut. Hazzard, of the Third cavalry, commanding a troop of Macabebe scouts, captured the American deserter, Howard, who, as a leader of the Filipinos, had been annoying the Americans for many months. Fergueson, one of Lieut. Hazzard's civilian scouts, disguised as an insurgent, with eight Macabebes penetrated into the camp of Col. Atienza, commanding 240 riflemen and 200 bolomen, at night, located Howard, bound and gagged him and led him away without disturbing the camp.

Iowa Bank Suspends.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 26.—The Home Savings and Trust company, with head offices in this city, has suspended. By almost unanimous vote of the shareholders, it was decided to-day to go into voluntary liquidation. All obligations will be fully paid. The action is taken as a result of an act of the last legislature, which rigidly restricts compounding of interest.

Found Dead.

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 26.—A. C. Mills, a retired capitalist of Madison, Wis., was found dead in his room in the Cameron hotel with a rubber tube over his mouth and the gas jet turned on full force. He was about 50 years old and a prominent citizen of Madison, where he has a daughter living. No cause for his self-destruction is apparent.

Most Beautiful Woman.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 26.—A private telegram from Charlottesville, Va., announces the death of Miss Maude Coleman Woods in that city. Miss Woods was pronounced the most beautiful woman in America by a committee from the Pan-American exposition and her profile adorns all of the medals issued by the board of awards.

Machinists Strike at Joliet.

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 27.—All machinists employed by the Bates Machine company struck Monday, giving as their reason an objectionable foreman. The plant employed, altogether, 200 men. The machinists struck some time ago on the question of wages. This was settled, the new trouble having just developed.

Four Miners Killed.

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 27.—Four miners were instantly killed Monday morning at a mine in Chenoa, this county, by the snapping of the cable supporting the cage. The men fell 247 feet. The names follow: Barretto Buiseppe, Bobino Bria, Bonino Baltilla, Thomas Jones.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

New Corn; Old Seed.

At Lake Minnetonka is growing some Indian corn which is of interest to all agriculturists, and to other people as well. The corn is the second crop from some seed discovered two years ago by a Chicago man, who was exploring a mound in Colorado. The corn was sealed up in an earthern jar, and was probably hundreds of years old. From this corn the Chicago man raised a crop with ears as long as a man's forearm, and stalks 12 feet high. He distributed the seed, and some came into the possession of John S. Dodge, of the Washburn-Crosby company. E. J. Forrester, who obtained some of the seed from Mr. Dodge, has an excellent stand of the corn at his home at Oromo, Lake Minetonka, the stalks now being higher than his head.

Bitten by a Monkey.

Charles Reilly, 15 years old, living with his parents in St. Paul, will pay a heavy penalty for fooling with a monkey. Several weeks ago he and several companions had considerable fun with "de monk" which collected pennies for an Italian organ grinder. Young Reilly, it is said, pretended to have a penny in his hand, which he held out to the faithful little collector. Being fooled several times, the monkey snapped at the extended hand and buried its teeth deep into the forefinger of the left hand. The bone is now decaying and amputation will be necessary. The physician thinks that blood poisoning may spread to the entire system.

Evening Entertainments.

The experience of the past two years has shown that evening entertainments at the state fair are popular. This year the fair will be again kept open day and night. It will be possible for a visitor to enter the grounds early in the day and stay until the evening performance is over. The evening amusements will include racing by electric light, hurdle races, chariot races, standing races, women's races, monkey races, riderless horse races, exhibitions on the sphere by the famous equilibrist Lionel Legare, aerial exhibitions by the renowned Pickett family.

Lands for Homes.

There are over 8,000 square miles—5,283,000 acres—of vacant and unappropriated land in the United States land district of Duluth. This is a tract larger than the state of Massachusetts. It lies close to Duluth, none of it more than 150 miles away, and yet it is inhabited by a few Indians and occasional trappers and woodsmen. It is no desolate region. There are several thousand square miles of valuable timber lands, pine, spruce and hardwoods; there are hundreds of square miles of rich agricultural lands, that will yield large crops, and there are areas of great extent known to be rich in minerals.

May Search Buggies.

Deputy game wardens have the right to search buggies driven by persons suspected of killing game illegally. This is the view of Attorney General Douglas, who was consulted by telephone from Cambridge. Two strangers drove into that town with guns in their buggy. They had evidently been hunting chickens, and the warden wanted to look into the buggy. They ordered him away and made such a demonstration that he decided to ascertain how much law he had on his side before making the search.

A Wolf Story.

The story given out from the state auditor's office, that no more wolf bounty is available, was just another wolf story. Aug. 1 the standing annual appropriation of $6,000 became available, and the other day 348 claims were audited, aggregating $,223.56. They come from the following counties: Aitkin, 22; Benton, 2; Kanabec, 71; Kittson, 95; Murray, 6; Otter Tail, 12; Pope, 22; Roseau, 70; St. Louis, 17; Todd, 30; Wadena, 1.

News in Brief.

The body of a newly born baby was found beside the Great Northern tracks in the rear of Calvary cemetery, between Minneapolis and St. Paul. The scalp was torn almost completely off, and the body was covered with cuts and bruises.

A man fairly well dressed was killed by the cars at St. Anthony.

Peter Van Levern was drowned while bathing in the Mississippi river at St. Cloud.

Fort Snelling, dormant all summer, will become a beehive of activity when the Fourteenth United States infantry arrives. Col. Quinton, in command of the regiment, his staff, the regimental band, and four companies, aggregating 600 men, will be stationed at the fort.

The man who orders potatoes in the Twin City restaurants has to pay extra for the luxury.

Charles Gerber, an employe of Lennon & Gibbons, St. Paul, was bitten by a mad dog that entered the store. It snapped at several clerks, all of whom escaped its fangs.

Fred Osborn, a laborer, fell from a steel elevator in Southeast Minneapolis and was killed.

Prof. Willet M. Hays, of the Minnesota agricultural station at St. Anthony Park, has been recommended for the position of secretary of agriculture for New South Wales.

Credit insurance companies cannot do business within this state, according to an opinion sent Commissioner Dearth by Attorney General Douglas.

The home of W. Thurston at Lake Minnetonka was destroyed by fire.

A reunion of the surviving members of the Ninth Minnesota infantry will be held at the state capitol Sept. 3.

Although it is practically certain that the locks and dams in the Mississippi river between Minneapolis and St. Paul cannot be completed within the limit of cost set by congress, the work will be pushed, and the coffer dam for dam No. 1 will be built this fall.

A fine target range is being constructed at Fort Snelling to take the place of the one that has been in use at Lake City. The war department has allowed $3,000 for the equipment of a range.

Julick Pearson, a 16-year-old son of Peter Pehrson, dairyman at Gladstone, was badly bitten by a horse. Two of the animals were fighting in the barn. He went to separate them, when one seized him by the arm and sank its teeth into the flesh.

The state labor bureau has found in its investigation of the employment of women in the cities that there are 2,500 domestics in St. Paul, and 1,756 girls and women employed as clerks in the stores. Their salaries range from $3 to $10 per week.

The bridge across the Red Lake river at Fisher is threatening to take a bath in the river, and the people there want the county commissioners to prop it up.

Frank Sveja, a farmer at Willow River, took a teaspoonful of some unlabeled medicene to relieve pain, which caused death within a very short time.

Four hundred school children in Minneapolis were vaccinated in one day.

Joseph DeBar, a fireman for the Minneapolis Cold Storage company, was nearly killed by fire. When banking the fire in the furnace the gas exploded, the flames shooting out and burning him about the hands and arms. He was carried to his home.

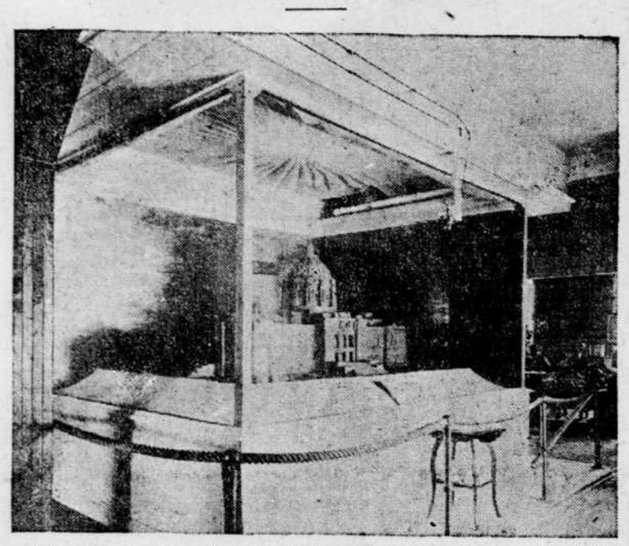
Theresa, aged 16 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lautner, was drowned in the Vermilion river while bathing at Hastings.

Mrs. Williard Cross fell from a hayrack at Deerwood and received injuries from which she died.

William Saunders, the negro arrested at Duluth as William Smith, wanted in Chicago for the murder of E. Turner last year, is not the man.

At the state fair, the week of Sept. 2-7, the famous Pains of Chicago will put on each evening a spectacular drama full of fireworks.

OUR BUTTER AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.



The largest butter exhibit ever made at any exposition in any country is that of Minnesota now to be seen at the Pan-American Exposition. Other states exhibit their product in tubs, but Minnesota shows hers in one piece as a model of the new state capitol. It is five feet, four inches from top of dome to the green velvet representing the lawn of the new capitol grounds and it is eleven feet, eight inches long, and seven feet through. It certainly is an object of interest to the multitudes visiting the exposition daily.

The history of Minnesota creamery industry is not an old one, dating back only until 1880. In 1884 it took first prizes at New Orleans, when the total number of creameries in the state was less than twenty. In 1893 the first premium was captured at the World's Fair in Chicago; in 1896, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, gold and silver medals were won in the National Creamery Contest, and in 1897, at the National Creamery Butter Makers' Association in Owatonna, the gold medal and silver cup was captured. In 1900 there were 582 creameries producing 75,000,000 pounds of butter from the milk of 331,512 cows. At that time there were sixty cheese factories in actual operation. The patrons of these creameries received $6,959,914.55. Other interests of the state have increased in wonderful ratio, but the dairy interest has kept well to the lead of all the agricultural industries.

KEEPING CELLARS DRY.

Tile Drain Surrounding Base of the Foundation Wall the Most Effective Method.

Whether the cellar be under the farmhouse or under the barn, it should be as dry as possible for the health of those dwelling above. A tile drain surrounding the base of the foundation wall, as shown in the cut, is one of the best means of carrying off water from a surrounding wet soil. But there is one feature in connection with such a drain that the writer has found important. The filling over the tile, against the outside of the foundation wall, should be of a nature to let the water down quickly to the tile. Otherwise a great deal will find its way through the stones of the wall and enter the cellar, especially during a heavy rain, when the ground is soaked with moisture. There is always a space outside to be filled after laying a foundation wall. Let this be filled with gravel or small stones, and the water will fall down at once to the tile drain. Take special care in the laying of this drain, for when once down it is a very great job to take any part of it up again.—N. Y. Tribune.

TILE DRAIN FOR CELLAR.

NOTES ON ALFALFA.

It Requires Large Quantities of Lime Which Should Be Applied the Previous Fall.

Lime is a very necessary element in the soil, at least in states where the plant may be considered out of its natural region. The lime should be applied the fall previous to the seeding and should be well harrowed into the soil. If commercial fertilizers are to be used they should be applied just previous to the seeding, unless we except slag, which should be put on some months before. The manure should be applied after the cutting, preferably late in the fall. The trouble with alfalfa is to get a good start and a good deal of nursing is required for the first year. For this reason the surface soil should be carefully prepared, so that the roots may penetrate the earth as rapidly as possible. After it is started, care must be taken not to mow it too close or pasture it too soon or too close. It will not recover so rapidly as does grass, and sometimes not at all. This is especially true during the first year. It takes a number of years for the roots to get a good development. They should therefore have a soil with good depth between the surface and the water table. Though alfalfa is a water-loving plant it cannot grow with its roots saturated. It is not by any means an aquatic plant, even to its roots. This is one reason why it fails on some soils—the water table being too near the surface of the ground. Weeds must be kept out the first year, as they have a better fighting chance at first than the alfalfa.—Farmers' Review.

OUR COUNTRY'S STRENGTH.

It Rests in the Rural Districts, Uncontaminated by Selfishness and Corruption.

To speak of the ignorance of the country people is to stamp one's self as an ignoramus—not the country people.

There is an intelligence and soundness in the back country of this land of ours, that those who live in cities and think themselves wise little suspect. Instead of deprecating country life, and saying that "to live in the country means to live out of the world," wise people know that the free, untrammeled life of the country unquestionably gives broader views.

We can talk all we like of "social revolutions" and kindred evils that are supposed by some to threaten the country; but when they do threaten, the danger signal will come from the back country.

In the clear air of the farm the view is broader, the heart sounder; and when anything does menace the land, the true voice which will stamp it out will be apt to come from the country.

The backbone of the land rests in the country, on the farm.—Farm Journal.

Soil Renovating Crop.

A Pennsylvania farmer recommends a combination of rape and cowhorn turnips as a green manure crop for the renovation of soils deficient in humus. He sows it broadcast in his corn field the last time he cultivates the corn, scattering the seed in advance of the cultivator. When sowing on an unoccupied field he harrows in the seed. The rape and turnips mature in the fall and may be plowed under then or in the spring, at the convenience of the farmer. By this plan he incorporates with his soil several tons of matter that is immediately available as plant food.

Bran Brings Good Profit.

Bran is an excellent fertilizer for crops, as it is rich in nitrogen and mineral matter, but it is made more valuable when it is fed to stock, not only because it serves as food, but also because when it is passed through the body of an animal it is in better form for crops. Bran is a cheap material to purchase, as it brings profit as food and produces manure of the best quality.

HIGH PRESSURE FEEDING.

A Blunder Which Results in Loss of Profit and Is Apt to Make Fowls Sickly.

Between feeding too little, feeding just enough and over-feeding, there is room for many a mistake in the beginner's work. And it is not far from the truth to say that this same beginner worries more about the feeding than about any other one item. Yet one of the most careful and practical of poultry writers said last month: "Broadly speaking I can recommend all of it (printed directions for raising and feeding chickens) save the feeding of hard-boiled eggs, cracked corn and the withholding of drinking water." Now, I know of plenty of good chicks that have been raised on cracked corn alone, and I have known of others who feed liberally of hard-boiled egg nearly all through the season. The real trouble lies in over-feeding or in not making a practical mental classification of the various feeds into heavy and light, laxative and the reverse. All concentrated feeds are "heavy." This includes all the meats and all feeds which have very little waste, such as hulled grains. High-pressure feeding consists in feeding all the strong pushing feed the chicks can stand, and ordinary sense should tell us that this is dangerous for the novice to attempt. It is far safer to feed a variety, even to making each meal different, or else to use a feed that contains many items, in a way to overcome each the other's bad points. Bran is the commonest bulky feen and hard-boiled eggs are much safer fed with bran than with other feed. People are afraid to use horse feed because of the supposed ill effects of the oat hulls on the chicks. Probably they are not to be recommended for the tiny fellows, but since the editor of one of the most prominent poultry papers said lately that he never hesitated to feed his chicks anything that he considered safe for his hens, the rank and file should be able to lay aside much of its anxiety lest the proper food is lacking in the ration. Only, don't put several heavy feeds together, for that isn't good sense.—M. V. Norys, in American Gardening.

SERIES OF DARK NESTS.

How to Make a Box That Occupies But Little Space and Is Safe in Every Respect.

Many plans for a row of dark nests call for a contrivance wide enough to give a dark walk along the row of dark nests. This makes a cumbersome piece of henhouse furniture. The cut shows a long, narrow box with entrance at one end and nests in order. Each hen will go to the furthest unoccupied nest in her effort to hide her nest away, so the nests will be occupied in regular order. If a hen has to pass over another in coming out no harm will be done.

The advantage in such a plan is the ease with which such a box can be made and the smaller space it occupies.—N. Y. Tribune.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Save the meat scraps for your fowls.

Soft soap is a good remedy for scaly legs in fowls.

Ground bone can be fed alone or in the soft food.

Proper food and a variety of it make strong, healthy chickens.

It is a good rule to scald out the drinking vessels once a week.

Tobacco stems covered with straw in the nests will prevent insect-breeding.

If you want to keep eggs for any length of time turn them over every few days.

Clean earth is one of the best absorbents that can be used in the poultry-house.

Whitewashing the nests, inside and out, is a good means of keeping them free from vermin.

Mark your chickens each year so you can know their age and kill or sell them after the third year.

Save the eggshells, put them on or in the stove until they are brown and brittle, then break up fine and mix with the soft food.

To prevent loss of feathers, which is due to overfeeding with heating material, such as corn and buckwheat, change the food to something lighter. —National Rural.

Poultry as a Side Issue.

There is no place where fowls can be more profitably raised than on the farm. The man that makes a business of fowl raising may indeed succeed better than the farmer, but he does so often against great odds. The poultry business fits admirably with the farm crops. The fowls can be used for gleaners, and the amount of food thus saved is a very large item and the utilization of it means much money. The farm, too, gives range for insect hunting, of which the professional poultryman cannot avail himself.—Farmers' Review.

Make Every Trip Count.

Economy is wealth, goes an old proverb. Economize in the labor of animals and help. When the wagon goes out for a load of green stuff it is often as possible to carry a load of manure as to go empty. The man who follows the practice of returning to his land an occasional load of manure with its fertilizing constituents intact for the heaps of green stuff he carts off will generally be able to spare enough of the crop to make a clean bed in the cart upon which to rest the fodder.—Farmers' Voice.

Our Nation's Wealth.

Gold and silver are poured abundantly into the lap of the nation, but our material wealth and strength is rather in iron, the most useful of all metals, just as the wealth of a human being lies in a useful stomach. If you have overworked yours until it is disabled, try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It will relieve the clogged bowels, improve the appetite and cure constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney disease.

A Scholarly Retort.

A famous scholar, whose hobby was the derivation of words, had occasion to store his furniture while proceeding to the continent in quest of the origin of the term "Juggins." During his researches in Berlin he received from the warehouse company the following letter: "Sir—We have the honor to inform you that the mattrass you sent to our store had the moth in it. Since the epidemic would expose the goods of other clients to injury, we have caused your mattrass to be destroyed."

The scholar replied: "Dear Sir—My mattress may, as you say, have had moth in it, but I am confident that it had an 'e' in it also."—London King.

OF FOREIGN INTEREST.

Graves average 5 feet deep in England, 5 feet 6 inches in France, and 6 feet 10 inches in Russia.

In many of the perfume factories of south Europe only the purest olive oil is used in fixing the perfumes of flowers.

As late as 1770 the journey from Liverpool to London was dangerous on account of the bad condition of the roads.

The total daily circulation of newspapers in the United Kingdom was only 60,000 in 1801; 700,000 in 1851; and is now 8,750,000.

Great Britain now spends £ 3,300,000 a year on imported vegetables. Nearly half this is spent on potatoes, and £780,000 on onions.

Seventeen hundred and twenty-six dies were used in the English mint last year. On an average 75,244 pieces were made with each die.

A SON'S DEVOTION.

Wallace, Mich., August 26th:—A striking example of a man's dutiful and attentive care of his mother is seen in Mr. Oscar Swanson of this place.

Mr. Swanson's mother has suffered much with Kidney and Urinal Trouble and Female Weakness. Her son has sought out and procured for her everything that he thought could possibly benefit her.

She did not improve, till at last, he bought her a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. In a few days, she was completely cured, and her faithful son has the reward for his loving efforts, in the knowledge that she is now strong and well.

DANDRUFF WON'T WASH OUT.

The Germ That Causes It Has to Be Destroyed, to Cure Dandruff.

Many a woman spends an hour twice a week scouring her scalp, thinking scrubbing off the scurf will cure the dandruff. Two hours a week, at the age of 40 years, she has spent 260 days of 12 hours each, or two-thirds of a year of her life, in that vain hope; vain, because you can't cure dandruff without killing the dandruff germ, and the only hair preparation on earth that will do that is Newbro's "Herpicide"—also a delightful hair dressing, and thorough antiseptic against all contagion from use of others' hair brushes. It is also a delightful hair dressing.

A DEAD LIVER

He thinks he lives, but he's a dead one. No person is really alive whose liver is dead. During the winter most people spend nearly all their time in warm, stuffy houses or offices or workshops. Many don't get as much exercise as they ought, and everybody knows that people gain weight in winter. As a rule it is not sound weight, but means a lot of flabby fat and useless, rotting matter staying in the body when it ought to have been driven out. But the liver was overburdened, deadened—stopped work. There you are, with a dead liver, and spring is the time for resurrection. Wake up the dead! Get all the filth out of your system, and get ready for the summer's trials with clean, clear blood, body, brain free from bile. Force is dangerous and destructive unless used in a gentle persuasive way, and the right plan is to give new strength to the muscular walls of the bowels, and stir up the liver to new life and work with CASCARETS, the great spring cleaner, disinfectant and bowel tonic. —The Eagle announced the fact last week that she was 30 years old.

—Sept 20 is the date for the completion of volume XIII, of the GAZETTE.

—Fall plowing is being done this week. Many large fields are black already with upturned dirt.

—The Delano roller mill made a full week's run last week, night and day. Crews alternated each other and kept things going.

—Native Watermelons and musk melons are now in the market. Tomatoes are more abundant than usual and of fine quality.

—Several Delanoites are so badly afflicted with parkitis as to be almost totally incapacitated for their usual avocations this week.

—Dar Welker has a nice cabbage patch that will supply some good heads for sour kraut. They are so thrifty as to pop open on handling.

—The Millers played Sunday with the Minneapolis Greys. Score 15 to 0 in favor of the Millers. The City team was entirely outclassed.

—On Wednesday evening one of the severest electric storms passed over this part of the country tha thas been seen for years. Considerabl rain also fell.

—Several fine rains have helped the fall pasture and second crop hay meadows much. Potatoes don't seem to be so scarce as it was feared, and corn is fine.

—Not so many fires are to be seen following threshing machines as has been the case in years gone by. Farmers dearly learned the value of straw last winter, and now have none to burn.

—District 48, the Ziebarth school house, has a new belfry in which hangs a new bell, and on top of which is a flag staff surmounted by an arrow for a weathervane. Surely the pupils there ought to learn something.

—Prof. Cunningham reports that early in the week, while testing steam pipes in the mill in Minneapolis, his brother Charles was scalded on the back of the head and neck so severely as to cause a part of his hair to come out. Lucky he was not killed.

—Some of our farmers who are short on potatoes may be glad to learn that a big crop of the tubers has been raised in Manitoba. As our railroad runs right up to these big potato hills it will not be necessary to go without potatoes. Or course the tariff of 25 cts per bushel added to Jim Hill's freight rates will make them cost considerable more than they otherwise would. But we can eat less of them.

—Early Tuesday morning the public schools bell will announce to the children the fact that school will again be in session. After a long vacation every pupil should be on hand promptly and should make it a point to attend regularly during the term. If you want to attend the University or learn a profession you must first get through the high school. Do your best while the opportunity is offered you.

—Many animated discussions have occurred on the street corners, and in other public places, this week as to where the new park shall be located. Some strange and funny arguments, for and against particular places, have been made. A park to be of any particular benefit to the public, should be centrally located, easy of access from all directions, and have some attractions, whether natural or artificial or both, and should be so kept as to be a desirable place for women and children to visit at all times.

—The election held Monday resulted in electing W. H. Frazee, Justice of the Peace, and the vote on bonds for a park stood yes 61, no 37, so Delano is to have a park. The light vote shows the lack of interest taken in the matter. We understand a meeting is to be called to vote on location. If voters don't attend the meeting and vote they will be obliged, no doubt, to abide by the decision of those who do vote. In public affairs of this kind everybody should interest himself and use his vote as he considers to the best advantage of the village.

—Frank Esler, in a letter, in the Sherburne County Times claims that in June he sold his milk to the Big Lake Creamery for 65 cts per hundred pounds. That in July he used an Iowa dairy separator and sold cream to the Becker creamery, at 39 cents per gallon; that his milk netted him 58.8 cents per hundred. In August he took cream, and a sample of skimmed milk to the Minneapolis Cold Storage Co. at Becker and the cream netted 88 cents per gallon, or $1.28 per hundred for entire milk. This is most too much difference. There must have been some wrong figuring somewhere.

—Some talk of entering complaint against our Village authorities for negligence in discharging their sworn duties is talked of, unless such lawlessness and disregard for the simplest and commonest rights of American citizens, as was exhibited on our streets last Sunday are looked after. The President and each Trustee and several others are peace officers and need no warrant, but can, in a summary manner, stop all infractions of law coming to their immediate notice. If they wish to retain their positions they had better try to enforce ordinances a little better. Many citizens are complaining.

—Prof. Judson went to Willmar to help our boys win a game of base ball to-day.

—The Delano base ball team has gone to Wilmar to play the Willmar team to day. They will have to play lively to keep their repntation.

—The G. N. has sent out hand bills announcing that they will sell tickets from Aug. 31st to Sept. 7th, inclusive, to St. Paul or Minneapolis, for one fare plus 50 cts, good to return Sept. 9.

—The fellow that brought the new whistles to town ought to have a serenade, by every one disposed of to date. He would probably be willing by morning to stick the whole lot into the stove.

—The boys claim that butternuts and acorns are uncommonly plenty this year. As soon as frost comes they expect to lay in their winter's supply. Picked to early they are not much good.

—Buck's machine threshed at Wilham Ziebarth's farm on Tuesday, in about half a day, nearly 1200 bushels of grain and had to stop on account of rain. Mr. Z. says his oats are fine, but wheat a little light.

—Miss May Mowatt is to begin teaching at the Rader school house, in Independence, on Monday next, and Miss Merel Jones will take charge in the Hitsman district. Delano is turning out its full complement of teachers. So much for good High School privileges.

—Miss May Mowatt gave a party at her home Thursday evening in honor of the Misses Willard, of St. Paul, who are visiting with her this week. About twenty were present, and a very enjoyable evening was spent, at games and in a musical program. Refreshments were served.

—Several members of the Delano Pioneers Association visited. on invitation with George B. Wright and family, Pioneers of Montrose, yesterday. There would have been more, but for the rain of the day before. They are a unit in pronouncing the occasion an enjoyable one.

Gusher Is Wild.

Associated Press Dispatch.

Beaumont, Tex, Aug. 27.—Two men are dead and one of the largest oil gushers in the world is going absolutely wild, utterly defying the mechanical skill of men to stop it. The famous oil field presented last night the possibilty of one of the direst calamaties which ever visited Texas should fires join forces with the great gushers. Today the gusher will still be spilling itself on the prairies and flooding the country with oil.

James Smith died trying to shut off the gusher, and John McDaniels died trying to save Smith. Both showed great heroism. The wild gusher is in Hogg-Swayne syndicate tract. The well belongs to the Palastine-Beaumont oil company.

Resolutions on the Death of Mrs. Amanda M Kerr.

DELANO TERRITORIAL ASSOCIATION.

WHEREAS It has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst Mrs. Amanda M. Kerr, nee Shaw.

RESOLVED, that we bow in submission to His will who doeth all things well.

RESOLVED, that in the loss of Mrs. Kerr, although the last to sign our roll as a member, the first to go as a pioneer to that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns" our society loses one of its most active and useful members. Mrs. Kerr being possessed of a remarkable memory, and being a fine conversationalist was especially adapted for a useful member of our association.

REST THEE.

Rest thee by the fount sweet mother,
Near God's eternal throne;
Where loved ones wait thy coming, mother,
Where God's love beams o'er his own
Forever and forever

Rest thee in his glory sweet mother,
Neath the beams of his heavenly light,
Where sorrows can never come, dear mother
When darker shades of night
Comes; no, never.

Rest thee from thy cares, sweet mother:
Angels guard thee ever.
Heaven's blessings shine o'er thee, mother:
Sweet thy rest forever, aye forever:
Forever and forever.

RESOLVED, that these resolutions be spread upon our minutes and that a copy be furnished the Buffalo Gazette and the Delano Eagle and a copy be sent to the afflicted family of our lamented late member.

A Forgotten Truth.

The Gallatin Democrat, of Shawneetown, Illinois, has resurrected an old speech made by President, then Congressman, McKinley. The following extract shows how the President has changed for the worse during the decade:

"Human rights and constitutional privileges must not be forgotten in our race for wealth for commercial supremacy. The government of the people must be by the people, and not by a few of the people. It must be by the consent of the government and of all the governed. Power, it must not be forgotten which is secured by wrong or usurpation, is soon dethroned. We have no right in law or morals to usurp that which belongs to another, whether it to be property or power."

This is sound doctrine, but it is entirely out of harmony with republican policies at this time. When we outgrew the Declaration of Independenc and the Constitution, we outgrew the high ideals that all parties formerly appealed to end the patriotic expression of those who formerly to leadership.—Commoner

No Use for Boozers.

General Manager Dickinson, of the Union Pacific, has issued a bulletin informing employes that the habitual use of intoxicating liquors or the frequenting of saloons will be considered sufficient cause for dismissal. The bulletin reads as follows: "It is reported that certain employes are indulging habitually in the use of intoxicating liquors, and that some are frequenters of saloons and places where such liquors are sold. It is a well known fact that the habitual use of intoxicating liquors impairs the efficiency of a person addicted to such use. The duties of the employes of a railroad company, particularly those engaged in the transportation and mechanical departments, are most exacting and necessarily demand clear judgment and a sound body. It is therefore deemed advisable to notify all employes that the habitual use of intoxicating liquors or the frequenting of saloons or places where such liquors are sold will be considered sufficient cause for dismissal from the service.—Globe.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 23, 1901

"Make way for the new Caesar!" That is the sort of a shout some rubber lunged understrapper will be putting up in front of Acting Secretary Hackett, if he is left in sole charge of the Navy Department much longer. His head gets bigger every day and he comes nearer thinking himself the whole thing. He has made it quite plain that he is anti Schley. In this he has only followed the example of Secretary Long, the difference being that Long has more tact and courtesy than to assume autocratic airs. It is understood that so many complaints about Hackett have been made to Mr. McKinley that he has given Secretary Long a hint by wire that it would be advisable for him to cut his vacation short and return to Washington sometime before the assembling of the Schley Court of Inquiry, and that Mr. Long will resume charge of the Navy Department next week.

The most important happenings of the week in the preparations for the Schley inquiry are all connected with Rear Admiral Howison, whose sitting as a member of the court is now anything but certain. Read Admiral Schley, through his counsel, requested the Navy Department to forward a copy of an alleged interview with Howison in which Schley was sneered at and Sampson lauded to that officer and request him to say whether he was correctly reported or not. Caesar Hackett has made public his letter to Schley denying the request and defending Howison and giving reasons why he should not be asked about that interview, which is anything but convincing. That is tomfoolery, of course. Schley has the right to absolutely challenge Howison, if he wishes to exercise it. Capt. Parker, who is assisting Schley's counsel in preparing the case, has an affidavit from the reporter who interviewed Rear Admiral Howison, declaring that the interview was absolutely correct as published and expressing his willingness to testify before the Court of Inquiry if his evidence was considered necessary. Should Howison acknowledge the accuracy of the interview he would thereby disqualify himself for sitting on the court, no matter how anxious Caesar Hackett and the anti Schley naval clique might be to keep him on the court. Should he deny the correctness of the published interview, he will be confronted by the reporter.

Admiral Schley will not believe that Howison used the language in that interview until he either acknowledges it or refuses to deny it. Being open and above board in his own likes and dislikes, he cannot understand how a brother officer can be otherwise. Schley spends a good portion of every day working and consulting with his lawyers in the preparation of his case. He smilingly declines all invitations to talk about it for publication, and says, "Wait for the Court".

The joint Committee representing the American Anti Trust League and the Knights of Labor came out ahead in its first round with Attorney General Knox The committee asked Mr. Knox to furnish any information in his possession concerning the formation of the steel trust. He replied denying that he had any information about the trust or that he had anything to do with its formation; admitting that he was legal cousel for the Carnegie Steel Co. for some time previous to the formation of the trust, and asserting that the duty and object of the Department of Justice was to enforce the Federal statutes. The committee replied to his letter with a public statement in which it pointed out the evasive nature of his denial, and issued the following challenge to him: "Will Attorney General Knox offer a reward for the production of the incriminating evidence against the trusts for which we asked, and which he says he does not possess? Will he announce that the Department of Justice will pay a substantial reward to any person or persons who will produce evidence that will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person or corporation guilty of violating the Federal statute against trusts? Let him do this, and institute vigorous proceedings against trust law breakers and the people will no longer have doubts as to his faithfulness of his oath of office. and he will no longer be the target for criticism, innuendo, and invective on the part of the press because of the fact that while the trusts ride roughshod over the people, the Attorney General, who is the sole officer under the Federal law who is vested with authority to prosecute them, refuses to take any action."

A well known Texan,-Mr. John T. Cammins, of Austin-has been telling tales in Washington about the ambitious young legislators of his State. He said: "The legislature is seeking to redistrict the state for members of Congress. The ambitious young men in the legislature, who think they are qualified to come to Congress, are seeking to fix up the reapportionment so that as many as possible of the present Representatives shall not be able to receive reelection. Half the Texas delegation in Congress are hovering around the State Capitol to protect their personal interests, but it looks as though the legislature would be unable to do anything."

The New York World,
Thrice-a-Week Edition.
The Most Widely Read Newspaper in America.

Time has demonstrated that the Thrice a Week World stands alone in its class. Other papers have imitated its form but not its success. This is because it tells all the news all the time and tells it impartially, whether that news be political or otherwise.

It is in fact almost a daily at the price of a weekly and you cannot afford to be without it.

Republican and Democrat alike can read the Thrice a Week World with absolute confidence in its truth.

In addition to news, it publishes first class serial stories and other features suited to the home and fireside.

The Thrice a Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and GAZETTE together one year for $1.75.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2 00.

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

HER FIRST POTATO SALAD.

She boiled the eggs and sliced them with discriminating care.
She cut the onions finely, with a most important air;
With comprehending art she mixed the golden mayonnaise,
Which, really to her credit, was deserving highest praise.
Then she added the potatoes (humming gay a little ballad),
As she thought: "How pleased will hubby be with this delicious salad."
But at lunch she was the saddest little girl you ever saw,
When he said: "Aren't these potatoes, dearest, just a little raw?"
—London Tit-Bits.

THE fellows that caught the editor of the Brainerd Arena and carried him into the country and poured tar and put feathers on him, must have been a mean lot. People who peerpetrate such tricks on editors surely deserve a warm roast. The City authorities have offered a reward for the capture of the trio who did the kidnapping.

SOMETHING should be done to stop the murdering in the Philippines. According to reports, the war, if there ever was a war there, has been over months, even years ago. But this week comes the report of the shooting of 53 Filipinos. If the situation has been well in hand, and the war over for years, or if there has never been a war, it would be setting a good example for the lynchers in our land if Uncle Sam would stop the slaughter in the Philippines.

LAST week we twitted the Eagle a little about not being posted on Bryan's speech making, as it had an editorial claiming that he was not making any now. But it was the Van Diver editorial machine, it appears, that was off, as the Carver County News had the same editorial, word for word. It is a little dangerous for two papes so near together as Delano and Watertown to get their editorials from the same concern. People will be telling them that one paper of a kind is enough.

THE Boer war seems to be still going on. Fighting and capturing are reported daily. That little handful of Boers seem to have spread out, and like mosquitoes, where one is killed two take his place. It is strange that in this 20th century of civilization people claiming to be the leaders in Christianity and civilization can't find any better business than spending the strength of their nation, its young men, and its millions of money in trying for years to subdue or conquor a "handful of Boers" that are fighting for their independence.

REFRIGERATORS seem to have become dangerous. A short time ago papers reported the case of a man who was locked in one, dying. Last Sunday a couple of men are said to have gone into the refrigerator in connection with Yerxa's store, and the door closed on them. They happened to have a heavy weight used to pull the door shut. With this they pounded a hole in the door and made their escape. It might be a good plan for people having refrigerators liable to lock them in, to keep an ax, hatchet or other tools with which they could cut their way out in case it became necessary.

Bryanism Not Dead.

SOME of the newspapers are trying to impress upon their readers what Mr. Bryan thinks about the different questions before the American people. Some of the editors evidently don't exchange with the Commoner; or if they do, they prefer to take some other source for the premises which they use as a base for their arguments. Mr. Bryan publishes his paper, The Commoner, at Lincoln, Nebraska, every week. People who wish to know what Mr. Bryan thinks can find out better by reading the Commoner than from any other source. The Commoner gives Mr. Bryan's views in plain and concise language. Every voter, or prospective voter ought to read the Commoner and know what Mr. Bryan says about all the political questions of the day. If Mr. Bryan goes astray it can easily be learned from the Commoner. But the unkind and untruthful thrusts of many papers at Mr. Bryan and his beliefs, don't prove that Mr. Bryan is not right. Don't be switched off the main Democratic track by some glaring falsehoods, and misstatements, no matter how friendly the manipulators of the switches may be.

Many papers and speakers keep telling the public that Bryan is dead! That Bryanism has passed away! That Mr. Bryan will never be a candidate again! If these things are so, or if the authors of the stories, to call them mildly, think they are speaking facts, why do they keep telling them? Why do they keep bringing before their readers the death and burial, politically speaking, of Mr. Bryan and his beliefs? Why don't they tell us every week "Queen Victoria is dead", or that "Napoleon Bonaparte" has passed away, or that "slavery doesn't exist in the United States"?

When Daniel Webster's soul was about to take its departure from its tenement of clay, the great man's dying words are said to have been "I still live." And even though the man died, his impress upon the world still lives, and will live for ages to come.

Mr. Bryan is a young man yet, in prime health, and bids fair to live for many years. His life and works of usefulness don't seem to have come to an end yet; even though his opposers, enemies, and weak kneed friends are trying by all kinds of subterfuge to mislead his millions of followers. Only a few years ago and they said he was too young and inexperienced to be president; then, when he ran again he was said to have overworked and used himself up. Now they are trying to have him dead! and buried! His beliefs and his teachings are not dead; they are firmly grounded into the hearts of those who love a Republic, who favor a Democratic government, who would have a "government of the people for the people and by the people." Who believe in a republican form of government in other lands than our own; who believe that God made nations to govern themselves and not to govern other nations, nor to be governed by them.

Bryanism has not perished from the face of the earth, neither has Mr. Bryan. Both are with us. One fits the other, and when the time comes for nominating the next democratic president, the platform is bound to be right, and the candidate for president must stand squarely on the platform.

All this talk about reorganizing the party or about a third party must blow away, must be given up in order to win a victory.

There would be no advantage to the Democrats to have men who are opposed to party principles, the principles of the people themselves, elected to fill all the offices. It is better to run men tat are true to a platform that is true to the people and go down to a glorious defeat than to win on a platform made by opposers of the people and the people's interests. Let those who are opposed to Democracy continue as they have been doing and vote with the Republican party for the principles favored by the trusts and the corporations, for imperialism and all it implies. But let Democrats be true to their colors; let them send delegates to all conventions, whom they can trust, who they know to be true to Democratic principles, and there will be no trouble about the platform, nor about a candidate for President and for Vice President. What the party wants is to to be vigilant, to protect what they have, to use their ballot and use it right, every time opportunity presents. Bryanism is not dead; neither is Bryan.

Fitzsimmons' Good Advice.

Robert Fitzsimmons, the pugilist recently delivered a lecture at Atlantic City on "The Youths of America." Mr Fitzsimmons is not exactly a model for the youth of America, and yet he gave some good advice to young men. He said:

"I never see a young man dissipating, but I feel like taking him aside and telling him that he is wasting his strength, squandering his power and inviting disappointment and suffering."

No one is in a better position to know the evil effects of dissipation than the habitue of the prize ring. Even the prize fighters success depends upon abstinence from strong drink. Mr. Fitzsimmons knows whereof he speaks, and while the advice he has given has been echoed and reechoed through the ages, it will bear repetition in the presence of every young man who is subjected to the temptations that beset the pathway of active life.—Commoner.

The Failing of Education.

From the Youths Companion.

The methods of public school instruction as applied in New York city, do not always meet the approbation of the parents of the pupils, as was evidenced the other day when a German woman of commanding figure strode into the school and approaching the principal demanded:

"What it is, a lobster?"

The principal politely explained that a lobster was a species of shell fish.

"Vell, how many legs has it—dis lobster?"

The number of legs was stated.

"Vell, I work me for a hurry, and if your teacher cannot find better dings than ask my poy Jakey how many legs has it, a lobster, un make him come home to bodder his fadder mit questions, 'What it is, a lobster?' it is pad peesness."

Doomed to Defeat.

A dozen men in Minnesota can wrest the gubernatorial nomination from Van Sant, if they were so disposed, but the lucky one would have a hard row to travel, as Van's friends would knife him, which would defeat him almost to a dead certainty. However, it would be up sticks, as Van Sant is doomed to defeat anyway.—Anoka Union.

Fined for Refusing to Quarantine Smallpox.

The state board of health yesterday won its case against C. V. Cummings, chairman of the board of supervisors of Anoka county, for neglect to quarantine against smallpox when directed to by the health department. Mr. Cummings was fined by the court and the costs were taxed against him.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Republicans Differ.

If that Babcock boy succeeds in tearing holes in his good, warm Protection clothes, he may regret his recklessness when the cold winds of a hard winter commence to blow.—American Economist.

Those Horrid Figures

CLARA (a young wife, aged 20. She is seated at a table, holding one hand to her head, and with a pencil in the other hand adding up a column of figures, which she counts aloud and on her fingers. The table is strewn with sheets of paper; she has a school arithmetic in front of her and an account book).

"* * * and six makes 45 and eight 53, and then the 78 I had over after dividing by that 35 * * * (she throws down the pencil in despair, and getting up from the table presses both her hands to her forehead).

"Oh, these figures! I always have had a horror of figures * * * it was a presentiment, I am sure. At school I hated adding up, and I never tried to, either; I never opened an arithmetic if I could help it.

"And I married young, and thought this horrid nightmare of mine was over at last. Jack certainly never talked to me about such detestable things when we were engaged—(sighing).

"After we had been married about six months, though, he said to me one morning: 'I have about 500 pounds that I want to put out. I shall have to see about it. It seems there is a good affair just now in China; their loan at 3½ per cent.—'

"'Oh, Jack!' I exclaimed, 'China! Do you mean you would have to go to China?'

"Jack roared with laughter at my distress, but he was in reality greatly flattered, I know.

"'Do just as you like,' I said, feeling rather mortified; 'you never take my opinion seriously, and besides I do not know in the least what you mean with your three per cent.—three what? For a hundred what?'

"He took the trouble to explain, but he still looked amused.

"'A hundred pounds that I should give, and then at the end of the year they would give me three.

"The flagrant injustice of such a proceeding scandalized me.

"'You would give them a hundred pounds and they would give you three pounds!' I interrupted. 'Thank you, and you call that a good thing! You would certainly do better to keep your 500 pounds; there are plenty of things we could buy with it. I should like to know what would be the good of three pounds?'

"The more I argued the more Jack laughed; it was perfectly ridiculous. He only stopped every now and then to kiss me and to tell me that I was the most charming wife in the whole world. But for the next six months he never attempted to talk to me about figures and money matters.

"At the end of that time one day when I was rocking little Jacqueline to sleep my husband came in the room and put on my lap an exercise-book with a green cover, this very one (picking up the account book on the table), and making a very grand little speech he began to tell me that now as mistress of the house and mother of a family I must begin to keep an account of our expenses and try to put by some money for our little girl.

"My nightmare was to begin again! Until then I had been able to have whatever I wanted, and had never been troubled about the price of anything. Jack went on to explain that I had been spending a great deal, and that it was better for me to begin and learn the value of money, and that for the sake of our child, etc.

"The first two months of this new arangement I had great success—a perfect triumph, in fact. I had not spent all the money; there was some left in the drawer at the end of each month, and this was put by for little Jacqueline.

"To-day is the end of my third month, and I found this morning that I had only seven-pence-halfpenny, and on adding up my expenses in the green book it certainly seemed to me that I had spent rather a large sum * * * a hundred pounds it was altogether. I felt sure Jack would grumble * * * figures are so alarming when once they are added up.

"During luncheon I was as pleasant as I could possibly be, hoping that my husband would take it all in good part, and as I passed him the radishes I put on my most irresistible smile as I said: 'Jack, do you know I have not saved a farthing this month; just think of it, I have spent a hundred pounds.'

"Jack dropped the radishes onto his plate and looked at me as though he were thunderstruck.

"'A hundred pounds! Did you say a hundred pounds? No, you are joking!'

"'Not at all,' I said, speaking playfully, in order to give him time to recover. 'I mean a hundred pounds. It seems a large sum to me, but I cannot help it, and the figures are all there, you can see for yourself.'

"'But, Clara, my dear child, what foolish, mad expenses have you been running into without even telling me?'

"This accusation made me indignant, and I answered, angrily: 'No mad expenses at all that I know of. I have bought myself a hat and a few other little things for Jacqueline!'

"My husband's face turned red, and he spoke in a hard tone: 'Clara, if you have let yourself be persuaded into anything foolish you might at least be frank enough to own it. I must insist on your explaining clearly the meaning of this unheard-of extravagance.'

"Jack had never spoken to me in such a way, and I felt myself growing red now in my turn.

"'I will not have you accuse me of deceitfulness!' I exclaimed, 'and as to explaining clearly, it seems to me I have already done so.'

"'Very clearly, certainly,' said Jack, ironically; 'from what I understand, you have spent a hundred pounds on a hat and a few necessary little things for your child.'

"'My child! And is she not yours, too? This is always how men act. My father used to say to my mother: "Your daughters have once more behaved in this absurd manner," and then if it were anything pleasant about us he would say: "I have been complimented to-day on my daughters!" * * * You are all alike, you men!' I was in a great state of excitement, but I had to stop in the middle of my harrangue, as the servant came in. When she had gone away again Jack, no doubt alarmed at my anger, began again in a gentler tone:

"'But, Clarrie, you must see—'

"'Don't call me Clarrie, please,' I said.

"There was a pause, and then he continued—with the most exasperating calmness:

"'As you like, but what I have to say about this matter is that our simple way of living does not justify your spending money in this extravagant manner. The only thing left for me to suppose is that you have been giving some grand receptions to which I have not been invited, and that you have ordered dresses—'

"'That is quite enough, thank you,' I said in a perfect fury of concentrated rage and indignation.

"The servant just at this moment brought in the coffee and then went away again, as we always like to have a quiet tete-a-tete over our coffee.

"I filled my cup, and in doing so burnt my hand atrociously with the coffee pot handle, but I maintained my dignity and showed no signs of what I was suffering.

"We both stirred our coffee and waited in silence for the sugar to melt.

"Suddenly Jack threw his serviette down on the table.

"'Clara, I cannot understand the childish way in which you are acting. Why should you want to hide things from me like this? If I am to pay your debts I must know—'

"'My debts?' I exclaimed. 'What debts, if you please?'

"'Well the £70 that you owe, and which I have not by me at present.'

"'But I don't owe £70. I have not asked you for any money, and I do not owe a farthing. I have paid for everything I have bought.'

"'But how have you paid — what money have you used?'

"'Why, the money you put in the drawer at the beginning of the month, of course.'

"'The money I put in the drawer! Have you managed to pay a hundred pounds with that? I put £30 in the drawer.'

"We sat and gazed at each other in wonder.

"'Well, my book is there, and you can see for yourself,' I said at last.

"I ALWAYS HAVE HAD A HORROR OF FIGURES."

'I added it up four times, and I am certain it is a hundred pounds, for I know I have paid for everything.' I got up, and fetching the famous account book, laid it before my husband.

"'He glanced down the lines, and then suddenly burst into a roar of laughter.

"'What is it?' I asked.

"'I bent over the book, and he pointed to a line which I had at the time written with great pride:

"'Twelve pinafores at 5s. 10d. each, £70.'

"'You forgot to get the shillings to pounds, that is all,' said Jack.

"'No, I remember doing it,' I said.

"'Well, you've put it down again here, then, under "Things for Jacqueline." Here is £3 10s. That's it.'

"I covered my face with my hands, and Jack went off into a fit of laughter, and then, wiping his forehead and his eyes, he said: 'You gave me a nice fright, Clarrie.'

"'Be quiet,' I said. 'I don't see anything to laugh at. You are perfectly horrid.'

"He vowed and declared that he would never be horrid again, and that he would not even say that £3 10s was a great deal to spend on pinafores.

"There was nothing between us now but the coffee pot, which was no longer steaming; the coffee had gone cold, and we made it all up with each other.

"I promised to buy myself an arithmetic like we had at school (she picks it up off the table), and so my bete noire has come back to me, and I am going to do an hour's arithmetic every day. Jack on his side promised lots of things. It's all the same, though. I owe the wretched figures another grudge now, and I hate them more than ever with my capital H and two a's."—Chicago Herald.

What a joke it will be on the rest of the country if the "great American desert" should become the garden of the country through the irrigation system that is rapidly extending.

London dancing masters affirm that Americans do not know how to dance. There is no hint, however, that they are unable to pay the piper, which is, after all, the important matter.

A Philadelphia girl who is to inherit $25,000,000 has become engaged to Count Hippolyte Pallavicini. What a homely thing she must be to have to put up that much for a mere count.

An English journal shakes its head in despair over the problem: "What is the secret of American success in business?" A plain answer would be: "Because Americans have made an exhaustive study of the subject."

Mrs. Martha Martindill, of Indiana, advertised in a newspaper for information concerning her brother, William Yarnell, from whom she had been separated for 44 years, and now the brother and sister have been reunited. Advertising pays.

A Wisconsin man has invented an automobile actuated by a spring. You wind up the spring and then go careening uphill and down dale till the thing runs down. Whereupon you wind it up again and go on your way rejoicing. It's as simple as pulling yourself over a fence by your bootstraps.

The monthly pilot charts show that the transatlantic liners are meeting many icebergs and that they are drifting unusually far in their journey to the south this year. The steamer Numidian reports one that stood 300 feet out of water, which makes its total height 2,700 feet, as only one-ninth of an iceberg stands out of the water.

A dispatch from Manila says that a party of Filipinos consisting of ex-President Tavera, Chief Justice Arrillano, Attorney General Torres, Gov. Flores, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Ner and Senor Tomas Rosano will soon visit the United States. They probably want to see how the American eagle deports himself in his native country.

The city of Lawton, Okla., came into existence in a night, and where one rising sun saw nothing but a plain the next sun saw a city of 10,000 people. Four or five tons of mail were piled up there awaiting the opening of a post office, and it is stated that four wagon loads of mail are arriving every day. They are making history rapidly down in the Indian country.

President Callaway, of the American Locomotive company, says that the American locomotive is enjoying as much prosperity as any other product. Last year the United States turned out 3,153 locomotives and broke the record, and this year they will turn out several hundred more than that, the record thus far being 20 per cent. increase over the 1900 figures.

A prominent German-American who recently returned from a visit to the old country says that Emperor William will not receive German-American citizens as such, but as Americans only. He holds that native Germans who have become naturalized Americans have no right to be recognized as Germans. Logically he is right, and the hyphenated designation should be discarded.

That the United States may justly be classified as civilized is frequently shown in the ticketing of children from points in Europe to kindred in this country and their uniformly safe arrival at their destination. The latest ward of all humanity, aged seven, arrived from Sweden the other day and was passed on with care to her parents in Colorado. The treatment of women and children has always been a test of civilization.

Robert M. Graves, who owns an extensive farm in Macon county, Mo., says that during the drought, after his stock had consumed all of his pasture, he tried the experiment of cutting down elm trees and permitting the cattle to eat what they wished. They seemed to take to the new diet readily, and for over a month he supported 50 head of cattle on the leaves and branches of the elm. There is a great deal in being able to appreciate your resources.

Examination of 21,000 college students in the United States shows that curvature of the spine affects one out of 18 of noteworthy students, while among those who are athletic rather than studious the proportion is only one in 60. More than five per cent. of applicants for examination for admission to college were found affected by scoliosis, presumably from too constant addiction to the stooping posture while studying, all of which shows that growth of this dangerous disease requires checking if learning is not to develop a large class of deformed.

According to the statement of a Presbyterian pastor in New Jersey bogus doctors of divinity are turned out just as bogus doctors of medicine are, and are supplied with degrees from a diploma factory in Chicago. The pastor says he knows of three such doctors of divinity in his own presbytery, and that the alleged university alluded to makes a practice of canvassing for patrons. He substantiates his statement by publishing correspondence with the "fake" institution showing that it carries on a regular business in conferring degrees.

It is pleasant to note that there is progress and improvement even in such a matter as the conducting of duels. At the latest affair of the kind in France, it is reported, the sword of one of the duelists accidentally touched the ground, when the seconds stopped the encounter and would not let it proceed until the blade had been treated with antiseptics. The antiseptic duel, like antiseptic surgery, has probably come to stay. Now all that is needed is some kind of guard to protect the sword blades as safety razors are protected.

RUIN IN CLEVELAND.

Cloudburst Causes Flood in the Ohio City.

The Damage to Property Estimated at $1,000,000—No Lives Lost, But Many Narrowly Escape Death.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 3. — With the breaking of dawn Sunday morning the citizens of Cleveland awoke to look upon a scene of unparalleled devastation and destruction caused by a raging flood. While the entire city was more or less affected, the great volume of raging water vented its anger over miles of the eastern portion of the city and caused an amount of damage approximated at $1,000,000. The appalling overflow was caused by a terrific rain that commenced to fall shortly after two o'clock, turned into a perfect cloudburst between the hours of three and five, and then continued with great force until nearly ten o'clock. The storm, according to the weather officials, was the heaviest that ever swept over Cleveland since the establishment of the government bureau in this city over 40 years ago.

No Loss of Life.

That no lives were lost is nothing short of a miracle, as the stories of thrilling escapes from the water on several of the principal resident streets of the city are told. The surging waters spread over an area in the east end nearly eight miles long and 1¼ miles wide. This extended from Wodland Hills avenue to East Cleveland and back to East Madison avenue. Great volumes of water poured over from Doan and Giddings brooks down Quincy street, swamped Vienna street, rushed over Cedar avenue, back over on East Prospect street, rushed like a mill race down Lincoln avenue to Euclid avenue, and then on to Glen Park place, where houses were undermined as though built of straw, and almost incredible damage done to streets and property.

Cemetery Invaded.

Shortly before noon the torrent succeeded in undermining a score of graves in the St. Joseph cemetery, at the corner of East Madison and Woodland, and the bodies were seen being tossed about in the waters. Fully a dozen of the corpses were washed into gutters and had not been recovered at a late hour.

Damage to Parks and Boulevards.

The great flood boiled over the banks of Doan brook all along the boulevard and caused damage that it will take months to repair. Great jagged holes are torn in the beautiful driveway, and the look of ruin stretches in every direction. Gordon and Wade parks, on the East side, and Brookside park, on the South side, where the water also did great damage as it leaped over the banks of Big creek, are damaged to an amount figured at $100,000. Through Glenville the overflow was terribly destructive. Many houses are swamped, culverts torn out and several streets turned into seething quagmires. The loss in the village is also estimated at $100,000.

Street Railways Suffer.

The street railways will suffer an immense loss, extending in varying degrees over every portion of the city. The Big Consolidated will have to rebuild their tracks over different parts of the inundated East end district, and the loss is placed at $50,000.

French Government Orders Munir Bey, Turkish Ambassador to France to Leave the Country.

Paris, Sept. 3.—The result of Munir Bey, the Turkish ambassador to France, coming to Paris, in spite of the rupture of Franco-Turkish relations and holding a fete, in the most open way at the Turkish embassy in honor of the anniversary of the sultan's accession to the throne, has been that the French government sent him a request to leave France immediately, and Munir Bey departed for Switzerland Sunday evening.

Will Invite Bryan.

Columbus, O., Sept. 3.—It is announced by Chairman Daugherty, of the democratic state committee, that William Jennings Bryan will be invited to participate in the Ohio campaign this fall, despite the fact that the state convention had turned down silver and Bryanism. If he accepts he will be sent to those counties which have declared in favor of Bryan's ideas.

Naphtha Launch Explodes.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 2.—A frightful fate befell the family of Wilbur Alexander, a large contractor of this city, Sunday night. A naphtha launch exploded on the Hudson river at "The Abbey," 1½ miles below this city, killing Mrs. Alexander and her little daughter and burning Wilbur Alexander and his son, Wilbur Alexander, Jr., in a horrible manner. The accident was the termination of a day's outing on the river.

Report on Public Lands.

Washington, Aug. 31.—Hon. Binger Hermann, commissioner of the general land office, has completed his annual report, which shows that during the year 15,662,796 acres of the public domain were disposed of and that the receipts of the office were $4,972,160. The receipts exceeded those of last year by $592,402 and the land disposals by 2,108,908 acres.

TRAIN RUNS AWAY.

Plunges Down a Mountain Side and Collides with Another Train—Thirty-Six Killed.

Kalispell, Mont., Sept. 2. — Thirty-six lives were lost and 13 persons were injured in the wreck of the Great Northern railway passenger train No. 3, at Nyack, 30 miles west of Kalispell.

None of the pasesngers were injured, the fatalities having been confined to the employes of the railroad company.

The dead:

P. T. Downs, assistant general superintendent of the Great Northern lines west of Minot, N. D.

Kirk T. Downs, his son.

Henry Blair, cook aboard Mr. Downs' private car.

Thirty-three Scandinavian laborers, names unknown.

Injured:

Thirteen Scandinavian laborers, names unknown.

The wreck was caused by the breaking in two of a freight train on the steep grade of a Rocky Mountain foothill. The rear end of the freight tore loose from the head end, dashed backward down the mountain and crashed into the rear end of a passenger train, which was just pulling out of the station at Nyack. The car attached to the rear end of the passenger was the private coach of Superintendent Downs. He and his son, Kirk, and their cook, Henry Blair, were instantly killed. The car just ahead contained 46 Scandinavian laborers en route from Duluth, Minn., to Jennings, Mont. They were killed wholesale. Only 13 were taken from the debris alive.

Fire immediately following the collision quickly destroyed the private car, cremating the bodies of those within.

The flames were quickly communicated to the car ahead, or rather to what remained of it, and the bodies of 28 of the unfortunate laborers also were cremated. The third from the rear also was burned, but those within managed to escape when the collision occurred. The fire continued to spread through the mass of debris caused by the destruction of the dozen or more freight cars, and their consignments of valuable freight.

MONEY TO MOVE CROPS.

Shipments of Currency to the South and West Are Heavier Than Usual.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The shipments of money from the treasury to the south and west for the movement of crops have been much heavier this season than ever before. Treasurer Roberts said Saturday that at the close of August, 1899, there had been transferred to the subtreasuries at Chicago, New Orleans and St. Louis the sum of $2,118,500. At the close of the same month in 1900 the total was $3,400,000 and at the close of business at the treasury Saturday the total was $7,950,000, of which New Orleans has received $2,525,000. The currency is shipped as a rule one-fourth in silver certificates up to five dollars, one-fourth in United States notes of the denomination of ten dollars and the remainder in gold certificates. Gold coin is not in demand for crop-moving purposes.

IS EXPELLED.

French Government Orders Munir Bey, Turkish Ambassador to France, to Leave the Country.

Paris, Sept. 3.—The result of Munir Bey, the Turkish ambassador to France, coming to Paris in spite of the rupture of Franco-Turkish relations and holding a fete in the most open way at the Turkish embassy in honor of the anniversary of the sultan's accession to the throne, has been that the French government sent him a request to leave France immediately, and Munir Bey departed for Switzerland Sunday evening.

DENIES THE INTERVIEW.

Admiral Howison Declares He Made No Adverse Comment on Admiral Schley.

Washington, Aug. 31.—Acting Secretary Hackett has made public a letter received from Admiral Howison, dated Yonkers, N. Y., August 24, denying the authenticity of the interview attributed to him, in which he is made to comment adversely on Admiral Schley. The acting secretary has therefore continued Admiral Howison as a member of the Schley court of inquiry, leaving the court itself to determine any further question of his competency.

In Business Again.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 31.—The secretary of state has issued articles of incorporation to the George H. Phillips Grain company, of Chicago, capital stock, $500,000. The object of the corporation is to do a general brokerage and grain business. George H. Phillips, late corn king, stated some time ago that he would again enter the grain business after his failure.

Roosevelt to Write History.

Santa Fe, N. M., Sept. 2.—Vice President Roosevelt has consented to write a history of the rough riders for the roster of the New Mexican volunteers in the Spanish war, which will be published by the authority of the Thirty-fourth legislative assembly of New Mexico, which has made an appropriation for that purpose.

Cripple Creek, Col., Sept. 2.—The gold production of this district during August was $2,558,000, the greatest single month's record in the history of Cripple Creek.

Butchers to Enforce Sunday Law.

New York, Sept. 2.—The butchers of New York are determined that the new state law prohibiting the sale or delivery of meats on Sunday shall be enforced. To this end an army of 2,700 men, all opposed to Sunday labor, and all eager to aid in carrying out the provisions of the law, will patrol the city Sunday.

Piet Delarey Captured.

London, Sept. 2.—Lord Kitchener, telegraphing from Pretoria, Saturday, says: "Garratt has captured Piet Delarey, brother of the assistant commandant general."

Loyalty to His Employer.

That young man who consented to have a portion of his blood let out to save his employer, set a remarkable example of heroism. The incident shows what power there is in good blood. There is only one natural way to get good blood, and that is from the stomach. If the stomach needs assistance, try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This wonderful medicine cures dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, and makes rich red blood.

His Classification.

There was a rug on the line that needed attention, and she had been looking for some able-bodied man.

"Are you a carpet beater?" she asked of the hobo who applied for a little financial assistance.

"No, ma'am," he replied, honestly, as he hastily backed away. "I'm a dead beater."

"I don't believe you do any beating at all," she retorted.

"Just give me a chance," he said, "to beat a woman out of a little coin, and see what happens."—Chicago Post.

STERILIZED BARBER SHOP.

A Famous Shop in the Carrollton Hotel, Baltimore, Maryland.

The barber shop in the Carrollton hotel, Baltimore, sterilizes everything it uses in the shop. The sterilizing is done by heat. The towels, the razors, the strops, the soap, the combs and brushes are all sterlized before being used on a customer. Where there is no sterilization, have the barber use Newbro's Herpicide. It kills the dandruff germ, and it is an antiseptic for the scalp, and for the face after shaving. All leading barbers everywhere appreciate these potent facts about Herpicide, and they use it. BEST FOR THE BOWELS

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC

10¢ 25¢ 50¢

ALL DRUGGISTS.

CANDY CATHARTIC — Cascarets — taste good. Eat them like candy. They remove any bad taste in the mouth, leaving the breath sweet and perfumed. It is a pleasure to take them, and they are liked especially by children.

SWEETEN THE STOMACH — Cascarets — sweeten the stomach by cleansing the mouth, throat and food channel. That means, they stop undigested food from souring in the stomach, prevent gas forming in the bowels, and kill disease germs of any kind that breed and feed in the entire system.

PURELY VEGETABLE — Cascarets — are purely vegetable and contain no mercurial or other mineral poison. They consist of the latest discoveries in medicine, and form a combination of remedies unequaled to make the blood pure and rich and make clean skin and beautiful complexion.

LIVER TONIC — Cascarets — tone the stomach and bowels and stir up the lazy liver. They do not merely soften the stools and cause their discharge, but strengthen the bowels and put them into lively, healthy condition, making their action natural.

MILD BUT SURE — Cascarets — never grip nor gripe. They act quietly, positively and never cause any kind of uncomfortable feeling. Taken regularly they make the liver act regularly and naturally as it should. They keep the sewerage of the body properly moving and keep the system clean.

BOON FOR MOTHERS — Cascarets — increase the flow of milk in nursing mothers. If the mother eats a tablet, it makes her milk mildly purgative and has a mild but certain effect on the baby. In this way they are the only safe laxative for the nursing infant.

CURE CONSTIPATION — Cascarets — taken patiently, persistently, will cure any form of constipation, no matter how old or how often other remedies have failed. They are absolutely guaranteed to cure any case, or purchase money will be cheerfully refunded.

NEVER SOLD IN BULK — Cascarets — cost 10c, 25c, 50c a box. Samples sent free for the asking. We publish no testimonials but sell Cascarets on their merit under absolute guarantee to cure. Buy and try a box to-day, or write us for free samples and booklet.

Drainage.

George A. Ralph, civil engineer in charge of the work to be done by the state drainage commission, has about completed his surveys of the four principal canals to be built from the state appropriation. The work, it is said, will be done in Norman, Polk, Roseau and Marshall counties. One of the chief improvements will be the opening of the channel of Lost river, in eastern Polk county, which involves the building of a drainage ditch through a swamp into Beltrami county, five miles long, and unite the two beds of the stream, whereby several thousand acres of land will be redeemed for production. In Roseau county a ditch nine miles long will be opened from a point northeast of Badger to the Roseau river, while the condition in Marshall county will be bettered by digging a canal five miles long in range 44 to Middle river. A large tract in Norman county, in the townships of Good Hope and Shelley, will be drained, with Marsh river as the outlet. The amount of canal work to be done will aggregate twenty-six miles.

Found a Snake.

When Carl Kjerner, a clerk in a grocery store at Rochester, was picking bananas from a bunch, he found a snake coiled around the stem. It was a young boa-constrictor three and one-half feet long and five inches in circumference. A snake dealer was summoned, who captured the reptile and placed it in a large case with a glass front for inspection. In less than ten minutes fully 500 people were in the store, all eager to see the snake. The bunch of bananas had been handled several times before the snake was discovered.

Serious Accident.

A serious accident occurred about two miles northwest of Porter. The boiler of Sam Watkins' threshing engine exploded, instantly killing Mrs. C. L. Christenson and seriously injuring Lars Christenson, John Amundson and a farm hand. Mrs. Christenson just stepped out to announce dinner, and was standing about twenty feet in the rear of the engine when the explosion occurred. It tore out both ends of the engine, causing it to jump back about twenty feet, one of the drive wheels striking Mrs. Christenson. Fire was set to the separator, which is a complete loss.

A Professor Killed.

Prof. F. V. Hubbard, superintendent of public schools at Red Wing, was accidentally killed. He was filling up his back yard with a wheel scraper. In attempting to work the lever it sprang up and struck him in the neck, causing instant death. He was 45 years old and leaves a family.

Kidnaped.

W. S. Cox, of the Brainerd Arena, has been leading a rather strenuous life lately. Only a few days ago he was chased up a street by an irate politician into a butcher's ice box. A few nights later, while visiting some friends, three men called and forcibly took him away to a secluded spot about two miles from town, and while one of the men held a revolver the others poured tar over his head and shoulders. Mr. Cox claims that he knows two of the men, and results will follow.

Appointed.

S. T. Johnson, of Minneapolis, was summoned to the office of Gov. Van Sant recently and notified of his appointment to the office of public examiner, to succeed E. M. Pope, whose term expires Jan. 1. This winds up the important appointments in the gift of the governor, and also scores a strong point for the united republicans of Hennepin county.

News in Brief.

Three persons were injured in a fire in the Windsor hotel, Minneapolis.

According to the Journal a Crookston kitten has two well developed heads, with the corresponding number of mouths, ears and eyes. It is well and healthy, and as frolicksome as any other kitten.

A. D. Thorpe, special agent of the interior department at St. Cloud, has been detailed to go to Duluth and work in making a personal examination of every piece of government land in Minnesota claimed by the state under the swamp-land grant of 1860.

The largest mound at Trempeleau has just been excavated by John Dye and others of Winona, with the result that seven skulls, presumably of mound builders, and many broken bones and relics have been found.

Louis H. Rogers, a clerk for the Marshall-Wells Hardware company, Duluth, was drowned in the St. Louis river while attempting to swim to shore from a steamer.

There will soon be established in Minneapolis in connection with the Chamber of Commerce a trading market for flax futures. It will be a fixture and an important addition to the local grain market.

Peter Bub's brewery at Winona was damaged to the extent of $1,000 by fire. It was fully insured.

The body of Charlie Farmer, who was missing from Two Harbors for several days, was found floating in the lake.

J. Adam Bede has challenged Oliver W. Stewart, secretary of the national Prohibition committee, to a serious of 24 joint debates, to be held the coming winter in different parts of the state.

The total value of the prison at Stillwater is placed at $856,198.32.

The Twin City unions of the International Union of Steamfitters are making preparations for the annual international convention of the organization, which opens Sept. 9.

The state, through Auditor Dunn, recently disposed of 4,600 acres of agricultural lands in Beltrami county. The land sold at an average price of $6.40 per acre, bringing to the state $29,440. The highest price paid was $30 per acre for a little piece of land near Bemidji.

D. R. McKinley sues the city of Duluth for $2,000 for personal injuries received in falling through a sidewalk.

Wm. Breumner, of Slayton, recently returned from the St. Peter asylum, shot himself through the head and died instantly.

TRAMP OF TOILERS.

General Celebration of Labor Day in All the Large Cities East and West.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 3.—Indianapolis labor unions celebrated Labor day for the eleventh time Monday. There were 4,000 persons in the parades, 2,000 being women. The machinists had the place of honor. Charles A. Bookwalter, republican candidate for mayor, attracted attention as he marched with the printers' union, to which he has belonged for 20 years.

Milwaukee, Sept. 3.—Labor day was observed in this city, the feature being a monster parade in which about 15,000 workmen were in line. The pageant moved at 11 o'clock and consisted of six divisions, throughout which were interspersed 23 bands of music.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 3.—Labor day weather was ideal and the turnout of union workmen was greater than for years. It is estimated that 10,000 marchers participated in the parade, which was viewed by thousands.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 3.—Ten thousand laboring men and women, comprising the members of the several classes of union labor, marched through the principal streets Monday. The International Longshoremen's union had 1,200 men in line. Twenty bands furnished music.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 3.—Business was suspended here Monday and a long parade of labor unions was the feature of the Labor day celebration in the morning. In the afternoon a general picnic was indulged in at Belle Isle, where a programme of athletic sports was carried out.

New York, Sept. 3.—Labor day was observed in this city by a general suspension of business. There was no parade of labor organizations, the day being given over to picnics and outdoor sports. The air was chilly and rain fell at intervals.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—There were 16,777 persons in Chicago's great Labor day parade, the largest body being the carpenters, who numbered 2,155. More than 1,100 women took part in the parade.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 3. — Labor day was fittingly celebrated in this city. Three cities, Omaha, South Omaha and Council Bluffs, joined in the ceremonies, and practically every business place in the three towns was closed for the day. There was a parade at 10:30, composed of eight divisions, and representing every labor organization of the three cities.

St. Louis, Sept. 3.—Labor day in St. Louis was celebrated with two great parades that wound up with picnics and celebrations attended by thousands of laboring men and their families. It being a legal holiday, the banks and exchanges, municipal and government offices, as well as the down-town stores, factories, etc., were closed all day. It is estimated that fully 40,000 marched in the two processions, while at least 100,000 persons attended the picnics and celebrations.

APPEAL FOR RELIEF.

Drought in Southern Texas Has Left Thousands in a Starving Condition.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 3.—Widespread starvation and terrible distress have followed in the wake of the drought in Zapata and several adjoining counties in southern Texas. It is estimated that about 50,000 persons will be dependent for their very lives on the outside world for food and other assistance. After enduring their misery for weeks in the vain hope that they would be able to better their condition the people of Zapata county have at last appealed for assistance, and a generous response is being made by the citizens here, at San Antonio, Galveston and Austin. So far the governor has not issued a call for out of state aid, but if conditions grow worse he may be requested to do so.

THE CORN CROP.

Extent of the Damage Is Now Known with Some Degree of Accuracy—Some Estimates.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The extent of the damage to the corn crop is now known with some degree of definiteness. According to estimates based on the statistics of the agricultural bureau, the yield will be considerably under 1,500,000,000 bushels—the highest estimate giving it at 1,400,000,000 instead of the 2,100,000,000 bushels expected. Kansas and Missouri suffer most, although Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois have not escaped.

Lynchers Punished.

Wetumpka, Ala., Aug. 31.—The jury in the cases of John Strength and Martin Fuller, charged with having participated in the lynching of Robert White, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree, and sentenced the defendants to ten years in the penitentiary. This makes three convictions in these cases, George Howard having been sentenced to life imprisonment a few days ago.

Only One Saved.

London, Sept. 2.—A dispatch to Lloyds from Trebizonde says that the Johnstone line steamer Noranmore, with a cargo of oil, has foundered near Athena. The crew, numbering 40, were all lost except one. The Noranmore was bound from Batoum for Bombay.

Killed His Sister.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 3.—Roy Wilkes, aged 11 years, accidentally shot and killed with a parlor rifle his sister Loraine, aged 15 years, at their mother's home in this city Monday afternoon.

Mother and Babe Killed.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 2.—Mrs. Fannie McGill, carrying a baby in her arms, was run down by a trolley car on Twentieth street and Fourth avenue Saturday and mother and child were mangled to death, being dragged half a block under the car.

Will Deport Boers.

Cape Town, Sept. 3.—The military administration has determined, it is said, to deport all the Boers in the reconcentrado camps, numbering upward of 100,000, to garrisoned towns on the coast, where food is more readily available.

PORTABLE SELF-FEEDER.

When Cattle Are Fed on Grass This Contrivance Will Be Found of Much Use.

A reader in Illinois sends us a sketch and description of a portable feeder he uses for cattle on grass. It is 12 feet long, 5 feet wide and 6 feet high. The bottom or floor (C) consists of two inclined planes, carrying the corn, etc., down to the openings A, B, and into the troughs outside. The sides are made to slide up and down a few inches, so that the feed can be shut off if desired, or the spaces A and B can be adjusted to deliver the grain in small or liberal quantities. A board roof keeps the grain dry. Sled-runners under this feeder enables it to be hauled around to any points desired. In the illustration the end is left open to show the construction. It must be boarded up tight. A part of the roof, or all of one side, can be hinged so as to throw back for putting in the grain. The illustration shows how the feeder is made, and anyone can make the dimensions to suit his wants.—Ohio Farmer.

HANDY SELF FEEDER.

FAIR PROFIT IN VEAL.

A Source of Income That Is Completely Neglected by Many Western Dairymen.

Too many make a mistake in not raising calves until of an age to sell for veal. It is a question with me whether it does not pay better to keep calves until near Christmas and then sell. One thing is sure. Let a farmer once work up an honest trade for such meat, and, like genuine fresh eggs or gilt-edged butter, he could put on a stiff price and still find a ready market.

Most farmers in this section kill their calves when a day or two old, and sell the hides for 60 cents or $1, according to size and weight, while the mother's milk must go to the pigs for some time, as it is not fit for butter or cheese. Now, why not adopt the practice that is beginning to come in vogue here of feeding this milk to calves until fit for use anywhere, then giving warm, sweet skimmilk with a little finely ground grain mixed in as the calf grows older? Soon one will have an animal on hand with a decided market value.

Calves must be kept dry if they are to thrive, and a run on the ground in the open air is as good for them as an occasional tonic is for their owners. My father always fed a little sulphur about once a week, and I never remember his losing a calf with the disease called blackleg. A little salt in the feed once in awhile is also good for them. We turn them out into a dry, well-fenced piece of meadow as soon as the weather is warm enough, and provide a good shelter from the sun and storm. Unless there can be running water in their quarters it is kept in a trough for them and removed every day. They are well fed, and it is surprising how soon they attain marketable size.—Farm and Home.

Export of Sweet Potatoes.

Up to 1899-1900 no sweet potatoes had been shipped to foreign ports, so far as we are able to gather from the official statement of exportations. Sweet potatoes are not produced to any considerable extent in Europe, and as a general thing the Europeans have not developed a taste for the tuber mentioned. It is reported that they are planted in a small way in the south of Spain. What few are imported are in the nature of luxuries and have been brought from the Canary islands and Africa. In 1899 some American growers made a few trial shipments to England, where they began to win their way. Probably the Americans resident in foreign countries will be the first and best customers, and their example will be followed by others.

The Farmer's Savings Bank.

Potato tops have more than the average manurial value possessed by the tops of many other succulent plants. They should be gathered and mixed in a compost heap with manure, mulch and other fertilizing material, and when well rotted will be very useful on dryish clay soil, or they may be scattered and plowed under without composting. All such waste vegetable material should be gathered up and put into the compost heap, with all dead animals and animal refuse on the place. Bones, old leather, leaves, soapsuds, night soil—everything of the kind, enriches the compost heap, which should be looked upon as the farmer's savings bank.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Pasture Sheds for Stock.

The observer, traveling through the western states, will note with a great deal of wonder sometimes the number of stock pastures without any shed or covering for the stock. In pastures where there is not a natural shade we would by all means urge the erection of at least temporary sheds. If these are located upon little knolls about the pasture, it will be not only a saving of feed, but also of flesh, as the beasts will seek these sheds and rest during the hottest part of the day. It is unmerciful, to say the least, to not provide sheds for stock that is turned out into the open fields.—Prairie Farmer.

Bad water will make bad milk, no matter what the food may be, and bad milk will make bad butter, no matter what the handling may be, says the New York Farmer.

TALK ABOUT APPLES.

Almost from Time Immemorial Their Wholesomeness Has Been Known and Recognized.

The apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. This phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter, lethicin of the brain and spinal cord. The old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing old and feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit for renewing their powers of mind and body. The acids of the apple are also of signal use for men of sedentary habits whose livers are sluggish in action. These acids serve to eliminate from the body noxious matters, which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull or bring about jaundice or skin eruptions and other allied troubles. The ancient practice of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose and like dishes is based on scientific reasons. The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. Fresh fruits, such as the apple, the pear and the plum, when taken ripe and without sugar, diminish acidity in the stomach rather than provoke it. Their vegetable salts and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteract acidity. A good, ripe, raw apple is one of the easiest of vegetable substances for the stomach to deal with, the whole process of its digestion being completed in 85 minutes. Besides these medicinal qualities of the apple, it has great virtue for local applications. The paring of an apple cut somewhat thick is an ancient remedy for inflamed eyes, being tied on at night when the patient goes to bed. In France a common remedy for inflamed eyes is an apple poultice, the apple being roasted and its pulp applied over the eyes without any intervening substance.—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE BULL THISTLE.

A Bad Weed But One That, Fortunately, Is Very Readily Destroyed by Cultivation.

This thistle is known botanically as Cardnus lanceolatus. It is an introduced biennial species. It is distributed exclusively by the seeds, but these are produced in such great numbers that the plant multiplies very rapidly. It often forms patches several acres in extent on newly-cleared land, but in old fields the plants are usually more scattered. It seldom persists in any great quantity and is readily destroyed by cultivation. It may be easily distinguished from Canada thistle by its greater size and much larger heads, with spine-pointed scales, and by its leaves, the upper surfaces of which are always rough, like a cat's tongue.—Farmer's Review.

BULL THISTLE.

(a, piece of main stem, with leaf; b, flower head; c, seed, with pappus, natural size; d, seed, enlarged, with pappus detached.)

ROADS WITHOUT DUST.

They Are Pleasant to Travel Over, But Only When They Rest on a Solid Foundation.

It seems just possible that automobiles, rubber tires and the desire for traveling fast, in conjunction with the fact that these three factors produce an intolerable amount of dust on the best roads of to-day, may lead to new methods in road building which eventually will supersede macadamizing in the ordinary sense of this word. Experiments with this end in view, such as those made in California with crude petroleum for smoothing the roadway and rendering it "dustless," may be of the highest interest for the development of motor traffic, but a dangerous tendency to overlook the fixed data of the road-building art crops out too frequently in the experiments made in this country. It was one of the greatest merits of MacAdam that he never tired of resisting propositions for cheap and unscientific compromises in road construction but stoutly and successfully maintained that there is one principle which must be absolutely adhered to if the good quality of any new road shall be permanent, viz.: a foundation resting as a solid and impermeable crust on the natural soil protecting it against all changes due to rain or frost and supporting a porous layer which will absorb or shed water and to which all subsequent repairs should be confined. This requirement has never been successfully dispensed with and it seems more than doubtful whether it can be dispensed with now or in the future, whatever other changes may be inaugurated to remedy the dust evil which is the worst enemy of ordinary macadamizing.—Automobile Topics.

Prestige of the Creamery.

To increase and maintain the prestige of the creamery industry it is necessary to make clean, healthful butter. The majority of the creameries make such butter, but a few do not, and there are many people that say creamery butter is not clean. There are patrons who sell their milk or cream to one creamery and buy their butter at another because the one they patronize does not make eatable butter.—Farmers' Review.

A HAPPY BOY.

Oldenburg, Ill., Sept. 2nd:—The doctors all failed in the case of little thirteen year old Willie Keil, who suffered with acute Rheumatism.

For over three months, the poor little fellow suffered excruciating torture. His father, who had done everything he could think of, saw a new Rheumatism Remedy advertised—Dodd's Kidney Pills. He bought some, and soon his little son showed signs of improvement. Three boxes cured him completely, and he has not a symptom of Rheumatism left.

This miraculous cure of a case which had been given up by the physicians, has electrified Madison County, and Dodd's Kidney Pills are a much talked of medicine.

PE-RU-NA AVERTS DANGER

In That Critical Time When a Girl Becomes a Woman.

MISS BESSIE KELLOG.

Miss Bessie Kellog, President of the Young Woman's Club, of Valley City, North Dakota, writes the following from First street, South, Valley City, North Dakota:

"Ever since I matured I suffered with severe monthly pains. The doctor did not seem to understand what the trouble was and the medicine he prescribed from time to time did not help me. He finally suggested that I have an operation. One of my friends who had been cured of a similar affliction through the use of Peruna, advised me to give it a trial first, and so I used it for three weeks faithfully. My pains diminished very soon and within two months I had none at all.

"This is six months ago, and during that time I have not had an ache nor pain. I give highest praise to Peruna. Every woman ought to use it, and I feel sure that it would bring perfect health."—BESSIE KELLOG.

The experience of Miss Bessie Kellog, of North Dakota, ought to be read by every girl in the land. It is a critical period in a woman's life when she ceases to be a girl and becomes a woman. Very few pass through this period without some trouble. The doctor is called and he generally advises an operation. Perhaps he will subject the patient to a long series of experiments with nervines and tonics. The reason he does not often make a cure is because he does not recognize the trouble.

In a large majority of the cases catarrh of the female organs is the cause. Peruna relieves these cases promptly because it cures the catarrh. Peruna is not a palliative or a sedative or a nervine or a stimulant. It is a specific for catarrh and cures catarrh wherever it may lurk in the system.

This girl was lucky enough to find Peruna at last. As she says, the doctors did not seem to understand what the trouble was and the medicine he prescribed from time to time did not help her. Peruna hit the mark at once and she is now recommending this wonderful remedy to all the other girls in the United States.

Thousands of the girls who look at her beautiful face and read her sincere testimonial, will be led to try Peruna in their times of trouble and critical periods. Peruna will not fail them. Every one of them will be glad and it is to be hoped that their enthusiasm will lead them to do as this girl did—proclaim the fact to the world so that others may read it and do likewise.

Mrs. Christopher Fliehmann, Amsterdam, N. Y., writes:

"I have been sick with catarrh of the stomach and pelvic organs for about five years, and had many a doctor, but none could help me. Some said I would never get over it. One day when I read your almanac I saw those who had been cured by Peruna; then I thought I would try it. I did, and found relief with the first bottle I took, and after two more bottles I was as well and strong as I was before."—Mrs. Christopher Fliehmann.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

FALLING HAIR

Prevented by Shampoos of CUTICURA SOAP and light dressings of CUTICURA, purest of emollient skin cures. This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales, and dandruff, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

MILLIONS USE CUTICURA SOAP

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Millions of Women use CUTICURA SOAP in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and excoriations, for too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women and mothers. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used these great skin purifiers and beautifiers to use any others. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients, and the most refreshing of flower odours. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines, in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

—Jim Hill had two engines on Tuesday morning's passenger and then it was three hours late.

—Labor Day, Monday, was not very much observed in Delano, except that the schools did not open that day.

—A great many of our citizens visited the State Fair at Hamline, this week. All agree that it was a great show.

—Charles Eppel raised some fine apples this year. He had some for sale at George Schaffers, he got $1.00 a barrel for them.

—O. McGary, of Independence, marketed some wheat here Wednesday. He says his wheat turned out about 18 bushels to the acre. Not so bad after all.

—Mrs. Joseph Nelson, who had some teeth extracted "without pain" by an itenerant extractor, some weeks ago and has since been quite sick, is reported now as being on the road to recovery.

—Delano schools opened up Tuesday. Attendance is a little smaller than it should be. Those desiring full benefits from the schools should be prepared to attend from the first till the last day of the term.

—The infant class of the M. E. Sunday School had an entertainment at the home of their teacher, Miss Julia Cunningham, Thursday last week. Ice cream was served and a fine afternoon spent together.

—Mrs. Jesse Hawker is to teach at Deep Haven this winter. Her husband C. S. will attend law school at the University. Miss Anna Bergren will assist them in house keeping, and caring for their son William.

—Saturday, Sept. 7, will be Fair Day. It will probably be a big fair as threshing is pretty well done and farmers will begin to dispose of what animals they do not care to winter, while those wishing more stock will be on the lookout before all is sold.

—Bankers Roosen, Probst, and Attorney Lindsley were called to Buffalo Tuesday on a law suit, Finnegan vs Quady et al. Judgement was given against Finnegan. J. H. Hoover, of Minneapolis attended to the bank during the absence of the other officials.

—Perhaps it was largely due to the fact that most of the children in Delano, of schoolable age had been vaccinated that a larger number of smallpox cases did not make their appearance last winter. There are some yet who should be vaccinated before the cold weather, when smallpox is likely again to occur.

—We have had the pleasure of testing several specimens of apples and plums raised in and about Delano lately. As fine large blue plums and other varieties have grown here this year as in any place in the Union perhaps. Minnesota, if the pleasant winters like the last two continue, will soon be one of the best fruit States.

—If farmers, horticulturists, manufacturers, and others in the county, would unite in trying to make the Wright County Fair a success it would be one of the best county fairs in the state. There is enough in the county to make as good a fair as the state affords. All it wants is a united effort of the people to make it what it should be.

—Sheriff Megaarden and a couple of associates from Minneapolis, were in Delano yesterday looking for the two colored men that were put off the train here last Friday, and who have been at the depot almost daily since trying to find conductor Sheridan. If they had been wanted very badly they could have been had long ago. In fact they put in Friday night, a week ago, in the Delano jail, and the conductor was here before they were let out and made no complaint. It looks as if, since a warrant had been issued for the conductor, it had been thought best to arrest the colored men as a bluff.

—There seems to be a kind of king or queen bee in many little neighborhoods in the country now a days who make it their duty to steer their neighbors to where to do business, generally farther away from home than necessary, what merchant to trade with, what blacksmith, shoemaker, seamstress, or whatever, to patronize, what professional man to employ. Such individuals assume to be better posted in law than the lawyer; to understand medicine better than the doctor; and to instruct in theology far ahead of the minister. They may be helping themselves earn a living by acting as agents for individuals, but in some instances it is costly to the people they dupe.

—The ball club went to Willmar last Friday and suffered defeat by a score of 5 to 0. The game was a good one all the way through, and but for extremely poor luck the boys had when at bat, the score would have been very close. Erickson was caught at home on a run from second, and twice men were caught off bases when there was a man on 3rd, closing the inning. Delano had more men on bases during the game than the Willmar team did, but ill luck made it imposible to score. Willmar made but one earned run. They are expected to return the game in the near future, and when they do, our boys promise to make it warm for them.

—Delano citizens, some of them, were disappointed on going to the train Monday morning to buy a ticket to the fair and return for one fare, plus 50 cts., to learn that they didn't save much, besides having to put their name on their ticket. The fare one way is 84cts. plus 50 cts. for fair ticket, makes $1 34: instead of this bargain they were charged an additional 30 cts for a ticket to St. Paul, where probably not one in a hundred would go, getting off at Minneapolis and taking a street car to the fair grounds, making the ticket bought $1.64, Jim taking the odd cent $1 65. A regular ticket to Minneapolis and return on Jim Hill's road would be $1.68. They were also disappointed when the train was not on time at 6:20 but came along at 8:00. Again some were disappointed in having to hang on to the platform as best they could while an empty coach was drawn along behind. Then when they had gone the agent was disapointed in finding no mail, until he met a woman carrying it back from the ditch behind the water tank. Jim ought to furnish good accommodations for Delanoites.

—A short time ago an election was held and a vote taken to bond the village for $1,500 to buy a park. A light vote was out but the vote stood about two to one of those voting for issuing the bonds. The council has published notice of sale of bonds. If they succeed in selling the bonds of course they will have the $1,500 with which to buy a park. There are several places that can be had, but the question is which will be most suitable and best to buy. The flatiron shaped piece near Maxfield's residence is favored by some but it seems the owners consider it more valuable since there is a possibility of selling it. Then Lohmiller kopje is favored by some. A few favor buying the garden spot in the rear of the old school house. Others want the woods in the pasture belonging to Mrs. Spates. It was supposed she would not sell but she has written to a party in town that for ten acres she will take a thousand dollars. The matter of where and for what price could have been voted on before, or at the time the bonds were voted on and settled much more easily than it can now. It looks as if the council had sort of got the people by the top not on the question of location of a park, unless they attend strictly to business and demand their rights of picking out a location. The people need not wait for the council to call a meeting; they can do so themselves and then present their petition to the council, to buy the one they want.

—Delano had a "nigger chase" of its own last Friday. We have been reading of the persecution of the black man in many states but didn't look for a genuine man hunting party right at home. But it came. On Friday afternoon, it seems as a freight was going at a pretty fair speed, on the West side, near the high bridge across the Watertown road, the conductor threw off a couple of young colored men that were stealing a ride. It was reported that one of them had drawn a revolver on the conductor. Marshal Merriman and several others set out to capture them and the conductor was to file a complaint. The Marshal started on his wheel to cross the bridge, but his wheel didn't seem to go fast enough for him and on striking a rock, he left the wheel and slid for a short distance on his face, skinning it badly. The hunted men ran down the river and crossed, happening to be at the deep swimming hole; they led the hunters, who were armed with guns and revolvers, quite a long chase and were not caught until they went to the depot at Rockford station, to try to get a ride. They were brought to Delano, placed in jail over night. Next day conductor Sheridan arrived but failed to lodge any complaint, so the men were given their liberty. Several citizens thought from the stories on the other side, and from the evidence of those who saw the ejectment from the train that the conductor needed some looking after, and a warrant was issued and placed in Marshal Merriman's hands to be served. He was at the depot on Monday and again on Tuesday when the freight train passed through town but failed to find Sheridan; the head breakman doing the conductors business.

County Cullings.

We hear occasionally, that there is to be a county fair, at Howard Lake, sometime this month. And we have heard, sometime ago that a premuim list, neatly gotten up had been issued. We don't know why they are not in circulation possibly they are to be handed out as souvenirs to those who find out when the fair is to be and attend. The Press tickets don't seem to be so plenty as they were with the State fair either.

Duluth Herald: It is announced that J. Adam Bede has challenged a Prohibitionist to a series of joint debates, and some are to be inflicted on Duluth. Jadam ought to be well equipped to meet the Prohibitionist's arguments, as he once ran a Prohibition paper himself.

Sherburne county is preparing to build a county jail. The county is a small one compared to Wright. It seems as if a jail would be a paying investment there, it surely would in Wright; provided all the criminals were caught and placed in jail.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30, 1901

Washington would be peaceful at present were it not for the Sampson Schley controversy, but both sides are so busy in considering what they will do to each other that there is a semi-sulphurous suggestion of war. The adherents of Admiral Sampson have thus far been kept occupied in explaining as much of their chief's erratic conduct as they can without giving their case away beforehand. Some of the explanations do not explain.

The latest development in the case is the discovery of the fact that the Cuban, General Garcia, knew, or surmised, that Cervera was coming out of the harbor of Santiago on the morning of July 3. His information came from the refugee French Consul at Santiago, and was, presumably, wigwagged to Sampson, as there was a code of signals arranged between Garcia and Sampson for that precise emergency. It would appear therefore that Sampson not only thought that Cervera might come out at that time, and as he has already claimed, made all arrangements to stop him should this happen, but that he actually knew that the sortie of the Spanish fleet was about to take place, and knowing, deliberately absented himself with one of the best ships of the squadron, and was hull down behind the horizon, seven miles away, when the time came for him to make his everlasting reputation. On ascertaining this, Admiral Schley's friends took immense delight in arising and asking with one voice, "Why"? It really seems, sometimes, as if the Schley press of the country, which means most of the newspapers, were one big interrogation point addressed to the unlucky Sampson

That Schley is the hero of the enlisted men there is no doubt. The "jackies" on his ship swear by him, and so do the gunners and the sailors on other ships, not including, of course, the New York. Schley was the only one of the three prominent admirals (Dewey, Schley and Sampson) who attended the banquet at the Waldorf Astoria given for the enlisted men during the New York celebration. Schley made a speech which took the sailors by storm.

It has been suggested that General Shafter should be called as a witness when the court of inquiry meets. It is not known just what Sampson's supporters in the Navy Department think of this suggestion and for obvious reasons it is not likely to be known. They cannot endorse it with good grace, and they cannot regard it with open disfavor without hurting themselves. That Shafter's testimony, if taken, would be one one of the most interesting chapters in the record cannot be doubted. The big general is not good at fabrications or evasions, and he was in a position to know Sampson very well. He would have to relate, under oath, the story of the Santiago campaign as he saw it from the rear.

Little can be learned at present, from any authoritative source, of the actual facts in the controversy. The reason is that Secretary Long has ordered every man connected with the Navy Department or with the service to keep his mouth shut. In this the Secretary has again shown the tact which has always been one of his prominent qualifications for statesmanship. It will really do no good to have the whole matter thrashed over on the statement of every little officer who knows, or thinks he knows, something about it, and the battle of Santiago was an affair in which a great many officers, big and little, took part, and on which practically every one in the service has an opinion. There are people, however, who note the fact that Captain Chadwick, of the New York, one of Sampson's devoted adherents, said a number of things about forbidden subjects a few days after the order was given, and was not punished, while Captain Forsyth, who came out in a Schley interview, is said to be in danger of a serious reprimand. They are asking "Why?" again and again in this connection. It is probable that that little word was never more badly overworked in Washington than it has been during the preliminary proceedings of the Sampson Schley investigation.

In his leisure moments, the secretary of the Navy has been considering the matter of certain vouchers submitted by the Bethlehem Steel Company and the Carnegie Steel Company for royalties paid by these companies to the Harvey Steel Company for the use of the Harvey process in hardening steel. The matter is in some ways a test case, for if the government refuses to pay these royalties the decision will effect all royalties upon battleships constructed since 1893. The only plates directly involved are those of the battleships Illinois and Wisconsin. The steel companies claim that the government had a contract, in which it agreed to reimburse them if they were "required to pay" these royalties to the Harvey people. Secretary Long has withheld his approval until the Court of Claims decides whether the government process infringes on the Harvey system. Acting Attorney General Beck has now given an opinion on behalf of the Department of Justice, sustaining Mr. Long in his refusal. The case has been dragging along for some time. Secretary Herbert refused to pay the royalties when he was Secretary of the Navy.

The Anti Trust League is trying to reach Attorney General Knox and bring charges against the big steel corporation, which it wants prosecuted under the Sherman act. Thus far Mr. Knox has calmly ignored the whole business. The committee of the League has not even been able to see him. His law partner is a director of the billion dollar corporation, and that or something else, makes him feel very secure.

There is a rumor that the British Foreign Office has some sensational news to give out regarding the Nicaragua Canal; but Washington is not giving as much credence to the rumor as if it did not come from Birmingham. Thereby hangs a tale, savoring of Munchausen's. It has been the practice of would be wily English correspondents for lo, these many years to try to give credence to stories about the affairs of the government by making them originate in Birmingham. Now, Birmingham is the home of Joseph Chamberlain, and the supposition seems to be that when he has Downing Street news to disclose he tells it to his home papers. This is as if stories of Mr. McKinley's public policy should be hallmarked "Canton". By experience correspondents have discovered that most of these yarns are pure creations of their author's fancy; and hence, to say that a sensational disclosure about the British Foreign Office hails from Birmingham is now about the same as saying it is a natural born lie.

This particular rumor is to the effect that England will abandon the position she has held for some years, and acknowledge the right of the United States to construct, maintain and fortify the Nicaragua canal. If such thing were really going to happen the chances of its leaking out beforehand would be extremely small. But when Lord Pauncefote returns and begins to discuss with Secretary Hay the result of his conference with Salisbury, it will be known, perhaps, whether there was any truth in the rumor or not.

During the "dark democratic days" of 1895 the republican organs sheld barrels of bitter ink over the woes of the woolgrowers, who had been "ruined" by free wool. But in August, 1895, medium grade wool was quoted at from 16 to 24 cents on Boston market, wool is now "protected" by the limit, yet strange to say medium grade wool in August of 1901 is quoted on the Boston market at from 11 to 17 cents. Has the Dingley law slipped another cog?—Commoner.

HOW A PUZZLL WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

OTTO AND HIS AUTO.

'Tis strange how fashion makes us change the objects we admire;
We used to sing the tireless steed, but now the speedless tire.
So Otto bought an auto, so as not to be antique,
But the thing was autocratic,
As well as automatic,
And the aut wouldn't auto as it ought to, so to speak.

He thought to get an auto-operator for the work,
And first he tried a circus man and then he tried a Turk,
For he knew the circus man drove fifty horses with success;
And if a man be shifty
Enough to manage fifty,
It's palpable enough he ought to manage one horse less.

As for the Turk, 'tis also plain, deny it if you can,
He ought to run an auto, since a Turk's an Ottoman.
'Twas all no use, so Otto moved to Alabam, purely That he might say, "I'm Otto,
From Mobile, and my motto:
'A Mobile Otto ought to run an automobile surely.'"

Then Otto sought to auto on the auto as he ought to,
But the auto sought to auto as Otto never thought to,
So Otto he got hot, oh, very hot! as he ought not to,
And Otto said, "This auto ought to auto, and it's got to."
And Otto fought the auto, and the auto it fought Otto,
Till the auto also got to hot to auto as it ought to.
And then, Great Scott! the auto shot to heaven—so did Otto—
Where Otto's auto autos now as Otto's auto ought to.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE.

THANKS to the Minnesota Board of Managers of the Pan American Exposition for a copy of the souvenir "Minnesota, The Bread and Butter State." It is neatly gotten up and illustrates some of the possibilities of Minnesota very well. It is a credit to the Board and to the State.

LAWS in this country are for all. The president is one of the citizens of the country and entitled to the same laws as other citizens. It is foolish to try to make believe that President McKinley's attempted murderer should be punished differently from what Congressman or Governor McKinley or plain William McKinley's should.

REPUBLICAN attorneys are having a terrible time over who shall succed to the District Attorneyship made vacant by the death of Bob Evans. St. Paul wants it. Minneapolis wants it and claims that the Capitol City already has much more than its share of offices and salaries. Then there are good men living in Minnesota outside of the big cities who would be willing to occupy the position. There is an abundance of material, such as it is, and still the fight goes merrily on.

THE talk of placing a guard around the president of the United States is unAmerican. The president is one of the people, and is safest when he acts as one of the people. Other presidents have gone unguarded. Mr. McKinley has done the same for months without harm. But when carefully watched at Buffalo his guards were not sufficient to protect him. With modern methods, if a person made up his mind to assassinate the president, he could shoot him from a distance even though he was in the midst of a regiment of soldiers.

SOME of the papers keep giving their readers the big headlines, "The Strike is About Over", and try hard to make out that the steel trust has got the best of the bargain. Off in some obscure corner can be read "President Schaffer Denies." It is claimed in one place that the Board has ordered President Schaffer to settle at any cost. In another place we are told that President Schaffer says the "Strike will last till the Amalgamated Association Wins". Which story is right? Or do the papers know any more about it than the rest of us do? Do they put out these contradictory yarns to sell papers?

Should Not Teach Anarchy.

Anarchy is defined by Webster as "Absence of government; the state of society where there is no law or supreme power; a state of lawlessness; political confusion. 2. Hence confusion or disorder in general."

We think some of the preachers who have lately been reported as advocating things not in accordance with the laws of the land would do well to read Webster awhile, after which they might search the Scriptures to their advantage. We know of no place, unless it be among savages, where the learned and talented Talmage could find grounds for saying as he is reported to have said: "I wish all the policemen in Buffalo who seized the pistol of the scoundrel who shot our adored president had taken the butt of the weapon and dashed the man's brains out on the spot."

Or, that other Rev. Dr. who had he been there, would, if he had a pistol, shot the assassin all to pieces.

Where these eloquent Divines get their religion from is hard to see, or where they get their ideas of law from is equally as mysterious.

It surely is anarchy, pure and simple!

When James Benjamin Parker, the colored man, dealt the assassin a blow that promptly put a quietus to his murderous assault upon the president, all the world cried, amen! Had the blow killed the assassin it still would have been, amen! But to the anarchistic drivel of the supposed teachers of mankind who would proceed to "shoot him all to pieces" or to have "taken the butt of the weapon and dashed the man's brains out on the spot", no American citizen, or Christian, can say Amen!

This is a free country. Rev. Talmage and Rev. Dr. Naylor and others have a right to free speech, and the freer the better, if they are to indulge in such slopovers as above. For they will have to live a good many years, and conduct themselves in a very becoming manner to live down such breaks as those.

Men who are speaking to thousands, who are having their sermons, lectures and speeches strewn broadcast over this free country should be very guarded in their remarks. They should not make statements which might incite their hearers if opportunity presented, to commit murder, to kill a disarmed and helpless fellowman. They should teach men to obey the laws of man and especially the laws of God. They should not teach anarchy.

Wrong to Shoot Presidents.

It is wrong to shoot presidents. It is not in accordance with the laws of man nor of God. Presidents of the United States are chosen once in four years by an electoral college, elected by the people. If a man is chosen when the people do not want they have the remedy, the ballot, for ridding themselves of him when his term of office has expired.

The laws of the land should be observed. The president should not be shot.

On Friday, January 30, 1835, at a time when the country was in an uproar over the United States Bank business, and when warm discussions between Calhoun, Clay and Webster, and Benton, White, and others in the United States Senate were going on, an attempt was made to kill President Andrew Jackson. As the president with a funeral procession was coming out of the rotunda of the capitol at Washington a man stepped in front of him and eight feet away pointed a pistol at Mr. Jackson; it missed fire. Immediately he tried another that he had in his other hand and it also missed fire. Both on trial afterwards were discharged, and the prisoner said he had tried them many times without a previous failure. The man was afterwards considered insane and never brought to trial.

On Friday, April 14, 1865, soon after the close of the great rebellion, and when Abraham Lincoln had just taken up the duties of President for the second time, while with his wife and others at Ford's Theatre in Washington, and assassin shot the president in the head, death occuring the next day. The murderer escaped and hid in a barn where he was found and shot twelve days after. He belonged to an organized party to kill several of the leading men of the nation. Several others were hanged.

On Saturday, July 2, 1881, the assassins hand was raised against the President, James A. Garfield, who had taken his seat but a few months before. The party to which he belonged was very discordant on account of the distribution of offices. Roscoe Conklin and his associate Platt from New York, in the U. S. Senate resigned to come before the legislature for endorsement and were defeated for re-election. Public feeling was high. As the president was at the depot in Washington he was shot in the back. He lived until Sept. 19. The assassin was, after a long trial, in which it was endeavored to prove he was not responsible for his acts, finally hanged.

Friday. Sept. 6, President McKinley, while shaking hands with the people in the Pan American Exposition, was approached by a man who had his hand wrapped in a handkercheif. While he held out one hand to the president to shake, with the other he fired two bullets from a revolver concealed in the handkerchief, into the president, one striking the breast bone, doing little damage; the other passing through the stomach and lodging in the muscles of the back. The holes in the stomach have been sewed up and the president made as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. With his robust body and usual good health it is hoped he may soon recover.

The would be assassin is under arrest and several anarchists in Chicago and other places, are in jail as accessories. An effort is to be made to establish that an organization had planned the killing of the president. The murderes defense is to be insanity. Every American citizen must condemn the action of shooting the president. It is not the thing to do.

An Indian Fakir's Trick

Magic Which a British Officer Explains by Hypnotism.

AN OFFICER of the British army who served in India with the Seventh and the Fourteenth hussars is spending a few weeks in New York. The other day some friends were talking with him about India and his experiences there, and the conversation turned to Indian fakirs and their wonderful performances.

"These fellows do perform some extraordinary tricks," said the British officer, "but, extraordinary as they are, the tricks are not so fearfully wonderful as some of the stories of them which are brought away from India by the tourists who learn all about India and its people in the course of a few weeks' sojourn in some of the coast towns.

"As a matter of fact, the greatest of the fakirs are never seen in the towns and cities. Their religion and superstition will not permit them to wander from their native haunts, and only those who have traveled or lived in the wildest and most remote parts of India have witnessed the performance of the really great tricks of the fakirs.

"The first time I ever met a no-discount fakir was in a wild, unfrequented part of India, where two other officers of the regiment, an army surgeon and myself had gone on a hunting trip. We had spent the day beating for a tiger, which got away, and had returned to camp tired and out of sorts. Taking an early dinner, for we were horribly hungry, we sat down outside the tent to smoke our cheroots.

"Suddenly, just before sundown, we noticed an uncanny-looking person coming toward us, grinning like a black devil, salaaming at every step and mumbling something which none of us could understand. We knew, of course, that our visitor was one of the mountain fakirs, and we calmly waited for him to proceed to business.

"As he put down his bag with great deliberation, the boy accompanying him curled himself up on the ground and seemed to be paying attention to nothing in particular. After a little the old codger produced, seemingly from nowhere, a ball of ordinary cotton string, which had once been white, such string as shopkeepers ordinarily use to tie up light parcels with.

"The man's hair was gray and his hide was as black as Erebus. He wore a dirty turban and loin cloth, which two articles constituted his apparel. The boy's outfit was no less elaborate.

"After tossing the ball of string about for awhile—it was about the size of a billiard ball—he threw it high into the air, retaining the free end of the string in his hand. Up and up and up went the ball, growing smaller and smaller the higher it traveled, until it disappeared from sight altogether. To all appearances it had sailed up until it reached the nearest stratum of clouds and disappeared behind it. It was the mightiest ball throwing we had ever seen and was quite sufficient to attract our attention to anything that the old boy might subsequently do—and that was just what he wanted.

"As soon as the ball had disappeared, the fakir let go the free end of the string and there we had a line of cotton twine extending from about five feet from the ground up to the Lord knows where. When the old man found that the ball remained in the air, refusing absolutely to come down, no matter how wildly he gesticulated or how loudly he yelled at it, he was apparently much annoyed.

"He tugged and tugged at the cord, but he couldn't pull the ball out of space, and as an evident last resort, he called the boy, told him to climb the cord and bring the ball down. Then we saw the spectacle of a boy 12 or 14 years old, climbing hand over hand, up a line of cotton twine about the size of a large pin.

"Up and up, higher and higher, the urchin went, climbing as a sailor climbs a rope, until he, too, had disappeared behind the clouds which hid the ball. When last we saw him, he looked to be just about as big as the ball did when it disappeared.

"As soon as the urchin disappeared, there was more trouble for the fakir. The boy appeared very well satisfied with the roosting place he had found and the old man was no more successful in getting him back to earth than he had been with the ball of twine. Then we did have a sample of splendid rage.

"The old rascal worked himself up into a perfect fury. He yelled and danced and gesticulated and gave the best exhibiton of a human demon that I ever saw. By way of heightening the effect and increasing our interest in the show, he dropped into broken but intelligible English, the substance of which was:

"'Am I to be made an idiot of by a ball of string and a fool by a chokera (small boy)? Allah forbid! I will them both teach that they may not trifle with one so old and so wise.'

"Then rushing to the filthy old bag that had been lying all this time on the ground, he thrust an arm into it and drew forth the most murderous-looking knife I ever saw. It had a curved blade about nine inches long, about three inches across at the hilt and tapering to a fine point. Placing the knife between his teeth and grasping the twine in both hands the old boy, showing marvelous agility for one of his apparent age, went up the cord as the boy had, and in less time than it takes to tell it he, too, had disappeared from view.

"He had us all going by this time, and we just sat there gaping up into the air like a lot of precious idiots. There was a second's absolute silence, and then an agonizing yell, so piercing that it sunk into one's very bones. Another second, which seemed like an age, and then we saw a dark object come hurtling down from the sky. Down and down it came until it landed only a few feet from us with a sickening sort of thud.

"Looking to see what it was, we saw the head of the boy who had climbed the cord lying there, severed from the body at about the middle of the neck. A closer examination showed that the face wore a horrible expression, while the scarlet blood poured from the divided arteries and the dark venous blood from the veins. The twitching of the newly-cut muscles and the windpipe, and the cleanly-severed joints of two of the cervical vertebrae were quite plain to the army surgeon and to the rest of us, all of whom knew a little of anatomy from the field hospitals.

"We hadn't by any means got over the shivery feeling we experienced at seeing the head of the late urchin, when down came an arm, cut off through the shoulder joint and giving all the anatomical relations in that part quite plainly. A moment later the other arm dropped at our feet and an examination showed that it had been cut off in exactly the same way. The doctor said the old rascal carved cleverly enough to have been a surgeon at the Royal college.

"We were about ready for anything after that, and so were not particularly surprised when a leg, severed at the hip joint and exposing the head of femur, the muscles twitching just as you may have seen them twitch in a freshly-killed animal came along. The other leg followed in due time, and then came the trunk.

"A moment later, the old man was seen coming down the string, and, when he dropped to the ground from the end of it, he was literally covered with gore from head to foot. The knife, still held between his teeth, was fairly dripping with blood. His eyes appeared wilder than ever, his features drawn, and he paced back and forth for a few seconds like a chained tiger.

"Then he collected the head, limbs and trunk and tossed them into the old bag. While watching this action we lost sight of the string and the knife and never saw them again. Slinging the bag over his shoulder, he walked away. We knew this was only a bluff, because he hadn't yet received any backsheesh and we knew he never would depart without that.

A NO-DISCOUNT FAKIR.

"He had moved off only a few paces when we saw that something was moving inside the bag. The old man stopped, put on a surprised expression, put the bag down on the ground, and in a moment out crawled the boy as sound in wind and limb as he had ever been.

"The boy began to smile, and the old man, smiling and salaaming, came toward us for his money. This he got in a very liberal amount, and off he went, leaving us standing there, mystified, confused, flabbergasted.

"We looked about for traces of the recently-committed tragedy, but where the ground had been red with blood a moment before not a trace of it was left. There was not the slightest bit of doubt that the boy had been carved up and there was not the slightest doubt that he had as miraculously come to life again.

"About the carving, the rest of us might have been mistaken, but you couldn't fool the doctor. He had been cold-blooded enough to pick up the different members of the body as they had come tumbling down from the sky, had examined them and was perfectly positive that the dismemberment had taken place and had been the work of a skillful surgeon or student of anatomy. This was one of the few performances that I ever saw of the real, genuine Hindoo fakirs of the Indian wilds."

"But how do you account for it all?" asked one of the British army officers' friends.

"Why, there is only one way to account for it," was the reply. "We were simply mesmerized or hypnotized by the old boy and placed in such a mental state that we imagined the whole performance really had been enacted."

"But how about the army doctor, who handled the dismembered parts?" asked some one else.

"Oh, he was befuddled just like the rest of us. He thought he handled stray arms and legs and heads and trunks, whereas he didn't do anything of the kind."

"Maybe Englishmen in India can become thus mentally twisted," said the first inquirer, "but I'm darned if I believe anybody else can. Either you saw a miracle performed or the whole blessed lot of you were gagged."—N. Y. Sun.

President Worse

The morning papers say, at 5 a. m. President McKinley is in a semi-stupor. He rallies at the approach of his attendants, but almost immediately lapses into a state approaching unconsciousness.

He is exceedingly weak and his heart beats are erratic. It is thought that solid food was allowed too soon. Stimulants were given. At 4 o'clock a slight rally is reported.

The Boers in the Last Ditch.

England has but to force the Boers in the last ditch and their kin will burn London For 100 years the Boers have been clearing up farms and building houses in South Africa, only to be driven off by the British bayonet to seek a home farther North. But now the Boer cannot go into Darkest Africa, for no white man can live there, and so he must fight as his ancestors fought at Majuba Hill.

The English are showing no mercy to the unfortunate Boers. They have banished the father, herded the women and children, and burned the home. They have taken the horses and eaten the cattle.

But the Boers have fought on, trusting in the God of Battles and hoping that the United States or France would intervene.

We all know that we would be colonies today but for the help of Lafayette with French ships and French soldiers. The name of Lafayette will always be endeared in the hearts of the American people, while the names of such English heroes as Lord Roberts and Kitchener will soon be forgotten.

What France did for the Colonies, we have paid our debt to mankind by doing the same by Cuba. But when Cuba shall build a monument on San Juan Hill, who will be the American Lafayette to solemnize the laying of the corner stone? Who says, not Roosevelt?

And why should we shield England in her bloody war of conquest? Has she not wontonly burned our Capitol building, hired Indians and Hessians to commit murder and barbarities: has she not aided and abetted the rebels in their war against freedom? The freedom that God and nature has given to mankind, England has always been taking away with the sword.

The day of pistol and gunpowder wars is past, but force the Boers into the last ditch and with dynamite and the torch they can indeed stagger the world by burning London

DELANO, WRIGHT COUNTY, - MINN,

For many generations after the first bale of cotton raised in the United States was sent to market most of the cotton plantations of the country were east of the Mississippi. But now nearly one-half of the entire American crop of cotton comes from the territory west of the river.

A minister in a Kansas town regretfully learned that the church collections were diminishing in amount. On a recent Sunday he informed his congregation just before the plates were passed around that the members who were in debt were not expected to contribute. To his delight, he later was informed that the collection was double the usual sum.

Cornell university is to have a properly equipped astronomical observatory, the money for the building having been given by Gen. A. C. Barnes, of Brooklyn. The amount given will provide for a fine building and splendid equipment, but the exact figure, at the request of Gen. Barnes, is withheld. The location will be the knoll south of the veterinary college.

G. B. Flux reports the case of a sailor to whom he administered nitrous oxid gas for the purpose of tooth extraction. While anesthetized the patient dreamed of a shipwreck through which he had passed, in all its details. The dream could not have lasted more than ten seconds, while his experiences during the wreck covered a period of three and three-quarters hours.

Acres and acres of the suburbs of Cape Town are covered with corrals for the army horses. Shiploads of horses and mules have been arriving constantly in the last year or more, but there are frequent reports of a lack of sufficient draught animals for the wagons and mounts for the cavalrymen. An officer told me that over 200,000 horses and mules have been used so far.

A hot summer is always very trying for fish, and they sometimes die in large numbers, owing to drying up of the streams. According to a statement of the Missouri fish commissioner recently, 20,000 black bass died in Missouri on account of the intense heat this summer, which caused the shallow water to evaporate quickly and turned what remained into almost hot water.

Capt. E. H. Smeed, of East Providence, R. I., has just received a government medal which was awarded him seventeen years ago for heroism in helping to rescue the crew of a shipwrecked schooner in the harbor of New Haven. The medal was mislaid in a secret drawer in a desk in the collector's office at the custom house of New Haven and was found only a few days ago.

The progress of military automobilism in Germany in indicated by the fact that the minister of war has lately ordered a series of machines which will carry two small Maxim guns, protected by nickel-steel plates. He has also ordered a series of automobile breaks which will be provided with tables. These breaks will be used by the general staff, and the officers may thus consult their maps or papers en route, spreading them upon the tables.

Mrs. Kamala Sattianadhan is the editor of the Indian Ladies' Magazine, and numbers among her contributors several Hindoo woman writers. The magazine is published in English, and in the current number there is a very interesting account of Miss Chuckerbutty's orphanage, where several child widows are being cared for. Lady Harnam Singh's plan of raising a memorial to the memory of the late queen is fully explained in another article.

M. Paderewski, like other mortals of less note, has his hobby—namely, billiards. He plays nearly every day when he can spare time from practicing and composing, and is a very fair cue. "I think I like billiards because it not only exercises my eye and hand, and keeps them in training even when I am amusing myself, but it also produces in me the delicate and refined artistic feelings which I have so often to express on the piano, as when, for instance, I play my favorite Chopin."

Nova Scotia is not yet tourist-ridden. Its comparative inaccessibility has been its salvation. There is elbow-room for everybody, and living is inexpensive. The first price is tentative, and there is a sliding scale with apparently no bottom. Twenty-five cents means much to the man who stables your horses or rents you a bicycle. And he does the stabling or the renting with such an air of perfect good will and understanding that you feel like the recipient of a distinguished favor.

Nineteen years old and 19 inches high. Such are the age and stature of Fatna, the famous East Indian dwarf. His weight is 13 pounds. Smaun is his little sister. She is one year younger and one pound lighter. These creatures are veritable pigmies and quite different from some dwarfs, in that their members are in proportion to their size. Fatna's head is about the size of an orange and his arms are the size of broomsticks. In fact, he is a man in miniature, with none of the false proportions of infants.

Braddock, Pa., is to have a new hospital which will cost $100,000. About $40,000 of the amount is provided for by a will made thirty-three years ago, and which had been nearly forgotten. The will was made by Martin Connolly, who died 25 years ago, leaving certain properties for charitable purposes. However, the surviving widow was allowed to retain the property until her death, which occurred in March, 1899. Father Hickey now receives the property and will devote the proceeds of its sale to the original design.

A COWARDLY FOE.

Anarchist Makes Desperate Attempt to Kill President McKinley.

Shoots the Nation's Executive Twice at the Pan-American Temple of Music.

Wounds Are of a Very Dangerous Character, Yet He Will Probably Recover.

He Makes a Gallant Fight for Life, Aided by a Staff of Eminent Surgeons.

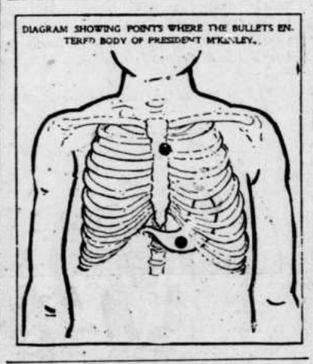
Leon Czolgosz, His Assailant, Captured—Tells Why He Wanted to Kill the President.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 7.—While President McKinley was receiving in the Temple of Music Friday afternoon he was approached by a man with a dark mustache and with one hand covered with a handkerchief. As the man extended his hand to the president, apparently with the intention of shaking hands with him, he fired a shot which entered the president's right breast, lodging against the breast bone. Another shot was fired at once, which entered the president's abdomen. The assailant was immediately arrested and was thrown to the ground and quick as flash 20 men were upon him. When rescued he was covered with blood from a gash in his face. Cries of lynching were heard in every direction, but the police managed to get the man out of the grounds and locked him up in a station house a short distance from the grounds. Later he was removed to the police headquarters.

The Wounds Described.

Secretary Cortelyou gave out the following statement:

"The president was shot about four o'clock, one bullet struck him on the upper portion of the breastbone, glancing and not penetrating; the second bullet penetrated the abdomen five inches below the left nipple and 1½ inches to the left of the median line. The abdomen was opened through the line of the bullet wound. It was found that the bullet had penetrated the stomach. The opening in the front wall of the stomach was carefully closed with silk stitches, after which a search was made for a hole in the back wall of the stomach. This was found and also closed in the same way. The further course of the bullet could not be discovered, although careful search was made. The abdominal wound was closed without drainage. No injury to the intestines or other abdominal organ was discovered. The patient stood the operation well; pulse of good quality, rate of 130, condition at the conclusion of operation gratifying. The result cannot be foretold. His condition at present justifies hope of recovery."



The Assassin.

Late Friday night the police learned that instead of Fred Nieman, the real name of the would-be assassin is Leon Czolgosz. He was born in Detroit, and came here from Cleveland. He is about 28 years old, stands five feet nine inches high, weighs 160 pounds, has dark brown hair, blue eyes, smooth face, regular features, with prominent nose.

Makes a Confession.

Leon Czolgosz, the accused and self-confessed assassin, has signed a confession covering six pages of foolscap, which state that he is an anarchist, and that he became an enthusiastic member of that body through the influence of Emma Goldman, whose writings he had read and whose lectures he had listened to. He denies having any confederate, and says he decided on the act three days ago, and bought the revolver with which the act was committed in Buffalo.

Exposed to Danger.

The president, though well guarded by United States secret service detectives, was fully exposed to such an attack as occurred. He stood at the edge of the raised dais upon which stands the great pipe organ at the east side of the magnificent structure. Throngs of people crowded in at the various entrances to gaze upon their executive, perchance to clasp his hand.

The Assassin Approaches.

It was shortly after four p. m., when one of the throng which surrounded the presidential party, a medium-sized man of ordinary appearance and plainly dressed in black, approached as if to greet the president. Both Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn noticed that the man's hand was swathed in a bandage or handkerchief. Reports of bystanders differ as to which hand. He worked his way amid the stream of people up to the edge of the dais until he was within two feet of the president.

Fires the Shots.

President McKinley smiled, bowed and extended his hand in that spirit of geniality the American people so well know, when suddenly the sharp crack of a revolver rang out loud and clear above the hum of voices, the shuffling of myriad feet and vibrating waves of applause that ever and anon swept here and there over the assemblage.

There was an instant of almost complete silence. The president stood stock still, a look of hesitancy, almost of bewilderment on his face. Then he retreated a step, while a pallor began to steal over his features. The multitude, only partially aware that something serious had happened, paused in surprise while necks were craned and all eyes turned as one to the rostrum where a great tragedy was being enacted.

Captured.

Then came a commotion. With the leap of a tiger three men threw themselves forward, as with one impulse, and sprang toward the would-be assassin. Two of them were United States secret service men who were on the lookout and whose duty it was to guard against just such a calamity as had here befallen the president and the nation. The third was a bystander, a negro who had only an instant previously grasped in his dusky palm the hand of the president. As one man they hurled themselves upon the president's assailant. In a twinkling he was borne to the ground, his weapon was wrested from his grasp and strong arms pinioned him down.

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

Coolness of the President.

But of the multitude which witnessed or bore a part in the scene of turmoil and turbulence there was but one mind which seemed to retain its equilibrium, one hand which remained steady, one eye which gazed with unflinching calmness and one voice which retained its even tenor and faltered not at the most critical juncture. They were the mind and hand and the eye and the voice of President McKinley.

After the first shock of the assassin's shot he retreated a step; then, as the detectives leaped upon his assailant, he turned, walked steadily to a chair and seated himself, at the same time removing his hat and bowing his head in his hands.

Urged All to Be Calm.

In an instant Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn were at his side. His waistcoat was hurriedly opened, the president meanwhile admonishing those about him to remain calm and telling them not to be alarmed.

"But you are wounded," cried his secretary; "let me examine."

"No, I think not," answered the president. "I am not badly hurt, I assure you."

Nevertheless his outer garments were hastily loosened, and when a trickling stream of crimson was seen to wind its way down his breast, spreading its telltale stain over the white surface of the linen, their worst fears were confirmed.

Asks Mercy for Assailant.

Moved by a paroxysm he writhed to the left and then his eyes fell on the prostrate form of the would-be assassin. Czolgosz, lying on the floor bloody and helpless beneath the blows of the guard.

The president raised his right hand, red with his own blood, and placed it on the shoulder of his secretary. "Let no one hurt him," he gasped, and sank back in the chair, while the guards carried Czolgosz out of his sight.

Taken to the Hospital.

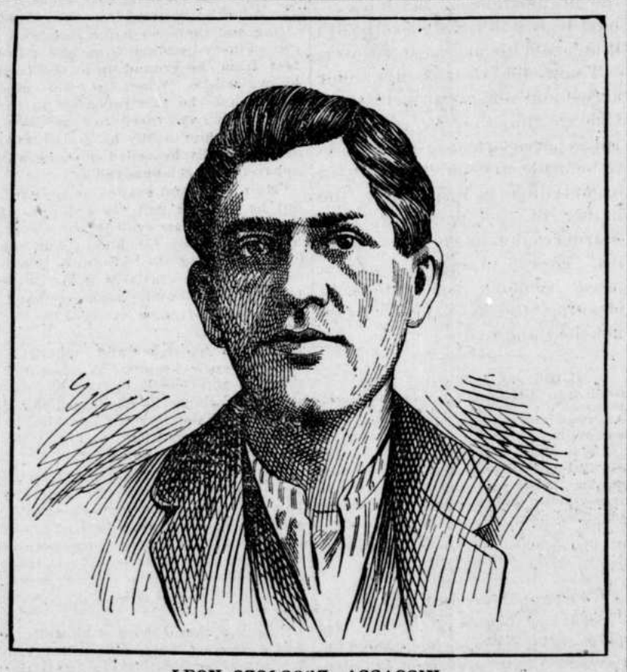
The president's assailant in the meantime had been hustled to the rear of the building by exposition guards, where he was held while the building was cleared, and later he was turned over to Superintendent Bull, of the Buffalo police department, who took the prisoner to No. 13 police station and afterwards to police headquarters. As soon as the crowd in the Temple of Music had been dispersed sufficiently the president was removed in the automobile ambulance and taken to the exposition hospital, where an examination was made. The best medical skill was summoned, and within a brief period several of Buffalo's best known practitioners were at the patient's side.

The Wounds Examined.

The president retained the full exercise of his faculties until placed on the operating table and subjected to an anaesthetic. Upon the first examination it was ascertained that one bullet had taken effect in the right breast just below the nipple, causing a comparatively harmless wound. The other took effect in the abdomen, about four inches below the left nipple, four inches to the left of the navel and about on a level with it. Upon arrival at the exposition hospital the second bullet was probed for. The walls of the abdomen were opened, but the ball was not located.

Mrs. McKinley Bears Up Well.

When the news of the crime was telephoned to the home of President Milburn, where Mrs. McKinley was resting, immediate steps were taken to spare her the shock of a premature statement of the occurrence before the true condition of the president should be ascertained. Guards were stationed, and no one was permitted to approach the house. When it was decided to remove the president from the exposition hospital to the Milburn residence the news was broken to Mrs. McKinley as gently as might be by the members of the Milburn family. She bore the shock remarkably well, and displayed the utmost fortitude. She said that if it was possible to bring her husband to her she wanted it done. Dr. Rixey assured her that the president could be brought with safety from the exposition grounds.



LEON CZOLGOSZ, ASSASSIN.

STEADILY IMPROVES.

Satisfactory Progress Made in President's Condition.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Private Secretary Cortelyou Sunday night gave out the following statement:

"The public will be kept fully advised of the actual condition of the president. Each bulletin is carefully and conservatively prepared and is an authoritative statement of the most important features of the case at the hour it is issued. The people are entitled to the facts and shall have them.

"GEORGE B. CORTELYOU,
"Secretary to the President."

This statement is intended to put at rest any idea that the official bulletins underestimate the conditions, and at the same time to give assurance that those with the president intend that the people shall have the facts.

The following bulletin was issued by the president's physicians at four p. m.:

"The president since the last bulletin has slept quietly, four hours altogether since nine o'clock. His condition is satisfactory to all the physicians present. Pulse, 128; temperature, 101; respiration, 28.

"P. M. RIXEY,
"M. D. MANN,
"ROSWELL PARK,
"HERMAN MYNTER,
"EUGENE WASDIN,
"CHARLES M'BURNEY."

The same physicians united in signing the following bulletin, issued at nine p. m.:

"The president is resting comfortably and there is no special change since last bulletin. Pulse, 120; temperature, 101.6; respiration, 30."

Messages of Sympathy.

The messages of sympathy from all over the United States and all over the world, in fact, have fairly overwhelmed Secretary Cortelyou. Two more white house stenographers have been sent for, and upon their arrival, perhaps to-day, some of the more important messages will be made public. Almost every government in the world has been heard from, most of the crowned heads of Europe sending personal messages. Among the latter are King Edward VII., Emperor William, the kings of Portugal, Italy and Sweden and the sultan of Turkey. President Loubet, of the republic of France, has also cabled his sympathy direct. One of the most touching messages thus far received was from Mme. Labori, the wife of Maitre Labori, who defended Dreyfus in his famous trial at Rennes.

EVERY SIGN HOPEFUL.

Although Not Out of Danger, the Chances for Recovery Increase.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 10.—The physicians finished their consultation at 9:45 p. m. and announced there was no material change in the president's condition. An official bulletin issued later, signed by all the physicians, says: "The president's condition continues favorable. Pulse, 112; temperature, 101; respiration, 27."

Hope Unshaken.

Milburn House, Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 10.—"God's contribution to the American people will be the sparing of the president's life." As the evening shadows were falling Monday night John G. Milburn, president of the Pan-American exposition, reverently uttered these words as he stood before the house in which the nation's patient was fighting so bravely with death. And all who have been at the Milburn residence reflect the view that the battle will be won and the prayers of the world will be answered. Since Sunday night not an unfavorable symptom has appeared. Every hour has been a victory. Faith in the outcome grows stronger and stronger, and hope mounts higher and higher until in the minds of some the danger of all future complications is brushed aside, and hope has become conviction.

Not Out of Danger.

Still, that the president is by no means out of danger is the verdict of each of them. Not one of them will risk his professional reputation with a statement that the president will live. All they will say is that with every hour the danger of complications from peritonitis or blood poisoning decreases. Dr. McBurney, the most eminent of the physicians in attendance, expresses the opinion that if the improvement continues it will be a week yet before the president can be pronounced out of danger and convalescent. And some of his colleagues, like Dr. Mann, place the limit of danger still further away. The fear of peritonitis, it can be said positively, has well-nigh disappeared. At the expiration of the 72-hour period, at four o'clock Monday afternoon, danger from that source was almost gone.

President Confident.

The president himself has been cheerful, and has expressed confidence in his recovery. Monday he asked for a morning paper, but this, of course, had to be denied him. It is with some difficulty that he can be restrained from talking, and Col. Myron T. Herrick, of Cleveland, is quoted as authority for the statement that he has spoken at intervals of several things he proposes to do in the future. Monday morning he asked to be allowed to change his position, and when permission was given, before the attendants could move him, he changed to the position he desired to assume without difficulty or pain. This speaks much for his general strength and spirits. Mrs. McKinley saw him again Monday for a brief visit, and Secretary Cortelyou was admitted for the first time. No one else was allowed to see him, although he inquired several times who were below stairs.

Is Given Nourishment.

He was given nourishment Monday in the form of eggs beaten in milk administered through the rectum. The water which has been given heretofore cold did not appear to agree with him, and since Sunday night very hot water has been taken into the stomach through the mouth with splendid results. His bowels moved freely during the day, and this also was considered an excellent symptom. If he continues to improve it will be gradually. If he should grow worse the change in that direction also, probably, will be slow. This is the opinion of Dr. Mann. There will be no crisis. If he arrives at convalescence Dr. Park expresses the opinion that it will be three weeks before it will be safe to move him. It is expected that the interior wounds will heal first. The sutures of the lacerated tissue were made so soon after the bullet passed that they are probably healing rapidly. With the exterior wound it is a slower process.

HAD NO ACCOMPLICE.

President's Assailant Insists He Was Alone in His Crime.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Czolgosz had made no additional admissions to the police officials and nothing that they have learned from him has aided toward a solution of the criminal side of the case. He still insists that he alone conceived, planned and carried out the crime and that he alone must answer for it. He admits that he attended meetings at which Emma Goldman spoke and where he and his fellow anarchists discussed their propaganda of murder, but steadfastly denies that any of them had a part in his plan. His talks with them were fairly general, he says, and he did not divulge to them any feature of his scheme to come here and kill the president. His statement on that feature made on Saturday created the impression that he acknowledged a general talk with his associates on this particular crime, but he now says there was no justification for that impression.

EMMA GOLDMAN.

Unconcerned as to His Fate.

Czolgosz is still kept secluded and the detectives are the only ones who have access to him. He is still strong and healthy and eats with a will. Knowledge of the condition of the president is kept from him. He knew on Friday night that the president was still alive, but has been given no information since then. Not once since his confinement, either in talking with his guards or when up for examination, has he asked as to the fate of his victim. No plan for the arraingnment of the prisoner has been considered by District Attorney Penney.

It is believed that both Emma Goldman and Julius Schwab will be detained by the police whenever they are found. Superintendent Bull has made a general request to the police of the country that anyone suspected of complicity be detained and examined. The police of Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and other middle state cities are cooperating with the local officers in tracing out the movements of the prisoner before the crime, and Superintendent Bull said that they had practically accounted for him for the six weeks that preceded his arrival here.

AFTER ANARCHISTS.

The Dragnet Is Out in Various Sections of the Country.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—The determination of the authorities — national, state and municipal—to stamp out anarchism in this country is shown by dispatches from the leading cities this morning. The New York police have orders to arrest Emma Goldman and any other person known to be an avowed anarchist. The police of Philadelphia and other large cities have their dragnets out.

THE HOSPITAL WHERE PRESIDENT WAS TAKEN.

At Pittsburg two important arrests have been made which may supply the missing links in the chain of evidence connecting Emma Goldman with the attempt on President McKinley's life.

The federal authorities arrested near Silver City, N. M., Antonio Maggio, who predicted that the president would be assassinated before October 1.

Arrests have also been made at Omaha and other cities.

From nearly every state in the union and from nearly every public man comes the demand for the crushing of anarchism, the arrest of its exponents, the suppression of its literature, and the interdiction of its meetings.

United States secret service officers have come to the conclusion that the attempted assassination of President McKinley was the result of a carefully worked out conspiracy, and that in all probability the details of the plot were arranged in Chicago. As a result of information that they gathered Monday the following dispatch was sent to Chief Wilkie, of the secret service, early Monday night:

"Rush anarchist's coat to us by express at once. Believe that with it in our possession we will be able to trace his residence here and his acquaintances during his stay."

Queen of the Table.

The waitress slammed an order of about a spoonful of dried-up mashed potatoes before the customer with a defiant air.

"I like the sample," weakly remarked the patron as he cleaned up the small part of the once luscious roots at one mouthful.

"That was your order; you asked for potatoes," snapped the waitress as her eyes narrowed and her lips assumed the shape of a straight line.

"When do you dig potatoes?" returned the subdued man in an effort to become friendly.

"I dig potatoes from 11 a. m. to two p. m.," said the queen of the table as she nervously fingered a cup which was not "working." "And once more nobody but the cheap skates kick."

The patron gulped his coffee and beat a retreat.—Cleveland Leader.

Religion Losing Ground.

The country is becoming agitated over the statement that religion is losing ground. This results in countless discussions until the agitation runs its course, and still religion flourishes. It is only useless things that deteriorate. The finest recommendation of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the great stomach strengthener, lies in the fact that it has lived for fifty years in spite of hundreds of imitations, and is renowned for its cure of dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, nervousness and malaria, fever and ague.

Letting Him Down Easy.

"That was a pretty harsh thing you said about me on the witness stand."

"What?"

"Why, when they asked you about my reputation for truth and veracity, you said I hadn't any."

"Yes; that has troubled me a good deal since then, but, honestly, old man, I wanted to let you down easy, so I lied about it."

"I should think you did."

"But you ought not to complain. Suppose I told them what your reputation in that line actually is!"—Chicago Post.

MRS. MARY GREGOVICH,

Of Philipsburg, Montana, Tells How She Was Cured of Dandruff.

Mrs. Mary Gregovich, of Philipsburg, Montana, under date of Nov. 26, 1899, writes: "I had typhoid fever this summer, consequently was losing my hair terribly, and my head in places was perfectly bald. Newbro's Herpicide had just come into use in Philipsburg, and the doctor strongly recommended it to me. After 3 or 4 applications my hair stopped falling out, and is coming in again quite thick. I used to be troubled greatly with dandruff, of which I am now quite cured." Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide.

It is said that a great broker once told his son that only two things were necessary to make a great financier. "And what are those, papa?" the son asked. "Honesty and sagacity." A GLOWING REPORT.

An Indiana Man [illegible]s Western Canada with th[illegible] States—What Mr. Frank Fisher, a Prominent Dunkard, Has to Say After a Trip Through Canada.

The Department of the Interior at Ottawa has just received from Mr. E. T. Holmes, the Agent of the Government stationed at Indianapolis, Indiana, the following letter, which requires no comment. It is only necessary to state that Mr. F. Fisher, the writer of the letter, is one of the most prominent of the Dunkards and a man upon whose word the utmost reliance can be placed. His home is at Mexico, Indiana, and he will be pleased to substantiate verbally or in any other way all that he says in his letter.

To my many friends:

I am pleased to make a report to you of the pleasant visit my wife and I had in Western Canada.

We visited the territories of Alberta, Assiniboia, and Saskatchewan, and found them far surpassing our imagination, but little did I expect to find such rich, loamy soil, so much of it, and so uniform in its level prairie lay. I do think the soil of Canada as a rule equals if not excels the finest prairie farm lands of Indiana. These lands are immense in their richness, and when once the sod is rotted and pulverized, it is as pliable and as easily cultivated as Indiana sandy soil.

Western Canada, from my point of view, offers as fine opportunities for mixed farming as any place in my knowledge. The long, sunshiny days, together with the rich soil, produce very fine wheat, oats, barley, flax and other cereal products. There is scarcely any attempt to raise corn, except early varieties for table use. The season is too short to depend upon maturing field corn. From the standpoint of getting this land ready for the plow, I must say that I never saw such a vast extent, practically all ready, so all that one has to do is to hitch up the plow and go to work. This is not the case with all the Canadian land, however; some of it has quite a bit of timber, much of it may be called brush land, and some of it has lovely forest groves, dotted here and there, thereby covering a hundred and sixty acres.

I have no doubt but that this country excels as a grazing or ranching country, because they have such rich grass, having an abundance of rain to keep it fresh. They also have plenty of water streams, and as a rule water may be reached at a depth of from 20 to 40 feet. From this you see there can be plenty of hay mown for winter feeding, and I have had reliable farmers to tell me that their stock will feed on hay alone, and be ready for market in the spring. Upon inquiring about the expense of raising a steer, a farmer replied that he did not consider it would cost any more than $4.00 or $6.00 to develop a three-year-old steer.

I truly think Canada offers a fine opening for a young man or a man who is renting land in Indiana. One hundred and sixty acres of good black land will cost you only $10.00 at the time you enter it, and by plowing and cultivating five acres each year for three years, gives you one hundred and sixty acres of good land for $10.00. This land can be bought from the Railroad Companies, private corporations or the Government for $3.00 to $4.00 per acre.

From a financial standpoint, I believe that for a series of years (five), a young man can make $10.00 in Canada, whereas he would only make $1.00 here, and I feel sure that I spent more money to get my eighty acre farm in White County, Indiana, cultivated, than it would cost me to cultivate eight hundred acres in Canada. This may seem a strong view to take of the matter, but when you take into consideration the clearing, ditching, fencing and the expensive breaking in of the stumps, and then compare the expense to that of land needing only the breaking, you will conclude that it is not such a wild or exaggerated statement as you might at first think.

I enjoyed the balmy, breezy atmosphere, which was bracing and refreshing, and the cool nights which made it so pleasant for sleep.

On making inquiries regarding the winters in this country I learned that the people never suffer from the cold, as the weather is dry and invigorating, and in a great many places, farmers and herders allow their stock to run outside the year round.

One great advantage to the settlers in Western Canada is the free creameries established by the Government, and run exclusively in the interest of the farmer.

I visited Thomas Daley, a farmer near Edmonton, Alberta, who showed me oats he had raised, some of which took the first prize at the Paris Exposition last year. The same yielded 110 bushels to the acre in 1899.

Yours truly,
FRANK FISHER.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Grain Grades.

The state board of grain appeals held its annual meeting at the Corn Exchange, in Minneapolis. Contrary to expectations, there were no important changes in the wheat grades. In the general rules the word "new," as applied to a newly-harvested crop, was stricken out because it was shown to be not only misleading, but the cause of much needless confusion. The strongest argument against the use of the word was that it virtually fixed the value of wheat—something entirely beyond the province of the board. As old wheat always commands a higher value than new wheat, the future elimination of the objectionable word from the rules will be of direct benefit to the producer.

The board also created one more grade of oats, an intermediary grade between "three white" and No. 3 oats, to be known as "four white." This change was likewise made in the interests of the farmer.

In the "no grade flaxseed" the word "damp" was inserted in addition to the words "warm, mouldy, very musty or otherwise unfit for storage."

Previous to the meeting there had been some talk of lowering the grade of wheat from 56 to 55 pounds, but this proposed change did not come up during the session.

Grain Receipts.

The official figures showing the receipts and shipments of grain, flour and millstuffs at Minneapolis for the crop year ending Aug. 31, have been compiled by Assistant Secretary J. H. McEnary, of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce.

The table prepared shows that the receipts and shipments of the commodities enumerated, with the exception of wheat, flour and millstuffs, are in excess of the totals for the preceding crop year, indicating the extent to which Minneapolis has grown as a grain market during the past crop year.

The wheat receipts for the last crop year fall below those of the previous year by nearly 6,000,000 bushels, and the shipments were over 4,000,000 bushels smaller.

The city's growth as a corn market is emphasized by an increase of over 4,000,000 bushels in the receipts, most of which was consumed, as the shipments were only nominally larger.

A Woman Policeman.

Mrs. C. A. Severance, of St. Paul, is the first woman in that city to receive a commission as special policeman. Mrs. Severance is the wife of the law partner of the late Senator C. K. Davis, and is interested in the work of the humane society. She applied for the commission in order to secure authority which will enable her to act at once upon seeing a brutal teamster beating his horses. Instead of searching for an officer while the miscreant gets away, she will have authority to conduct him to the nearest patrol box to await the arrival of the patrol wagon.

Object of Forestry.

Forestry is not the planting of trees for ornament or for shade. It is the science of raising crops of trees for profit on waste land—land that is too hilly, too rocky or too sandy for cultivation. On such land, and including elevated and exposed situations, the pine will reach merchantable size in 80 years, and by its growth earn an average net revenue of 3 per cent. But this is too long for individuals to wait for a crop, and the state should buy such tracts and keep them permanently in revenue yielding coniferous forest. —C. C. Andrews.

Work Delayed.

As a result of the big steel strike, the new state capitol in St. Paul will not be completed in time for the next regular session of the legislature. Channing Seabury, of the capitol commission, believes that the steel strike will set the work on the building back a whole year. The commissioners will receive bids for engine-room boilers, skylights, etc., Sept. 24, but it is expected that they will be so high that it will be necessary to reject them.

News in Brief.

W. T. Kuler was held up and robbed on the streets of Minneapolis early in the evening by Clara McCloud, a colored woman.

Nels Berg, of St. Paul, was killed at Hamline. His team became frightened at something and ran away and threw him out of the wagon. His head struck a lamp post and his skull was fractured. He was a laborer and unmarried.

Two squads of burglars are working in Minneapolis.

Peter Biggs, who broke his parole from the St. Cloud reformatory, was arrested in Minneapolis.

The supervisors of the town of Birch Coulie have sued the First National Bank of Minneapolis, to secure possession of bonds valued at $13,200, which it is cloimed belong to the town.

Since the announcement that State Superintendent Olsen was going to work hard to accomplish something practical in the line of school consolidation, the idea has been picked up all over the state and impetus given it in districts where it is most desired.

Bills amounting to $1,613 were presented to the state auditing department for oil used in killing grasshoppers in the Red River valley during the last spring and summer.

Seventy-four cases of smallpox were reported to the state board of health for the two weeks ending Aug. 29. This was a decrease of 50 per cent from the previous two weeks.

One of the fire horses in Minneapolis escaped and refused to be captured by the firemen. They tried the experiment of striking the alarm, and the horse trotted quickly to his accustomed place at the engine.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

Nuremberg holds the record for growth among German towns. It has increased 60 per cent. in the past five years.

The change in British legal documents from "God Save the Queen" to "God Save the King" will cost a total of £400,000.

The German emperor has appointed his youngest sister, Princess Margaret of Hesse, to be chief or honorary colonel of the Eightieth foot, in succession to her deceased mother.

DEATH IN THE RAPIDS.

Miss Maria Willard, an Ohio Girl, Loses Her Life in Niagara Whirlpool.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 9.—It has remained for an Ohio girl to be the first woman to lose her life in an attempt to navigate the whirlpool rapids of Niagara in a barrel. This girl is Maud Willard. She was taken out of the river dead at ten o'clock Saturday night. She entered the barrel at 3:40 o'clock and was set adrift at 3:51 o'clock. At four o'clock her barrel swept under the bridges into the rapids. At 4:04 o'clock the rapids had been passed and the barrel was drifting about the whirlpool, where it remained until darkness settled. It was swept around the river pocket many times. Graham swam to Lewistown successfully, and when he returned he crossed to the Canadian side in hopes that he might save the life of the girl who was to do the double turn with him. Capt. Johnson, the surf swimmer, also hurried there with life lines and life rings. The electric road sent its searchlight car to the whirlpool to illuminate the river. It returned, but without definite information as to the barrel. Miss Willard took her pet dog into the barrel with her. When the barrel was opened the girl was dead, but the dog was still alive. Miss Willard was 25 years old and a native of Canton, O.

COLUMBIA IS CHOSEN.

Yacht That Won the Last Great Race Again Selected to Defend the America's Cup.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 6.—The yacht Columbia, champion of 1899, has been chosen to race against the Shamrock II. in defense of the America's cup. This decision was reached Thursday after a conference lasting two hours between the members of the challenge committee. All the committee were present. Commodore Lewis Cass Ledyard presided.

The discussion was exhaustive. The performances of the two boats were gone over systematically and critically compared. The conclusion was that the behavior of the Columbia was far more consistent than that of the Constitution and that in the circumstances there was no alternative but to name her as the defender of the cup. It was held that while the decision might be disappointing to the syndicate which owns the Constitution, the committee were compelled to choose the Columbia, whose races have shown none of the erratic form manifested by her rival.

REVOLUTION SPREADS.

It Extends Throughout the Whole of Venezuela—Rebels Defeated in a Battle.

Colon, Colombia, Sept. 7.—The revolution in Venezuela is extending over the whole country. President Castro is reviving the recruiting movement and has concentrated troops in the states of Tachira and Zulia. A division under Gen. Arjona, starting from Rio Hacha for Goagira, encountered August 22 a force of rebels under Gen. Castillo. The latter were defeated, losing 200 in killed, wounded and prisoners. Among the killed were Gens. Socarras and Pibal Ruiz. The invading force consisted chiefly of Venezuelans, many of whom are distinguished by hats bearing ribbons marked "Battalion Cipriani Castro." It is said that important correspondence has been captured compromising the Venezuelan government.

Trade with Japan.

London, Sept. 7.—A consular report of the trade with Japan says that in 1883 more than half of the Japanese imports were from Great Britain; in 1890 one-third were British; in 1898 less than one-fourth; in 1899, a little more than one-fifth, and in 1900, one-fourth. While the trade of the United Kingdom since 1883 has increased less than 1½ fold, that of the United States and that of Germany have each grown ten-fold, and the most strenuous efforts are being made by the last-named two countries for trade extensions in the future.

Five Men Killed.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 9.—A special to the Pioneer Press from Jamestown, N. D., says: Five men were killed and six others seriously injured, two of whom have since died, in a collision which occurred early Sunday. A mixed train on the Northern Pacific railroad came in from Oakes, carrying 17 men on a flat car. As the train passed the station a road engine was struck, and the force of the collision caused the flat car to collapse.

State Treasurer Resigns.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 7.—J. R. Stowers, state treasurer, suspended by Gov. Longino ast week as a result of an alleged shortage, found when the governor counted the cash, and which was made good later, Friday morning tendered his resignation as treasurer and the governor accepted it. The governor will, it is understood, appoint Acting Treasurer Carlisle to the vacancy and order an election as provided by law.

Many Injured.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 6.—Two suburban electric cars, going in opposite directions, crashed into each other Thursday evening at a point one-half mile east of Chagrin Falls, and ten miles west of Cleveland, and 14 passengers and the crews of both cars were more or less injured.

Demands His Expulsion.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 10.—The Atlanta Journal, voicing the sentiments of 24 southern papers, demands that Senator Wellington, of Maryland, be expelled for his disrespectful attitude toward President McKinley.

Valuable Pearl Found.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Sept. 6.—The finest pearl yet found in the Mississippi river was picked up here by William Burns, a clam digger. It is perfectly egg-shaped, of finest quality possible, weighs 42 grains and perfect in every respect. It was purchased by D. J. Lenehan, pearl buyer, for $1,000.

Ordered to Leave France.

Paris, Sept. 10.—Feridoun Bey, head of the Turkish police in Paris and the right-hand man of Munir Bey, the Turkish ambassador, has been ordered to quit France within 48 hours.

ATTEMPTS ABANDONED.

All Efforts to Settle Steel Strike Fail —Acute Stage Reached at McKeesport.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 10.—The last efforts to settle the steel strike have failed. The general executive board of the Amalgamated association adjourned Monday evening without date and without either accepting any of the peace propositions, which have come indirectly from the United States Steel corporation, or making any counter propositions, according to the official statement.

The semiofficial report is that the proposition secured for the Amalgamated association, through the intervention of the representatives of the National Civic federation, was unsatisfactory, and that the entire matter of arranging for a settlement was left with President Theodore J. Shaffer. The board, in its sessions of three days, has been clamoring for a settlement, but satisfactory terms and means were not at hand, and the sessions resolved themselves into an informal discussion of the situation.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 9.—The strike situation in McKeesport reached an acute stage Monday morning and serious trouble was feared as a result of the efforts of the striking tube workers to prevent men from returning to work as they did Saturday. The effort was almost perfectly successful, and where last week from 800 to 1,000 men went back into the mill, not more than a dozen were able this morning to elude the multitude of pickets and get back into the mill. There was great excitement in McKeesport Monday morning as a result of this turning out of the strikers, more than at any time yet.

Milwaukee, Sept. 10.—Thirty-five Amalgamated association men returned to work at the plant of the Illinois Steel company in Bay View Monday. Many others are uneasy and are expected to return in a few days. It is said that three of six of the company's mills, the Top and Bottom, the 12-inch and rail mills, were started Monday morning. Among those who passed through the gates to report for duty were J. D. Hickey and J. F. Cooper, the two men who went to Pittsburg ten days ago to learn the real facts in regard to the big strike.

THE SCHLEY INQUIRY.

The Court Will egin Its Hearing of the Celebrated Case on Thursday.

Washington, Sept. 10.—During the conference between Admiral Dewey, president of the Schley court, and Capt. Lemly, judge advocate of the court, at the navy department Monday, it was arranged that the sessions of the court after Thursday, when the court first assembles at one o'clock, should be held daily from ten to twelve o'clock and from one to three o'clock, or thereabouts. The court will sit continuously from day to day, Sundays excepted, until the investigation is concluded.

It has been decided to proceed with the Schley inquiry at the specified time, unless the president should die or become very ill. Admiral Dewey says no time will be wasted in preliminaries.

BOMBARDS RIO HACHA.

The Venezuelan Fleet Attacks the Important North Coast Colombian Town.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The Colombian legation has just received the following cablegram:

"Willenstad, Curacoa, Sept. 7.—Venezuelan fleet is bombarding Riohacha.
(Signed) BECERRA."

Dr. Becerra was formerly Colombian minister in Washington.

The dispatch indicates that Venezuela has begun more active operations against Colombia than have been undertaken in the past, although the term "fleet" means little in connection with either republic. Rio Hacha is an important commercial point of Colombia on the north coast.

Death at a Dinner Party.

New York, Sept. 6.—The climax to a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Peters, at their home in this city, came when Mrs. Peters deliberately walked to the sideboard, filled a liqueur glass with carbolic acid and, facing her guests, drained the glass. Her action, it is said, was brought about by a reproof from her husband before the rest of the party. After she had drunk the poison and physicians were called, Mrs. Peters, who was only 26 years of age, begged the doctors to save her life. Everything possible was done, but she died some hours afterward.

Storm Sweeps Lake Huron.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 9.—After one of the roughest nights ever known on Lake Huron, made worse by a heavy pall of smoke that overhung the water, six vessels are wrecked on the beach three miles north of here. The crews were rescued by different life saving crews during Saturday, the total number rescued being 56.

Miss Stone Still a Prisoner.

Constantinople, Sept. 10.—The American legation learns that Miss Stone, the missionary who was recently abducted by brigands in the villayet of Salonica, is still a prisoner in the hands of her captors. It has not yet been stated what ransom is demanded for her release.

Death of a Veteran.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Word has been received at the war department of the death of Gen. Chauncey McKeever, U. S. A., retired, at a health resort near Emden, Hanover, Germany. No details are given.

Victims Increased to Sixteen.

Newark, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The death list of the wreck of the Northern Central accommodation train, which occurred Thursday of last week, near Fairville, has been increased to 16 by the death Friday of Mrs. William Le Munyon, of Port Gibson.

Sultan's Latest Move.

Constantinople, Sept 7.—The porte, it is said, is endeavoring to come to a direct understanding with the French claimants against the Ottoman government, hoping thus to deprive the French government of its grounds for action.

COULDN'T WEAR SHOES.

Sumpter, Ill., June 10.—Mrs. J. B. Flanigan, of this place, had suffered with Dropsy for fifteen years. She was so very bad that for the last three years, she has not been able to wear her shoes. She had doctored all the time, but was gradually getting worse.

Last winter Mr. Flanigan, who was very much discouraged, called for some medicine at Mr. J. J. Dale's drug store in Carmi. Mr. Dale persuaded him to have his wife try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and he bought six boxes. His wife used five out of the six, before she was entirely cured. She is now as sound and well as ever she was, completely restored to health, and free from any symptom whatever of Dropsy.

To say that Mrs. Flanigan is pleased at her wonderful deliverance, does not half express her feelings, and she and Mr. Flanigan are loud in their praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and of Mr. Dale for recommending this wonderful remedy to them.

The fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mrs. Flanigan of such a severe case of Dropsy, after the doctors had given her up, has made them the most talked-of remedy ever known in White County.

A METHODIST BISHOP GIVES PE-RU-NA GREAT CREDIT.

BISHOP GRANT, OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Writes His Recommendation for the Famous Catarrh Remedy, Pe-ru-na.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true to-day of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low station that none hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The following letters from pastors who use Peruna speak for themselves:

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"My little boy had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

Rev. A. S. Vaughn, Eureka Springs, Ark., says: "I had been prostrated by congestive chills and was almost dead; as soon as able to be about, I commenced the use of Peruna. I took five bottles; my strength returned rapidly and I am now enjoying my usual health."—Rev. A. S. Vaughn.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Bishop A. Grant, of Indianapolis, Ind., writes the following letter:

Indianapolis, Indiana, 3349 N. Pennsylvania Street.
Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.: Gentlemen—"I have been using Peruna for catarrh and can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone who wants a good medicine."—A. Grant.

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the above one from Bishop Grant.

—Mrs. Dell Young is visiting her father, J. H. McAlpine this week. She will leave here in a few days for Prinston, B. C., to join her husband who preceeded her a few months.—Maple Lake Messenger.

--Delano assumes metropolitan airs this morning for a short time. The 10:40 passenger, west, and the west bound way freight sidetracked here while a a freight train of 69 cars drawn by two engines from the west passed, bound for the cities.

—The recent wet, cold days and nights have caused numbers of our citizens to have "colds". This is the time of year when people ought to have a little fire in their houses and put on a little extra clothing; then "colds" would be less numerous.

—Loads of Sorghum kegs and barrels for the syrup when made, pass through town daily. There seems to have been more cane raised this year than for a long time. Those who have a barrel or two of fine sorghum molasses will consider themselves fortunate this winter.

—On the inside of this paper will be found pictures of President McKinley, his would be assassin, Leon Czolgoscz, and Miss Emma Goldman under arrest for complicity in the crime of attempting to take the life of the president. Also a plat of the Exposition grounds where the crime was committed, and an account of the attempted assassination.

—Last week the Delano Lumber Yard received a carload of siding from Washington, the freight on which was $150. Manager Belden says that it may look big, but that it is cheap in comparison to the freight from Minneapolis here. From Minneapolis on the same car, the freight would be $17. From Seattle, which is seventy seven times as far, at the same rate, it would be $1,309.

—Last week we said: "Delano schools opened up Tuesday. Attendance is a little smaller than it should be." We have since been informed that both the Public and St. Peter school opened with a larger number of pupils than were present on the first day of last year's school. But a public school teacher after informing us of the good attendance immediately began telling us of those who had come after the first day and a few yet to come. So we readily cleared ourselves of the charge of misstating the facts when we said "The attendance is a little smaller than it should be."

—Hunting is in full blast in the country around Delano. Every lake and mud hole has its score of visitors in quest of the sagacious duck. Quite a few have appeared on the streets with game in their possession. About all the ducks that hatched in this vicinity have been killed and sportsmen will have to wait a couple of weeks until they commence to fly in from farther North; a few have made their appearance already. The law for pheasants and quail is not up until the 1st of next month. There are quite a lot of gray squirrels in the woods. They are fine eating and about the best game in the country to shoot.

—A great deal of talk is going on about organizing some kind of a society to interest the young people of Delano evenings and the old people as well. A general complaint is made that there is no place where people can congregate to learn anything for their own good or the good of the community. Annandale, Buffalo and other villages have Village Improvement Societies, which look after the interests of the village. Whenever anything is to be done the Village Improvement Society discusses it, appoints committees to arrange for the occasion, or to look after the business and to see that things are done to the best interests of the village. In this way they have established reading rooms and have furnished places where people can congregate and enjoy the company of others, or read and improve their minds A well regulated literary society, where live questions can be discussed, is one of the most enjoyable and at the same time instructive ways of spending an evening each week. A gymnasium has been mentioned and would be all right if properly run. The Improvement Society could look after that as well. The idea of nothing but card parties and dances night after night, during the long winter evening, where nobody receives a new idea, where nothing that adds to their moral or intellectual qualifications is to be learned; but where by the late hours, and oftentimes evil associations, the downward road is taken! Morals, intelligence, health, are often sacrificed by the young and thoughtless because of no other and better amusements or entertainments. Let Delano immediately take steps to furnish some place for its citizens to spend their evenings occasionally with profit to themselves and to the community.

You say its "old". All good plays are old. All that is good improves with age. "Ten Nights in a Barroom" is new every time you see it. This beautiful drama depicts a series of truthful scenes in the course of a drunkard's life. Some of them are touching in the extreme, and some are dark and terrible. Step by step is portrayed the downward course of the tempting yender and his infatuated victim, until both are involved in hopeless ruin. The play is marred by no exaggerations, but exhibits the actualties of life with severe simplicity and adherance to truth that gives to every picture a photographic vividness The audience seem to be in full sympathy with the moral of the story, and laugh at Sample Swichel, sympathize with poor drunken Joe Morgan, and weep at the death of Little Mary. City Hall, Sept. 17.

Personal.

Miss Anna Erwig, of Annandale, Sundayed in Delano.

Miss Josephine Plattner is visiting friends in LeSueur.

O. A. Burnes returned home Wednesday from Minneapolis.

Albus Rader, late of Aitkin, has rented Mrs. M. J. Mulford's building.

Mr. and Mrs Rupoldt, of Minneapolis, visited Delano friends this week.

M. E. Muckey is entertaining his brother from Indiana, who is visiting him.

Henry Bock, John and Joe Berneck, Charles Stein and Emil Wiese have gone west to work.

Louey Brandser returned last night from Winsted where he visited his brothers, Hans and Thor.

Prof. Farnsworth and family have returned to St. Paul where he has charge of the Cleveland school.

John Steffes is taking his annual vacation. P. M. Lindsley and wife are attending the office in his absence.

J. E. Borsch has returned from an extensive trip through the west and north part of the state. He thinks Bemidji booming.

George W. Bolton and family are still absent on vacation. L. A. Lentz, of Maple Plain is attending to the depot business in his absence.

Albert Pittsley was in town this week. He is traveling for a tailoring house in Minneapolis. His wife died at Maple Plain in June.

Dr. Ball's fame is abroad in the land He informs us that Dr. Clinton having recommended him, he will go to Raymond to take charge of a severe case of rheumatism.

Hon C. G. Haigren, of Watertown, was in town Saturday on his way to attend the G. A. R. meeting at Cleveland, Ohio. He expects to visit the Pan American Exposition also.

Mrs. Earl Holsington has gone to Ohio to visit her mother and other relatives and friends. She took advantage of the G. A. R. rates. Earl is a good deal like a fish out of water.

Rev. Savs visited Watertown and Waverly lately to assist the priests there in their work. Rev. Savs is something of a linguist and comes handy where there is such a diversity of languages as there is in Minnesota.

County Cullings.

M. E. Quarterly Meeting is to be held at Montrose on or about the 21st.

The Village Council, of Buffalo, has called a special election to vote on buying a part of Taylor's Third Addition to Buffalo for $1,800 for a park. The election will be held on Tuesday, the 17th of September.

J. H. Wendell, of Buffalo, moved his household goods to Minneapolis last Sunday. William Gorman assisted in the moving. We understand his daughter Marilla will attend the State University this winter.

The Eagle is authority for saying that the tax sale at Buffalo Monday was not much of a success. The only two pieces of land sold being the two advertised for Delano, out of 100 advertised in all. Whether Delano is the only place in the county where people want to buy land; or whether the others paid their taxes before the sale day don't appear from the Eagle's story.

Two choice reserved seats for The Evans Company, who appear here September 16 are waiting at Wittman's drug store to be given to the person making the largest list of English words, from the title of the play to be presented, "Green Eyed Monster". Number your words and arange alphabetically; present to Mr. Evans at his hotel upon arrival, and the name of the successful competitor will be announced by a sign at the box office at 7:30. Everybody try. It only requires a little brain work and will do you good even if you don't win. No lists accepted after 6 o'clock

Pay Up.

Persons knowing themselves indebted to the undersigned will confer a favor by paying up. Some of my accounts are old and ought to have been settled long ago. Settle up and you will feel better and so will I.

Maple Plain.

We are having quite a little rain, which will make the ground fit for fall plowing.

Those from our town who went to the big show at Hamline last week report a large crowd and lots of exhibits. Large gate receipts are reported through the paper, but such fairs are of little or no interest to the common farmer.

Quite a goodeal of real estate has been changing hands in our town of late, and every few days we hear of parties looking for land. What is known as the George Bradford farm has been sold to parties living in Minnetrista; also a part of the Jacob Batdorf farm has been sold. It seems a good many had rather have their money in lands than to use it for speculation.

Farmers must raise less wheat and more corn, hay, potatoes and stock. Most everything the farmer has to sell is bringing a fair price except wheat and that is down to low water mark, and everything we have to buy is at high water mark, some things so high we have to go up in a baloon to reach it, but we hope all things will work together for our good.

Another president shot by a fool anarchist; another Giutau affair. What must we do to prevent such things? Three of our presidents have now been shot and must our nation bear the reproach for the acts of such men. It is high time such characters should be looked after, if possible before they commit such crimes. Is it possible the president of the United States is not safe even when in a crowd and guarded by officers of the law. We hope the president may recover but even this will not lessen the crime of the assassin, he will be guilty just the same.

We have a great country but I fear in many things our people have been too liberal, especially with a certain class of people. A good many people do not appreciate liberty and freedom, it seems some should be ruled with a rod of iron. FARMER

"The Green-Eyed Monster."

This play is a very successful English comedy made famous a few years ago by John Hare in London, but the play is not what the name would indicate a melodrama of some horrible derivation, but a beautiful comedy with a purely English atmosphere, and enough Americanism to remind you of your liberty. It is called a great comedy and it is, but there is also a thrilling heart story of romance running throuh it, and sustaining an unbounded interest in its characters.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 31, 1901

When General Arthur Mac Arthur, formerly commander in chief of the military forces in the Philippines, came to town the other day, he had a great deal to say about the situation in the archipelago. The general, however, framed his comment with hopefulness rather than emphasis. Between the lines of his interviews there was food for thought. He stated among other things, that the army of forty thousand men in the Philippines would probably be none too many for some time to come. This is a bald admission that the civil government established with such an ostentatious flourish of trumpets is far from able to stand on its own legs. Largely by inference, General MacArthur attributes the armed uneasiness of the Filipinos to the sudden trsnsition from Spanish to American institutions. It is difficult to comprehend how the substitution of the good for the bad can engender such opposition, especially among those who have been groaning under the burdens and injustices of the latter for centuries.

Unfortunately, the bill of particulars showing why the Americans and the Filipinos are not in accord at the present time is left largely to the imagination of the persons interested in knowing. While all must contemplate with a certain amount of satisfaction the growth of civilizing and reforming influences in the islands, it seems that there ought to be a way of settling differences of opinion on questions of public policy other than the continued extermination of the weaker disputants. A simple friendly argument will often do more to open the eyes of the benighted than a whole batallion bent on slaughter.

For some time the lethargy in political circles here has been pronounced. Senator Hanna's cavoorting Presidential boom, however, has almost managed to establish normal wakefulness in those quarters where curious structures are sometimes built from political straws.

The boom has become so obstreperous that several aspirants have felt obliged to dodge. Therefore, the shrewd Ohioan, without appearing on the scene, has succeeded in getting into print an explanation to the effect that he is perhaps more deeply amused by the antics of the boom than any other man, woman or child in the United States.

The story goes, and it appears as having leaked from a confidential source, that Mr. Hanna's sole object in permitting his name to be used is to preserve from rust the marvelously successful machine hitherto established by himself for political purposes.

It is alleged that Senator Hanna intends to refrain from being the next President. There are those, even in his own party, however, who are not sure of the matter. It is known that he admires the White House, outside and inside. He has never been accused of not being ambitious The buzz of the Presidential bee is soothing and alluring. Even his opponents have admitted that he is the logical Republican candidate. And there is no doubt that he intends to be the controlling factor in the next national convention of his party if he is alive when that body is called to order.

Notwithstanding the public sensation of weariness, the Sampson Schley controversy continues to demand that it shall be noticed. Forecasts, denials speculations, reports of progress and differences of opinion related to the dispute are forced into prominence with the regularity of weather predictions.

A day or two since it was announced that Sampson would remain in his New Hampshire retreat by his friends in Washington. It was declared that physical weakness would prevent his appearance before the naval court of inquiry. Now an anonymous naval official of high standing declares that the father of the controversy insists upon facing the tribunal in order to substantiate his charges against Admiral Schley. While Sampson may be physically unfit to stand the siege of the Washington tribunal, there is no doubt as to the construction the people would place upon his absence. They were already recalling the fact that he was somewhere else when Schley reduced the Spanish fleet to junk and citing as a prospective parallel his probable absence when the victor of Santiago battles for his reputation before his judges in the National Capital.

If Sampson is able to come to Washington, he should, by all means do so, for even the champions of Schley would not be contented with a verdict in his favor unless the accusing officer has given by word of mouth all his testimony in support of the serious charges against one of the heroes of the greatest of American naval engagements. Sampson's absence, unless there is incontrovertible proof of his invalidism, would be universally interpreted as meaning that he was afraid to face the fire of cross examiners who will do all in their power to vindicate Schley.

Secretary Hay's recent hurried trip to Canton proues to have been due to the continued agressiveness of Venezuela, promising a general disturbance among the South American nations. The result of Mr. Hay's conference with the President was a warning to Castro, the Venezuelan executive, to the effect that an end of the imbroglio was highly desirable and would be appreciated by the United States, which is pledged to preserve the neutrality of the Isthmus of Panama. If Castro is as hot headed as he has been pictured and sufficiently wrought up by the war feyer, he may take an erratic notion to defy Mr. Hay. While such action would be ludicrous, it might develop a situation capable of complications. Several nations are more than interested in the isthmian canal project for obvious reasons and Castro might secure support from quarters where, under other circumstances, he would be merely laughed at.

While cotton may have abdicated as a sovereign, it continues as a first rate power in the industrial world, and the report on the annual crop in the United States is particularly gratifying. Some of the statistics follow: Receipts at all United States ports during the year 7,666,452, against 6,734, 364 last year; overland to northern mills 1,140,237 against 1,161,189; southern consumption taken direct from the interior of the cotton belt, 1,576, 733 against 1,540,867 making the crop of the United States for 1900-1901 amount to 10,383,422 bales against 9, 436,416 last year, and 11,274,840 the year before. There is a continued increase in the number of mills and in the spindles of plants already established. The value of the cotton crop this year has reached the remarkable total of $494,567,549, more than ever before obtained for the product of a season.

Among Our Exchanges.

President Reed is still working his Duluth railroad. Now, the old Huron, Danvers, & Duluth roadbed, which "busted" so many farmers, is still laying out of doors and unprotected, in Lac qui Parle county and he might buy it all graded and move it right up here. He has given the Duluth News Tribune a recent interview, but the grading is not commenced as yet.--Annandale Post Advocate.

Broad Axe: If it hadn't been for the private profit the railroads insist on making out of the business of transporting the mails, we could have had penny postage long ago. With government ownership of railroads, the cost of the postal service can be greatly reduced, as transportation will then be furnished at cost and none of the "private profit" fellows will be getting a good fat rake off.

A CITY VIGNETTE.

BY KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON.

That light that filtered into the curio shop was so dim that only the bronze Buddha was clearly discernible; the shelves, rising tier upon tier along the walls, and laden with eastern cloths, seemed but so many dusky reflections of the gloom. Whiffs of hot air came through the overshadowed doorway and mingled with the scent of spice. The atmosphere of the place sanded the throat with a dry and enervating warmth.

The man and woman, standing amidst the shadows, were conscious of it, but with a differing consciousness. The man breathed it in, as the necessary breath of his existence; the woman felt stifled—oppressed. She moved, and the costly material of her skirt rustled against the uncovered floor.

"And this—" Her hand rested on a dark vase. Her figure, faintly silhouetted against the wall, seemed almost incongruous in such a scene; for her dress swept round her in rich folds, and her hat drooped over her face in a wide, extravagant curve. It was the dress that three great artists had made famous, and that the world knew by heart, but to the pale, pinched man in the mean shop it was too much a part and too uncomprehended to be of any note. To him she was a gorgeous butterfly, that, poising itself for a moment in the darkness, would presently flit away into the sun.

"And this—" she said again.

"That is Chinese," he said, in his peculiar voice. "We have had it for ten years. It is accounted very old, 200 years old—perhaps more. We prize it very much." Commercially he always spoke in the plural. Most things that he did had a fantastic turn.

"Indeed!" she said. Her voice was extraordinarily low, but she did not move her hand.

He watched her uneasily. "It is not for sale," he said.

"And why?" She kept her face averted, and surreptitiously she touched the bronze dragon that guarded the top of the vase. "Everything in a shop is usually—for sale."

The man smiled curiously. "Shops," he said, "like other things—differ."

At the tone of the words, half caustic, half solemn, her mind sprang back into the past. A picture partly remembered—never wholly cast aside, shot into the light of knowledge; and a sharp, unexpected pang went through her heart.

"And your master," she said, hesitatingly, "he still lives?"

"My master has been paralyzed," he said, "these ten years back."

She made a sudden movement and the top of the vase fell—rolling away into a corner.

"Forgive me!" she said; and there was a breathless catch in her voice.

He sprang after the cover, wiping it jealously as he picked it up.

"If this were broken—" he said, menacingly. Then his manner changed. "He has been helpless since this misfortune," he said, gently. "When hope is taken, life may go as well. The two are one."

This man with his pale face and deformed body was an untaught philosopher. There are many such in the workshops of God.

"Tell me of him," she said—her voice was very low. People said that on the stage her words could thrill to a man's soul. No audience had heard her speak as she spoke now. "Tell me," she said again.

For an inconceivably long time he hesitated. Then he looked up. Even in the shadow, the pathos and the fidelity in his eyes made them shine like lamps.

"I seldom mention him," he said, "but if you will it—" His tongue, long rusted by silence, halted in its speech.

"Yes," she urged. "Yes."

He replaced the cover of the vase carefully, and pushed up a sleeve—dusting it with his sleeve.

"Ten years ago the master had a daughter."

He stopped and coughed. A passing cab rattled on the cobbles, and a tiny ray of sun, falling through the doorway, made a bar of dancing dust.

The woman moved slightly.

"Well?" she said, "well?"

He bent his head.

"She was the stars and the sun and the world to him—and to me," he said, simply. "But we, we were like the things"—he moved his hands comprehensively—"dusty and gloomy and dull—to one so bright. She had a face like Heaven; and earth sees so little of Heaven that it must take all it can. One morning we found her gone."

There was a silence in the street, and it seemed that all life had clogged its wheels, and that only the man, with his pitiful deformity and half poetic words, breathed and had his being.

"But he lives!" she whispered. "You said that he lives!"

His head was still bent—he was lost in a reverie.

"I found him on that morning," he said, not heeding her words, "found him lying by the shop door. For hours I thought that he was dead; but the doctor came and said that we must look to time for his recovery. Time!"—he smiled sadly. "Death would have been an easier word."

Her skirt rustled again upon the bare floor, and she drew her breath with a catch.

"Tell me more," she said; "everything!"

"For years he lay like a log, and never spoke. Then one day his voice came back, and his first words were: 'Where is Anna?' It was the hardest hour of my life."

His voice ceased, and she clasped her hands fiercely; tears were dropping upon them like hot, searing rain.

"Every day since then," he said, "I have had to suffer the same words. He never fails—he never forgets. It is always—always the same. 'Has she come yet? When will she come?'"

"And you?—you?" Her voice was a mere echo of itself.

He laughed, but there was no bitterness in the laugh—and no mirth.

"I—well, I have seen the stars and the sun and—I, too, remember."

His voice was softened and his face was strangely transfigured.

"God has made me different from other men; I may not claim what they can claim. But I have a life of my own to give away. Perhaps I have given it foolishly, but"—he passed his hand across his forehead—"but I am content."

He had forgotten the presence of a stranger, forgotten the hour, the place—everything except the ideal, perfect in its entire hopelessness, that had been the light in his patient life. And the woman, standing as it were in the maze of his dream, saw the long procession of her life stream slowly past. Saw the friends—the triumphs that make up the word career; and above them—as a beacon above the restless sea—the entire devotion of one life, true and steadfast as the creed of hope. The man's back was turned, and the miracle of such a soul in such a body swelled her heart in a great flood.

With a gesture finer than any that had made her fame, she stretched out her hands: "Johann!" she said, softly. "Johann! Anna has come home."—Town and Country, New York.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE MAN WORTH WHILE.

'Tis easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows along like a song.
But the man worth while
Is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years
And the smile that is worth
The praise of the earth
Is the smile that comes through tears.

It is easy enough to be prudent
When nothing tempts you to stray.
When without or within
No voice of sin
Is luring your soul away.

But it's only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth
The honor of earth
Is the one that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen,
Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's highway
Is cumbered today;
They make up the item of life.

But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile—
It is these that are worth
The honor of earth,
For we find them but once in a while.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

President Dead.

On Saturday morning, Sept. 14, President McKinley died. Although, on the evening before, bulletins were issued giving hope of his recovery he grew worse until relieved by death. The country mourns the loss of its President. Owing to the arrangements of our laws, although the head of our government is taken away, even by the hand of the assassin, the government still lives. Vice President Roosevelt became President on the death of President McKinley.

UNDER the headline "The Bluff That Failed", Wednesday's Globe in an editorial says many derogatory things of President Shaffer, of the Amalgamated Association. It seems bent on crushing the man beyond future recognition. But at the end of its article does President Shaffer perhaps "unconsciously" the honor to say that "his influence on the relations of labor to capital may have the most beneficial results. Never before have the basic issues between the two forces been so widely discussed and so clearly understood" and "Shaffer may be the unconscious prophet of a new era in the labor world." The Globe appears to be doing considerable bluff itself. It may be "unconscious" of it however.

A FEW papers are putting up a terrible petition to the government to prohibit the coming to this country of foreigners, whom they denounce as assassins and murderers, and whatever else that is vile they can think of, and use the case of the recent killing of President McKinley as an argument. Don't they know that the murderer of McKinley was born in Detroit, Michigan; that he was American born, and that he did not come over from the old country with his anarchistic ideas, but must have got them in this country. Of course his forefathers were born in foreign lands; so were the ancestors of the editors of the complaining papers. There have been good people come to America from other lands, and their descendants were not all editors of sensational daily papers either.

IF the reported torturing of Czolgosz is true; if it is a fact in order to extort from him a confession as to who were his accomplices he has not been allowed to sleep, but had electric lights flashed before his eyes every few minutes in order to keep him awake, and in other ways been tortured, the question arises by what authority are these things done? Who has a legal, or a moral right to shoot the president; and who has a legal or a moral right to torture a prisoner in the hands of the law? Had Czolgosz been treated as the dying president requested, and as Christian people the world over believe in treating prisoners, he might, and probably would be as apt to tell all he knows about a conspiracy to murder the president just as quickly as he would under the torturing process, and his statements would be more apt to be believed by the people. Had he been used humanely he would, most likely, be tried before the proper authorities in the county where his wicked crime was committed and sentenced and electrocuted as the murderer of any man in Buffalo would be. But if he is tortured into signing statements implicating others, and is made insane by those in authority who have him in charge, it is possible that he will be incarcerated in an insane asylum. But, possibly like many other statements made lately, the story of the terrible torturing of the prisoner by the Buffalo authorities is exaggerated. American citizens are opposed to shooting, killing, or torturing each other, or anybody else, and it is a shame and a disgrace to the people who practice it, or who tolerate such things in their communities.

The Cartoon.

Like many other things the cartoon has been overdone. It has been abused and misused until many people pay no attention to it. In fact most of them are being relegated to comic pictures on the last pages of the dailies, and colored to attract attention. A good clean cartoon representing something decent is a good way to impress upon the minds of the readers any subject, or the principle acts of a man's life. But when it comes to representing Uncle Sam as an old bum, with a cigar in his mouth and a beer mug in his hand, it may, alas! be too true to nature, but it is revolting to many of America's free people. It isn't the kind of an Uncle Sam Christian people prefer. It don't impress anybody with greater respect for our institutions. Uncle Sam, according to earlier pictures, was a different personage from that, and one that everybody respected and every American citizen loved.

It is an outlandish shame, and no better than barbarism to misrepresent the leading men in the various walks of life in cartoons that are a discredit to decent journalism. To picture politicians as thieves and robbers, and ruffians, who in a few weeks are to be peace officers; or are to fill positions that should be posts of honor; to be Governor or even the President. Such ideas as people get from rude, and often malicious cartoons, of men of prominence, serve to prejudice the popular mind against men of superior qualities, and sometimes to defeat them at the polls, or if they should be elected, to destroy what influence for good they might have had.

Cartoons should be fair, decent honest, or should be relegated to the waste basket.

WHEN our foreign friends read of the actions of some people in this country burning in effigy the slayer of the President, who has been indicted by the grand jury of Erie county, N. Y. for murder in the first degree; and Miss Emma Goldman, under arrest in Chicago, for complicity, on suspicion only, while the police looked complaisantly on, they will doubtless think that anarchy is raging at a fearful rate in America. And then when they read how the pulpit orators of the country wished Czolgosz's brains had been beaten out with the butt end of his revolver, and that if an eloquent devine had been there, according to his tell, and had a pistol, he would have shot the murderer all to pieces. And when they read the "learned legal" discussions of how the murderer might be tried on several counts, and taken before the United States court, or under military law, court martialed, they surely will be justified in thinking that some Americans are considerably loose in their ideas of right and wrong, of their observance of law, and their desperate efforts to impress upon their fellow men that laws are inadequate to protect the president. The laws in America, that are good enough for the humblest citizen are good enough for the most exalted. The laws that protected Teddy Roosevelt when he peddled New York Heralds, ought to be good enough to protect President Roosevelt. When the idea that the officers of a government need different laws to protect them from what other people have is sufficiently strong to have laws enacted for the president and his cabinet and other laws for the people it is getting an awfully big step away from a Republican form of government. If laws are insufficient to protect the lives of the officers of the United States they are equally inadequate for the people. Let us not have one law for the newsboy and another law for the president. But let us have one law for both. Let us have a "government of the people, by the people and for the people", and let our laws protect each alike. Let us have "Equal rights for all and special privileges for none."

Most Drastic Law.

GRINNELL, Iowa, Sept. 16 —It is believed that this city has reached the culmination of municipal legislation to put a stop to the drinking of beer and intoxicating liquors, and that the ordinance which has just been placed upon the town statute book is the most drastic which has been enacted since the days of the blue laws of Connecticut. This ordinance, which goes on the book as ordinance No. 128, having received the signature of Mayor Spalding and Clerk Wilson and having been duly published makes it a crime for two or more citizens to get together and take a drink of beer or liquor, no matter where they meet, even if it is in their own homes and they are members of the same family. Under this ordinance it is a crime to set a glass of beer on the table at the dinner hour, provided the family consists of more than one person.—Duluth News Tribune.

Pioneer Press Special Cable Service.

Cologne, Sept. 12 —The Brussels correspondent of the Westphalian Gazette has received a positive assurance from Dr. Heyman, Mr. Kruger's physician, that the ex president is in good health and that he is satisfied that the position of the British is hopeless. He says that the Boers don't wish for intervention now by any of the powers as such a course would only benefit the British.

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Time has demonstrated that the Thrice a Week World stands alone in its class. Other papers have imitated its form but not its success. This is because it tells all the news all the time and tells it impartially, whether that news be political or otherwise.

It is in fact almost a daily at the price of a weekly and you cannot afford to be without it.

Republican and Democrat alike can read the Thrice a Week World with absolute confidence in its truth.

In addition to news, it publishes first class serial stories and other features suited to the home and fireside.

The Thrice a Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and GAZETTE together one year for $1 75.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2 00.

Compromise Hall

The Countrywoman's Club

By Hervey White.

LUCINDA EVANS was hitching her white horse, Mack, to the post in front of Blake's grocery when the quarrel reached its climax. Dave Babbitt was in his wagon, and Townsend, the harnessmaker, was on the sidewalk.

"The lot is mine and I intend to keep it if it costs me the farm to do it!" Dave was saying, with determination.

"You'll find I can spend as much money on lawyers as you can!" Townsend sneered.

"I bought the land and paid for it."

"And I had a mortgage on the house."

"That mortgage is void."

"You will have to prove that in court."

"Get up!" said Dave, savagely, to his horses, and Townsend was left standing triumphant.

"What an ugly expression on Dave's face," meditated Lucinda. "I've always thought Dave handsome, but today he looks capable of murder."

She entered the dingy little store and waited till her turn came to be served. The ill-ventilated place was foul from the sickening smell of tobacco smoke and tobacco juice. Then the staring publicity was hateful. Lucinda particularly commiserated a Bohemian woman who was nursing a baby in that bad air; another woman was shrinking in the semidarkness of a corner, with a look of restless weariness in her eyes.

Lucinda kept thinking of these women all the slow, dreary way home.

A sudden inspiration came to her. She stopped the horse.

"If there were only some one to do it! Why can't I? After all, it's a woman's work, and goodness knows I'm lonely and need interest!"

Her black eyes shone and her cheeks flushed at the idea.

"Emma Hendricks can help me," she said. "I'll drive back to Plainview now."

So Mack was turned three miles out of the way, and finally left to look over a fence at Dave Babbitt's two plow horses, who were rubbing noses together. Meanwhile Lucinda talked, and Dave frequently shook his head.

"So you think you can do it," she said, after awhile.

"No, Miss Evans. I'd like to do it, but I've no authority. The house must stand vacant till the question is settled in court. It may be a year, or two years."

"But I want the use of that house."

"Well, I'm sorry, Miss Evans, but—"

"What if I take possession?" said Lucinda. "Will you have a right to put me out?"

"No; but—"

"Will Mr. Townsend have a right to put me out?"

"I should guess not!" said Dave Babbitt, decidedly.

"Well, then I'll take possession," said Miss Lucinda, with spirit. "And I'll keep the house in repair till the question is settled. Get up, Mack!" and away she drove.

"A spirited woman," said Dave Babbitt, looking after her.

From this day Mack began a life of new activity. Every morning he was put into the shafts. There was not a house in the township that Miss Lucinda did not visit, and at every place she insisted on getting something for the new clubhouse. "I want every woman to give something, then she will feel she has a right there; and I want you to come whenever you can, and help Miss Hendricks with the carpet rags. Miss Hendricks is always there, and though she can't work much with that crippled hand she will always show the rest what to do, and make you welcome and give you a good cup of tea."

And the donations Miss Lucinda received! And the trouble she was put to to make use of them!—for each woman would expect to see her contribution every time she came to the clubhouse. Carpet rags and pieces for bed quilts, and picture frames without any pictures, and pictures without any frames! One woman gave an old bureau, and another a chair without any bottom, but Dave Babbitt promised to mend it. Another gave a lamp, and another a washstand; dishes, cups and saucers were accepted; another chair, a small table, a baby's crib, a perambulator, a huge old-fashioned bedstead. One Bohemian woman brought forth from a chest six yards of beautiful golden-brown silk and insisted on making it into a curtain for the front window. There were a clock and two rugs and some pillows. Everything a house could demand was gradually gathered together and arranged in the cottage on the corner.

How did Miss Lucinda first get in? She went with several of the women, and they put a small boy through the window, and then they handed him a screw driver. He did the rest. Then they had new locks put on the doors and put the keys in their pockets.

Every day Emma Hendricks was there from nine in the morning till four in the afternoon. The women brought her farm supplies for salary—vegetables, pieces of ham, chickens, pies, apples, sausages—all she could eat, and more, too. So she sold the surplus, by Lucinda's advice, and this was the beginning of the system which provided her with a small salary as custodian.

Soon there was an awakening in the country; the women were becoming acquainted. On Saturday afternoons they came with their husbands; the little house was overflowing, and babies and children romped in the yard. If there had been six rooms instead of four the clubhouse would not have been too big for the donations.

The members whitewashed the walls themselves; some Bohemian women brought their stencils and put on elaborate borders with indigo blue mixed with milk. They hung curtains up at the windows, and worked with a will on the carpets till they were stretched, bright and clean, in the front rooms; the kitchen and bedroom floors had already been painted. The pictures were hung, the beds were put in the bedrooms for sleepy babies; chairs, tables, table-covers and cushions made the clubhouse comfortable. Lamps were brought that there might be evening parties; soon the women were arranging for a cold supper, by means of which they hoped to raise money to buy a stove for the kitchen. Some women had given books and magazines, which were the beginning of a library; and the village women formally presented an old couch, neatly recovered.

The three village stores vied with one another in giving presents to the Countrywoman's club. Mr. Townsend made a strong kitchen table. Dave Babbitt made a cover for the dishes. Miss Hendricks always was thanking some one, and as for Miss Lucinda herself—she drove Mack through town on a fast trot, sat up straight, and looked ten years younger.

It was in November that the harvest celebration was held. The women gave an entertainment and supper to raise money for a new baseburner stove and enough good coal for the winter. The lodge hall was rented for this festivity, but even it was not big enough for the crowd. The farmers flocked in as if to a circus, and the quarters chinked incessantly at the door.

When the last of the exercises had been applauded, Miss Lucinda rose to make an announcement.

"Ladies and gentlemen," she said, quite as if she were beginning a lecture, "it gives me great pleasure to introduce to you Mr. Babbitt, who has a few words to say about our present clubhouse."

"Excuse me, Miss Evans," said Dave Babbitt, "but Mr. Townsend is going to speak first."

"No, no; Babbitt," said Townsend, rising from the audience.

"Babbitt! Speech! Speech!" called the audience, in excitement.

"Well, it's just this way," said Dave,

HE HADN'T A WORD TO SAY.

"Mr. Townsend and I have come to an agreement about the house now occupied by the Countrywoman's club. It has been a long time since he and I could agree upon anything, but our friends, the women of the club, and especially Miss Lucinda Evans and Miss Emma Hendricks, have made us see what we didn't see before. In fact, Mr. Townsend and I are friends." Here he was stopped by applause.

"Go on! Go on, Dave!" called Townsend.

"You do the rest, Townsend," said Dave. "I never was so beat in my life!"

"Well, friends," said Townsend, coming forward, "Dave and I are going to compromise, and here are the terms of the agreement, namely: Jointly to deed over to the Plainview Countrywoman's club all rights to the house."

"That's it! That's the compromise!" said Dave, and the cheering began now in earnest; cheers for Townsend and Babbitt, and cheers for Miss Evans and Miss Hendricks, and cheers for the Countrywoman's club.

When the tempest subsided both men had disappeared from the platform; the last seen of them, they were shaking hands and laughing over their attempts at speechmaking. Then Emma Hendricks rose, her maimed hand hidden under her shawl.

"And I propose, ladies and gentlemen," she said, speaking clearly and distinctly, "that before we begin the supper, we christen the new clubhouse Compromise hall, in honor of Mr. Babbitt and Mr. Townsend and their future relation in friendship."

"Hear! hear!" shouted everybody together. "More cheers for Compromise hall!"

Then they all began moving the chairs and bringing out the boards for the table, and really that first club supper was so pleasant that it was for weeks a favorite subject for conversation at the Countrywomen's club.

The club is a considerable institution now, for the men last fall built a log shed on the lot for the temporary shelter of horses and buggies; and also a lean-to for the library, which contains nearly 2,000 volumes, all contributed as gifts by the members. Miss Hendricks is librarian and custodian at once, and Lucinda is president of the club and the most influential woman in the county.—Youth's Companion.

Theodule Ribor, professor of experimental psychology at the College de France, the founder of the revue philosophique and the inspirer of an entire generation of students and professor of the new psychology, not only in France but all over the world, will retire on a pension, at his own request, at the beginning of November.

The dukes of Sutherland, Buccleuch and Devonshire are joint lords of 2,004,600 acres of land, an area representing a slice of land stretching from the south of England to the extreme north of Scotland, more than five miles wide. If this land were all in England about an acre out of every sixteen would belong to one or the other of these dukes.

The Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who has just reached the age of eighty, is the last surviving granddaughter of George III., and her brother, the Duke of Cambridge, is the last surviving grandson. The St. James Gazette says that no fewer than ninety-nine of George III.'s descendants are living at the present time.

Cecil Rhodes is going to erect a monument to Maj. Allan Wilson and his twenty-four men who were surrounded and massacred by the Matabele savages during the war against Lobengula. The monument, a monolith having bas-reliefs on its four sides, by John Tweed of London, will be built on the spot where the massacre took place.

Fabulous prices are obtained for land in London. A freehold on Cornhill sold for a little over £53 3s a square foot and the St. Peter-upon-Cornhill land brought over £60 a foot. Land within a furlong radius of the bank of England is worth about 7s an inch. Five hundred feet of land in Cheapside was sold recently for £13,600, or £26 a square foot.

There has been discovered in China a curious picture, evidently of great antiquity, which is supposed to represent Noah's ark, resting on the top of Mt. Ararat. As is well known, the religious literature of almost every nation and race contains an account of a deluge, but a Chinese manuscript, recently unearthed, follows very closely the story recorded in the Bible.

It is proposed to exhibit to the public in London one of the most memorable relics of the siege of the foreign legations at Peking which was sent home to Queen Victoria by Sir Claude Macdonald It is the flag torn almost to shreds by the incessant fusillade of shot and shell, which, during the whole of the long and terrible period continued to float over the British quarters.

The most formidable creature that comes over in banana cases is a new kind of rat. It is smaller than the ordinary sort, quite black in color, with round ears, and a head shaped somewhat like that of a bat. The little animal has a somewhat attractive appearance, and, in the early days of the banana trade, the salesmen were inclined to be kind to one of these rats if it was caught, and make a pet of it.

One sees many striking resemblances between Norway and Japan —the mountains, the gorges, the streams, the waterfalls, the forests, the roadways and other attractions. There are no temples, however, or shrines along the roadsides, dedicated to pagan gods, dragons or demons, but only staid, plain, ugly Lutheran churches, as simple and as severe as the character of the people who worship in them, and the children have tow heads instead of thick, black, stiff hair.

Specialists in nerve diseases by an examination of the thumb can tell if the patient is affected or likely to be affected by paralysis, as the thumb signals this trouble long before it is in any other part of the body. If the danger symptoms are evidenced there an operation is performed on what is known as the "thumb center" of the brain, and the disorder is often removed. No matter how carefully the individual may attempt to conceal incipient insanity, the thumb will reveal it infallibly.

In a recent article Count Tolstoy draws a portrait of his father. He was a large and handsome man, who always wore clothes of a fashion different from that of others. He had a great contempt for the younger generation. He had his sentimental moods, and when he read aloud from a book his voice would tremble and his eyes moisten at a pathetic passage. He was fond of ordinary music —romances, gypsy melodies, operatic tunes— but frankly confessed that Beethoven put him to sleep.

The only member of the first Australian commonwealth parliament whose return is to be petitioned against is King O'Malley. Mr. O'Malley is an Irish-American, who went to Australia ten years ago as the representative of a New York assurance society. It is alleged by the petitioners that he never went to the trouble of legally making himself a British subject. However that may be, he has already sat without objection in the local parliament of South Australia, where he distinguished himself.

Budapest, in addition to being excellently served with ordinary telephones, possesses a unique system, the Telefon Hirmondo, which practically performs the function of a newspaper. The system has proved not only a public convenience but also a great commercial success.

DEATH'S VICTORY.

President McKinley's Gallant Struggle for Life Is Unsuccessful.

Passes Away at Milburn House, Buffalo—Autopsy Proves That Death Was Inevitable.

His Last Audible Words Were: "It Is God's Way. His Will Be Done."

Impressive Services at the House of Death—Remains Lie in State in Buffalo City Hall.

Taken to Washington by Special Train—Tributes En Route—Final Burial to Be at Canton.

Milburn House, Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 14.—President McKinley died at 2:15 a.m. He had been unconscious since 7:50 p. m. His last conscious hour on earth was spent with the wife to whom he devoted a lifetime of care. He died unattended by a minister of the Gospel, but his last words were an humble submission to the will of the God in whom he believed. He was reconciled to the cruel fate to which an assassin's bullet had condemned him, and faced death in the same spirit of calmness and poise which has marked his long and honorable career. His last conscious words, reduced to writing by Dr. Mann, who stood at his bedside when they were uttered, were as follows:

"Good-by, all; good-by. It is God's way. His will be done."

His relatives, and the members of his official family, were at the Milburn house, except Secretary Wilson, who did not avail himself of the opportunity, and some of his personal and political friends, took leave of him. This painful ceremony was simple. His friends came to the door of the sickroom, took a longing glance at him and turned tearfully away. He was practically unconscious during this time. But the powerful heart stimulants, including oxygen, were employed to restore him to consciousness for his final parting with his wife. He asked for her, and she sat at his side and held his hand. He consoled her and bade her good-by. She went through the heart-trying scene with the same bravery and fortitude with which she has borne the grief of the tragedy which ended his life.

Announcement Slighty Delayed.

The announcement of the death to the members of the cabinet was made by Webb Hayes, who said:

"It is all over."

Mrs. McKinley last saw her husband between 11 and 12. At that time she sat by the bedside holding his hand. The members of the cabinet were admitted to the sickroom singly at that time. The actual death probably occurred about two o'clock, it being understood that Dr. Rixey delayed the announcement momentarily to assure himself.

The announcement of the news to those waiting below was postponed until the members of the family had withdrawn. Through Secretary Cortelyou the waiting newspaper men received the notification.

Present When Death Came.

Those present at the time of the president's death were: Secretary Cortelyou, Dr. Rixey, Mrs. and Miss Barber and Miss Duncan.

DEATH INEVITABLE.

Autopsy Shows That Gangrene Caused President's Demise.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The following report of the autopsy upon the remains of President McKinley was issued at five o'clock p. m. Saturday:

"The bullet which struck over the breast bone did not pass through the skin, and did little harm. The other bullet passed through both walls of the stomach near its lower border. Both holes were found to be perfectly closed by the stitches, but the tissue around each hole had become gangrenous. After passing through the stomach the bullet passed into the back walls of the abdomen, hiting and tearing the upper end of the kidney. This portion of the bullet track was also gangrenous, the gangrene involving the pancreas. The bullet has not yet been found. There was no sign of peritonitis or disease of other organs. The heart walls were very thin. There was no evidence of any attempt at repair on the part of nature, and death resulted from the gangrene which affected the stomach around the bullet wounds as well as the tissues around the further course of the bullet. Death was unavoidable by any surgical or medical treatment, and was the direct result of the bullet wound."

The above is signed by 14 physicians and surgeons, including all of those in attendance on the president, with the exception of Dr. McBurney, who had left the city before the autopsy was performed.

Some of the doctors, notably Mr. Wasdin, are inclined to believe that President McKinley was shot with poisoned bullets. This is not proved. The only way in which it can be proved is by examination of the remaining bullets, and particularly of the bullet which struck the president in the breast without penetrating the skin. But the president would have died of his wound just the same if the bullet was perfectly clean. His system did not possess the vitality to repair the damage done to his vital organs. This does not mean that the president's system was in bad condition, but only that his vitality was low, or, in other words, that he had small recuperative powers.

Lodgment of the second bullet in the abdominal wall back of the stomach had nothing to do with the president's death. It did all of its damage in the abdominal cavity. That bullet remains a mystery. It was not located during the president's life, and the two hours of careful search for it after death failed to find it. The fact that this bullet remained in the president's body without setting up any disorder where it stopped militates against the theory that it might have been poisoned.

TRIBUTE IS PAID.

Impressive Services at Milburn House —Remains Lie in State.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Buffalo on Sunday became a city of mourners. The gay and flaming decorations of the Pan-American exposition gave way to the symbol of sorrow. The black drapery of the city's streets muffled the tolling bells of the churches. Bits of crape appeared on every sleeve. The sorrow was everywhere apparent.

Military Arrives.

At 10:30 o'clock the military and naval detachments took temporary station on West Ferry street immediately around the corner from the Milburn house.

Meantime the members of the cabinet, officials high in the government service and near friends of the martyred president began to fill the walks leading up to the entrance of the Milburn residence. They came separately and in groups, some walking, while those in carriages were admitted within the roped inclosure up to the curb. There were Secretaries Wilson, Root, Hitchcock, Long, Attorney General Knox and Postmaster General Smith. Others who arrived about this time were Senator Hanna, Judge Day, Govs. Odell, Yates and Gregory, Representatives Alexander and Ryan, Maj. Gen. Brooke, E. H. Butler, H. H. Kohlsaat and many others.

The Casket.

The casket in which the body rests bears the following inscription:

WILLIAM M'KINLEY,
Born January 29th, 1843.
Died September 14th, 1901.

The coffin is of red cedar, handsomely carved and covered with the finest black broadcloth. The interior is lined with copper, over which is a full tufted satin covering. A French bevel plate glass runs the length of the top of the casket. The outside case is made of red cedar, finely finished. The corners are capped with polished copper, and the handles are of the same material. On the top of the case is a copper plate bearing a duplicate of the inscription on the casket.

The New President.

Just before 11 o'clock President Roosevelt entered, coming into the room from the rear through the library. After passing into the hall he had made his way around through the sitting-room behind into the library. There was an instantaneous movement in the room as the president appeared. The procession was still passing from the south side around the head of the casket and back between it and the members of the cabinet seated at its side. Everyone rose and all eyes were turned toward the president. He moved forward again with the tide of the procession to his place at the head of the line of cabinet officers. He held himself erect, his left hand carrying his silk hat. Those who were coming toward him fell back on either side to let him pass. He paused once or twice to shake hands silently, but there was no smile to accompany his greetings. He, too, seemed to be restraining a great grief. When President Roosevelt reached the head of the line of cabinet officers he kept his face away from the casket.

An Impressive Scene.

The president spoke to Secretary Root, or perhaps it would be more precise to say that the latter spoke to him. The president appeared to be steeling himself for a look into the face of him whose death had made him the first ruler of the world. The tension in the room was great. Everyone seemed to be waiting. The minister of the Gospel stood with the Holy Book in his hand ready to begin. Perhaps it might have been 60 seconds. It seemed longer. Then the president turned and at the same time advanced one step. He bowed his head and looked down upon the man whose burden and responsibility he had taken up. Long he gazed, standing immovable save for a twitching of the muscles of the chin as he labored with heavy breath to repress his emotion.

The Services Begin.

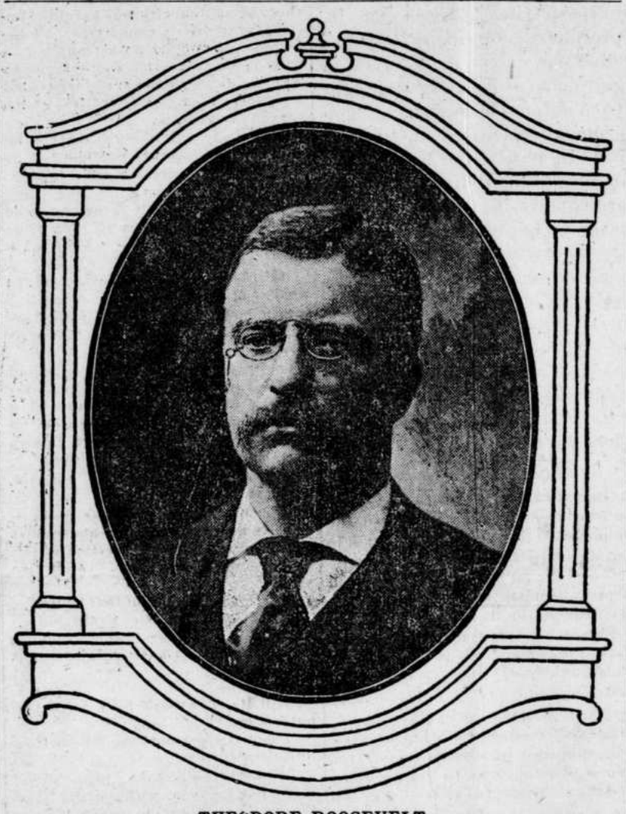
At last he stepped back. Col. Bingham, the aid to the president, standing, ten feet below the foot of the casket at the side of the loyal Cortelyou, glanced in the direction of Rev. Charles Edward Locke, of the Delaware Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, who was to conduct the service. The pastor was at the door leading into the hall, a station whence his words could be heard at the head of the stairs. The signal was given and there welled out from the hall the beautiful words of "Lead, Kindly Light," sung by a quartette. It was President McKinley's favorite hymn.

When the singing ended the clergyman read from the words of the fifteenth chapter of the First Corinthians. All had risen as he began and remained standing throughout the remainder of the service. Again the voices rose with the words of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," the very words President McKinley had repeated at intervals of consciousness during the day of agony before he died. As the music died away the pastor spoke again. The minister then offered a most impressive prayer. At its conclusion all present joined in the Lord's Prayer as the minister repeated it, President Roosevelt's voice being audible at the back of the room. The service concluded with a simple benediction.

Borne from Milburn House.

It was within a minute of 11:30 o'clock when three long rolls of a muffled drum told those outside the house that the funeral cortege was about to appear. From the darkened rooms the assemblage began to file out to the street. Soon the walks and lawns were again covered with the silent throng, with heads bared. At the moment the casket appeared, "Nearer, My God, to Thee" ascended in subdued strains from one of the military bands. Tenderly the bearers lowered the casket from their shoulders and placed it in the hearse. The notes of Chopin's funeral dirge succeeded the strains of the hymn. The soldiers and sailors swung into long columns, and took up the march southward toward the city hall.

As the funeral cortege moved south through Delaware avenue toward the city hall, it passed through a vast concourse of people filling the walks and cross streets and crowding house tops, windows and every available space of the buildings along the line of march.



THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Twenty-Fifth President of the United States.

At City Hall.

As the escort of soldiers swung slowly into Franklin street a few drops of rain fell. In two minutes it was raining hard. The long line of troops took their positions at attention, facing the city hall. When the hearse appeared the four horses were led slowly to the entrance and stopped. The band, some distance away, began "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Lying in State.

The casket was lifted from the hearse to the shoulders of the sailors and marines, and was borne into Buffalo's official home. A moment later and the body of President McKinley was lying in state.

At 12:25 o'clock exactly the police were notified that the body could be viewed by the people. A minute later and the first of the long line came through the door.

Throughout the long hours of the afternoon there was never a cessation of the silent, moving stream of people who passed into the city hall. In the early hours the function was rendered disagreeable by the violent rain.

Death Mask Made.

A death mask of the president's face was made at 7:20 p. m. Saturday. The mask was taken by Eduard L. A. Pausch, of Hartford, Conn. Pausch has modeled the features of many of the distinguished men who have died in this country in recent years. The mask is a faithful reproduction of the late President McKinley's features.

ARRIVES AT WASHINGTON.

Body of Dead President Taken to White House—Placed in East Room.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The remains of President McKinley Monday night lay in the east room of the white house, where for more than four years he had made his home as the chief magistrate of the great American republic.

The train was a little late. The train was due at 8:25, but the clock stood at 8:38 when the headlight of the big locomotive flashed along the rails and the cars swept quietly to a stop at the gates. The way was cleared, and down the pathway strode a body of sturdy soldiers chosen as the body bearers and guard. They were met at the entrance of the observation car where the remains lay by an officer and admitted at once.

The Mourning Party.

Meanwhile, further down the station the party on the funeral train were alighting. Secretaries Hay and Gage had pressed forward and entered the car where the mourners sat, and assisted them to descend. Mrs. McKinley was aided by Abner McKinley and Dr. Rixey, and was speedily placed in a carriage, which drove off at once to the white house without awaiting the procession.

President Roosevelt came next. His arm was closely clasped by Capt. Cowles, of the navy, his brother-in-law, who walked rather hastily along between the files of officers to the carriage way next the gates of the station. The president walked firmly erect, looking to neither side, his face set and sorrowful. Close behind him pressed the members of the cabinet.

Removal of the Casket.

Meanwhile the casket was being removed from the observation car. One of the large windows was lowered at the side, and slowly and carefully the casket was slipped out through the opening and tenderly received upon the bent shoulders of the body bearers. Four artillery men from Fort McHenry, Maryland, were on the right, and four sailors on the left. Straightening themselves under their burden they walked slowly towards the hearse. Before the casket marched four officers, Maj. Parker, Col. Bingham, Capt. Gilmore and Maj. McCauley, and in that order, while the officers on either side and in the entrance, stood with uncovered heads, the remains were carried to Sixth street and placed in the hearse. As the casket emerged a bugle note rose clearly and "taps" rang out. That was the only sound that broke the dead silence. Just beyond the entrance to the station President Roosevelt, with the members of the cabinet, had paused, and had taken station so as to leave a broad space for the funeral cortege. They ranged themselves on the sidewalk in double rows opposite each other and stood with bared heads as the corpse was carried to the hearse drawn up at the side of the gate. The hearse was an exquisitely carved affair and was drawn by six coal black horses, each of whom was led by a colored groom in black livery.

Placed in the East Room.

When the sad cortege arrived at the white house the hearse stopped under the porto cochere. The body bearers took the coffin upon their broad shoulders, and, passing up the three or four steps, waited until President Roosevelt and the members of the cabinet had alighted from their carriages and then followed them through the wide-open doors into the east room. Just in the center of the room, under the great crystal chandelier, they deposited their precious burden upon a black-draped base and stood at salute while the new chief executive, the cabinet members and others with bowed heads passed by.

The carriage containing Mrs. McKinley, Dr. Rixey and Mr. Abner McKinley had preceded the funeral cortege to the white house by some little time. Dr. Rixey was the first to alight, and then Mr. Abner McKinley. They tenderly assisted Mrs. McKinley to the stairs. With her right arm resting heavily and wearily upon the shoulder of her dead husband's brother, and supported on the other side by Dr. Rixey, she walked slowly along the stone flagging into the house. She was closely veiled, but her feeble steps told the story of her great suffering. She was assisted at once to the elevator and to her old room and soon retired. Dr. Rixey and Mr. Cortelyou later said that she had stood the journey very well indeed, and they had confidently expected that she would complete the sad journey to her old home without difficulty. Among those who know her best and were with her at Buffalo it is doubted whether she yet fully realizes the calamity that has befallen her, and it is with some apprehension that they look forward to the first days alone in Canton.

Funeral Programme.

Official programme provides for funeral parade to move in three divisions from the white house to the capitol building, starting at nine o'clock to-day. The remains of the late president to lie in state in the rotunda until the start is made for Canton at eight o'clock.

THE SAD JOURNEY.

Progress of the Funeral Train from Buffalo to Washington.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Through a living lane of bare-headed people stretching from Buffalo up over the Alleghenies down into the broad valley of the Susquehanna and on to the marble city on the banks of the shining Potomac the nation's martyred president on Monday made his last journey to the seat of the government over which he presided for 4½ years. The whole country seemed to have drained its population at the sides of the track over which the funeral train passed.

Mourning Universal.

Work was suspended in field and mine and city. The schools were dismissed. And everywhere appeared the trappings and tokens of woe. A million flags at half-mast dotted hillside and valley and formed a thicket of color over the cities. And from almost every banner streamed a bit of crepe. The stations were heavy with black symbols of mourning.

Only the rumbling of the train's wheels, the sobs from men and women with tear-stained faces, and the doleful tolling of the church bells broke on the ear. At several places, Williamsport, Harrisburg and Baltimore, the chimes played Cardinal Newman's grand hymn. Taken altogether, the journey home was the most remarkable demonstration of universal personal sorrow since Lincoln was borne to his grave.

TAKES THE OATH.

Theodore Roosevelt Is Sworn In as President of the United States.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Theodore Roosevelt, who was tragically elevated to the chief magistracy of the American republic by the death of President McKinley, entered this city of mourning Saturday afternoon after a remarkable and perilous journey from the heart of the north woods. He took the prescribed oath to support and defend the constitution and laws of the United States at 3:30 Saturday afternoon in the library of the residence of Ansley Wilcox, a personal friend with whom he stopped earlier in the week, when the physicians thought President McKinley would recover from the wound inflicted by the assassin. There were present when he swore to the oath Secretaries Root, Hitchcock, Long, Wilson and Postmaster General Smith, and a large number of invited persons. Judge John R. Hazel, of the United States district court, administered the oath. The scene was a most affecting one.

A Proclamation.

President Roosevelt Saturday night issued the following proclamation:

"By the President of the United States, a Proclamation: A terrible bereavement has befallen our people. The president of the United States has been struck down; a crime committed not only against the chief magistrate, but against every law-abiding and liberty-loving citizen.

"President McKinley crowned a life of largest love for his fellow men, of most earnest endeavor for their welfare, by a death of Christian fortitude; and both the way in which he lived his life and the way in which, in the supreme hour of trial, he met his death, will remain forever a precious heritage to our people.

"It is meet that we as a nation express our abiding love and reverence for his life, our deep sorrow for his untimely death.

"Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States of America, do appoint Thursday next, September 19, the day in which the body of the dead president will be laid in its last earthly resting place, as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States. I earnestly recommend all the people to assemble on that day in their respective places of Divine worship, there to bow down in submission to the will of Almighty God, and to pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the great and good president whose death has smitten the nation with bitter grief.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington the 14th day of September, A. D. one thousand nine hundred and one and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

(Seal.) "THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
"By the president: JOHN HAY,
Secretary of State."

No Extra Session.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt announces that there will be no extraordinary session of congress. The constitution does not demand it, and after discussion with those members of the cabinet here he decided it was not necessary.

President Roosevelt's Career.

Born New York city, October 27, 1858.
Entered Harvard college 1880.
Elected to New York legislature 1881.
Reelected to legislature 1883.
Defeated for mayor of New York 1886.
Cattle and ranchman 1884 to 1886.
Member national civil service commission 1889.
New York police commissioner 1894.
Assistant secretary of navy 1897-98.
Colonel Spanish-American war 1898.
Governor New York 1899-1900.
Vice President United States March 4, 1901.
President United States September 13, 1901.

The president's family consists of his wife and six children. They have made their home for years at Oyster Bay, Long Island, a retreat much enjoyed by the president himself, as well as his family. The home life is a simple one. Fashion, social custom, conventions, have little to do with it. It has been old-fashioned and delightful. Mrs. Roosevelt is essentially part of the president's life. Husband and wife are heartily in accord with one another, and their purposes are one. The eldest child is a daughter, Miss Alice, aged 17, and the next eldest, Theodore, is a boy of 14.

THE RECORD LEFT BEHIND.

Principal Events Transpiring During the Administration of President McKinley.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Mr. William McKinley was inaugurated president for the first time on March 4, 1897, and again on March 4, 1901, for a second term, to which he was elected after four of the most eventful years, in some respects, in the history of the United States. The principal events, some of which will live forever in history, transpiring during his occupation of the presidential chair, are as follows:

Special session of congress called March 17, 1897, to consider tariff revision. Dingley tariff bill passed, and signed by president and made a law July 24, 1897.

Cuban question most serious foreign complication which President McKinley faced when he was inaugurated.

On February 15, 1898, Maine blown up in Havana harbor.

Early in March, 1898, congress passed bill appropriating $50,000,000 for national defense.

On April 11, 1898, President McKinley sent message to congress announcing that diplomatic negotiations with Spain had failed, and asking congress for war power.

War declared with Spain on April 25, 1898, and president called for 125,000 troops and later 75,000 more. Regular army increased to 65,000 men.

May 1, 1898, by direction of the president, Admiral Dewey proceeded to Manila and in the harbor there destroyed Spanish fleet.

Battles of El Caney and San Juan hill fought July 2, and July 3 Spanish fleet utterly destroyed off Santiago by Sampson's fleet.

Formal surrender and practically end of war July 17, 1898. Spain sued for peace July 26, and peace protocol with Spain signed August 12.

Final peace treaty with Spain signed at Paris on December 10, 1898, and ratified by senate on February 6, 1899.

Porto Rico provided with civil government by act of congress on March 1, 1900.

War loan of 1898 one of demonstrations of confidence in administration.

Settlement of the Pacific railroad indebtedness one of achievements of McKinley administration.

New currency law passed by congress on March 14, 1900, fixed gold standard and provided for refunding of national debt.

Foreign policy of McKinley administration aimed to avoid entangling alliances and striking example of this was the dissolving of the agreement between Great Britain, Germany and the United States regarding Samoa, and securing possession of Pango-Pango harbor.

One of the last acts of President McKinley's first term was the establishment of civil government in Philippines.

The one failure of administration of President McKinley was negotiation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which was amended by senate and therefore rejected by England.

Hawaii annexed under earnest recommendation of President McKinley.

When the suggestion was made last June of a possible third term for President McKinley, he was very clear and positive as to his position in regard to the matter, and probably has forever settled the third term question in this country.

SYMPATHY IN ENGLAND.

Expressions of Sorrow at President McKinley's Death Universal Throughout the Kingdom.

London, Sept. 16.—It would be almost impossible to record in detail the remarkable outburst of sympathy in Great Britain and her colonies over the death of President McKinley, proofs of which are continually arriving here. Not only has King Edward commanded the court to go into mourning for one week, but wherever a public meeting of any kind has been held or wherever a public man has had occasion to speak, expressions of horror and sympathy have been heard.

Blames Cartoonists.

West Superior, Wis., Sept. 16.—Bishop Cranston, of the Methodist church, in a sermon on anarchists, condemned newspaper cartoonists as in the same category with anarchists.

Value of a Man's Life.

The Supreme Courts have decided that the life of the average man is worth just what he is able to earn. A man's earnings depend to a great extent upon his physical health. The stomach is the measure of health and strength. Every man may be bright and active if his digestion is normal. If it is not, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will make it so. Try it for dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness, flatulency, liver or kidney troubles.

Horace Never Did.

The class in Latin was reading from Horace's odes some of those old pastorals that lead the metropolitan pupil to believe there is only one pleasure in turning the soil, tending sheep and milking cows in winter. The lesson that day included a poem of the peasant, his good wife, their cozy home and an observation on the duties of the day. The poem had spoken of congealed streams, indicating a winter night, and then led the peasant to his stable, where he engaged in milking. The translation of a line was: "How sweet to press the distended udder of the kine." "What do you think of the construction of that line, Mr. Blank?" asked the instructor of a country youth. "Well, I am very certain Horace never milked a cow on a winter's night or he would have left that out or put it in his satires."—Troy Times.

CLEANLY WOMAN.

Erroneously Thinks By Scouring Her Scalp That She Cures Dandruff.

Cleanly woman has an erroneous idea that by scouring the scalp, which removes the dandruff scales, she is curing the dandruff. She may wash her scalp every day, and yet have dandruff her life long, accompanied by falling hair, too. The only way in the world to cure dandruff is to kill the dandruff germ, and there is no hair preparation that will do that but Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide killing the dandruff germ, leaves the hair free to grow as healthy Nature intended. Destroy the cause, you remove the effect. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide.

None There.

Tired of the long-winded oratory of the attorney for the defense, the judge interrupted him.

"Mr. Sharke," he said, "may I ask you a question?"

"Certainly, your honor. What is it?"

"Language," said the judge, "we are told, is given to conceal thought, or words to that effect. Inasmuch as you don't seem to have any thought to conceal, I would like to know why you are talking."—Chicago Tribune.

BIG RAILROAD IMPROVEMENT.

A unique excursion was recently arranged by the Union Pacific Railroad company. About sixty newspaper men, representing the leading journals of the country, were invited to take a trip on the Wyoming division, "The Overland Route," for the purpose of viewing the stupendous engineering achievements recently made on that line.

The train was made up of two private cars, three Pullman palace sleepers, a dining car, drawn by one of the new compound engines, with an observation car—constructed on the same plan as a trolley car—ahead of the engine.

One hundred and fifty-eight and four-tenths miles of new track laid, reducing the mileage between Omaha and Ogden by 30.47 miles, and reducing gradients which varied from 45.4 to 97.68 feet to the mile to a maximum of 43.3 feet, and curves from 6 to 4 degrees, while a great deal of bad curvature has been eliminated entirely.

A mountain removed and lost into a chasm; huge holes bored hundreds of feet through solid granite, an underground river encountered and overcome; an army of men, with all sorts of mechanical aids, engaged in the work for nearly a year; the great Union Pacific track between Omaha and Ogden made shorter, heavy grades eliminated, and the business of the great Overland route flowing through a new channel, without the slightest interruption.

Millions of money have been spent to reduce the grades and shorten the distance. This reduction is the result of straightening unnecessary curves, and the construction of several cutoffs between Buford and Bear river, Utah.

The curvature saved is about one-half, the grading about the same, while the angles are reduced nearly two-thirds. The superiority of these changes is apparent to the practical railroad engineer. It is also apparent to the operating department in the reduction in operating expenses, and to the traveler in the increased speed the trains can make.

The new line runs due west from Buford, avoiding the high hills and eighty-foot grade from Cheyenne, and piercing through cuts and the big tunnel, crosses the Black Hills at a grade of less than one-half (43.3 feet) over mountain altitudes.

From a constructive standpoint the line is remarkable for the amount of material required in the construction of immense embankments and the building of large tunnels through solid rock. The construction of the new line between Buford and Laramie alone has involved the excavation of 500,000 cubic yards of material, one-third of which (exclusive of the tunnel excavation) has been solid rock, of something over 160,000 cubic yards per mile.

Too much credit for this work cannot be given to Horace G. Burt, president of the Union Pacific railroad, and his assistants.

The excursion was replete with many interesting incidents, and the splendid hospitality of the Union Pacific officials was a revelation. The newspaper men evinced their appreciation in many ways, particularly in a resolution of thanks to the Union Pacific officials, General Passenger Agent Lomax, and Messrs. Darlow, Park and Griffin.

Couldn't Wipe It.

A teacher was instructing a class of infants in the Sunday school and was letting the children finish her sentences to make sure they understood. "The idol had eyes," she said, "but it couldn't—" "See," cried the children. "It had ears, but it couldn't—" "Hear," said the class. "It had lips, but it couldn't—" "Speak," said the children. "It had a nose, but it couldn't—" "Wipe it!" shouted the little ones, and the teacher had to pause in her lesson.—London Tid-Bits.

Wisconsin Farm Lands.

The best of farm lands can be obtained now in Marinette County, Wisconsin, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, at a low price and on very favorable terms. Wisconsin is noted for its fine crops, excellent markets and healthful climate. Why rent a farm when you can buy one much cheaper than you can rent and in a few years it will be your own property. OUTLINES HIS POLICY

President Roosevelt Will Follow Plans of Predecessor.

Favors Liberal and Extensive Reciprocity, Abolition of Certain Tariffs, Help for Merchant Marine, Completion of Canal.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 17.—President Roosevelt has outlined in some detail the policy he will follow during his incumbency of office. It will be remembered that when he took the oath of office he stated with much definiteness: "It shall be my aim to continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace (and he emphasized the word) prosperity and honor of the country."

Sunday the president gathered together some personal friends in Buffalo and those members of the cabinet who were here and gave to them such ideas as he had already formulated for the conduct of public affairs and his own policy. In no sense are they divergent from what has been understood as Mr. McKinley's policy. This policy, as outlined to his friends at Sunday's conference, will be for a more liberal and extensive reciprocity in the purchase and sale of commodities, so that the over-production of this country can be satisfactorily disposed of by fair and equitable arrangements with foreign countries; the abolition entirely of commercial war with other countries and the adoption of reciprocity treaties.

The abolition of such tariffs on foreign goods as are no longer needed for revenue, if such abolition can be had without harm to our industries and labor.

Direct commercial lines should be established between the eastern coast of the United States and the ports in South America and the Pacific coast ports of Mexico, Central America and South Ameica.

Favors Merchant Marine.

The encouraging of the merchant marine and the building of ships which shall carry the American flag and be owned and controlled by Americans and American capital.

The building and completion, as soon as possible, of the isthmian canal, so as to give direct water communication with the coasts of Central America, South America and Mexico.

The construction of a cable owned by the government, connecting our main-land with our foreign possessions, notably Hawaii and the Philippines.

The use of conciliatory methods of arbitration in all disputes with foreign nations so as to avoid armed strife.

The protection of the savings of the people in banks and in other forms of investments by the preservation of the commercial prosperity of the country and the placing in positions of trust men of only the highest integrity.

Will Retain the Cabinet.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Walter Wellman's Washington special to the Record-Herald says:

"Somewhat to the surprise of the six members of the cabinet who were on the funeral train to-day, President Roosevelt carried them into his private compartment at three o'clock this afternoon, and said to them that he wanted every one of them to consider himself invited to become a member of the new cabinet.

"'I not only want you to stay with me,' said the president to them, 'but I want you to consider that I am selecting you as my choice. You are asked not merely to fill out a term, but to be my chosen counciliors. I wish to have the matter regarded in this light. There are vacancies in the cabinet post, and I choose all you gentlemen to fill them. I will appoint you anew.'

"As soon as they had recovered from their astonishment the six members of the cabinet held a brief consultation, and at the end of it all of them accepted the invitation and pledged themselves to their new chief. At the request of the president they also promised to use all their influence to secure a similar acceptance from the two members of the cabinet who were not present at this happy conference —Secretaries Gage and Hay.

"Later in the afternoon President Roosevelt caused a telegram to be sent to Secretaries Gage and Hay asking for an interview at an early hour. To-night the secretary of the treasury called on the president at the residence of Mrs. Cowles on N street and was urged by Mr. Roosevelt to join his colleagues as a permanent member of the council. Mr. Gage has consented. Secretary Hay has likewise been urged to cast his lot with the new administration, but has not yet given his answer."

Gives Satisfaction Abroad.

London, Sept. 17.—Further familiarity with the idea of Mr. Roosevelt as president is having its natural result in dissipating doubts entertained as to the effect of his succession upon the foreign policy of the United States. At any rate it is becoming generally conceded in Great Britain that the United States has obtained a president of great distinction of character. The exposition of his policy Sunday is the subject of general comment.

Britain's Power Broken.

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—Michael Davitt, the Irish nationalist who resigned his seat in the British parliament on account of the Boer war, has arrived in this city en route to Cape May, where he intends to rest a few days. In an interview Mr. Davitt reiterated his previously expressed opinion that the power of the British government is broken in South Africa.

Wellington Expelled.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 12.—At a meeting Wednesday night of the board of governors of the Union League of Maryland, resolutions were adopted expelling Senator George L. Wellington from membership in the organization because of his utterances on learning of the shooting of President McKinley.

Secured The Abbot.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 14.—The trotting association has secured The Abbot to start against the world's trotting record during the first week in October.

Latest Message from Baldwin.

Christiania, Sept. 14.—A message dated August 5 and received by way of Hammerfeet from Evelyn B. Baldwin, head of the Baldwin-Ziegler north pole expedition, says: "America, latitude 78, longitude 38. Seeking passage northward through ice. All well."

Damage to Coffee Crop.

San Juan, P. R., Sept. 14.—It is reported that half the coffee crop has been partially ruined by the recent storms and that the banana crop has suffered serious damage. The poorer classes will probably appeal for assistance in consequence.

ASSASSIN INDICTED.

First Step Is Taken Toward Punishment of the Murderer of the Late President.

Buffalo, Sept. 17.—Leon F. Czolgosz, alias Fred Nieman, was indicted Monday by the county court grand jury for the crime of murder in the first degree in fatally shooting President William McKinley at the Temple of Music, in the Pan-American exposition grounds, at 4:15 o'clock on the afternoon of September 6. When arraigned before Judge Edward K. Emery, in the county court, the prisoner stubbornly refused to answer questions repeatedly asked of him by District Attorney Penney as to whether he had counsel or wanted counsel. The district attorney then suggested that, inasmuch as the defendant refused to answer, counsel should be assigned. Judge Emory assigned Hon. Loran L. Lewis and Hon. Robert C. Titus, former supreme court justices of this city, whose names had been suggested by the Erie County Bar association. Czolgosz probably will be arraigned again this morning to plead to the indictment.

District Attorney Penney presented the evidence in the murder case to the grand jury. Aside from the surgeons and physicians in the case no witnesses were sworn other than those who were in the Temple of Music and witnessed the shooting. The complete list of witnesses in the order in which they appeared to testify is as follows:

Dr. Herman Mynter, Dr. H. R. Gaylord, Dr. H. G. Matzinger, Dr. M. D. Mann, Secret Service Detective Gallaher, Attorney James L. Quackenbush, Attorney Luis L. Babcock, Harry Hinshaw, Capt. Damer and Patrolman Merkel, of the exposition guards; Corp. Louis Bertschey and Privates Neff, O'Brien, Fennenbaugh and Brooks, of the Seventy-third United States seacoast artillery; E. C. Knapp, Mrs. Vandenbergh Davis, John Branch, a colored porter; Capt. Vallely, chief of the exposition detectives; Superintendent Bull and Assistant Superintendent P. V. Cusack, of the local police department; Fred Leighter, Charles J. Close, Exposition Guards Westenfelder and James and Detectives Geary and Solomon, of this city.

STEEL STRIKE SETTLED.

Union Leaders Decide to Accept Terms Originally Offered by Steel Company.

New York, Sept. 16.—Official announcement was made Saturday that the steel strike was settled. The news was given out upon the authority of W. T. Graham, president of the American Tin Plate company. The strikers have practically come to the terms which the company offered several weeks ago. It had been specified at other conferences that the company would not recede from the position which it had taken with regard to the opening of the mills. The understanding is that the company shall operate as nonunion mills all the plants that it succeeded in opening, and that the mills formerly controlled by the union that were kept closed shall be reopened as union mills.

The strike has been on 64 working days for some of the men and 52 working days for others. The greatest number of men idle at any one time was about 86,000. About 50,000 were idle over 50 working days. Of these 10,000 were Amalgamated men. It is estimated the loss in wages by the strike is over $10,000,000. The losses to the companies affected are three times this figure. The Amalgamated association comes out of the fight with a depleted treasury. About $80,000, representing two weeks' strike benefits for 10,000 men at four dollars a week, was paid Saturday.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 17.—It was a turbulent day for President Shaffer and the general officials of the Amalgamated association Monday. The headquarters of the organization were crowded from morning until evening with strikers and representatives of lodges where the mills were still idle and workers were awaiting word from the leaders regarding the settlement of the strike. The callers at the general offices were all more or less excited and many were deeply incensed. Some of the strikers declared they would not respect the order calling the strike off until they were given full particulars of the settlement.

Meetings of lodges were held Monday evening. Nearly all the lodges in the tin mills, which, by the terms of the settlement, are out of the union fold, voted to continue the strike. Similar action was taken at meetings of striking tube workers at the Pennsylvania and Continental plants. The strikers at Painter's hoop mills also decided to refuse to go back to work.

Four Killed in a Railway Wreck.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 13.—Advices received here are to the effect that a disastrous freight wreck occurred on the Great Northern railroad near the Cascade tunnel in Washington. The engineer of freight train No. 15, westbound, while making the western decline in the tunnel lost control of the air brakes and the train attained such a high rate of speed that when a slight curve was reached the cars jumped the track and piled up in a confused heap. Four men were killed.

Date of Yacht Races.

New York, Sept. 17.—The challenge committee of the New York Yacht club, in conference with the representatives of the Royal Ulster Yacht club, have decided that the first race for the America's cup shall take place on Thursday, September 26. The second race shall take place Saturday, September 28.

Kruger's Son Surrenders.

London, Sept. 14.—A dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, announces that C. Kruger, a son of the former president of the Transvaal, and Capt. Ferreira have surrendered.

Bankers Must Wait.

Washington, Sept. 17.—A telegram has been received at the treasury department from Comptroller Dawes, stating that he would not take up the matter of the reorganization of the failed Seventh national bank until after his return from President McKinley's funeral at Canton, next Friday.

Lost with All on Board.

London, Sept. 14.—Lloyd's society has received a dispatch announcing that the British barkentine Thetis, Capt. Thomas, has foundered and all on board are supposed to be lost.

TORRANCE ELECTED CHIEF.

Minneapolis Man Chosen Unanimously as Head of Grand Army of Republic.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 14.—Judge Ell Torrance, of Minneapolis, was unanimously elected commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic at Friday's session of the annual convention.

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, of New York, withdrew from the fight, leaving the field to Stewart and Torrance.

The balloting stood 230 to 476 in favor of Torrance, when Comrade Wagner, who had the Stewart interests in hand, moved to make Torrance's election unanimous.

The election of officers was the only business before the convention Friday, all other business, including the report of the pension committee, having been referred to the council of administration.

Mrs. Caliste R. Jones, of Bradford, Vt., was unanimously elected national commander of the Woman's Relief Corps auxiliary of the G. A. R.

The naming of the place for holding the next encampment was referred to the administration council.

The council of administration disposed of the report of the pension committee by referring both majority and minority reports to the commander in chief and to a committee on pensions to be appointed by him, with instructions that at a suitable time, in the discretion of the commander in chief, the whole subject matter shall be brought to the attention of the president of the United States for his consideration.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 13.—The national convention of the Grand Army of the Republic opened this morning at the Euclid Avenue opera house, with a large attendance. Intense interest was manifested by the delegates in the report of the commitee on pensions, and it was generally believed that the convention would take some very radical action bearing on that subject.

The committee on credentials reported that the roll prepared by the adjutant general was correct and should be adopted.

The roll showed a total voting strength of 1,340, including delegates, department commanders and past department commanders.

The commander in chief, Leo Rassieur, devoted a large part of his annual address to the matter of pensions.

Two Men Killed.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 16.—A bad freight wreck occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad early Sunday near Eggleston, Minn., in which a number of loaded freight cars were destroyed and two men were killed. The trains had orders to meet at Eggleston, but the northbound engineer for some reason went by the station at full speed, and dashed into the south-bound train, which was standing on the main track. Railroad people are inclined to the belief that Engineer Faxe, who was killed, together with his fireman, was either asleep or had died at his post of heart disease.

Memorial Arch Proposed.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—A movement has been launched for the erection of a magnificent arch at Washington as a memorial to the late President William McKinley. The initiatory step in this project was taken at an informal meeting of fully 100 prominent Chicagoans Monday in the rooms of the Union League club.

The Schley Inquiry.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The Schley court of inquiry will resume its sessions on Friday morning. Definite plans for the daily work of the court have not been completed, but the expectation is two sessions will be held daily.

Bankers Postpone Meeting.

New York, Sept. 17.—The annual convention of the American Bankers' association, called to meet at Milwaukee September 24-26, has been postponed indefinitely on account of the death of President McKinley.

Welcomed to Canada.

Quebec, Can., Sept. 17.—The duke and duchess of Cornwall made their formal entry into the dominion of Canada Monday and were given a royal welcome by the people whom they may some day rule as king and queen. Thousands of their loyal subjects assembled to greet them.

Ready Now to Act.

London, Sept. 17.—"The American minister to Belgium," says a dispatch to the Standard from Brussels, "confirms the report that the United States will no longer oppose international measures against anarchists."

Cleveland Declines to Talk.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 14.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland, when told of President McKinley's serious sinking spell said: "This is very sorrowful news." When asked if he would say something regarding the president he replied that he thought it would be out of place to say anything at present.

Forest Fire in Colorado.

Eldora, Col., Sept. 17.—A forest fire which started west of here about noon Sunday has already burned over a large territory and destroyed much valuable timber.

FIRST POINT FOR SCHLEY.

Admiral Howison Is Excused as Member of Court of Inquiry—Ramsey Named as Successor.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Within three hours from the time of convening the court of inquiry Thursday it was announced that Rear Admiral Howison was disqualified from serving as a member of the court, and was excused from further duty. This brought proceedings to an abrupt termination, and caused a temporary adjournment of the court in order to permit the navy department to designate an officer to succeed Admiral Howison. It had been expected that little official business would be accomplished on the opening day, and the prompt decision as to Admiral Howison came somewhat as a surprise.

A salute of 17 guns in honor of the admiral of the navy marked the opening of the proceedings at one o'clock. The usual formalities on the opening of a court were transacted with dispatch. Admiral Schley opened the first skirmish by challenging Admiral Howison's eligibility as a member of the court, and presented three witnesses in support of his challenge. They gave very positive testimony as to expressions they had heard Admiral Howison make favorable to Admiral Sampson and unfavorable to Admiral Schley.

Admiral Howison made a reply to the challenge and it was then submitted to the court, which, under the circumstances, was narrowed to Admiral Dewey and Rear Admiral Benham to pass upon. After hardly more than 15 minutes spent in retirement to the consultation room of the court, Admiral Dewey briefly announced that the court sustained the challenge and that Admiral Howison would be excused from further attendance.

Washington, Sept. 14. — Admiral Dewey informed Admiral Schley by telephone Friday that the court of inquiry will resume its sessions at 11 o'clock on Monday morning next. The third member of the court, who will fill the place vacated by Admiral Howison has been selected. Rear Admiral Francis M. Ramsey was the one selected to take Howison's place on the court of inquiry. Admiral Ramsey was retired in April, 1897, and his home is at Washington.

BISHOP WHIPPLE DEAD.

Passes Away at His Homeat Faribault, Minn., After Severe Illness.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 17.—Bishop Henry B. Whipple, of the Protestant Episcopal church, died at six o'clock Monday morning at his home in Faribault, Minn.

Bishop Whipple, who has been seriously ill at his home in Faribault, was taken suddenly worse Sunday night. He had a severe attack of angina pectoris about a week ago, but seemed to recover after the first few days' illness.

[Henry Benjamin Whipple has been bishop of the Episcopal church in Minnesota since 1859. He was born in Adams, N. Y., February 15, 1832. He was ordained in 1850, and was rector of Zion church in Rome, N. Y., and later of the church of Holy Communion in Chicago. He was one of the foremost in the work of evangelizing the Indians and founded and built the Seabury divinity school, the Schattuck military academy and St. Mary's hall at Faribault. After the Spanish-American war Bishop Whipple spent some months in Porto Rico in the interest of his church. He was the senior bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in America.]

CUBA'S ELECTION LAW.

Official Text Placed in the Hands of Governor General Wood—Delegates Hold to Positions.

Havana, Sept. 17.—The election law prepared by the constitutional convention has been handed to Governor General Wood and it will be immediately translated into English. It gives the right of intervention to the convention in a number of matters. It provides that the convention shall appoint the day of election and scrutinize the election of a president of the republic. It also provides for the continuance of the convention in session during the forthcoming elections by directing that all credentials of candidates shall be laid before the convention after they have been passed upon by the provincial boards of canvassers. The act of the convention creates the impression that its members are trying to intervene in their delegate capacity in matters in which they are otherwise individually interested.

Will Reopen.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 16.—The immense plant of the Glucose Sugar Refining company, the property of the trust, which was closed down a week ago, as it was then supposed indefinitely, will start this morning with a complement of 1,000 men. The management declare that the plant will run continuously until next summer.

Twenty-Three Drowned.

Buda-Pesth, Sept. 17. — Twenty-three persons were drowned by the wreck of a ferryboat which was crossing the flooded Kulpa river, near Osalj, Croatia.

Colored Baptists.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 13.—The second day's session of the twenty-first national Baptist (colored) convention was one of the most largely attended events ever held in this city. It was estimated Wednesday night that there were over 3,000 delegates, including over 500 women, fully double as many as had been expected.

Russia Secures Coaling Harbor.

London, Sept. 17.—Russia, according to the Constantinople correspondent of the Daily Mail, has secured a harbor at Bourgas, on the Bulgarian coast, as a coaling station.

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS

Quickly Develops Into Bright's Disease.

(PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH WHEREVER LOCATED.)

John Herziger, son of Alderman Herziger, of Neenah, Wis., and Vice President of the Neenah Young Men's Club, writes in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, the following:

"After suffering for two years with kidney trouble I received relief and a cure from using your wonderful medicine, Peruna.

"For months I was unable to work on account of a severe pain in my back, and when I was able to do anything I was in pain and distressed most of the time.

"Hearing so much of the good results people had obtained through the use of Peruna I determined to give it a trial and it was a lucky day for me when I did so. I am well now and it only took a few bottles of Peruna."—John Herziger, 307 Commercial street, Neenah, Wis.

Two years suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, unable to work on account of the severe pain; could find no relief from medicine; gave Peruna a trial and was promptly cured—such was the experience of John Herziger, of Wisconsin.

This experience has been repeated many times. Not only in Wisconsin but in every state in the Union. It was indeed a lucky day for this young man when his attention was called to Peruna. What would have been the result had he continued suffering on and fooling away precious time with other remedies, no man can tell. But it is almost certain that it would have ended in incurable Bright's disease of the kidneys, which sooner or later would have proved fatal.

Peruna is a sure cure for incipient Bright's disease of the kidneys. Taken in the early stages of this disease, it cures permanently. Bright's disease always begins with catarrh of the kidneys. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Congressman Bankhead's Statement.

Congressman J. H. Bankhead, of Alabama, one of the most influential members of the House of Representatives, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., gives his indorsement to the great catarrh remedy, Peruna, in the following words:

"Your Peruna is one of the best medicines I ever tried, and no family should be without your remarkable remedy. As a tonic and a catarrh cure I know of nothing better."—J. H. Bankhead.

Samuel R. Sprecher, Junior Beadle Court Angelina No. 3422 I. O. O. F., 205 High St., Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

"I came here a few years ago suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, in search of health. I thought that the climate would cure me but found that I was mistaken, but what the climate could not do Peruna could and did do. Seven weeks' trial convinced me that I had the right medicine and I was then a well man. I know of at least twenty friends and members of the lodge to which I belong who have been cured of catarrh, bladder and kidney trouble through the use of Peruna and it has a host of friends in this city."—Samuel R. Sprecher.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Australian Mail's Record Trip.

The most important mail that has left Australia in years for London recently made a record-breaking trip. The mail consisted of 347 sacks and contained many documents for the British parliament. At Sidney it was put on board the steamer Ventura, a steamship sailing under the American flag and built only last year for the Oceanic Steamship company at the Cramps shipyard in Philadelphia. The trip across the Pacific occupied just 21 days, the former time having been 26 days. From San Francisco the mail was hurried east on special fast trains on the Southern Pacific (Ogden line), Union Pacific, and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroads, but arrived in Chicago too late to connect with the fast mail train of the Lake Shore and New York Central, which is a 24-hour train from Chicago to New York. A special train was made up and attached to one of the fastest engines on the Lake Shore line. The regular train was overtaken at Toledo, and the hour and a half lost time was made up. At Buffalo the regular train was made into two sections by the New York Central with the mail cars, including the Australian mail, in the first section. New York was reached three minutes ahead of schedule time. At New York the mail was delivered to the Campania and that vessel left on regular time. Barring accidents or unusual delays it will be delivered in England in several days shorter time than ever before.

Widening the Breach.

"I wish you and May would become friends again," said the would-be peacemaker. "Well," said Fay, "if she'll make up I will." "I told her you had said that, and she said: 'The idea! It's easy for her I never saw her when she wasn't made up.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Big Forgery of Railroad Tickets.

As a result of the arrest, on August 15, of a ticket broker's concern at St. Louis, charged with swindling a customer, a gigantic railroad ticket counterfeiting scheme was uncovered. After the arrest of the brokers their office was ransacked and an immense number of tickets and passes found. It was almost impossible to place an estimate on the value of the tickets recovered, but it is stated by railroad authorities that $50,000 would be a conservative figure. It is believed that many of the tickets and passes were forged.

At Buffalo a number of ticket scalpers have already been lodged in jail on account of fraudulent manipulation and forgery of railroad tickets. These instances are so numerous the public should take pains to see that their tickets are purchased only at the authorized offices of transportation lines. This avoids all complication and trouble to the passenger and assures him that the railroad tickets purchased are valid and will be honored as printed.—Exchange.

GENERALITIES OF INTEREST.

Wheat is mentioned 28 different times in the Bible.

Europe has had 321 monarchs since the battle of Hastings.

Only 24 doctors reach the age of 70 for every 42 clergymen.

Germany holds the record for the first daily paper. It was printed in 1524.

Four bushels of potatoes contain the same amount of nourishment as a bushel of wheat.

In 1840 English people used 1 pound 3 ounces of tea a head. This has grown to 5 pounds 14 ounces.

A boy-baby a month old can expect but 42 years of life. When he is five years older, his chances of living have increased to 51 years 6 months.

Among the ruins of Pompeii have been found chafing dishes of exquisite workmanship, which gives undisputed proof of their use in the city which contained villas of many wealthy Romans.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Bath, N. Y., Sept. 16th.—There is now at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home here an old soldier who has been nearer death than anyone who has lived to tell the story.

His name is A. E. Ayers. For many years he lived in Minneapolis, Minn., where he is well known.

Four physicians of that city once told Mr. Ayers that he could not live four days. He had Brights' disease.

As a last resort he tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. He is strong and well to-day.

He says: "I was in the very presence of death but Dodd's Kidney Pills saved me. They are the greatest medicine in the world."

Suffered Somewhat.

Patient—Certainly. I'm a telephone girl. —Philadelphia Record.

MIRACLES OF TODAY

The Wonderful Stories of Two People Saved from Horrible Death

It probably never occurred before that two people horribly afflicted in entirely different ways, and living far apart, were miraculously rescued from the very jaws of death, by the same means, and almost at the same time. The stories of George Herniman, of Buffalo, and Mrs. George W. Sharp, of Washington, Kan., read like the wonders of Divine interference. Let them tell their experience in their own plain, truthful language:

Buffalo, N. Y., June 14—(Special).—I write to tell you how much Cascarets Candy Cathartic have done for me in the past year, and you may send any or all of the people of Western New York to me and use my name as strongly as you wish, for I know that they have saved my life. I had an injury to my spine and the spinal cord was hurt, and of course was paralyzed from the hips down. The doctors could not move my bowels, saying that that they would never move again, and one of the doctors—my own cousin—an army surgeon, said a syringe could not be used on account of the large bone being broken and bad; and they also said that I could not live six months, if that long. Well, thanks to God and your candy cathartic Cascarets, I sit here four years later in my wheel chair and write this to you. I can walk for five minutes on crutches, and say that your Cascarets have saved my life, and, with old Mother Nature's help, are curing me. I have used one 10c. box a week for two and one-half years. But my case is one in 100,000 to recover at all; and I had the best of doctors, too, all saying the same thing—no hope. But we fooled them all this time.

—George W. Herniman, 63 Boyd St., Buffalo, N.Y.

Washington, Kan., June 1—(Special).—I had constipation of the worst nature for years. Medicine had no effect upon my stomach, and my stomach was in such a condition from purgatives that I could not take food. I was taken to a hospital and my bowels were operated upon for constipation. I did not get any better going through that terrible operation. My bowels were dead—no action at all—and the doctors gave me up. I could not eat anything but stale bread and water, literally starving to death. Lost over 100 pounds and was a living skeleton. After trying everything else I gave Cascarets a trial, not thinking they would help me. But they did right away. I commenced to eat and sleep, and from that on I could get out of bed and then got so I could go out riding—something I had not done for over three years. Now I do all my work. My friends just marvel; they say they never saw such a miracle. I tell them Cascarets did it, and they all want them. I weighed 60 pounds when I commenced taking Cascarets and now I weigh 170.

—Mrs. George W. Sharp.

No one should wait until such a terrible affliction comes upon him or her, but use Cascarets always to keep the bowels and internal organs gently and naturally active. All druggists sell Cascarets, the sweet, aromatic, never-griping candy cathartic, 10c., 25c., 50c. a box.

If you want to try before you buy, FREE FOR THE ASKING: a sample of CASCARETS and the famous health booklet.

--Go to Sieloff's for fresh fruit.

--Mr. Choicz is building a new house north of the St. Peter school.

—Dr. Hingely will hold Quarterly Conference at Montrose today at 1 p. m. He will preach at Delano at 7:45 tonight.

—With the exit of base ball, the cold weather has stirred up the foot ball spirit among our High School boys. They seem however to be kind of slow getting started.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Young celebrated their forty fourth wedding day on Tuesday, Sept. 17. They enjoyed the wedding dinner prepared by the bride all alone.

—Pibtures of the martyr President McKinley were displayed in most of the buildings in town yesterdav, draped in mourning, for the death of the nation's chief officer.

—Ragweeds are charged with being instrumental in causing hayfever, yet they flourish, and the neighbors seem to prefer to patronize the doctor to cutting down their weeds.

—Although there are strict laws for keeping down weeds, the weeds continue to thrive along several highways not far from town. They should be mowed and not left to seed the whole country.

—There was a decided change in the weather this week, from last. Sunday started in windy and rainy, Monday a hail storm, and Tuesday a very cold windy day. Overcoats and mittens came into use in large numbers.

—Bishop Whipple, well known to some of our citizens, he having been here and held services, died, at home in Faribault, on Monday, Sept. 16, in his 79th year. He was the first Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Minnesota, having been elected in 1859.

—Recent investigations are said to have developed the fact that there are now forty cases of leprosy in the state of Minnesota. There are many cases in other states. There is a movement on foot to isolate them by building asylums for them; one to be in this state.

—The Evans Company presented "The Green Eyed Monster" Monday evening to small audience. They kept everybody interested. The actors played their parts well. On Tuesday evening they played "Ten Nights in a Barroom" to a larger audience. It is a good company but will play better after a few more rehearsals.

—Two automobiles passed through town bound west one day this week. Going along the street at a good rate of speed they look to be a handy machine. But one of them accomodatingly impressed upon the minds of numerous bystanders one of their inconveniences as it hauled up at Jone's livery barn to take water and learned that the boiler was "scorched" and repairs were in order.

—Good roads are more than ever demanded by the people able to own and use automobiles. If roads throughout the country were put in good order so that such vehicles could travel safely and pleasantly there would be many more of them and much less use for horses to travel with. If the roads were in prime condition from here to Minneapolis, there would be many passengers and much freight find its way over the wagon roads instead of the railroads. Let us have good wagon roads.

--The citizens of Delano and vicinity met at the City Hall yesterday at 4 o'clock, P. M. in a service of sorrow over the loss of the President of the United States. The hall was crowded. A neat program, as a souvenir, was handed everyone on entering the hall. The exercises were appropriate, and for the short time in which to prepare, well carried out. Mayor Horsch presided and made the opening address. Rev. A. F. Thompson led in prayer. Addresses were made by E. H. Farnham, Rev. Savs. and F. H. Lindsley, and a recitation by Ella Sturman. The music was up to Delano's best. Benediction by Rev. Thompson.

—The Delano Millers won their last ball game of the season from the Flour City team, of Minneapolis, the 15th, by a score of 4 to 9, and the home team played two new men in the field who had not played with them previously this summer. The Flour City team was telephoned not to come, but came anyway with the strongest team they could get together, to get revenge for a shut out they received here a month ago. They were not in the game from the start, and when the score stood 7 to 0 in favor of Delano, the home team eased up and allowed them 4 runs.

County Cullings.

Thanks to the Wright County Agricultural Society for a complimentary ticket to the Annual Fair which was held at Howard Lake this week. Sorry we couldn't attend.

The Commoner looks well in its new dress. It is now in its eighteenth year and flourishing under the management of C. J. Carlson. Surely Cokato people should patronize it.

The people of Buffalo for the second time have voted down the proposition to buy a park. Evidently the majority of the citizens are not anxious to have a park, or at least not in the place proposed.

From the Howard Lake Herald we learn that J. Z. Cochrane, of Smith Lake, was in a runaway and got his shoulder broke Monday. His team was frightened by a pile of rock by the road side. People should be more careful and not pile rock, machinery, and other things where they will frighten teams passing along the highway.

Complaints are being made that it is not likely there will be enough candidates to fill the tickets in the field at the next primary elections. Ten dollars has to be deposited before a candidate can appear before the primaries and ten more before he can get his name on the regular election ticket, if he succeeds in being elected at the primary election.

Personal.

S. D. Coffin, of Lyndale, was in town Monday.

Mrs. Rev. George Johnson visited at William Lewis' this week.

John N. Moore, of Rockford, was in town on business Monday.

Mrs. O'Hair and daughter Marjorie visited Minneapolis this week.

Mr. and Mr. George Crandall, of Rockford, were Delano visitors Wednesday.

Joseph Neistroy has returned from Maple Plain and now is working in Delano.

Sheriff Nugent was in town Saturday notifying some parties of delinquent taxes.

Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, of Minneapolis, are visiting Delano friends and relatives.

Mrs. H. C. Parslow and daughter Anna are visiting Henry and family at Hankinson.

Miss Isabel Mara, of Minneapolis, spent a few days in town the fore part of the week.

James F. McDonnell, of Waverly, was a Delano visitor for a few hours Saturday evening.

Henry Crandall, of Rockford, was in town Saturday disposing of a load of watermelons

William Steffes, who has been spending the summer in South Dakota visited home this week.

Elmer Glimer left Wednesday for the Sisseton reservation to work in the hardware business.

Mrs Luther Layton, of Arizona, is visiting relatives and friends in Delano and vicinity for a short time.

Prof. Charles S. Hawker came up from Deep Haven and spent Saturday in town, returning home Sunday morning.

Jerry Brothers, on his return trip from Williston, is visiting Delano friends before returning to Columbia, S. C.

Misses Mamie and Katherine Schaffer returned from a couple week's visit in St. Paul, the fore part of the week.

Mrs. Emma Shaw was called to Hasson this week on account of sickness of her relative, formerly Miss Effie White.

John Steffes having completed his visit to the Cities, and his vacation resumed his duties at the post office, Monday morning.

Mrs. Bina Halgren, who has been visiting relatives near Duluth returned home to Watertown by way of Delano, Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Hawker and Mrs. Mowatt drove to Deep Haven and visited friends this week, returning home Wednesday evening.

Elmer Erickson came up from the City, Saturday evening and remained over Sunday. Monday morning's train was late and he couldn't leave town until in the afternoon.

John Brandser and Fred Lindsley started for Minneapolis Monday morning but as the train was said to be five hours late they went to Rockford station and found the train there two hours late; after waiting that long it was announced three hours late, so John footed it home in plenty time to catch the G. N.

Since I last wrote you a whole nation has been called to mourn the loss of our president from a bullet wound caused by an assassin. In the hour of the nation's bereavement we all feel sad that these condition of things exist. It is wrong, it is cruel, and is the outgrowth of a fiendish disposition, a heart filled with malice and forethought. Three of our rulers or presidents, during the last 36 years have been killed by an assassin, and our flag has been hauled down at half mast. This is not only bad for us but it looks bad to other nations. Not long ago Governor Goebel, of Ky., was shot down, and the assassin or culprit has never been punished. All these things look bad upon the records of a free republic. Let us have law and order though the heavens fall.

For a generation or more this country has been made the dumping ground for the offal of many other nations, and it seems that even many Americans are loosing their pride of self government.

War and fighting should not be encouraged unless it be under very grevious circumstances. It seems from the days of Cain and Abel people have been inclined to kill and fight, but in these days of gospel light and liberty we should inculcate into ourselves a different disposition.

All nations are manufacturing destructive implements of war, such as side arms, guns of long range, siege guns and battleships that cover the waters of our seas. What does all this mean? To a casual observer it is all very plain and according to Biblical prophecy. The present condition of things is what we may expect in these last days. Some tell us the world, or people, is a little better. It seems that a man who is read up, and with forethought and observation can hardly think so.

"And the sword shall come upon Egypt, and great pain shall be in Ethiopa, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and they shall take away her multitude and her foundations shall be broken down".

In every hardware store, pawn broker's or junk shop, we find cart loads of guns, revolvers, pistols, etc. Were all these made to kill dogs, skunks, gophers, etc.? If not, for what purpose are they manufactured. War, pestilence and famine are three great plagues. Even of short duration they are very destructive and should be guarded against as much as possible.

The condition of things in the Philippines to our mind, is not what it should be. A commission of eight constitute the legislative department, five Americans and three natives, all appointed from Washington. Now this is not self government, for the Philippine legislature is not elected by the people. But we hope things may be properly adjusted before long, and that all things may work for good.

Everybody says plenty of rain now. The ground is plenty wet for plowing, and the roads quite bad. It has been something of a cold wave, and no doubt will be followed by a frost.

Tomorrow the W. R. C., of Maple Plain, will visit the Soldier's Home, at Minnehaha Falls. The members of Gorden Granger post are invited guests.

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor attended the funeral of Mrs. Taylor's father, Mr. Henderson, in Minneapolis, last week.

Chas. Styner will move onto the Mrs. Hattie Shaw place.

Wright County fair this week. We hope it will be well attended. Some seem to think a game of base ball would increase the attendance. Be that as it may, let th Fair go through on its own merits.

It has been bad weather for colds and rheumatism.

We would ask the weather prophets, shall we expect a cold or mild winter. Just prophesy that's all.

THE BIBLOMANIAC'S PRAYER.

Keep me I pray, in wisdom's way,
That I may truths eternal seek;
I need protecting care today—
My purse is light my flesh is week.

So banish from my erring heart
All baleful appetites and blots
Of Satan's fascinating art,
Of first editions and of prints

Direct me in some goodly walk
Which leads away from bookish strife,
That I with pious deed and talk
May extra-illustrate my life.

But if, O Lord, it pleases Thee
To keep me in temptation's way,
I humbly ask that I may be
Most notably beset to-day;

Let my temptation be a book,
Which I shall purchase, hold and keep,
Whereon, when other men shall look,
They'll wail to know I got it cheap.

Oh, let it such a volume be
As in rare copper-plate abounds,
Large paper, clean and fair to see,
Uncut, unique, unknown to Lowndes.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30, 1901

The shooting of President McKinley at Buffalo has been the all absorbing public topic at the National Capital since Friday last. Happening at a time of political calm and so clearly traceable to the anarchistic infatuation of a shiftless, unknown creature, it allowed no space for partisan feeling. Instead the great underlying loyalty and honesty of the American heart came uppermost at once and from every quarter and every shade of true citizenship have come like measures of sorrow, affection and indignation as the incidents of the dastardly deed evoked them.

President McKinley will have the felicity of realizing how great a place he holds in the hearts of his countrymen and that scarcely ever before has one man's misfortune so moved with sympathy the entirety of Christendom.

This assault upon the Chief Magistrate has brought forth a concensus among people and publicists that stern and active legislation must be enacted to suppress and prevent anarchism of the destructive school in the United States. It is all well enough that men oppressed wrongfully in other lands should make America their asylum, but they must not also make it a slaugter house. We enthrone in our White House no tyrants that need the swift and bloody medicine of derringer, dagger, or dynamite. Our atmosphere is that of liberty and law and must not be made poisonous by the breaths of those whose tongues and hands are against God, and government, and the public good.

The new Congress convening in December promises to be one of the liveliest of recent times. The republican scant majority of thirty nine will have to be kept well within the party corral, if the party program is to be carried forward with celerity and certainty. The Democrats will have to keep close watch on the majority and get busy at every possible opportunity. At this next session they must develop the lines on which they will go to the country in 1902 and ask for a majority in the next House of Representatives. To win that is now the chief aim of the Democratic leaders. With that gained they can make "a rough house," so to speak, for the Republicans just ahead of the next campaign of 1904

Democratic leaders from Virginia visiting Washington report that the new constitution will be submitted to an abridged electorate and adopted, and that the party ticket will be over whelmingly elected in November. They regard Col. Jayhawker Hoge's candidacy upon the Republican ticket for the governorship a fair sign that the Republican leaders are only dragging brush over the road to raise a dust. Really there is no hope in Hoge. He has neither the wit of Cameron, nor the tireless tact of Mahone, and the people of Virginia will be slow to take him seriously. His race is stated from the start to be a rag time route.

Interest among calculating Democrats is being attracted strongly toward the Pennsylvania situation. Ex Governor Pattison, whose successes against the Quay machine have been three times signal and smashing, has again gone into the field with his coat off and his sleeves rolled up. He is trying heroically to restore harmony, decency and honesty to the party ranks in Philadelphia and the State. If he has not lost all his cunning he will come dangerously near defeating the monster machine of the Quay crowd. If the insurgent Republicans should hold out in their present revolt and vote with the democrats the defeat might even now be deemed assured. And if Pattison should succeed, a great big Presidential boom will attach itself to his name.

The Schley Board of Inquiry begins its sessions today, and the proceedings will be intensely interesting from the start. No one can question that the Navy Department crowd is eager to secure a comprehensive finding against Admiral Schley. The idea that they would assume the attitude of impartial and dignified public servants seeking only to develop and preserve the truths of a great historic event does not obtain here. On the contrary they obtain themselves as rabid prosecutors and Admiral Schley is to be forced to prove his innocence of the charges that have been uttered against him. The inquiry will be of world wide interest.

When the United States Supreme Court reassembles it will probably hand down, with its earliest deliverences, the decision on the last of the Porto Rican cases. There are those whose personal relations with members of the Court are close who say that whatever was left doubtful by former insular opinions of the Court will be made perfectly plain by the forthcoming judgement. It is, in fact, intimated that certain public considerations moved the Court not to settle squarely in former decisions, the question whether the Constitution follows the flag, ex proprio vigore. But those considerations no longer exist and an open hint is conveyed that the Court will now render a judgment to that effect in unmistakable terms.

Foremost men in the democratic management say that no attempt to formulate national issues for the campaign of 1904 will be encouraged for the present. They will await the results of the campaigns now on in Ohio, Maryland, Virginia and Massachusetts. The results in those States may develop valuable data for determining the trend of democratic sentiment among the masses. Another essential preliminary is to whip the republicans in 1902 before the people for the control of the house of Congress. After that will be the better time to make up a platform that will reflect democratic opinions and win the united support of those who are antagonistic to the republican progam.

The World Mourns.

The Times reports an eloquent address by Rev. J. M. Cleary, of Minneapolis, in the Commercial Club rooms.

He is quoted among other things as saying:

"That loss is the world's loss and the sorrow is shared by mankind the world over. The murder of the president is a blow at our republic, the greatest republic in the world's history. Therefore the entire world is in mourning.

The American people have given to the world a new definition of the word 'liberty.' Liberty with us does not mean an unbridled license to abuse and revile our public servants or trespass upon the rights of others. Liberty with us means protection to all citizens in the exercise of their rights. Its principle is sacred. It is the very opposite of anarchy.

Anarchy is a shapeless monster with no principles - actuated by nothing but a wild, purposeless mass of theories. But we must deal with the anarchist - the victim of the monster - according to due process of law.

The lynchings and other resorts to mob violence which have been of such frequent occurrence are a disgrace to the American people."

Liberty cannot live where authority is despised; liberty cannot exist where anarchy reigns, and where there is no respect for the laws of God and man.

On the other hand, the great masses of the people, comprising the working classes, should not be treated as mere chattels but as human beings with thoughts and hearts. They should be given ample opportunities to develop their domestic and religious natures, and should not be compelled to work on Sundays."

HIS NEGLECTED WIFE

I am a door mat, and I note the comings and goings of the people who frequent the house on the stoop of which I quietly rest.

The man of the house generally comes home from the club at about two in the morning. It is a great relief to feel that He is at home, and I can then resign myself to sleep without the fear of being trampled upon unexpectedly. When I know a footstep is coming I do not mind it, as one can become used to anything.

When He first bought me, the embroidered muslin curtains in that window next the door were new. So was his wife, for that matter.

In those days he returned at 11. Every month has added a half hour to his nightly stay at the club. So you see, He has had me, the embroidered muslin curtains and his wife just six months. Now, as I am not good at arithmetic, I have a hard time guessing how long it will be before He remains away altogether.

But we are used to that sort of thing—his wife and I.

It appears that she is a door mat also, although it must be some new kind. I know this, because I heard a lady who was calling say to her companion, just as she pressed the bell:

"He simply walks on her, my love!"

And the other said:

"I would never stand it, my dear!"

Which was all great nonsense if She really is a door mat, as they are never consulted in the matter.

For a long time after this I regarded Her with curiosity. It seemed a strange thing for a door mat to look out of a window night after night with a perfectly white face, instead of lying down quietly, so that people might trample upon her.

But I suppose there are several kinds of door mats.

After awhile She was not much at the window. I saw two flitting shadows upon the embroidered muslin curtains quite often of an evening

And I knew that a certain Man with a Cameo Face whom I had often seen with Him was with Her then. I never liked the man. He had a way of tiptoeing about carefully before he tiptoed up the steps. One would say he was a thief.

Now, there are different feet.

And I always hated this. When he stepped upon me it was always carefully, with his toes, and his narrow-pointed boots gave me many a vicious dig. I can stand heels, but I hate to be dug into with these narrow-pointed toes.

The husband never walked in that way. He had a careless, square way of putting his foot on me, which pressed evenly and never hurt. And as for Her feet—the feet of the Woman Door Mat—I vow I actually loved Hers.

"Such a heavy, heavy heart!" I heard her whisper one night, as she ran across me. But her little feet were light for all that.

Once the Man with the Cameo Face came home with her just at dusk. And, as usual, he walked like a thief. And for an hour I could see their shadows on the curtain.

As he passed over me in coming out, digging those miserable pointed patent leathers into me as he went, he was smiling, and I heard him mutter:

"I shall win her! She shall yet be mine!"

Fool!

For he had told me his secret. I, his enemy, knew that he was trying to steal His Woman Door Mat.

Queer, was it not? If he had really wanted a door mat, why not have stolen one?

A few days before Christmas an intimate friend of mine, the snow, and I talked it all over And between us we caught him.

I was simply immaculate that evening when the Cameo-Faced Man came, for the snow had been falling softly, thus effacing every footprint. But as soon as he passed, tripping lightly from the cab, and, tiptoeing over me with his narrow—peculiarly narrow—shoes, why, the snow waited, and I held these footprints as I had never held any before.

And at ten he went, stepping upon me once more. The fool!

And at midnight the husband came.

And it was such a white winter's night, with the snow and the starlight, that He noticed the prints upon me, as I intended He should. And I told him all.

"I know that foot," said He. It is the narrowest I ever saw. He knew I was not here when he hurried away from the club. What—"

And he unlocked the door in a fierce hurry and rushed within.

In the morning, when the housemaid aired the little library, the muslin curtains whispered to me that there had been trouble within the night before.

"Who called?" asked the husband.

"Don't you know?" replied the Woman Door Mat, nonchalantly.

"I was told that—"

The Woman Door Mat smiled and shrugged her shoulders.

"He left me at the club."

"So he said."

"And he visited you when he knew I was not here?"

"Naturally. He has usually selected those times for calling."

"My most intimate friend," said He, very slowly, looking at her in sorrow.

"Is it not always a man's most intimate friend? Who but he knows as well when a woman is neglected?" And the Woman Door Mat left the room.

But He sat there all through the night and early morning hours.

The next morning he did a manly thing—he went to his wife and begged forgiveness for his neglect.

At last, on Christmas eve, when they were returning from a ball together, He carried her from the cab to the door, running lightly up the steps and setting her down upon me. They were both laughing.

And as He placed her upon me He kissed her, while her white arms stole out from her furs and clung to Him. I knew that they were happy. Even a door mat would have known that. It is absurd to be as happy as they were. There is no poetry in happiness.

And as He leisurely took his key from his pocket to unlock the door, He said:

"Dozie, I told you how I learned of the secret visits of my intimate friend?"

"But who told you?"

"You are standing on him!" and He laughed.

Looking down, she drew her lace skirts aside, and glanced from me to him, and then back again.

"That blessed, blessed door mat!"

And then she sank upon her knees, dragging her laces in the snow—

And kissed me. Oh, it is true, I swear it!

And I—a door mat—thrilled wildly at the touch of those soft, smiling, pink lips. Probably no other door mat in the city has ever owned a like experience. Probably I shall never have such another. Yet I am content.

One kiss.

But I have heard that there are kisses one of which is worth a whole long lifetime filled with the platitudes of other lips

And that is my romance of the neglected wife.—N. Y. Weekly.
